To the question, "What was the nature of the various scientific connections of Kindermann in the Soviet Union for the preparation of the expedition?" Fink replied that connections had been established with the Universities of Moscow and Tomsk and further with the Volga Germans and with the woman president of the Far Eastern republic, Arseniv. (Laughter.)

The chairman pointed out that there was neither such a republic nor such a woman president. The statements of Fink upon the scientific plans of the expedition proved his active participation in them, and also that the scientific preparations were only the mask for another intent. This was also proved by the fact that Fink contradicted himself several times and declared that Kindermann's aims in Russia were chiefly political.

The prosecutor requested the witness to bear paragraph 178 of the order for criminal processes dealing with the duties of witnesses, in mind.

Kindermann attempted by suggestive questions to inform Fink of what had been previously stated in court, particularly of the statements of Dittmar and received a sharp warning from the chairman.

Wolscht asked Fink if the latter had belonged to the organization consul and in doing so used for the first time the initials G. O. C., whilst previously only the initials O. C. had been used in the court. The chairman pointed this out and asked Wolscht how it was that he came to use initials which were only usual in consul circles, when he had previously declared that he knew nothing of the organization consul before his arrest in Moscow.

On the contention of Wolsaht that this was not correct, the chairman read extracts from the protocol of the examination in which Wolscht made such statements, word for word, also in his statements in the trial itself.

Connected With Foreign Office.

The witness Fink declared that upon hearing the news of the arrest of Kindermann and Wolscht, and after learning of the nature of the accusations, he had done his best in Berlin to procure proofs of the innocence of the two. In particular he had attempted to discover thru the foreign office whether Kindermann had been an agent of the Berlin police presidium.

Upon the question of an assessor why he had not directed himself to the police presidium, the witness replied that the Russian department of the foreign office would be better informed about the matter. The witness further stated that before his journey to Moscow he had spoken with Ambassador Brockdorff-Rantzau about the process. (Considerable stirring in the court.)

To the question of the prosecutor, what would he have answered had he received the famous telegram, "How is Herr Gruenbaum?" Fink answered without hesitation: "I would have answered, 'Gruenbaum is well.'" From this unhesitating answer it was perfectly clear that Fink was well aware of the text and the significance of the telegram. Later the witness in embarrassment attempted to withdraw his first statement.

The chairman asked the witness whether he had kept to the signed arrangements and in particular whether he had got into touch with Legationsrat (high consular officer) Hilger. The witness declared that he had kept to the arrangements.

The chairman asked further: "Have your rights as a German citizen been in any way limited?"

Fink: "In no way; I have been very well treated."

Chairman: "Have you been at all hampered in your freedom of movement?"

Fink: "In no way."

The accused Wolscht and Kindermann once again acted in a provocative manner, Wolscht taking not only the rights of a defendant, but those of the prosecutor and the chairman as well. Both attempted by impossible questions and proposals to distract the witness from the essence of the matter. This made the proceedings very difficult.

"High Political Aims."

In the continued hearing the witness Fink declared that the Indian professor, Chairix, was to be taken with the expedition because Kindermann also had the intention of visiting Turkestan and taking up connections with India. The Indian Chairix would have been able to attend to this. Chairix had been expelled from India by the English and was well known there. The suggestion of the prosecutor that the expedition had therefore high political aims was left unanswered by the witness. He corroborated the statement of Dittmar that the group had decided to institute inquiries upon the past of Dittmar.

The previous statements of Kindermann that the first protocol had been signed by him under hypnotic influence was suddenly explained by the statement of the witness Fink that Professor Oesterreicher, the well known author of a great work upon occultism, was a friend of Kindermann and that Kindermann had always occupied himself with occultism and hypnotism. To the question of Dittmar, Fink admitted that in the autumn of 1924 he had been together with a certain Heinicke in the students' home, a hackenkreusler, who, so the witness said, could not stand Jews, pacifists, Communists and Marxists. He also admitted that in this particular room there was a picture of the kaiser, adding, amidst storms of laughter from the body of the court, that a picture of Karl Marx was drawn on the back of it.

German Embassy in Plot.

Then began the hearing of the witness Rose. The witness betrays his fascism in his external appearance. The chairman asked the witness where he had been on the previous evening and the witness was compelled to admit that, despite his written undertaking not to hold communication with the other witnesses and in particular not with the German embassy, he had spoken for a half an hour at 1 o'clock in the morning in the doorway of the German embassy, allegedly with a porter, for the alleged purpose of obtaining copies of German newspapers with the reports of the trial. The prosecutor pointed out to the witness that he could have obtained such papers daily in the newspaper kiosks.

Admits Incapability.

At first the witness refused to answer the questions of the prosecutor concerning his political opinions. Finally he declared himself to be a left democrat. Dittmar was known to him as a Communist.

To the question of the chairman, had he not been startled that the aristocratic Von Dittmar, the son of a lord of the manor, had suddenly become Communist, the witness replied that this sudden change in the opinions of the nobleman had made a great impression upon him. To further questions he declared that he had sympathized with the Soviet revolution in Russia.

Chairman: "Also in Germany?"

Witness: "Oh, no!"

Chairman: "Is it possible that an educated student and one of Communist opinions should not have heard of the Organization Consul up to February, 1924?"

Witness: "It seems unbelievable to me."

The witness declared that when he heard, allegedly thru third persons, of the intentions of the expedition, he advised Dittmar to take no part in it, because he was of the opinion that Kindermann and Wolscht were adventurers. Immediately after this the witness suddenly declared that Kindermann's only object was the study of agricultural conditions in the Soviet Union, as he was taking that as his subject for his doctor's degree. (Laughter.)

Chairman: "Do you believe that Kin-of carrying out investigations in the dermann and Wolscht were capable
Soviet Union for the Berliner Tageblatt for which they received a thousand marks?"

Witness: "No, I don't believe it, apparently, the money was for other purposes."

Chairman: "Quite right."

Student Fascists Broke Strikes.

To the question, how was the students organization financed, the witness replied that on the one hand it received state assistance and on the other it received assistance from private sources. He refused, however, to give any information about the private sources. He was not able to remember whether Ehrhardt under the name of Ehrenburg took part in a discussion at which Kindermann, Dittmar, Wolscht, Osick and Wenzel were present.

The chairman then read the protocol of Kindermann made at the preliminary examination in which Kindermann declared the participation of Ehrhardt. The witness, Rose, who otherwise attempts to carry himself with great assurance, became very embarrassed and declared that Kindermann had lied. The question of the chairman, is the students' organization a strike-breaking organization, the witness at first refused to understand. To the question, had the students' organization supplied labor power in cases of strikes, the witness answered in the affirmative. To the question of Dittmar, had in August, 1924, a notice been posted up of an agency which offered students with nationalist opinions certain work, the witness replied in the affirmative.

The witness further replied in the affirmative to the question of Dittmar, had the conversation taken place in the Borsig Strasse in the student's home with Dittmar and Johnson upon the fascist Berlin-Munich courier service. He added that he had not taken these plans very seriously.

The accused Wolscht asked the witness Rose if Michaelis was a member of the Organization Consul.

Chairman to witness: "Why does Wolscht put question to you which presuppose on your side an intimate knowledge of the internal organisation of the O. C.?"

Wolscht asked Rose: "What attitude would you take to your arrest in Moscow?"

The chairman: "The question of the arrest of Rose has never been considered by the court, the accused has therefore no right to put such dishonest questions which are nothing but insolent provocation."

The witness Rose corroborated the statements of the accused Dittmar that he had sent the latter to do peat-cutting work in Bremerhafen, he denied, however, the instructions to carry on disruptive work amongst the working class.

Confesses Fascist Membership.

The chairman asked the witness what the latter knew of the relations between the "Technische Nothilfe" (technical emergency orgnaization for scab work) and the Organization Consul. The witness Rose declared that he knew just as much and just as little as all other members of the Organization Consul (stir in the court).

The accused Dittmar then stated that in the last secret session held in the students' home in the Borsig Strasse, Room 69, before the departure for Russia, Kindermann had reported upon the preparations for the expedition and that Rose, Fink and Michaelis had taken part in the deliberations. After the report Ehrhardt delivered a lecture of instructions upon the expedition and upon the carrying out of the terrorist acts.

"Dear Sirs and Brothers: This is to advise that as a candidate for district executive board member of board member district No. 5, I am contesting the action of you men in giving credit to Local Union No. 2385 for the votes cast in the election of district officers, on the following grounds.

"First, That the party who had his name signed as president to the returns of election for that local union, was not a member of that local union.

"The same party was caught in the act of putting bundles of ballots into the ballot box already marked. After he had his work done he ran away with the district ballots before they were counted. This same party was fined by his local union for not voting on election day, and is now liable to charges for striking the financial secretary of the local union which he is a member of.

SYNOPSIS.—The British trade union leaders' report on Soviet Russia, which is running serially in the DAILY WORKER, Saturday took up the subject of foreign trade in the Soviet Union. Transportation, industry and agriculture have already been described in the official report. The union leaders concluded that foreign trade and agriculture is steadily improving, and told how the finances of the Union have been placed on a stable basis. The New Economic Policy in relation to agriculture was explained. The industries are increasing production, the report stated. Recent instalments of the report dealt in detail with the relation of the Union with foreign countries. The regulation of trade, financing, foreign bank credits, statistics of foreign trade, status of foreigners, were some of the subjects dealt with. The instalment concludes that foreign trade is workable, and that harm is being done Britain by the absence of full diplomatic relations.

General Conclusion

It is not suggested that the social system as applied in Russia would be acceptable, in its entirety, in this country. The Russian people are far more susceptible to mass organization and are socially less individualistic than the British. The Delegation is, however, strongly of the opinion that, as a result of the new social system, the Russian nation is acquiring great social benefits in culture, recreation, and freedom of self-expression; and that the moral tone is likely to be greatly improved by the new status acquired by woman.

CHAPTER IX

Education, Press, Art, etc.

There has probably been no greater revolution of ideas than in the new educational system as practiced in Soviet Russia. In many other departments of social life traditions are still hindering the complete transformation of the machinery. The practical working of the new educational theories in the State schools does not, however, always attain the results hoped for. Lack of funds, of new text books, and especially of competent teachers are among the chief factors which account for the partial failure in the towns; but the obstinate resistance of the peasants to any form of education or cleanliness is very serious in the country districts.

Schools

The State educational machinery at present consists of the Commissariat of Education with its central organization in Moscow.

This Commissariat is divided into eleven Departments:—

1. Administration and Organizing Council.
2. General Educational Council.
3. Technical Educational Council.
4. Juvenile and Political Educational Council.
5. Educational Council for Native States.
6. Scientific Education Council.
7. Art Council, which deals with public monuments, museums, exhibitions, opera, theatres, music, etc.
8. Literary Censor's Council to control the printed word.
9. State Publishing Council.
10. Cinematograph Censor's Council.
11. Supply Council for the organization of educational equipment.

Each province or large town has its own local educational department, which is elected by the local Soviets and sends its representative to the Moscow Commissariat. These local organizations are directly responsible to the Central Commissariat of Education for all the schools and educational institutions within their jurisdiction. They are also responsible for the proper attendance at school of all children between the ages of 7 and 16. Teachers are selected by the Local Soviets, but always in consultation with the local teachers' Trade Union. These local teachers' Trade Unions may report direct to the Central Commissariat or through the Central Trade Union Council in Moscow.

Schools are divided into two grades; the first grade deals wtih children from 7 to 12 and the second from 12 to 17 or 18 years of age. Education is obligatory and free in most cases, but in the event of the State subsidy not being able to meet the expenditure in a certain district, a fee may be charged at the discretion of the local Soviet. This fee is always on a sliding scale according to the income of the parents, provided they are "workers."

Originally the Trade Union of each factory or industry organized its own schools. These are now, however, in most cases taken over by the State under the New Economic Policy in 1922.

The above figures do not include the Trade Union club schools and classes for adults, which appear in another section of the report, or the schools in the Federated and Associated Republics. [illegible]

Owing to the lack of accommodation and teachers most of the schools at present are working in two shifts, that is from 9 a. m. till 2 and from 3 p. m. till 9. Boarding schools have lately been established for orphans and destitute children who have no facilities for attending the local school. Admission to these boarding schools is obtained through the Trade Unions or local educational departments of the commissariat.

No distinction between the sexes is made in any of the schools or universities. Boys and girls are on an absolutely equal footing.

It is stated that over 50 per cent. of all children are now attending school; although this is not considered satisfactory it is a considerable improvement on Tsarist days. By 1927 it is hoped to have put an end to illiteracy in all classes. The total number of schools dealing exclusively with illiterates is now 80, and the total number of pupils 4,000,000.

School Curriculum

Great attention is paid to modern languages. In all schools French and Russian are taught, and in some cases English. Thereafter come mathematics, geometry, elemetary science, political economy, botany, and anatomy. Under the heading of elementary natural science and anatomy the child is given very detailed instruction in the principles of personal hygiene, sex relationship, and the construction of the body. This instruction is supplemented by lectures given by the doctor, who is attached to each school. Once a week all the children are medically inspected, and the resident doctor is responsible for their health and cleanliness.

walls decorated with pictures by great artists of the things they loved most, rich food, served on gold salvers of Italian workmanship, resting on silk cloths embroidered by Persian slaves."

The same teacher, after explaining the rare beauty of a Rembrandt portrait, informed the children that that great paniter whose pictures now sold for untold money, died in abject poverty because the wealthy refused him a living wage.

The following may be taken as typical of the instruction given to a class of twenty children visiting a picture gallery. The lecturer commenced with a very thorough explanation of the technical and artistic properties of a picture of still life (fruit in gold embossed salvers on a table covered with an embroidered silk cloth). She then turned to the children and asked. "Can any of you tell me why this picture was painted?" Nobody replied. "For the same reason, my little comrades, that you like to have a picture of Lenin in your room, to remind you of what is most dear to you all. These wealthy people liked to have their

Very considerable care is devoted to instruction in all branches of art and music. Works of art, collected under the nationalization of private property, have now been placed in the public museums of all the large towns. These museums are daily filled with bands of children under the guidance of a teacher. Each lecture carries with it its subjective lesson on Communism and the rights of the worker. Should the museum have been the former residence of some wealthy individual, as is often the case, the children are at first taken around the buildings and shown the luxury in which the former owner lived. After this introduction the class is taken round the exhibits.

History in all cases is almost entirely confined to social and political aspects of the nations of the world, the growth of civilization and its effect on the workers of various countries. Social reformers, their lives and creeds, have entirely taken the place of the history of kings and dynasties. The wrongs and oppressions to which the people have been subjected by the ruling classes are strongly emphasized. This fundamental principle penetrates into all branches of the child's education.

Universities

The universities are divided into two categories—universities of a special character, such as higher economics and technical subjects dealing with all branches of engineering, and general universities which are divided into various faculties, such as medical, science, social, which includes languages, art, archeology, law, music, and statistics. In most universities a very low fee is charged. Those students who are unable to meet the fee are subsidized by the Trade Union to which they or their parents belong, or by the party organization.

There are also in all large industrial centers institutes known as "rabfak" (workers' faculties). These are Trade Union institutions and exclusively for industrial workers who have not received a sufficient school education to enable them to pass into the universities. In these institutions they are prepared up to the necessary standard which will enable them to enter a State university. Such students receive a subsidy from their Trade Union which enables them to continue the higher course of their studies. In many cases they do a half-day's work in the morning and attend lectures in the afternoon and evening.

These "rabfak" now number 75, the largest being the Donetz Technical School, built and equipped entirely by the Trade Unions. Forty-five per cent. of the students in the higher universities are drawn from the workers and peasants.

The full State program includes clothing and food for all school children and students at the university. Owing to lack of funds this, however, has not yet come into force. There are, on the other hand, certain Communist institutions for sons and members of the Communist Party, at which both clothing, food and quarters are provided. These colleges are considered to be somewhat exclusive.

Mining colleges and agricultural colleges have been established and are run on the same line as the universities.

Art

A special feature all over Russia, and especially in the Ukraine, is the workers art colleges and colleges of music. These do not come directly under the Commissariat of Education, but are run by the Trade Unions. The course of instruction is three years and admission is obtained through the Trade Union. The industrial worker who wishes to enter upon a course of instruction in one of these colleges has to undertake to complete a three years' course. He is then permitted to work for five or six hours a day in the factory, instead of the usual eight hours, and has to attend the college from 3 o'clock until 9 in the evening, thus completing an eleven-hour day.

At the end of three years he enters for a non-competitive examination in order to receive his diploma. This diploma entitles him to join the profession for which his studies have prepared him, or to enter a university.

These colleges are probably creating the embryo of post-revolutionary art in Russia. The professors and teachers are for the most part of the old school and their influence acts as a healthy restraint on the students, all of whom are factory workers. It is evident in these schools that an unconscious struggle is being carried on between master and pupil. The pupils are prone to reject any form of aesthetic art or coloring as typical of the hated bourgeois refinement.

Many of these institutions have just completed their first three years' course, and the progress made by the students is most remarkable. The courses cover all branches of art, music, and stage craft. As is natural in so young a movement portrait painting and sculpture are more patronized than other branches, but some very exceptionally fine scene painters have already appeared, and the Delegation saw many examples of the industrial workers' art in the theatres and workers' clubs of Moscow and Kharkov.

Portrait painting, and more especially sculpture, have taken an extremely rugged and almost violent form. Expressions of the sitters seldom appear in repose; nervous and mobile features are depicted in an exaggerated form. Statuary is never at rest, muscle, brawn, and all physical attributes are brought out in the strongest relief. The effect in the open, at great distances, is striking, but at close proximity appears inartistic, and for gallery or studio purposes is almost grotesque.

Decorative art has, for the most part, taken a cubist form, mostly in red, black and yellow, all colors being of a very vivid and crude hue. Factory chimneys, machinery and glowing fires, and smoke play a large part in all forms of the workers' decorative art.

It was interesting, however, to note that, contrary to current reports, there is a great revival through these colleges of the Russian native arts and handicrafts, such as miniature painting on Russian lacquer, an art which was dying out before the Revolution, Russian enamel, needlework, embrodiery and lace. In spite of many difficulties, much is being done by the schools to keep the old artistic spirit of Russia alive through the turmoil of new thought and activity and to counteract the natural tendency during the revolutionary period to reject anything that is older than the Revolution.

Literature and Music

In the domain of literature and music, these schools are perhaps less fortunate. Literature apart from poetry is concerned mainly with economics. There is a striking tendency among new musical composers to seek expression in triumphant marches and the more decadent forms of syncopated noise known as jazz music. Efforts are, however, being made by these colleges to combat this tendency to imitate the West and to stimulate a higher form of art. The unaccompanied massed choirs of, sometimes as many as 500 workers, give striking results of this. The "International" or some other triumphant revolutionary march has, of course, to receive places of honor on the program, but the rest of it is, however, invariably devoted to the old Russian peasant songs, rendered in a manner which was irresistible. The formation and training of these enormous mass choirs all over the country is now a special feature in Soviet Russia, which in itself repays a visit.

Opera and Theatre

The Russian stage (drama, opera and ballet) is so well known to lovers of Russian art that it will be sufficient to say that it has weathered the storm of the Revolution and remains intact. The old operas and ballets are still played to crowded audiences. There is nothing like it elsewhere, the gem itself is unspoiled, but the setting has changed. The gay uniforms of the ruling class, the wonderful Parisian frocks and glittering jewels of their womenfolk, have disappeared from the auditorium. The new setting is more sombre. The new audience is composed of working men and women in dark clothing, who are there to see the performance and not their friends. They are highly critical, and usually less demonstrative than the old Russian audience.

In this connection it may be of interest to repeat a conversation with a dancer famous in Tsarist days. She was asked how she liked playing to the new audiences, who held no expensive bouquets of flowers, who could purchase no jewels and give no promise of champagne suppers.

She replied, "It is, of course, entirely different, but I think it is more real. Now I realize that it is only my art and talent that can make them call me before the curtain until I dance again. I think I dance better now although I am older. I certainly love my art more. Formerly I hated touring the provinces. Now I feel that I am doing something creative when I travel 1,000 miles to show the people my interpretation of a ballet. I am free to leave Russia, but yet I am glad to stay."

Most of the old favorites have disappeared or gone abroad, but new talent is not lacking.

CALLES FORBIDS ANTI-IMPERIALIST LEAGUE MEETING

Seeks to Halt the Big Gathering in January

According to an International News Service dispatch from Mexico City the Calles government has banned the convention of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League tentatively scheduled to be held in Mexico City next January.

The Anti-Imperialist League was formed last January in Mexico City. Affiliated with the league are the Federation of Railway Unions of Mexico the largest independent organization of workers in Mexico, the Peasants league of Vera Cruz and of Michoacan, various student groups and the Communist Party of Mexico.

There are numerous organizations in Cuba, the United States and Central American countries also affiliated with the league. Some of the leading intellectuals of Latin-America have endorsed it.

Manuel Gomez, executive secretary of the league, when told of the ban placed on the meeting of the league to be held in Mexico City said that if the dispatch is true it is another and definite proof of the fact that the Calles government is trying to play into the hands of the American imperialists.

"Last April when I was in Mexico I tried to get from Calles a definite statement about the proposed meeting of the league," he said. "A direct reply was not given. At the time we had little hope that the Calles government in its role of protector of American imperialism would permit the meeting.

"This definite ban on the meeting places Calles and his government four square behind Wall Street's domination of Mexico. It is direct treason against the fight his own people have been putting up for real freedom and liberty.

"The league has at last accomplished this much; it has forced Calles to let the workers and peasants of Mexico know where he stands on the question of imperialism.

"The fact that the Anti-Imperialist League is having such a hard time to get a meeting place shows the influence Wall Street exerts on the Latin-American countries.

"Of course the ban which Calles has put on the meeting of the Anti-Imperialist league will not prevent its being held. If the meeting is not held in Mexico City it will be held elsewhere."

Union Protest Arrest of Member at Workers Party Street Meeting

By C. ROBERTS.

Worker Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Aug. 12.—Local Union No. 19, Painters, has sent a letter to the chief of police protesting against the illegal arrest of Brother Flemming and demanding that he be given the right of free speech.

Fleming was arrested when he attempted to take names of witnesses at the request of James H. Dolsen, who was arrested while speaking on the street corner at O'Farrell and Fillmore.

At the hearing the judge appeared to be peeved because the officer had made the arrests and said the Reds were only looking for a fight. The case was continued to Aug. 20, when the cop returns from his vacation.

Foly and four companions were standing in the road near the klan meeting place. Shots were fired and the five dropped. Foleys companions and their injuries:

William Bradley, 25, bullet wound in thigh; Thomasco Sliney, 23, gunshot wound in right cheek; Frank McGuire, 30, gunshot wounds in cheek and back; Edmund Purcell, 21, top of left ear shot away.

The klan meeting, held on the Libby farm, in South Sudbury, was one of the largest ever held in this vicinity and drew a large crowd of curious spectators.

Klansmen Attack.

The highways in all directions were clogged with automobiles. Attacks by the klansmen on the antis followed the breaking up of the meeting.

One large party of klansmen broke thru an attacking crowd and made their way to the Libby house. A crowd of antis surrounded the house and aid was asked of the state constabulary.

Meanwhile, a dozen smaller disorders were taking place and the shooting of the five young men from ambush was going on.

District Attorney Arthur K. Reading of Middlesex county today ordered a searching probe of the disorders and the shooting.

More than 200 men of all ages were assembled about the klan field when without warning a volley issued from near a henhouse on a road in the rear of the Libby farm. As the five young men fell to earth a panic ensued.

Automobiles began to hurry away in all directions. There were many collisions in the confusion.

RENEGADE LABOR EDITOR PROTESTS WHEN BOSSES STRIKE AT UNION'S FAKERS, COLLABORATION ONE WAY

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 13.—In the current issue of the local labor paper, there is publishes a rather peculiar wail of a renegade, with regard to the "unfair" methods used by the Citizen's Alliance, in insisting in its last bulletin, that "all officers elected (of the Central Labor Union) June 6th were candidates advocated and supported by the Communists."

For "Fair Employers"

This falsehood has stimulated the erstwhile radical to collect his knowledge of the class struggle, and make the following piece of sophistry pass as his latest pearl of wisdom:

"In a wild effort to paint the strictly trade union central labor union as a "red" organization and so attempt to discredit organized labor with fair employers, cause industrial unrest and bitter feeling between labor and employer, the citizens' alliance casts truth to the winds. . ."

This is quite a discovery on the part of the editor in question. He reduces the problem of indsutrial unrest, to the very simple proportions of whether the statements of O. P. Briggs, a local head of an industrial espionage system, are true or false in respect to the Central Labor Union.

New Class Collaborationist.

Nothing could be more simple than this. There was a time however, when the contortionist editor of the local labor paper, recognized that the class struggle was a war between the master class and the working class; that creations like O. P. Briggs were the paid tools of capitalism ,who know no restraints and recognize no bounds, in their dark, nefarious designs upon the working class. Today he pleads for and expects "fairness" from the Briggs' camp.

An Attack on Labor.

But what is of great importance in this connection, to the rank and file of Minneapolis labor, is the fact that the fight on the left wing, waged by the renegade and the reactionaries and applauded by O. P. Briggs, as an excellent disruptive tactic calculated to help the bosses, was merely a step toward the complete destruction of the labor movement, as was pointed out by the left wing.

Paul J. Smith, who followed the line of disruption closely, together with his allies, strongly insisted that once the local waters of the C. L. U. would be purged of its red flakes, the bosses would rush to embrace the unions, that there would be a cordial entente between the lion and the lamb. They spoke as if they had guarantees from the citizens' alliance, into which all of the bosses are organized.

But everything is not gold that glitters.

Now, we find, according to the local labor sheet, that the same bosses who supported the labor fakers in their persecution of the left wing, are engaged in downright slander upon the composition of the C. L. U.; that they persist in branding that body "Communistic" when it is not. And it is perfectly true that it is not.

Capitalists Kick Fakers.

Making war on all labor unions and movements, the capitalists secured the services of the labor fakers, to first oust the Communists. That having been accomplished, as they think, now they turn upon their allies, the labor fakers, to smash them, as a fitting reward for their treachery to the working class.

But this is too much even for equilibrist labor editors. So he squawks. There is "unfairness" abroad. It's against the rules of the game, etc., etc. Once again the rank and file of labor has a good lesson illustrated for its benefit.

Potential Communists.

To the capitalist class all workers are potential Communists. Therefore, all labor organizations must be destroyed, even if no single Communist is within them. Labor must answer these tactics of capitalism with the invincible tactic of the united front.

UPHOLSTERS ON STRIKE AGAINST AETNA WAGE CUTS

Put on Second Cut of 10 Per Cent

The upholsterers working for the Aetna Furniture company, 469 West 24th street, are striking against the outrageous wage cuts and tricks of the manager. The whole force of 23 are out, while the other remaining workers in the shop, employing 50, are day workers and laborers of unskilled type, whose wages were not cut yet, tho the firm is planning to cut their wages too, if they can first break the strike of the upholsterers.

The firm posted a notice a week ago, saying that there would be a wage cut of 10 per cent. The manager made a speech, not asking the upholsterers to agree, but merely "explaining" how the poor company was "losing money", and the owners were reduced to hunger and poverty—all the usual bunk. A very pitiful tale told with tears in the eyes—but all lies.

No Union Aid from Faker Kohn.

The upholsterers have no union or contract, because of the policy of the international union under President Kohn betrays all upholsterers to the open shop by a positive refusal to organize the unorganized. Kohn's idea being that the fewer members the union has the better union it is!

When the men got their pay, however, they discovered that besides a ten per cent cut from the old scale, they got a second ten per cent cut—making a cut of twenty per cent.

Drastic Cut in Starvation Wage.

Men with families to support, who had been getting the lowest wages in the city from this scabby Aetna firm, and who had been trying to exist on $35 a week, now found the boss trying to force them to work for $28 a week.

They rebelled yesterday, held a meeting, elected a shop committee and went to the boss with their demands. He refused to talk to two men, the best workers in the shop, saying he didn't want to see them around the place any more.

No Second Cut—No Discrimination.

The men then added to their first demand, that the second cut be rescinded, the demand that no discrimination be practiced against any of their number. The boss argued and pleaded, then got huffy and called eight big cops, but the men were orderly and walked out with their tools after giving the boss a last chance.

Pickets were being posted yesterday and delegates to other shops to warn the workers not to accept jobs from the Aetna Furniture company, known as the cheapest firm in the city to work for.

Kansas City, Mo. "Hands Off China" Meeting Aug. 18

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 13.—Altho the capitalist press has little to say regarding the developments in China, we know from better sources that the struggle is still going on, that the cables are buzzing with communications to the foreign offices of the imperialist powers and that like pythons they are watching for an opportunity to strike a death blow to the militant spirit of the Chinese masses.

So once again in Kansas City the friends of the oppressed Chinese people will hold a "Hands Off China" meeting. The meeting will be held Tuesday, Aug. 18th, at the Open Forum tent, 12th and Forest. No admission will be charged.

J. E. Dolson, lecturer from California, one who is qualified to speak on this subject, will speak. The protest meeting will be attended by many who are quickly becoming wise to the game of imperialism. Other speakers representing the oppressed people will also address the meeting.

E. Hugo Oehler.

UNEMPLOYMENT STEADILY MOUNTS, WORKERS SPEEDED UP TO KEEP INDUSTRY FROM COLLAPSING

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The displacement of human labor by machinery and speedup management methods continues to feature government reports on production and employment. In June the amount of goods produced by manufacturing industry was 25 per cent above the average of 1919 and 20 per cent above June, 1924, while the number of workers employed to get this production was nearly 6 per cent below the 1919 average and less than 2 per cent above June, 1924.

Industrial employment in Illinois is on the downgrade, according to the state department of labor. In July, for the fifth consecutive month, employers reduced their forces. The present level is slightly below July, 1924, and 15.5 per cent below the peak of 1923.

Hits Low Level.

This is the lowest level of employment since early in 1922 when the postwar depression was on. It means that 115,000 workers employed in Illinois factories two years ago are looking for jobs elsewhere today.

The situation is reflected in the 153 persons who applied for every 100 jobs available, altho this is a slight improvement over July, 1924, when there were 171 applicants for every 100 places open.

Reports from iron and steel firms show up the optimistic reports on steel buying circulated by the trade journals. Employment fell off 3.2 per cent in the month, reducing the level to 10 per cent below March. At that there were still about 11 per cent more employed in the industry than in July, 1924.

Car and locomotive shops laid off 10 per cent of their employes in the month, a reduction of more than 20 per cent since May. Agricultural implement makers laid off 6 per cent. On the other hand the usual seasonal boom added 10.6 per cent in the men's garment trades and 24 per cent in women's clothing factories.

Decline in Steel Industry.

The decline in the steel and railway equipment industries is due largely to the slump in railroad buying. In the first six months of 1925 the railroads ordered 333 new locomotives, compared with 701 in 1924 and 1,739 in the first six months of 1923. Similarly railroad orders for new cars fell from 67,292 in the first half of 1923 and 72,242 in the first half of 1924 to 35,623 this year. Unfilled orders on the books of locomotive manufacturers in July called for 378, compared with 483 last year and 1,738 in 1923.

U. S. Steel reports a decline of 170,991 tons in unfilled orders. This is the fifth successive month of a decline which has brot orders down from 5,285,000 tons in March to 3,539,000 tons at the end of July. On July 31, 1924, there were 3,262,505 tons booked, but in July, 1923, there were orders ahead for 6,396,261 tons.

The irregularity of railroad purchases has always been recognised as one of the worst disturbers of employment. It is an outstanding argument for public control of an industry which exercises such far-reaching influence.

U. S. Government Says Shanghai Strike Is Affecting U. S. Trade

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The United States government department of commerce laconically confirms the importance of the Shanghai general strike and liberation movement by the following brief summary of business transacted:

"Inactivity continues to be the predominant factor of the Shanghai markets, special lines being extremely quiet. The shipping strike is still in effect and much of the cargo destined for China is being carried to Kobe and Manila. Automotive sales during the past month were one-fourth normal, but sales of iron and steel have not been affected."

40,000 HOMES LOST YEARLY IN ANGEL CITY

Real Estate Sharks Are "Famine Stricken"

By FRAPIESA.

LOS ANGELES, August 13.—For the year ended July 31, 1925, covering the period of slump, approximately 40,000 homes have been forfeited in Los Angeles by owners. Ex-propriation of home owners still continues at the same momentum as during the past several months.

The homes were lost by the mortgaging process. In the majority of cases they were purchased on the installment plan, small portion of total price being paid down and the balance paid, "just like rent," month by month.

Because of the condition indicated a house and lot may be lost by several different purchases in a year and there are so many cases of this kind that it is logical to estimate that the actual number of houses and lots forfeited during the year was 30,000, although 40,000 buyers suffered.

Traffic in Homes.

This shows the frenzied nature of the gambling in homes. The eagerness of people to own their own homes makes them easy prey for those who profit by the hazard. Such is the percentage in favor of the professional gamblers behind the game that chances of home seekers to win are far less than those of players of the old Louisiana lottery were.

As usual, the victims are workers, for the greater part. Burdened with ever-increasing rents, mechanics and laborers are lured by the "own your own home" idea. They follow the ignis fatuus until sickness, unemployment or other misfortune comes. Then they find themselves in the swamp of bankruptcy from which there is no salvation. The real estate agents swoop down upon them and take their all. With savings gone houses taken from them, the home seekers are more destitute than if they had never tried to own homes.

Wide-spread Destitution.

The net result of the operations of the "own your own home" beasts of prey in Los Angeles during the past year may be placed at 100,000 destitute men, women and children. That is a minimum. But these 100,000 will not be found here. No, indeed. Thousands of them have gone back to the eastern states, the middle west and elsewhere. They left Los Angeles as a plague spot while they had enough cash to pay their fares.

In April, May and June this year trains alone caried as many as 5,000 persons a day bound east away from Los Angeles. The exodus still continues.

Home buyers are now very scarce hereabouts. When they come within the scent of the real estate agents and these learn how much ready cash they have to commence to buy homes remarks such as "That guy has $400!" are made in such awesome tones by the "subdividers" as to leave no doubt as to how scarce money is and how rare are prospective victims who possess it.

Home seekers have been plucked until there is nothing left to them.

SARGENT LENDS EAR TO PARDON PLEA OF McCRAY

Class Prisoners Are Spurned, Not Politician

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Attorney General Sargent lent a friendly ear to the lawyers who asked him to pardon the political grafter, former Governor McCray of Indiana, serving ten years at Atlanta for forgery and using the mails to defraud, altho he does not give a passing thot to the scores of class-war prisoners jailed for their political views.

A delegation of Indiana politicians made the plea for McCray, who is George Ade's brother-in-law. Harry S. New, postmaster-general and a fellow politician, joined in the plea for a pardon for the corrupt politician.

The petition was signed by fourteen state governors, thirty bank officials, and Thomas Taggart, Indiana's political boss.

Sargent listened to the appeal for two and one-half hours.

RUSSIA TODAY

The first publication in England of this most complete report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia, caused a great stir in the world trade union movement.

From all parts of the world came high praise for this historical document, from those workers in and out of the organized labor movement earnestly working for world trade union unity.

By all enemies of labor, capitalists and their henchmen, the bitterest criticism was levelled.

This report made by the Official Delegation of British Labor (including charts and maps) is an impartial study of every phase of life under the first world's workers' government. Politics, Finance, Army, Religion, Education, Trade Unions, Wages—these and other subjects are analyzed by the Delegation who have travelled unhindered and free to investigate in all sections of Soviet Russia.

It is a complete, impartial and dignified document of one of the world's leading bodies of Labor.

WM. F. DUNNE
Editor of the Daily Worker says:

The British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia in a unanimous report has told the story of the Russian Revolution in language that trade unionists can understand.

It is a great story, told in matter-of-fact language, the story of millions of workers and peasants marching towards Communism over all obstacles; it is history hot with the breath of the struggle in the style of a convention report . . .

Revolutionary Russian and stubborn, slow-moving Briton call to the American worker from the pages of the British delegation's report.

The Attack on the Amalgamated

Last Wednesday afternoon a small army of police under the leadership of the notorious "Mike" Grady, police lieutenant with a shady history, raided the headquarters of the joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and arrested sixty-two members of the organization that were present, including several officers. Later on, when Sidney Rissman, assistant manager and business agent of the joint board, appeared at the detective bureau to take steps to release the members of the union, he was seized by Lieutenant Grady and thrown into a cell.

This raid is added proof—if any is needed—of the close relations between the manufacturers and the police department. It shows clearly, what we have always pointed out, that the police department is the tool of the employing class.

This raid on the Amalgamated headquarters had no other purpose than to break the strike of the union against the millionaire clothing firm, the International Tailoring company. The police acted directly thru the chamber of commerce.

It is also significant that on the very day the raid took place, the International News Service sent a story over its wires that the American Federation of Labor was threatening to break with the Chicago Federation of Labor over the latter's attack on the United Garment Workers for scabbing on the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The news service gave the name of Tom Rickerts local scab herder as authority for the statement.

Thus we have in one unholy combination against the Amalgamated, the bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor, the chamber of commerce, representing the International Tailoring company and the police department to do the dirty work. This united front of the employers and their lackeys is a challenge to the entire trade union movement fo Chicago. This latest outrage against militant unionists must not go unanswered. The working class must show Mayor Dever, the humble tool of big business, that it is in the power of the working class to put a representative of labor in the city hall and kick out the handy man of the chamber of commerce and the combined capitalists of Chicago.

The attack on the Amalgamated teaches many lessons, not the least of which is this: Any union that fights for the interests of its members, no matter what political views the mass of its membership represents, is sure to draw the fire of the master class. The Amalgamated was not raided because its officials are sympathetic to the Communists. Such a charge could not be directed against them. In fact many of them went out their way quite recently to convince the employers that they had nothing in common with the Communists. But this did not save them. Why? Because the particular employer who stands to lose money by being compelled to pay better wages to his wage slaves is not worrying so much about the distant future as he is about the here and now. Thus, we see, that it makes little difference to the employers whether he is compelled to turn over more of his profits to a Communist worker or to a worker who still believes in the parties of capitalism.

Unions that adopt the policy of collaborating with the employers are never in any danger of police raids. It is significant that the capitalist press reports stated that all the cockroach firms that complained of being attacked by alleged agents of the Amalgamated were either open shop or had agreements with the United Garment Workers. The Amalgamated members may also notice that all the capitalist papers played up the arrested men as if they were a lot of criminals. The DAILY WORKER alone of all the dailies in Chicago defended those workers.

It is nothing new to have reactionary labor leaders co-operating with the police and the employers in bringing about the arrest of workers. In Los Angeles, reactionary officials of the carpenters' unions co-operated with the police in raiding the offices of the Trade Union Educational League and the Workers Party. John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, boastingly admitted that he helped the department of justice ferret out the radicals in his own organization. This attack on the Amalgamated is by no means a novelty.

The DAILY WORKER calls on the entire trade union movement of Chicago to give its united support to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in this crisis. Organized labor must accept the challenge of the chamber of commerce, and show the combined forces of the enemy that labor realizes the meaning of solidarity.

One of the Chicago Tribune's paid liars who is stationed in Riga says that Russia is vodkaizing working class visitors into the belief that the Soviet Union is progressing. We wonder if they have also vodkaized France into officially repudiating the efforts of Britain to sent a joint note to Moscow asking for an official statement on the alleged relations between the Soviet government and the Communist International.

The Illinois committee that essayed to elect LaFolette have a debt of $10,000 hanging around their necks. They held a picnic in Riverview to wipe it out. 200 women and children attended. We will leave the rest to your imagination.

But Green is too busy on his knees fawning on the master class and barking at the Communists. He may get something in his pockets from the bosses by going on his knees to them, but he will only get the boot in the posterior from the working class.

When a bridge worker who had been unemployed for several weeks got a job he was so weak with hunger that he missed his footing and fell to his death. This did not happen in Bolshevik Russia, but in capitalist Philadelphia.

An official of the Carnegie Trust company in Pittsburgh, Pa., lost ten millions. No, no, the money did not belong to himself. He is a banker.

Hylan and Hearst are in alliance against Tammany Hall. This will provide some excitement, but in the end the workers will find that whichever side wins they lose.

New England textile industries are combining. What about the textile union taking a hint?

Party Trade Union Work - -

By Wm. Z. Foster

ON many different occasions the Communist International, in its various communications to our party, has stressed the necessity of our devoting more attention to the trade union work. In the decision of the Enlarged Executive Committee on the American question, it says:

"In America the regular work of party members in the trade unions must be considered now as the fundamental work on which depends the success of the party in most of the other fields, and especially the struggle for a Labor Party. Therefore, any tendency to neglect or minimize the importance of this work must be energetically combatted."

THE Comintern found it so necessary to stimulate the Workers Party on the question of Communist work in the trade unions, that it, in conjunction with the Profintern, has addressed a joint letter to our party on this general subject. This letter bristles with instructions to devote more and more attention to activity in the mass economic organizations of the workers. It says:

"It is of extreme importance to the life and growth of the Workers Party that its members as a whole realize better the necessity of more intensive work in the trade unions. The labor unions are the basic mass organizations of the workers. They wage war against the employers on one of the most important sectors of the front of the class struggle. The capture of the leadership of the labor union masses in their struggle is necessary not only for the strengthening of the Workers Party at the present time but also for the ultimate victory of the revolutionary struggle. The capture of the labor unions is our first and foremost task."

And again:

"The Party must use disciplinary measures to compel its members to join the labor unions and to become active in them. It must be firmly fixed in the mind of every party member that no worker in an industrial country like America can be a real Communist unless he is an active labor unionist. The party must take a determined stand against any sign of slackness in labor union activity. The work in the labor unions must be regarded as the basis which will determine the success of the party in most other spheres of work."

Why all this repeated insistance by the Communist International for increased activity by the Workers Party in the trade unions? The answer is found in the facts that only about one-third of our party members are at the same time members of the trade unions, and of this trade union membership only a very small portion are really active in the trade unions. That is to say, the Workers Party is doing only a fraction of the work that it should in the trade unions, and this fact is well known to the Comintern, which is determined to correct the situation, and to throw all available forces of our party into this basic work.

It is one of the greatest errors of the Central Executive Committee minority group that they do not take to heart these repeated instructions from the Comintern on the question of trade union work, and join wholeheartedly with the Central Executive Committee in a campaign to improve the situation in this vital respect. This is due to a fundamental lack of appreciation of the importance of work in the proletarian mass economic organizations. One of the most serious weaknesses of the minority as a whole is its underestimation of party work in trade unions.

THIS underestimation and lack of understanding of trade union work has long characterized the minority leadership and has manifested itself in various ways. When the minority group controlled the Central Executive Committee, and before the present factional situation developed, the indifference of this group towards trade union work showed itself by surrendering this activity almost entirely into the hands of those who now make up the majority of the Central Executive Committee. From the foundation of the Workers Party, and during the last months of the underground party, the Pepper-Ruthenberg group left the working out and application of trade union policies almost completely in our hands. The objective situation was highly favorable, with the workers then engaged in the greatest series of strikes in American history. Our campaigns prospered and the Trade Union Educational League made rapid headway. It immediately became the leader of the whole left wing in the trade union movement.

The Pepper-Ruthenberg group gave this work their blessing from afar. They were uncritical, usually adopting unanimously without discussion all the propositions of the Industrial Department. Yes, despite this policy of non-participation in trade union work, we found the minority delegation at Moscow during the last hearing on the American question graciously taking the credit for all the work that was done. They declared that the party work was highly effective in the trade unions and then took to themselves the full credit for it simply because it was performed when they were in the majority in the party. But the truth is that the only real credit they can claim, if credit is due for such, is for not hindering the work at that epoch. They had almost nothing to do with its actual performance.

AFTER the dispute in the Central Executive Committee in August, 1923, regarding the Federated Farmer Labor Party policy, which was the beginning of the present factional situation, the weakness of the minority on trade union work manifested itself in new forms. For one thing, the minority found it necessary to have a trade union policy. No longer could it surrender completely this important branch of party work to our group. The minority then began to dabble in mapping out trade union policies. The first fruits of this were presented to the last convention of the party in the form of an industrial program. The outstanding features of this program were proposals to drop the slogans of amalgamation and organize the unorganized. On the question of amalgamation, the minority program said:

"Neither the workers of the unorganized industries nor the hundreds of thousands of organized workers are interested in any organizational improvement of the existing craft unions. Our vigorous campaign for amalgamation was in place for the period of prosperity and it helped to stir up great sections of organized labor."

To this mistaken proposal of dropping the campaign to consolidate the unions, the minority added the equally serious error of proposing to discontinue our active work for the organization of the unorganized. They declared that our slogan, "Organize the Unorganized", "was a proper slogan during a period of complete employment, increase in wages, and decrease in hours." As a substitute for these two basic campaigns the minority proposed to center the industrial work around the organization of the unemployed, altho unemployment had manifestly not taken on a sufficiently mass character to make this program practicable. Since the party convention the efforts of the minority to develop a trade union program have been marked by the most serious opportunistic deviations, which will be discussed in a later article.

AFTER the factional situation developed the minority's minimizing of trade union work showed itself in a tendency to attack and belittle the comrades and organizations engaged in activities in the trade unions. The August Thesis of 1923 made a long attack upon the party members who were active in the trade union movement. This lead has since been followed, with the result that in large sections of the party the feeling has been developed that in some way or other work in the trade unions is not vital and that party, members who take the lead in that work are not Communists in the full sense of the word. The impression has been created that trade union work, as such, is to some degree syndicalistic. Many comrades seem to take a sort of pride in the fact that they play no part in the struggles of the trade union organizations.

As for the Trade Union Educational League, it has been singled out for attack. Campaigns have been openly carried on against it by responsible party workers. In view of the difficult situation that the league has been working under, with the right-wing bureaucracy shooting into it from all sides, such opposition from within our ranks has been particularly disastrous. Instead of correcting the glaring weakness of our Party's work in the trade unions, the policy of the minority tends only to increase it and to make the situation worse.

In the long dispute that has continued in the party since 1923, the question of the character of our trade union work and the emphasis to be placed on this branch of our activity has been an underlying issue of basic character, even tho the discussion has not turned so directly on this point. In the Parity Commission the two groups came to theoretical agreement regarding our tasks in the trade unions. When they accomplish this in the execution of the practical work in these organizations, then the party will be far along on the way to unity.

BUT how can this understanding be brought about? Certainly not by the majority group adopting the minority attitude towards work in the trade unions. There is only one solution to the problem. This is by the minority's fully and freely accepting the Comintern's position that the work in the trade unions is a vital and fundamental task of the party, and then by giving their active co-operation and participation in this work. With this accomplished, the Bolshevization of our party will proceed apace in all its aspects, and the party will rapidly assume a position of far greater power and influence in the labor movement as a whole.

Trade Union Work - - -

A Letter from the Comintern and the Profintern.

From the Executive Committee of the Communist International and the Executive Committee of the Red International of Labor Unions.

IT is of extreme importance to the life and growth of the Workers Party that its members as a whole realize better the necessity of more intensive work in the labor unions. The labor unions are the basic mass organizations of the workers. They wage war against the employers on one of the most important sectors of the front of the class struggle. The capture of the leadership of the labor union masses in their struggle is vitally necessary not only for the strengthening of the Workers Party at the present time, but also for the ultimate victory of the revolutionary struggle. The capture of the labor unions is our first and foremost task.

That the Workers Party as a whole does not yet thoroly realize the exceptional importance of trade union activity is clear from the fact that only 40 per cent of the party membership are members of labor unions, and even of these only very few are active in the latter work. If the unions are weak and are dominated by the reactionaries, it is the business of the Communists to strengthen them and to wage a relentless fight against the leadership and the policies of the reactionaries. In those places and industries where no labor unions exist the Communist must take the initiative and organize unions. We must not sit with our hands folded and wait until the labor bureaucracy finds it necessary to form unions. The organization of the masses into labor unions is the historical task of the Communist movement in America.

THE party must use disciplinary measures to compel its members to join the labor unions and become active in them. It must be firmly fixed in the mind of every party member that no worker in an industrial country like America can be a real Communist unless he is an active labor unionist. The party must take a determined stand against any sign of slackness in labor union activity. The work in the labor unions must be regarded as the basis which will determine the success of the party in most other spheres of work.

The Workers Party must render the utmost assistance to the Trade Union Educational League. Wherever the party has branches the latter must regard it as their duty to set up and maintain local branches of the League. Party members who are trade unionists must actively engage in the work of the League. In the League as a whole and in each separate labor union organization the party members must be united into a Communist faction and on all questions act unanimously and as one body.

THE Workers Party must also do everything within its power to prevent itself becoming isolated from the masses. It must resist the tendencies to reduce the Trade Union Educational League to the position of an exclusive organ of the Communists and their closest sympathizers, irrespective of whether such tendencies are a result of pressure from outside or of pressure on the part of the party member anxious to keep out non-partisans. The party must strive to convert the League into an extensive Left Bloc Organization, lining up all the revolutionary and progressive elements in the labor unions against the reactionary bureaucracy.

The Communist strategy in the labor unions must be to unite, thru the medium of the Trade Union Educational League, all the left wing elements against the old officialdom and their policies. Every struggle of the workers and all everyday activities must be directed to this object. One of the important features of the work in the labor unions is without fail to utilize the elections of trade union officers and of the delegates to the local, district, national and A. F. of L. conventions. Among the so-called progressive elements there is a growing tendency to develop an opposition against the reactionary labor union bureaucracy and to put up their own ticket in opposition to them at elections. This tendency must be stimulated and developed by the Workers Party as a means of bringing the workers under its influence. In every election, both in local unions, central trades councils and in the international unions, the Communists, where they are not sufficiently strong to secure the election of their own candidates, must unite with the progressives and support joint candidates on the basis of the united front. It should be remembered that the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor and of the international unions does not represent a single reactionary mass. The closer the labor union official is to the shop and the dues-payer, the more subject is he to the direct influence of the masses of the workers. Among these elements there are many who are disgusted with the policies of the heads. This discontent, tho not yet organized, nevertheless represents opposition to the old course. The party must give every possible assistance to the progressive elements in their struggle against the reactionary bureaucracy. The league must strive to establish a united front with these elements on the basis of a concrete program of action.

The league should be actively supported by the party in prosecution of the league program endorsed at the Third Congress of the R. I. L. U. Particular attention should be given to the folowing points:

1. Strikes and Wage Movements.

THE party must actively engage in every strike and wage movement. It must also rouse the masses to take up such movements. It must skillfully utilize these movements for political ends. It must have a program of demands for each mass movement of this kind and the Communists must fight for the leadership in the struggle. The wage cutting campaign carried out by the capitalists must be opposed by a counter-campaign of strikes.

2. Class Collaboration.

THE party must conduct a relentless war against all class collaboration plans, such as the labor banks, insurance companies, the B. & O. Plan, etc., which are being foisted upon the workers by the reactionary bureaucracy. This campaign must be opposed by a militant struggle for a class war policy. The party must steadily expose the incapability, corruption and treachery of the reactionary bureaucracy. On the question of labor banking, our policy must be to oppose the establishment of new banks on the present basis and to demand that the existing banks be reorganized on co-operative lines, that they break with Wall Street and refrain from locking up strike funds in various investments.

3. Organization of the Unorganized.

IN every labor union the party must raise the question of the organization of the unorganized. The party should also utilize its shop nuclei for the organization of the unorganized and to obtain the leadership in all their sruggles. Where labor unions exist the policy of the party must be to strengthen them. Where there are no unions the party must take the initiative and form unions.

4. Amalgamation.

THE campaign for amalgamation of the craft unions into industrial organizations must be vigorously prosecuted. The amalgamation movement must be put on a more concrete basis in view of the desperate resistance which the labor bureaucracy is putting up against it. This movement must be linked up with the everyday struggle of the workers and their everyday demands. In order to widen and extend the amalgamation movement, plans should be elaborated for closer co-operation among the unions in the various industries and localities. At the same time a drive should be launched for amalgamation of the unions on a national scale.

5. Canadian Autonomy.

AN active campaign should be conducted for the affiliation of all the independent unions to the American Federation of Labor, including the railway brotherhoods, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the revolutionary unions, etc. Where affilaitions to the American Federation of Labor requires the development of the Amalgamation movement, such a movement should be actively supported. The demand should also be raised among the American unions for giving autonomy to their Canadian sections, in accordance with the principles laid down in the program of the league.

6. The Shop Commitee Movement.

THE party should vigorously push forward the movement directed towards the development of shop committees, not only in the organized, but in the unorganized industries as well. The shop committee movement represents a power instrument for the organization of the unorganized masses and the Workers' Party should not fail to utilize it.

7. The Work Among the Negroes.

NEGRO workers are becoming an ever more important factor in industry. The employers are doing everything possible to utilize them in the struggle against the whites, thus exploiting both the whites and the negroes. The labor bureaucracy falls into this trap set by the employers and sets up all sorts of barriers to prevent the Negroes joining the unions. This tendency must be relentlessly fought against. The Workers Party must demand the admission of the Negroes to the respective unions, and see to it that they receive equal protection with the whites. Where the leaders refuse to admit Negroes into the unions, special Negro labor unions should be formed in that particular industry.

8. Connections with the Workers of The Colonies.

THE party, thru the league, should set up close and permanent connections with the labor unions in the Philippines, Haiti, Cuba and the other countries under the economic and political subjection of United States imperialism. The purpose of these connections should be to render the utmost support to the workers in the colonies and semi-colonies in their political and economic struggle against the invaders.

9. International Trade Union Unity.

THE party must launch an active campaign in favor of international trade union unity. It must fight in every trade union for the endorsement of the demand for a world unity congress and for the participation of the American Federation of Labor in it, on the basis of the R. I. L. U. proposal. It must also fight for the support of the Anglo-Russian committee as the first step towards trade union unity and for the affiliation of the various national unions to the respective industrial secretariats.

The labor union work is of extreme importance to the consolidation of the Workers Party. Everything possible must be done to insure the success of this work. The various points of this letter must be closely studied and actively applied. If this is done, the party will widely extend its influence over the masses and be placed on a more solid basis. We call upon the entire party membership to put into effect the policies laid down in this letter.

With Communist greetings,

(Signed) A. W. KUUSINEN, Secretary Executive Committee Communist International.

(Signed) A. LOZOVSKY, General Secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions.

The Workers Monthly — A Review

TOO little is said, too little is written and much too little is done about so good a magazine as the Workers Monthly.

This is written without qualification. And no worker, Communist or otherwise, would fail to agree after a close reading of the current August issue.

It isn't simply because of the attractiveness of the magazine, because it's "so easy on the eyes" from its decorative cover to the last page in it. True such artists as Fred Ellis, G. Piccoli, Maurice Becker, Don Brown and others have done much to make it attractive indeed—and the myriad of photographs add to the magazine's beauty and worth. But because of the valuable contributions primarily, this issue (and this magazine in every issue) deserves a good deal more of attention.

Articles by Arne Swabeck on the Steel Industry, by William Z. Foster and Earl R. Browder on the needle trades and one by Alex Reid on the miners give the keynote to this issue. In these are the life of the working class and in these are struggle—(with bosses and labor fakers!) and here is also the Communist presentation of not facts alone—but also principles and program as guidance for future leadership.

To the articles on industrial struggles and working class political action are added a number of other most interesting features. Moissaye Olgin's article on Russia, is a personal account of activities under a workers' government that will give you vision of another world. And the article on American concessions in Russia will bring this other world closer home to you.

Perhaps one article deserves special mention. "Twenty Years After" by Harrison George is surely one that would stand out in any issue of even as good a magazine as the Workers Monthly. Here is the history of the I. W. W. for twenty years in a nut-shell—the history of struggle in this country and a spectacle of a withering organization that once personified struggle to American workers.

Another really unusual feature appears in this issue of the Workers Monthly. Like in the publication of the original draft of the Communist Manifesto, which appeared for the first time recently in the Little Red Library series, tho written as long as seventy five years ago, an article "The Organic Composition of Capital" written by Karl Marx, is the first appearance in this country of a letter in which Marx analyzes the roots of the difference with Ricardo and other bourgeois economists. The appearance of such treasures make the Workers Monthly doubly valuable to every worker.

Many other features are in the August issue of the Workers Monthly—many other good ones ... many other things deserving much to be said about them. Without question, about every issue of the Workers Monthly (read it yourself if you doubt our word) too little is said, too little is written and much too little is done.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it. Send for a catalogue of all Communist literature.

Patten has placed the services of the Landis Committee at the disposal of the contractors. He cannot do a thing to the plasterers he admits, but this is what he says about the lathers: "The lathers' trade is one of the fifteen open shop trades and the committee has had no difficulty in keeping an available supply of lathers for the Landis Award building contractors. THE wives of leading Illinois manufacturers left their sheiks twiddling their thumbs in the fashionable private tea dansants for a few hours on an afternoon last week, to open war on the workingclass women of the state who favor the 48 hour week for their sex, the child labor amendment and other measures which they believe might lighten the burden of toil. This kind of activity the pampered parasites of the rich considered pernicious.

WHILE women of the workingclass were contributing something of value to society, those useless wasters passed a resolution demanding that this business of seeking shorter hours and more pay must come to a stop. This kind of social legislation would ruin the industries, they admitted. The only law they were in favor of was the one demanding a state police. "We know from our personal knowledge" ran the resolution" that employers of today are more sincerely interested in the wellfare of their employes than are the paid reformers and agitators." No doubt the capitalists are generous to their wives, and "friends." But their generosity only makes itself felt to the workers when the latter have the power to make them cough up.

THE American capitalists who grabbed over $300,000,000 worth property from the Germans during the war, are now between two minds whether they should give it up or not. Preferably not. But there are political considerations. The German ambasador has officially demanded the return of this loot. Cal. figures out that it is better to return the stuff rather than stand the danger of losing the German vote. Nothing very ideal about the way capitalist goverpments act!

LETTERS coming into the office show that the report of the British delegation, now running in The DAILY WORKER is being followed with keen interest by the American workers. PROPAGANDA is now being carried on in Europe seeking to discourage delegations of workers from visiting the Soviet Union. The workers who go there, regardless of their political affiliations, feel greatly enthused over the progress made by the capitalists and their paid liars. So they proceed to dish out fantastic yarns about "model factories" and "model villages" after the fashion of Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, the anarchist renegades. But this kind of a campaign is not working. The next move will be to demand that the governments refuse permission to workers to visit Russia. Alright! But this also will cause trouble.

BRUTAL RAID ON PICKETS GIVES STRIKE NEW PEP

Amalgamated Prepares for Picnic Sunday

That the raid conducted on the headquarters of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 409 South Halsted street, by the city detective bureau squad, led by Mike Grady upon orders from the International Tailoring Company, failed to achieve its purpose of breaking the strike against that firm, was shown by the spirit displayed by the pickets yesterday.

At the strike meeting, the International employes, realizing that the raid was another desperate attempt to smash their union and break up the strike, went ahead with plans for their picnic on Sunday. The 14 strike leaders who had been held in $5,000 and $2,400 bond each were all released yesterday, and bail for Patsey De Rosa held on $100,400 bond, was expected to be obtained by nightfall.

Jailed Strikers Cheered.

The strike meeting yesterday was crowded with enthusiastic pickets, who applauded and cheered those who had been held in the raid. The picket line was even bigger and the strikers more determined than ever that they shall not return to work until the International signs a union agreement. One picket, Abe Bloomberg, was arrested yesterday, and booked on a charge of "assault."

"The desperate attempt to break the strike has failed as miserably as all the other attempts," said Isadore Rothbart, one of the "conspirators" now out on bail. "The International and J. L. Taylor company thot that if they picked out 65 or 70 union men and arrested them they could break the strike. But the only affect this contemptible act had was to give the strikers more vigor and determination."

"Contemptible Frame-Up."

"This raid is nothing new. It is the usual way they treat people who go on strike. If you fight the employer you are guilty in their eyes. Yesterday's attempt was one of the most brazen frame-ups that could possibly be conceived."

"The raid was an attempt to try to besmirch the fight of the workers with manufactured news of the corrupted press. You can jail strikers, but you cannot force them to go back to work. The raid is but another indication that the end of the strike is coming very soon, that the International is desperate. We are going to stay out until we win."

"There is only one law in this country, the law for those who have money. Workers? They are thrown in the

CHICAGO I. L. G. W. OFFICIALS TO START TERROR

Members Face Third Degreeing

Condition within the Chicago union of the International Ladie' Garment Workers are rapidly approaching a crisis. The disruption of Peristein carried disorganization in its train. Unemployment of members is widespread. Work is being made in non-union shops both in and out of town. In many cases with the knowledge of the officials, union shops send out work.

Members are protesting the way the union is handled, and with reason. But in order to conceal their negligence and hide their incapabality, the I. L. G. W. officials are again starting a terrorist campaign just as Peristein did a year and a half ago.

Terror Begins Again.

Many members are being charged with vague and flimsy offenses and hauled up before the grievance committee or special committees. The officials are also being incited by the Sigman gang to disrupt the union completely rather than let the members take control of it.

The result is that two weeks ago Friday the Joint Board in their infinite wisdom appointed an "investigation committee" otherwise known among the cloakmakers as the "Detective bureau," the "Lusk committee," or the "Snoopers," to examine the heads of the members and discover if any were concealing therein, any stray ideas tainted with "disloyalty" to the officials of the international. The crime of lese majesty is a serious offense in the Sigman dynasty, which intends to die just as nasty as it lived.

"We—The I. L. G. W."

On Thursday the official snoopers, gathered together with all the pompous dignity of the famous "Tailors of Tooley street," had an "investigation." Yes, sir. They yielded to none in cross-examining the "prisoners—beg pardon, the members of the union. District Attorney Crowe could take lessons from them in handling burglars, murderers and other persons guilty of like mild misdemeanors compared with which opposition to Sigman is a grave offense subject to capital punishment by decapitation.

The "investigation committee" called in about ten members suspected of having ideas on unionism not consonant with themselves, Sigman, Peristein, the manufacturers and the police. Knowing their own deficiencies they wer hasty in taking the offensive and made the prisoners feel that they were in the presence of the prosecuting attorney.

Prisoners Before Their Accusers.

The third degrees began. Those in custody were cross examined separetly in the best "gold fish room" style. The uestion being somewhat as follows:

"Did you attend the mass protest meeting held under the auspices of the Joint Action Committee of Local 2, 9 and 22? Do you sympathize with them? What is your opinion about the present officers, local and general? Do you know the decision of the general executive board in regard to the actions of Local 2, 9 and 22?"

Something Given for Nothing.

The information was volunteered.

FRANKLIN UNION NO. 4 BETRAYED BY PRESIDENT

Tries to Split Feeders from Pressmen

That President Hugh Crambert of Franklin Union No. 4 of the Press Feeders is trying to betray the members again to the Berry International machine was disclosed Thursday, when he tried to break the strike and force the feeders back to work at the Cuneo plant, which does the printing work of Sears-Roebuck. The line of attack of the Berry International machine is now revealed as an attempt to split the pressmen and feeders before they join forces.

Crambert, whose reputation is well known as a lackey and lickspittle of Berry, has been on a vacation for a week and a half. But evidently hearing that the pressmen and feeders were going to unite their forces, probably being tipped off by the Berry machine, Crambert hurried back to town and tried to call a meeting of the feeders now on strike at Cuneo's.

Conspiracy to Block Amalgamation.

Crambert's bright idea was to coax, heg or blackjack the feeders to go back to work. If the feeders went back, then the International's machine crooks in the Pressmen could point out that the feeders had broken the strike line, and thus by setting No. 3 and No. 4 against each other, to betray and defeat the effort of the membership of both unions to amalgamate at the meeting scheduled to take place at the Peoples Institute, Leavitt and Van Buren streets, Saturday at 2:30 p. m.

The International gang is making desperate efforts to break the feeders and pressmen apart, to split them away from each other and ruin the hopes of the members of both unions, before this meeting takes place.

Crambert's Treason Strikes Snag.

When Crambert tried to tell the feeders at Thursday's meeting that Cuneo's shop was full of scabs and that they had to go back to prevent complete loss of the union, he sounded the wrong key, for the feeders knew the conditions at the plant. They resented the strikebreaking threats and actions of Crambert and altho he tried to hold a meeting secretly of federe only, the progressive feeders knew what was coming.

When the meeting opened, about 250 men, both feeders and pressmen also, were present, and when Crambert pulled his strikebreaking stuff a near riot ensued, in which Crambert escaped physical injury only by the skin of his teeth.

Tricked Them Before With Lie.

Crambert has a bad name among the feeders, not only as a general faker, but for his lying method of getting them into the International three years ago by a promise that if they would go back in the International, the color houses would be won back in three months.

It is now three years since Crambert made that promise and the men agreed to accept the proposition. But the color houses still remain where they were three years ago. The feeders are determined to defeat all efforts to split them away from the pressmen, who are kept thoroly informed of all moves of the Berry machine and who are in turn co-operating fully with the feeders.

This is the third of a series of articles exposing the record of the notorious strikebreaker "Majah" Geo. L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union.

ARTICLE III.

"Majah" Berry, like many other high officials of the American Federation of Labor, has conveniently forgotten the early history of the trade union movement in this country, when the unions and the men who organized the unions believed in fighting against the employers for better conditions for the workers and not in co-operating with the employers to fleece the membership. Today Berry claims to be a prominent business man and one of those good labor leaders who never have any quarrels with the bosses. If Berry does not quarrel with the bosses, he cannot say the same about his relations with the members of his own union.

Broke Two Strikes.

He has succeeded in breaking two strikes in New York and getting David Simons, former head of Web Pressmen's Union, Local 25, blacklisted by the newspaper publishers, after expelling him from the union. The "crime" committed by Simons was that he believed in making the publishers live up to their agreements.

Even a capitalist newspaper, the Brooklyn Daily Times, admitted that the publishers broke the strike of the New York web pressmen in September 1923. In its issue of July 19, 1925, the Times, commenting on a court decision which gave Simons the right to a jury trial in his fight with Berry, said: "Simons lost his position in the union following the pressmen's "outlaw" strike in September, 1923, that practiclaly tied up the printing of newspapers in the city for nearly a week and was finally crushed thru the efforts of Berry in bringing in pressmen from other cities."

Hired Detective Agency.

The pressmen and feeders of Locals 3 and 4 in Chicago already know that Berry's strikebreaking activities here are not novel. During the pressmen's strike of 1919 in New York City, Berry was not able to break the strike with the aid of stool pigeons from the inter-

Mixed Court Deals in Unmixed Injustice to Chinese Newspapers

By ROSTA SERVICE.

SHANGHAI, July 12.—(By Mail.)—The editor of the newspaper Hot Blood was tried in the mixed court on Saturday under the charge of "disturbing order" in the settlement.

The prosecution was based on the fact that the police had found in his possession a thousand copies of his own paper, as well as some books and writings of the noted Chinese Communist Chen Tah-chie.

The court found that Mr. Chen's articles were directed against imperialism and too much in favor of Communism, and as the paper urged the population to unite in their struggle against imperialism, the editor was fined $150.

LEWIS OPENS OFFICES AT PHILA. HOTEL

Operators' Editor Says Strike Sure

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 14—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Woarkers of America, has established his headquarters at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel here.

He refused to comment today on the hard coal situation. He listened with interest to the questions of reporters but kept silent, except to say, "Here will be my headquarters for some time."

In the event of a strike of anthracite miners September 1, the country east of Buffalo, N. Y., will be the principal sufferer.

Chicago and the territory west of Buffalo will feel it in a much lesser degre.

This was the statement made by Andrew T. Murphy, publisher of the Black Diamond, a national coal journal.

In his opinion, Murphy said, a strike was inevitable and he believed, there is little likelihood of the government interferring.

B. S. AND A. U. IS BULLDOZED BY A SOCIALIST GANG

Meeting Monday May Fight Back

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 14.—I was gloating over "Who is Who" in the labor movement, and perused the biography of Ernest Bohm and wondered how he had become the tool of the reactionary wing of the movement, at this late day.

About two weeks ago, Bohm flashed a very poorly typed sheet of paper before me, and said, "Sign this!"

If I remember, it was addressed to Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor and contained, after a lot of explanation a request, to empower Organizer Frainie here in New York to expel and member from the Bookkeepers,' Stenographers' and Accountants' Union, who did not suit the officers, were audacious enough to oppose them or had the courage to criticize their neglect in propagating for new members.

Terrorizing Girls.

I am ashamed to admit that I signed my name, much against my conviction and opinion, to this document, but I am a working girl glad to have a position, and Bohm, big and strong stood towering over me and well—I was afraid to refuse.

The Bookkeepers', Stenographers' and Accountants' Union for years was known as a progressive, if not a radical union, and I have been a member for many years, but it has retrogated shamefully.

Bright-Bohm Mismanagement.

It is managed, or better mismanaged by Bohm, secretary, now conservative trades unionist, and one Bright, as president, a dyed-in-the-wool so-called socialist.

Some of my friends worked in the now defunct "Call" office under Bright, and they used to tell me, that a more overbearing boss and dictator could hardly be found in a capitalist office.

At the last meeting of this union, the administration with help of a

SIX UNION MINERS ARRESTED UNDER COAL COMPANY INJUNOTION

FORT SMITH, ARK., Aug 14.—Violations of the injunction restraining miners of district 21 from interfering with operation of coal companies in Sebastian County are charged, in a motion filed by the Mammoth Vein Colliery Company for an attachment for six defendants.

Judge J. V. Bourland directed the arrest of the defendants and ordered their appearance for trial September 15.

POLISH TERROR RUNNING AMUCK; MORE VICTIMS

3 Communists Shot; Thousands Arrested

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW—Three Communists, Turovitch, Kniewski and Rutkowski were attacked in a Warsaw street by agents of the Polish secret police. The police opened fire on the Communists and the shots were returned. The three fell wounded. Several of the police were also injured. The Communists were taken in custody and are held for trial by courtmartial under paragraphs 51 and 455 of the old, czar regime criminal code.

Directly after the affair, raids were made in the workers' section of the city and 1,000 Communists and sympathizers were arrested. Among those were 4 members of the Young Communist League who are charged with carrying on agitation in the army.

The executive committee of the Polish Communist Party immediately issued a manifesto that says in part, "The fight against the provocateurs and the bourgeois terror will not cease. In the place of the three heroes shot down today 1,000 new ones will arise." At the same time, the official organ of the socialist party, Robotnik, condoned these last acts of the Polish white terrorists and called for more energetic actions against the Communists.

Workers' Delegation Protests.

There has arrived in Warsaw a statement issued from Moscow by members of various workers' trade union delegations visiting there from Germany, Sweden, France, etc. This statement calls upon the workers of the world to protest against the recent excesses of the Polish terror among which are mentioned the murders of Baginski, Wierczorkievitch, Haichek and Pilarchek in addition to the three wounded Communists now on trial. The labor movement of the whole world is asked to agitate for the release of these last victims.

MARSAW—The bourgeois, semi-official Rshetch Pospolita has the following to say about the too "gentle" manner in which the white terror is being conducted in Poland. "Nowhere are the Communists treated so humanely as in our country. When political prisoners pass thru the workers' quarters the workers sing the "International" and call out their revolutionary slogans. The police keep silence altho they are justified to use their arms in quelling such disturbances. In Bulgaria it is quite different. When the Communist terrorists are led thru the streets there, deadly silence reigns everywhere and everybody knows that expressions of sympathy will be answered by the revolver and the sword."

WORKERS PARTY ENTERS MAYORALTY CAMPAIGN, GITLOW FOR MAYOR, AND KRUMBEIN FOR ALDERMANIC BOARD

NEW YORK, August 14.—Benjamin Gitlow was nominated as the Workers (Communist) Party's candidate for mayor at a nominating convention held here, with one hundred and fifty delegates present. Charles Krumbein was nominated for president of the board of aldermen and William Weinstone, comptroller.

The Workers Party nominating convention also selected candidates for Boro officers in Manhattan, Bronx, Kings and Queens. Resolutions on political prisoners, trade union unity, the struggle in the needle trades, the DAILY WORKER, imperialism and Soviet Russia were also passed.

"THE slogan which we shall take back to the German workers, will be—'NEARER TO THE SOVIET UNION!'"—German Social-Democrat delegate, Offenhagen, in speech at Kharkov, Soviet Ukraine, July 27, 1925.

FRENCH BANK CLERKS STRIKE MEETS TROOPS

Chronic Starvation While Handling Cash

PARIS, France, Aug 14.—Certain sections of Paris, especially the public squares and streets close to the banking area, took on a warlike appearance today. Steel helmeted municipal guards, mounted police and mounted republican guards in war kits kept up a patrol trying to disprese the crowds of bank clerks who have been on a strike since last week.

The strikers had not given the police much trouble until yesterday when they learned with indignation that the bank directors had refused flatly to pay the $4.50 a month increase in wages demanded.

The strike affects virtually all banks in France except the American and the British.

Public Symphathy with Clerks.

The people sympathise with the clerks and are indignant because the bankers who in the last two years have reaped enormous profits refuse to grant the very small wage increase demanded, in spite of the fact that the cost of living has gone up 80 per cent since 1923.

At present bank clerks receive less pay than do street sweepers. Man and woman clerks who have been with French banks for five years receive less than [illegible] a month, while men who handle millions of francs daily receive between [illegible] and [illegible] a month. Bank messengers who carry hundreds of thousands of francs from one bank to another, frequently at the risk of life, receive only [illegible] a month.

Most of the clerks have families and cannot afford more than one extremely light meal a day. The emaciated faces of the strikers are the best proof of this situation.

But the boards of directors of the banks have decided to reject the demands of the clerks, asserting that if they gave in the employes, encouraged by the success of their first strike, might demand similar increases in the near future.

Bill for Compulsory Arbitration.

The cabinet to-day approved the principle of compulsory arbitration in labor disputes largely as a result of the strike of bank employes and a bill to put the principle into effect will be introduced by the government at the next session of parliament. This will provide for the representation of organized labor on arbitration boards.

entirely without request, that the Joint Board has made a decision that no member can sell or buy any defense coupons of the Joint Action Committee.

The questions were put in such a manner that if those in custody answered at all, charges could be framed against them accordingly. It was a bright idea to get the members practically to prefer charges against themselves.

Most of the members, however, whatever their opinions, would not surrender their constitutional rights under the I. L. G. W. U. laws, and insisted that if any charges exist against them, they are called formally and legally before a grievance committee. Since the chairman of the "detective bureau" himself admitted that it was not a grievance committee, they refused to answer questions.

This made the snoopers quite furious. It is a serious offense when summoned before the I. L. G. W. "Detective Bureau" not to fall prostrate, knock your forehead on the floor and gasp for mercy. It is even worse when you fail to at once volunteer that you are guilty of anything they are about to charge you with. It is positively unforgivable to refuse to answer. The very idea of a union member asking a trial, even tho an unfair trial, is utterly unsupportable. The "investigation committee" made it clear.

Thus is the reign of terror introduced again in the Chicago I. L. G. W. U. Workers still remember the last pogrom of expulsions by Perlstein, when over $200,000 was squandered, with the result that the union has been cut in two and weakened so much it cannot protect the interests of the workers.

Many of the cloakmakers are determined to tell their brothers and sisters of the union that each and every one must raise their voice and act to stop the new terror. All members are called to support the Joint Action Committee of Locals 2, 9 and 22, for its program of construction, organization of the unorganized, for agreements to be brot to the rank and file, full control by member of financial affairs, free speech and no pogroms by the officials. These things are needed also in Chicago to build a better I. L. G. W. which will take care of their interests.

TUMILTY-FARRINGTON LETTERS CLEAR PROOF OF FARRINGTON'S ILLEGAL AID TO HIS MACHINE

By ALEX REID
(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

ARTICLE XVI.

The following letters will explain themselves, and will convince any fair-minded man that the Illinois miners will never be in any better position as long as the Farrington machine is in control:

Office of the President, District No. 12

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA
Affiliated with A. F. of L.
Illinois Mine Workers Building
Springfield, Ill., Jan. 23, 1925.

"Mr. Joe Tumilty,
"Springfield, Ill.

"Dear Sir and Brother—I have your letter of January 29th (an error in date. Should have been Jan. 19—Alex Reid), which reads as follows:

"'Will you rule if it is legal for a member of District No. 12, U. M. W. of A., to act as an officer in any capacity for one local union, while holding his membership in another local union?'

"If you will give me some particular case in point I shall be glad to give you my interpretation of our constitution as it relates to the case you cite.

"Yours truly,
"F. Farrington, President."

"Springfield, Ill., Jan. 24, 1925.
"Mr. Frank Farrington, President,
"District No. 12, U. M. W. of A.,
"Mine Workers Bldg.,
Springfield, Ill.

"Dear Sir and Brother—In answer to your letter of Jan. 23rd, which is in answer to one that I addressed to you, dated Jan. 29th, will say, that I am very glad to have the chance to give you one case in particular, this particular case if of Local Union No. 2385, Tuxhorn, of Springfield, Ill., where Brother Mark McGraw holds his membership in, it was found on election day that one Charles Bohanan acted as President of Local Union No. 2385, and was a member of Local Union No. 1632. Local Union No. 1632 fined Charles Bohanan one dollar (1.00) for not voting on election day.

"There was no excuse for this kind of a thing in this local union, and many other violations of the law in connection with the election of District Officers, held Dec. 9th.

"Hoping that this is the information you desire and that I may have a ruling from you on the question involved, at an early date.

"Yours truly,
"Joe Tumilty."

"323 N. English Ave., City."

Now observe Farrington dodge the question by handing out in the following letter the old gag, "Heads I win; tails you lose":

Office of the President, District No. 12

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA
Affiliated with A. F. of L.
Illinois Mine Workers Building
"Springfield, Ill., Jan. 26, 1925.

"Mr. Joe Tumilty,
"Springfield, Ill.

"Dear Sir and Brother—This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 24th with reference to the activities of Charles Bohanan. If Bohanah was guilty of any irregularities or if there were any irregularities in connection with the election of Local Union No. 1632, a protest should have been filed as required by our constitution.

"If a protest was not filed as required by the constitution, it is rather late to now deal with the matter, but if a protest was filed, then the case will come to the District Executive Board in due time, and I shall be obliged, at that time, to give my opinion concerning the position of Bohanan, therefore, I must decline to give you my opinion at this time as it would be highly impossible for me to do so if a protest is pending and if no protest is pending it would be useless for me to pass judgment on the case at this time.

"Yours truly,
"F. Farrington, President."

"Springfield, Ill., Jan. 27th, 1925.
"Mr. Frank Farrington, President,
"District No. 12, U. M. W. of A.,
"Mine Workers Bldg.,
Springfield, Ill.

"Dear Sir and Brother—In answer to your reply of January 26th, and after a careful perusal of the same, I am sorry that I have to again ask you to please give me a ruling on the following question:

"Will you rule if it is legal for a member of District No. 12, U. M. W. of A., to act as an officer in any capacity for one local union, while holding his membership in another local union?

Yours truly,
"Joe Tumilty."

Readers will observe the dates of the above and the following letter, and see from Farrington's reluctant reply that he wished to avoid answering at all.

"Mr. Frank Farrington, President,
"District No. 12, U. M. W. of A.,
"Mine Workers Bldg.,
Springfield, Ill.

"Dear Sir and Brother—Again I am writing you in answer to your reply of January 26th, it is possible that my letter of Jan. 27th did not reach you. So please give me a ruling on the following question:

"Will you rule if it is legal for a member of District No. 12, U. M. W. of A., to act as an officer in any capacity for one local union, while holding his membership in another local union?

(Signed) Joe Tumilty."

Office of the President, District No. 12

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA
Affiliated with A. F. of L.
Illinois Mine Workers Building

"Mr. Joe Tumilty,
"Springfield, Ill.

"Dear Sir and Brother—With this I reply to your letter of February 4th. As a general proposition you could not hold membership in one local union and act as an officer of another local union. However, there are instances where that has been done because of the circumstances surrounding some particular case, therefore, I prefer to have some particular case submitted instead of making a blanket ruling covering the matter mentioned.

"Yours truly,
"F. Farrington, President."

"Springfield, Ill., Feb. 20th, 1925.
"Mr. Frank Farrington, President,
"District No. 12, U. M. W. of A.,
"Mine Workers Bldg.,
Springfield, Ill.

"Dear Sir and Brother—In answer to your reply of February 4th, will say that in a previous letter to you (at your request) I did submit one case in particular, and you evaded the question that I asked of you, the question that I asked was a very plain one, and when I wrote you asking for the ruling that I did, I had in mind that we have but one constitution and that it applies with equal force to all members of our union.

"I did not think we had one constitution for certain members of our organization and another for the rest of our members. But then, it has been said, 'What is the law when it comes to friends?'

"Frank, when I was in the last international convention I heard our friend John L. Lewis say, 'Woe is ye of little faith,' and it recalled to my mind the statement of one of our great statesmen, Abe Lincoln, when he said, 'You can fool some of the people all of the time, all of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all of the time.' Wishing you every success in your work, I am,

"Yours truly,
"Tumilty."

HYMAN SAYS THE SIGMAN GANG IS LOSING GROUND

But the End Is Not Yet in Sight

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—"The end of this fight is not yet in sight," says Louis Hyman, chairman of the Joint Committee of Action for Locals 2, 9 and 22 of the L. G. W., "altho Feinberg and Perlstein have resigned from the Joint Board in response to our demands, Sigman is still in office and the union's corrupt political machine is still ruling. Our ranks have steadily increased during the past two months, and we have gained support in other locals of this city as well as in Chicago, Philadelphia, and in Boston, where the locals passed unanimous resolutions in our favor.

"The workers have been completely alienated by the tactics of the Joint Board and no longer recognize it as an official body of the union. They look to us to carry on their battle for a democratic union, and we intend to continue it until the Joint Board is reorganized on the principle of proportional representation and the workers are guaranteed a voice in the affairs of the union. When this is accomplished, and all the expelled officers have been reinstated, we will have won a victory which will insure a union controlled by the rank and file and interested in their welfare."

THOSE who were of the opinion that sheiks were only good for wearing baggy trousers and using up cocoa nut oil, have another think coming. The Sheik Ali Abdel Razek Cadi of Cairo wrote a book in which he said things about the Moslem code, that made the Egyptian clergy as sore as William Jennings Bryan whenever he thought of having to waste a little bit of real estate on his dead body. The sheik declared that the Moslem code was not intended to be incorporated into law. Whereupon he was placed on trial by a Moslem university. Prominent writers are now demanding that the trial be called off fearing that Egypt may get a bad reputation for ignorance in Dayton, Tennessee.

CHICAGO is becoming quite a famous city for scabbery. In addition to Tom Rickert, we now have "Majah" George L. Berry. A series of articles now appearing in this paper will throw much needed light on this gentleman. There is reason to believe that Berry's strikebreaking days are cmoing to a close. What the progressives need is organization. Without it they cannot win.

Grady "Treats 'Em Rough."

The strikers who had been arrested in the Grady-International frame-up told the DAILY WORKER how they were jammed into a small room at the detective bureau, finger-printed and photographed, and paraded numerous times before detectives and employers, for "identification." Late at night they were driven to the Maxwell street station house, and thrown into cells, from eight to a dozen strikers being crammed into one cell. The process lasted until 4 o'clock in the morning.

AMALGAMATED WINS STRIKE IN SHOP AT ROCHESTER, NEW YORK

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 14.—(FP)—Another shop has been won by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union in its organization drive, S. S. Stockholm Fraud Finds Ally in McDonald, the Late British Premier

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Stockholm, Sweden, looms as the source of another gusher of pious words. It is soon to be the scene of the Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work. It no doubt uses the word "universal" in its title since it depends on the skies above to render it comfort and assistance.

The conference has been five years in the making. It consists of four groups—the Protestant Churches of Europe, the Eastern Orthodox Churches, the British Commonwealth of Nations and the United States of America, truly high-sounding and far-reaching.

Perhaps the most interesting feature about this conference is the fact that its promoters claim that it has taken up the challenge thrown down to it, that it did not prevent the last war, "that if another war were to occur the fault would lie at their door," and so they are going to make a "brave endeavor to pave the way to the great peace," in the words of Bishop Charles H. Brent, of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Western New York.

• • • •

Without doubt the hypocricy and deceit of this gathering can best be judged by the fact that among those planning to attend is found James Ramsay MacDonald, late labor premier of Great Britain, who sheltered his worthy carcass in the protecting cloak of pacifism during the last world war, but, who, as British premier, espoused the cause of "force to the limit" against the subject peoples under the heel of British imperialism. MacDonald goes to Stockholm with the wings of the dove of peace upon his shoulders, but with a dagger in his belt and guns on both hips in defense of British imperialism. A pretty picture to be sure for the Sunday comics and smirking religious publications, but for the workers of all countries only another opportunity to study the treachery of one who did not fail to betray them at every opportunity.

• • • •

Not many years ago Stockholm was the scene of another anti-war conference. It did not raise the slogans of pacifism to draw forth roars of derision from the great lords of capitalist wars. It raised the standards of war against war. It brought together the left elements of Europe's working class, that bade defiance to the devastating flames of war. Previously these courageous spokesmen of labor had met at Zimmerwald and Kienthal, in Switzerland, not after five years of preparation, not after the war storm had passed, but in the very midst of the thundering cannon. These were the beginnings that later resulted in the creation, under the guidance of Lenin, of the Communist International, the only anti-war organization in the world today worthy of the name.

• • • •

The Communist International fights to abolish war thru eliminating the breeder of wars—the profit system. That system will be energetically defended by all the elements, including James Ramsay MacDonald, the "socialist" and pacifist, who will gather at Stockholm this month, under the patronizing wing of the Swedish king and of the Swedish ruling class. These holy men, black frocked in their uniform not much unlike that of professional hangmen, all prayed for vcitory for their respective national capitalisms, they all joined in sending their youth into the trenches, in selling the war bonds to provide the weapons of slaughter. That was the service they rendered their gods.

The modern church is the creature of capitalism and as such slavishly does its bidding. It anointed the last world war with the holy water of religion, no matter what the creed or denomination. All gods, no matter what their names, were called upon not to end the last war, but to aid, in achieving the coveted victory.

Communism will level its broadsides against this fraud, garbed in the seductive robes of holiness, before which unsuspecting and unthinking millions still kneel in awed veneration. Communism will tear the Stockholm religious mask off the ugly face of capitalism. Communism will teach the workers that the end of wars, the coming of world peace, can be achieved only thru the victory of international labor, establishing peaceful relations between all nations, creating a world economy that will serve instead of enslave all mankind.

majority of the so-called trial committee, succeeded in expelling Primoff, a nice quiet fellow who interferred with no one, but like a good many other members, got tired of being bored with the monthly reports made by Bohm and Bright, which looked big, sounded good, but did not get any members.

The Way Not to Run a Union.

Bright always stressed his great activity and brooked no opposition. He danced from one foot to another, with the ever spectacled eyes roaming around the room, and the gavel clutched in his hand, ready to pound the table and mayhap pounce upon an opponent.

Poor Chernow, Cooper, Kitzes are slated by these despots for the grand bounce and why? Because they have had the manhood to oppose the railroading of Primoff. A pseudo trial committee, prejudiced and biased, will "try" these three rebels and find them guilty at the next meeting. President Bright will snap the whip, and out will fly Chernow, Cooper and Kitzes.

The Yellow Tenor.

The socialists will have gotten rid for the time being of three more they cannot use, hence have no use for, and Bohm can again report to the State Federation of Labor convention, that the Bookkeepers', Stenographers' and Accountants' Union has saved the labor movement, by cleaning out some more Communists.

If my brothers and sisters, who are members of the B. S. and A. U. and read this, will only attend the meeting on Monday, August 17, at 3 W. 16th St., 6:30 p. m., I am of the poinion that these officers and their trial committee will not succeed, for remember that they only won out against Primoff by a majority of 3 votes at the last meeting.

Let's Fight Back!

President Green (see press reports) has issued an ultimatum, that the Communists must be driven from the labor movement. Let us follow the example of our European brothers and sisters, let us fight valiantly for every inch of ground.

'MAJAH' BERRY STRIKEBREAKING IN NEW YORK

national who were brought in from other cities. He engaged the Eagle Detective Agency to supply professional finks. This agency advertised that it was ready to supply men "for civil, criminal and confidential investigations." It offered to supply "men in uniform or civilian dress" and "expert guards for labor troubles." The pressmen were then fighting for a 44-hour week and a $14.00 increase in wages. Billy McHugh, still vice-president of the international union, had his headquarters at the Continental Hotel, where he received the scabs sent out by the Eagle Detective Agency. Berry was at the Knickerbocker doing the same work. Another set of crooks, all Berry's lackeys, were located in the New York Sun building, owned by Frank Munsey, the notorious labor baiter.

The Eagle Detective Agency advertised in the New York papers for scabs. Here is a sample of the ads:

Cost a Lot of Money.

Berry broke that strike tho he admitted it cost the union $125,000 to do the job. Where did he get the money? The international union treasury was bankrupt in September, 1919. It was $119,000 in debt. Did the New York publishers supply the cash? This is a reasonable assumption considering the cricumstances and the high favor in which Berry stands with the New York publishers today.

The New York pressmen have never recovered from the blows struck against them by Berry. They will never recover until they rid the union of Berry and Berryism. There is a growing belief among the membership that with a working agreement between the New York and Chicago locals, the two cities could clean up on the "strikebreaker." Outside of those two cities the union is weak. Even in St. Paul, Minnesota, Berry pays the salary of the local official of the union. Naturally those who are depending on the "Majah" for their living do the "Majah's" dirty work.

Another example of Berry's treachery to the workers was his handling of the Web Pressmen's disput with the bosses in St. Paul in 1920. He sent Joe Byrnes from Joliet, Ill., up there with instructions to sign up the pressmen if it was for only ten dollars a week.

How Berry Holds Office.

How does Berry retain his hold on the international union? If there is so much opposition to his regime, why cannot the members elect somebody else? To those not acquainted with the way reactionary officials pull their stuff in the trade unions, this is a puzzle. But trade unionists know how the job is done. In New York City, for instance, there are 60 per cent of the entire membership of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in three locals. The other ten locals have only 40 per cent. But the 40 per cent outvotes the 60 per cent. Each local is entitled to five delegates to the Joint Board. In this way 60 per cent of the membership are given only 15 delegates while 40 per cent have 50 delegates. This is done so that the reactionaries who now run the union may retain hold of it, regardless of what the workers want.

It is much the same with "Majah" Berry's union. For instance, the 3,800 union members of the two Chicago locals may be outvoted by twenty "sky blue" locals with only one hundred members. Some of Berry's fake locals have not held a meeting in five years. Some of them have only one and two members. When he needs a new local to retain his hold on the union, with a show of legality, he sends one of his "salesmen" out and they line up six or seven nondescripts regardless of whether they are race track touts, circus barkers or pressmen.

The members of the I. P. P. and A. U. in the large cities where the union really exists are about sick and tired of this confidence game. They do not intend to allow Berry to become the John D. Rockefeller of Tennesse at their expense much longer.

Other tools of Berry, in official positions in Franklin Union, will be exposed in other articles.

The Workers Party, Trotsky's Declaration and Eastman's Lies

STATEMENT OF THE C. E. C. OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY ON TROTSKY'S DECLARATION.

THE latest book of Max Eastman, "Since Lenin Died," is the product of an enemy of the Russian revolution and of the Comintern. The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of Amercia, therefore, did not hesitate to expel Eastman publicly from its ranks and to hold him up to the contempt of the workers of the whole world. It is clear that Eastman sought membership in our party merely so that the door of Soviet Russia may be opened to him so that he may find better chances to betray it.

Eastman's book is becoming the gospel of all antagonists of the Soviet Union. All sycophants of capitalism marshal arguments from this book to sustain their feigned "moral" indignation which is a real class hatred, at the proletarian rule in Russia by the Communist Party. Eastman's book has thus become a factor in the political struggle of the world bourgeoisie against the Soviet Union.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America is surprised to find that Comrade Trotsky in his statement on the book has published in the Inprecorr No. — (German series), declares that the book is bare of all political value. Tho the author of "Since Lenin Died" lacks political understanding, yet he writes for political reasons, and, surely, creates political effects. Comrade Trotsky complains of Eastman's unpolitical approach to the questions he deals with in his book. But Trotsky himself repeats the error and approaches Eastman's book in an unpolitical manner. As a result he comes to the conclusion that Eastman is an innocent child who needs a little spanking for a temporary naughtiness. The attitude of Comrade Trotsky toward Eastman is entirely too friendly. It was the duty of Comrade Trotsky to meet the political attacks of Eastman with a political repudiation. Eastman is not a naughty child but a political enemy and must be treated as such.

THE Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party is surprised to find that Comrade Trotsky declared himself sufficiently convinced by Eastman that the Americans cannot be interested in Communism but may be interested in Communists, so that he lent Eastman even limited help in his literary endeavors on that line. Surely Comrade Trotsky could never entertain even for a moment the idea that the American proletariat will be revolutionized by sentimental biographies of revolutionists, while they cannot learn the necessity of a decisive struggle against capitalism from the hard and bitter experiences of the class struggle. These very arguments of Eastman should have been sufficient to convince Comrade Trotsky that Eastman is not a Communist.

THE Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party subscribes unhesitatingly and without reservation to the statement of the Communist Party of France and decides that Trotsky's statement together with that of the Communist Party of France and its own statement on the matter be printed forthwith in the Party press.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party further pledges itself to the Communist International to guard more carefully in the future against the entering of our ranks of elements who have neither socially nor ideologically any roots in the working class and who generally end with the betrayal of the cause of the proletariat.

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, Workers Party of America.

WM. Z. FOSTER, Chairman; C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

Comrade Trotsky's Declaration with regard to Eastman's Book: "Since Lenin's Death."

DURING my sojourn in Sukhum I received from one of my friends, a publisher of my books, the manuscript of a book by an American journalist, M. Eastman, entitled: "Leo Trotsky, a youthful portrait." My friend informed me in his accompanying letter that the manuscript, which had been sent to the state publishing office by the writer, for the purpose of being printed in the Russian language, had made a strange and unusual impression among us on account of the sentimentality permeating it.

I replied as follows in my letter of April 3, 1925:

"Even without being familiar with the contents of Eastman's manuscript, I am perfectly in agreement with you that the publication of the book is inopportune. Altho you have been kind enough to send me this manuscript, I cannot read it. I have absolutely no inclination to do so. I readily believe that it does not suit our taste, especially our Russian and Communist taste.

Eastman has been endeavoring for a long time to convince me that it is very difficult to interest the Americans in Communism, but possible to interest them in the Communists. His arguments have been fairly convincing. For this reason I gave him a certain help, of a limited nature; the letter which I sent him, shows these limits*). I did not know that he had the intention of publishing this book in Russia, or I should probably have advised him at that time not to do so. I cannot prevent Eastman from publishing this work abroad; he is a "free writer;" he has lived in Russia, collected material; at present he is in France, if not in America. Shall I beg him so to speak as a private favor not to publish this book? I am not sufficiently intimate with him to do this. And it would be out of place."

I repeat that this letter consisted of a biographical sketch, the story of my youth up to about 1902. At that time there was no thot of Eastman's second work: "Since Lenin's Death." At least I had not heard it spoken of. I first heard of its existence after my return to Moscow, thru the agency of a telegraphic inquiry from Comrade Jackson, editor of the "Sunday Worker," London. Altho my reply to Jackson was published by the press, it will be perhaps suitable to repeat the first part of it here:

"THE book by Eastman which you mention, is unknown to me. The bourgeois newspapers quoting the book have not reached me. It need not be said that I categorically reject in advance any commentary directed against the Communist Party of Russia."

I afterwards received the pamphlet in question ("Since Lenin's Death") from Comrade Inkpin, secretary of the Communist Party of Great Britain. After looking thru this little book for half an hour, I came to the conclusion that the work is of no importance, either theoretically or politically. I had no intention of reading it, and less intention still of reacting upon it, as I assumed that my telegram to Comrade Jackson was entirely sufficient. But comrades in the party with a knowledge of the book expressed the opinion that my silence might be the indirect means of supporting the book. This forced me to read it. My first impression was strengthened in principle.

Eastman's book is bare of any political value. The writer approaches the events of the inner life of our party without a serious political criterion, in a purely psychological manner, and thus effects a subjective arbitrariness in the estimates, substantiations, and conclusions.

WE shall first deal with a question which is certainly of historical importance, and at the same time a most vital actuality: The Red Army. Eastman maintains that since changes have taken place among its leaders, the Red Army is divided, that it has lost its fighting capabilities, etc. I do not know where Eastman has learned this. But its absurdity is obvious. He does not see that in thus characterising the Red Army, he is nourishing the menshevist legend on the Bonapartist character, the Pretorian guard character of our Army, etc. For it is clear that an army which is capable of "dividing" because its commander is changed is neither Communist nor proletraian.

During the course of the whole work the author quotes a large number of documents, and a certain number of incidents which took place long ago. Thus this little book contains a goodly quantity of erroneous and untruthful general assertions.

In several places Eastman states that the central committee of the party has "secreted" a large number of documents of extraordinary importance, written by Lenin during the last period of his life. (These are letters on the national question, the famous "will," etc.) This implies that Lenin wrote these letters, referring to the inner organizations of the Soviets, with the intention of their publication. This is not the case.

The letters were intended for the party congresses, and the members of the 12th and 13th congresses were enabled to take cognizance of their contents in the manner determined upon by the representatives of the congresses, that is, all the delegations were permitted to read the letters.

Another equally false assertion made by Eastman is that the Central Committee wanted to secret (that is, not to publish) Lenin's article on the Workers' and Peasants' Inspection. The differences of opinion arising on this point in the Central Committee, if "differences of opinion" can here be spoken of at all, were of very secondary sinificance, referring solely to the date and method of publication. And this purely technical question was unanimously agreed upon at the same meeting. How wrongly Eastman characterised the differences of view which he represents as having existed with reference to the purport of Lenin's article on the Workers' and Peasants' Inspection, may be estimated by the fact that the whole of members of the political and organisation bureaus of the Central Committee decided unanimously, at the same meeting, to send a letter to the party organizations. This letter contained the following passage:

"WITHOUT dealing, in this purely informative letter, with the criticism of the historically possible dangers so opportunely dealt with by Lenin in his article, the members of the political and organisation bureaus consider it necessary, in order to avoid possible misunderstandings, to declare unanimously that there is nothing in the inner activity of the Central Committee which gives occasion to fear the dangers of a split."

Not only does my signature figure among the ten footing this document, but the wording itself was edited by me. (January 27, 1923.)

In view of the fact that this letter, expressing the unanimous opinion of the Central Committee on Lenin's proposal to introduce the Workers' and Peasants' Inspection, also bears the signature of Comrade Kuybyshev, we have here at the same time the confutation of Eastman's assertion that Comrade Kuybyshev was placed at the head of the Workers' Peasants' Inspection" as "opponent" of Lenin's plan of organisation.

Eastman's quotation from the wording of the "will" is equally wrong. This was published in the "Socialist Messenger" (Berlin menshevist paper. Ed.) and was stolen from the party archives, so to speak by counter revolutionists. In reality the wording as published in the "Socialist Messenger" passed thru many hands before its appearance in this paper. It was "freshened" up again and again, and distorted to such an extent that it is absolutely impossible to restore its orinigal import. It is possible that the alterations were made by the editorial staff of this paper.

Eastman's assertions that the Central Committee confiscated pamphlets or articles of mine in 1923 or 1924, or at any time, are untrue, and are based on imaginative rumors.

Another false assertion is that Lenin offered me the post of chairman to the council of people's commissaries.

It seems to me, however, that the attentive and thotful reader will not require an accumulation of documents—which in any case does not appeal to everyone's understanding—to arrive at the conclusion that Eastman's literary structure is built up on very inadequate and shaky foundations. It will therefore suffice if the conclusions drawn by the author are subjected to examination, conclusions placing our party and its leaders in such a ligh that the same attentive and thotful reader is inevitably forced to the question: What bonds can unite Eastman and this party, or Eastman and the revolution led by this party? What has Eastman to oppose to this party?

IF we were to assume for even one moment that the views formulated by Eastman on the leading personalities in our party are correct, we should ask: How could this party emerge from long years of secret struggle? How could it accomplish the greatest of revolutions? How could it carry millions of human beings along with it, and contribute to the formation of revolutionary parties in other countries? Eastman shatters and crushes the elementary political relations, because he employs an arbitrary and psychological criterion, and not a political Marxist one.

In this case a revolutionary would only have the right to write politically, as Eastman does, if he were to oppose another party to ours. Eastman does not think for a moment of this side of the political question. The book teaches nothing. It may be exploited by the enemies of Communism which is not such a serious matter—or it may sow the seed of scepticism in the minds of young and still unconscious friends of Communism, which is very much more serious. For this reason it deserves energetic condemnation.

Resolution of the C. C. of the C. P. of France regarding Comrade Trotsky's Declaration.

THE Central Committee of the Communist Party of France takes cognizance of the book "Since Lenin's Death" by Eastman, also of Comrade Trotsky's reply to it, and adopts the following standpoint with regard to this question:

Eastman's book, "Since Lenin's Death," is nothing more nor less than a vulgar counter revolutionary work, an accumulation of crass lies, slanders and base calumnies, written with the obvious intention of discrediting the leaders of the Communist Party of Russia and the Soviet government.

Eastman, in representing the leaders of the proletarian revolution as "a handful of irresponsibles, usurpators, and falsifiers," has attained the aim which he pursues: The supplying of the bourgeois press and all the enemies of Communism, who quote lavishly from this book, and employ it against the Communist International and proletarian Russia, with the material they seek.

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of France is surprised that Comrade Trotsky's reply to this vile book is so indefinite, so little categorical, so almost ambiguous. It is the more surprised at this that Eastman, in an attempt to impart more weight and prestige to his dirty work refers, like the people of the "Proletarian Revolution," to his friendship with Trotsky and a number of his adherents, and to conversations which he has held with them. And more than this: He represents Comrade Trotsky as the victim of a band of slandereds, who persecute him and endeavor to crush him to the earth.

Comrade Trotsky ascribes no political value to the work. He says expressly:

"Eastman's book is bare of any political value. The writer approaches the events of the inner life of our party without a serious political criterion, in a purely psychological manner, and thus effects a subjective arbitrariness in the estimates, substantiations, and conclusions."

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of France is however of the contrary opinion, and considers this book, written by a man professing to be a member of the Communist Party of America, whilst in reality he left the ranks of the Communist International long ago, at a time when all that is counter-revolutinoray in the world has been striving to form an alliance against the Union of Soviet Republics, to be a political work of the first water.

The bourgeois press has for its part well comprehended the far-reaching utility of this book for its purposes.

THE tone adopted by Trotsky in addressing Eastman is not the tone suitable with reference to a counter-revolutionary enemy of the type of the author of the book: "Since Lenin's Death." It is the tone customarily employed in a discussion between friends. Comrade Trotsky states further:

"An attentive perusal of Eastman's pamphlet would doubtless afford me further opportunity of pointing out other inaccuracies, other errors and misrepresentations."

This leads to the assumption that many other things in the book are accurate and true.

In another place Trotsky says:

"In this case a revolutionary would only have the right to write politically as Eastman does, if he were to oppose another party to ours."

Thus Comrade Trotsky admits that a revolutionary might write as Eastman has written. Consequently he regards him as a revolutionary. He only denies him to write as he does, because he does not supplement the representations of his book by a proposal to substitute the Communist Party of Russia by another party.

It would thus seem that Comrade Trotsky indicates that under present circumstances a revolutionary party and a revolutionary international can exist outside of the Communist Party and the Communist International. It seems as if he reproaches Eastman for having written his book, before this revolutionary party was formed.

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of France considers such a declaration to be extremely dangerous, for it places a tool in the hands of those anxious to disintegrate the Communist movement.

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of France considers the ambiguity of Comrade Trotsky's reply to be even more dangerous than Eastman's book itself.

THE Communist Party of France has asked Comrade Trotsky, thru its delegation to the Enlarged Executive and thru its representative in the E. C. C. I., if he declares himself at one with the people of the "Proletarian Revolution," who resemble Eastman in making use of his name and his alleged friendship for the purpose of columniating and discrediting the Communist Party of Russia, the Soviet government, and the whole Communist International.

Up to the present the French party has received no reply from Comrade Trotsky, to that Souvarine, Rosmer, Monatte and Co. are still enabled to continue their utilization of his name and their combat against the Communist Party of France, precisely at a moment when the C. P. of France is in the midst of its struggle against the war in Morocco and is exposed to the full force of the blows of the suppression policy of the government.

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of France begs Comrade Trotsky to put an end to a situation which is exceedingly dangerous for the Communist International by reason of its disintegration influence upon the young parties in course of formation.

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of France is of the opinion that Comrade Trotsky cannot remain any longer in this ambiguous position between the bitterest enemies of Communism and the Communist Intrenational, and that the matter demands an immediate, definite, and unequivocal reply to every point.

The Central Committee of the Communist Party of France.

* On May 22, 195 I sent the following reply to Eastman't repeated requests:

"I shall do my utmost to assist you by means of conscientious information. But I cannot agree to read your manuscript, for this would make me responsible not only for the facts, but for the characterizations and estimates as well. This is impossible. I am prepared to undertake the responsibility—a weakened one however—for the information on the facts which I send you in reply to your request. For everything else you alone bear the responsibility."

TIENTSIN ASTIR WTH ANGER AT IMPERIAILISTS

Murders of Strikers Brings Giant Protest

TIENTSIN, China, Aug. 13.—Following the massacre of mill strikers by reactionary Chinese and White Russian volunteer troops, in which ten or more were killed and scores wounded, tens of thousands of Chinese paraded in a great demonstration here today.

Great crowds filled the streets, marching in orderly formation and bearing banners labeled "Down With Imperialism!" and "Banish Alien Exploiters!" The leaders of the parade disclaimed that the demonstration was connected with riots of the previous days.

The riots came about when 10,000 strikers in demonstration before the factories were fired upon by reactionary troops, which included a detachment recruited from the Rusian white guard refugees in China. There were 800 troops in the command, whose chief is the infamous traitor to the cause of his country's liberation, Chang Tso-lin.

Angered by the murders of their comrades, the strikers attacked the mill properties, destroying more than a million dollars' worth of property and goods. The mills are owned by Chinese capitalists, but are managed by Americans.

PURCELL'S ELECTION TO HOUSE OF COMMONS INDICATES BOGEY OF BOLSHEVISM DIDN'T WORK

LONDON, (By Mail).—When Alfred A. Purcell was elected to parliament in the by-election from the Forest of Dean Division of Gloucestershire, the British workers showed by this test that they are getting less fearful of Bolshevist bogies than Ramsay MacDonald was when he let the Tories put him out of office on a forged "Zinoviev letter."

The tabulated vote of Purcell's district, where he ran against a conservative and a liberal, shows the following:

Mr. A. A. Purcell (Lab.)	11,629
Mr. W. M. Beaumont (C.)	8,607
Mr. W. H. West (L.)	3,774
Labor majority	3,022

Previous elections in the contituency have resulted thus:

1924—Lab., 11,047; C., 9,739—majority, 1,309.

1923—Lab., 11,486; C., 7,383—majority, 4,103.

1922—Lab., 10,820; C., 5,966; L., 3,861—majority, 4,864.

The labor majority is therefore increased by 1,713 compared with that of the last general election.

"Why I Won."

"I take my victory as prof that electors generally are in favor of the principles we advocated," said Mr. Purcell after the result had been declared.

"And that it is important to remember that we fearlessly accepted an entire change in the present structure of our social system, by which the community shall own and control the means of life for the benefit of all as against the system whereby the few profit and the majority suffer.

"The victory is the more remarkable, since it has been won in face of the most audacious attempt ever made to pile filth into an election for the purpose of prejudicing the minds of electors, most of whom are of a class long oppressed."

Liberal Fall.

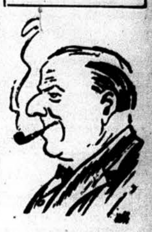
The vote polled by Mr. West, whom the liberals widely advertised as a "working miner, straight from the coal face," is less by 87 than the liberal vote of 1922.

Throuot the contest both liberals and tories branded Mr. Purcell as an "extremist," and a "description" of the new M. P. from the pen of the Daily Chronicle special correspondent at Cinderford on July 1 is typical of the sort of attack Mr. Purcell had to meet.

It ran: " . . . Mr. Purcell, the devoted admirer of Soviet Russia, who has taken the British trade unions behind the backs of the Amsterdam International to parley with the Third International at Moscow."

Mr. Purcell was identified with the old Amalgamated Society of French Polishers, now part of the National Amalgamated Furnishing Trades Association. He was chairman of the Trades Union Congress last year, and sat in the last parliament as M. P. for Coventry, losing the seat at the general election.

ALFRED A PURCELL



Head of Amsterdam International.

Purcell now occupies the position as president of the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam) and recently became an international figure as head of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia, whose comprehensive report on conditions of labor under Soviet rule has electrified the world labor movement. This report is now being published by the DAILY WORKER for American workers.

After returning from Soviet Russia, Purcell and the other leading officials of the British unions, set up a joint committee with the Russian unions to bring about the unification of the trade unions of all the world in one single international to include both Amsterdam and the Red International of Labor Unions.

RUSSIA TODAY

The first publication in England of this most complete report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia, caused a great stir in the world trade union movement.

From all parts of the world came high praise for this historical document, from those workers in and out of the organized labor movement earnestly working for world trade union unity.

By all enemies of labor, capitalists and their henchmen, the bitterest criticism was levelled.

This report made by the Official Delegation of British Labor (including charts and maps) is an impartial study of every phase of life under the first world's workers' government. Politics, Finance, Army, Religion, Education, Trade Unions, Wages—these and other subjects are analyzed by the Delegation who have travelled unhindered and free to investigate in all sections of Soviet Russia.

It is a complete, impartial and dignified document of one of the world's leading bodies of Labor.

WM. F. DUNNE
Editor of the Daily Worker says:

The British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia in a unanimous report has told the story of the Russian Revolution in language that trade unionists can understand.

It is a great story, told in matter-of-fact language, the story of millions of workers and peasants marching towards Communism over all obstacles; it is history hot with the breath of the struggle in the style of a convention report . . .

Revolutionary Russian and stubborn, slow-moving Briton call to the American worker from the pages of the British delegation's report.

Ramsay MacDonald

Some of our readers believe we are too severe in our strictures on James Ramsay MacDonald, presbyterian divine and prominent socialist who became a figure of international importance when the British ruling class handed over to him the reins of government of the empire at a time when the tories and liberals were unable to extricate them out of the morass in which they were floundering since the end of the world war.

MacDonalds record while premier was a series of betrayals of the workers whose support gave him value in the eyes of the capitalist class. One of MacDonalds greatest pieces of disservice to the workers was his espousal of the Dawes plan, which helped to give the German ruling class a respite from the dangers of a proletarian revolution. That the capitalist class of the United States, those who benefitted most from the Dawes plan, appreciate the services rendered by MacDonald can be seen from the following news item that appeared in a recent issue of the London Daily Herald:

> "The Pilgrims of America are anxious to do honors to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, and the central feature being planned is a big dinner in his honor at New York, in September.
> The invitation, sent by cable by Mr. Frederick Cunliffe Owen, a vice-president of the Pilgrims, reads:
> "The Pilgrims of the United States, headed by their president, Mr. Chauncey M. Depew, and by my fellow vice-president, Elihu Root and Charles E. Hughes, both former secretaries of the state, and speaking especially in their name, would be grateful to you to settle upon an approximate date when, as early as possible after your arrival in New York, in September, we may have the pleasure of welcoming you at a large dinner in your honor, to express our tribute of the admiration to the great statesman, who, as prime minister, contributed so vastly to the adoption of the Dawes project, upon the success of which the whole world depends so much for the economic and political maintenace of international peace.'
> "Mr. Kellogg, the secretary of state, will be present."

The three men whose names are mentioned above: Chauncey Depew, Elihu Root and Charles Evans Hughes are three of the leading tools of American capitalism. Depew was a former president of the New York Central Railroad and now on the board of directors. Elihu Root was former secretary of state and is Wall Street's foremost legal expert. Charles Evans Hughes is a Standrad Oil tool and former secretary of state. He is a bitter foe of Soviet Russia.

There is little doubt that one of the objects of bringing Ramsay MacDonald, the yellow socialist to the United States, is to counter the effect of the presence of A. A. Purcell, delegate to the convention of the American Federation of Labor. Purcell is a warm friend of Soviet Russia. MacDonald is a bitter and slimy foe.

We offer the invitation of the Pilgrims to Ramsay MacDonald as the best possible evidence that our charges of treachery to the working class levelled against MacDonald were true. When the known enemies of the workers show admiration for an alleged working class leader, it is time for the workers to drop that leader.

It is a safe prediction that Hughes, Depew and Root will not invite Premier Rykov of Russia to a Pilgrim banquet.

A Tale of Two Pats

Pat O'Hara is cooling his heels in a San Francisco prison waiting for a ship to transport him to New Zealand, or in other words "back to where he came from." Pat is not a Sicilian, an Armenian or a Russian. As the name indicates he belongs to the ancient order of hibernians, which was highly praised by Calvin Coolidge recently for its contribution to the upbuilding of this country. Pat O'Hara however is a different kind of a hibernian to the kind Coolidge praised. Pat is a member of the Marine Transport Workers' Union, and therefore not a desirable citizen.

What a difference there can be between two Pats? Another Pat who came from Dublin in 1909 is considered a very desirable citizen. Roche is the rest of his name. He did not join a labor union, but he joined the police force. Now he is one of the touted aces of the investigation bureau of the internal revenue department and breaks frequently into the newspapers with stories of having captured criminals who are trying to cheat the government. Of course, it may be only a question of time when Pat Roche goes the way of other aces. Some day it will be his turn to get caught. But at the present time he is in favor. He is the kind of a Pat that the American capitalists like. He is the kind that Calvin Coolidge had in mind when he praised the Irish race for their contribution to the upbuilding of the United States.

Pat Roche came to America with the intention of becoming a useful tool of the master class. Pat O'Hara decided to throw in his lot with the working class movement.

Pat O'Hara is in jail waiting deportation.

Amalgamation Is the Answer

The meeting of locals 3 and 4 of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union, scheduled for this afternoon in Chicago should be the starting point for a great drive to amalgamate all the unions in the printing industry.

The fight of the pressmen to get rid of Berryism is only one phase of the task. After all, the main job is to get rid of capitalism. Of course the Berrys and other scab herders must be elminiated. No progress is possible with them.

The two locals, comprising the pressmen and feeders, are planning to amalgamate. This move is feared by Berry as much as it is feared by the bosses. Both have the same reasons for opposing amalgamation. Both thrive on the disunity of the workers. Berry is aided in his plans to keep control fo the union by being able to play one local off against the other. The capitalists know that with the unions united under one guiding body their power will be increased. The more powerful the workers are, the worse for the employers.

We hope that the good example set by the pressmen and feeders in Chicago will be followed by other unions in the printing industry.

The workers learn who their friends are when they are in a struggle with the bosses. While the reactionaries are collaborating with the employers the Communists are fighting for the workers.

Liquidating Loreism In The Needle Trades

By Earl R. Browder

IT will assist our party to more fully absorb the value of our recent experiences in the needle trades, the struggle to liquidate Loreism, if we have a clear idea of the conditions which brot the sharp, open struggle at the precise moment that it did occur. Nothing happens by accident, and it is impossible to understand the particular phenomenon unless one knows something of the forces that brot it about, as well as the conditioning circumstances. Such a knowledge in the case of the needle trades will help to equip our comrades for similar struggles that must occur in other fields and at other times.

Why did the C. E. C. find it necessary openly to take issue in such sharp mannner with the leading comrades in the needle trades left wing in the months of March and April? Granted the harmful deviations (dealt with in some detail in my article in the Workers Monthly for August), why did the struggle against them come to a crisis at this precise moment?

Objective and Subjective Causes of the Crisis.

THE immediate factors that forced the crisis were of two kinds: Objective, that is, the conditions in the industry and the relations of forces between the bosses and the workers and between the reactionary officials and the workers; and then the subjective, that is, the conditions existing within the ranks of the left wing.

Many comrades of the needle trades have had a long record of deviations and resistance to the leadership of the party. But in the past these differences have been overcome without a headon collision, altho the struggle has been often sharp. This settled tendency to stray away from the revolutionary line of policy, however, early in this year, entered into a period which stimulated it to energetic schemings upon opportunist lines because of the shaking-up going on among the bureaucrats, because of the impending struggle between the officials and the left wing, and because of the crying need for a big battle against the employers to protect the interests of the workers—a tangle of forces which would cheer the heart of every active-minded left-winger for its opportunities for revolutionary advance, but which at the same time stimulated all the illusions of opportunism, the idea that something could be gotten by deals, without a fight. This was the objective basis for the sudden succession of right-wing mistakes that were made in the closing months of 1924 and the first part of 1925, in the needle trades left wing.

Subjective factors also entered here to cause the sudden emergence of right-wing deviations that resisted the correction of the party. First, there was the inclination already existing among a circle of leading comrades to develop right-wing conceptions and to struggle against the influence of the party. Second, and more decisive in setting the time for this struggle, the needle trades comrades were encouraged to resist the C. E. C. by (a) the factional situation existing in the party which weakened the power of the C. E. C.; (b) the open political support of an organized political group within the party, led by Poyntz, which immediately took the struggle out of the needle trades and made it a general party problem; and (c) the indirect but most effective support given to these right-wing tendencies by the minority comrades who attempted to turn the struggle against the right-wing tendencies into an assault all along the line against the C. E. C. itself.

Here was a combination of forces arrayed against the centralized leadership of the left wing movement which had all the appearances of being very formidable indeed. How were all of these obstacles to be overcome, and the menace of Loreism liquidated in the work of the needle trades left wing?

The Weapons of Criticism and Ideological Struggle.

WHEN the general membership of the party understands the extremely grave situation that was created for the entire movement by this unheard-of combination of forces, they will at the same time understand how necessary was the drastic action that the C. E. C. took. Nothing but a sharp knife wielded with a heavy hand could cut thru this tangle of opportunism and factionalism. Criticism of the sharpest nature and ideological struggle of the most unrelenting sort could liquidate the menace. The C. E. C. appplied the weapon.

Before a meeting of garment workers, members of the party in New York, the C. E. C. presented a resolution stigmatizing in harsh words the mistakes of the needle trades comrades. When Comrade Gitlow, of the minority, tried to turn the meeting into an attack upon the C. E. C. instead of helping to correct the needle trades comrades, the C. E. C. promptly placed an official censure upon Comrade Gitlow and called him to order. When, in Chicago, the opportunists within the left wing of the A. C. W. of A., led by Schneid, tried at this same moment to establish their betrayal as the official policy of the left wing group, they were expelled from the party. The entire ideological struggle was taken before the membership of the party that was directly involved.

Some comrades thot that the C. E. C. acted in a harsh manner. True, the actions were drastic, but the entire future, the integrity of the left wing was at stake. Any hesitation or half-heartedness at that moment on the part of the C. E. C. would have been a disaster, a complete breakdown of our movement. The vast majority of the membership understood this immediately and supported the policy of the C. E. C.

Loreism is Being Liquidated.

AND out of the struggle has already come this welcome and healthful result: Our movement has been almost completely immunized from the poison of Loreism in its most open forms. The organized combination of forces within the movement which made Loreism a menace is being broken up rapidly. The party membership has been educated to a certain extent, and is being constantly educated further, in the dangerous nature of the opportunistic deviations. The party as a whole is also learning how to combat Loreism effectively. This article is a small contribution to the struggle, the end of which can only be the complete elimination of all groups within the party which fight against the line of the Communist International.

Our Educational Work

IT is not necessary here to talk extensively about the necessity of education for the membership of the Workers (Communist) Party. It is sufficient to point out only a few outstanding facts.

We have in our party not more than 20 per cent active members. Not less than 80 per cent are not active neither in the party organization, nor in the work of our party, outside of its everyday organizational activities. This great bulk of our membership is dormant. Potentially, it has wonderful possibilities. If we could only arouse them from their slumber and bring them into acitve participation in the Communist movement! But how can we achieve this great victory?

WE have some members that do not belong to other labor organizations and as yet do not conceive the necessity of belonging to them. They must be made to understand that it is not sufficient for a Communist to belong to the Workers Party only. He or she must join other labor organizations (unions, co-operatives, sick and death benefit societies, etc.) so that the party can have connections with and carry on its work in the organized masses of the working class. But again the same question arises: How can it be done?

Hundreds of our comrades who are active in Communist work, go about blindly, make mistakes which are not permissable for a Communist, who has at least a little bit of understanding of his or her duties. Of course, we cannot avoid mistakes entirely. Everyone can make and does make mistakes and commits blunders, but I have in mind such mistakes which can be avoided with at least a bit of Communist education. Here is one example: Two of our comrades in Lawrence, Mass., had a quarrel among themselves. They belong to a labor organization which is controlled by our party, but in which our enemies are very active. One of them immediately preferred charges against the other comrade in that outside organization instead of settling the matter in the Workers Party branch. Our enemies immediately became judges to settle the differences among our party members. What a calamity: And both of these comrades are active members, both of them are valuable to our movement. How can we eliminate such mistakes?

THERE is also a very old but at the same time a very new problem before our party at the present time. That is the problem of reorganization of our party, not only on shop nuclei basis, but also to make the party one unified body in place of a federation of federations. The Executive Committee of the Communist International addressed a long letter to our party on this question. It outlines and explains the steps that our party must take in order to achieve this goal. But can we put it into effect successfully?

All these facts and questions are very important. They loudly call upon the party for their solution. You cannot solve these problems thru disciplinary measures alone. You may use these measures but the desirable results will not be attained.

The only sure and effective means of solving these problems are educational means. But, of course, this is only talking, and we have talked on this question continuously for the last few years. How much practical work have we done in this field? Very, very little.

OH, yes, we have established the Workers' School in New York City. We have also arranged several educational classes in Chicago and in a few other larger cities. But how many members of our party have we reached with these classes? Only a handful, two or three hundred. We did not reach the masses, thousands of our members. And I am quite convinced that it will take a long, long time till we will be able to reach these masses with our present educational classes or with the Workers' School. We must do something also in the meantime. We must do something immediately.

I want to submit herewith an educational program for our party for the coming year.

PROGRAM.

I—Our Higher Education.

1. We should maintain and strengthen our existing educational classes in various cities and build up such classes in the larger cities where they do not exist and where there is sufficient material for them.

2. These classes should be under the supervision of educational directors, appointed by the district executive committees of the various districts. The district educational director is resposible for the conduct of these classes in the jurisdiction of that particular district. He reports regularly to the D. E. C. about his work and the success of these classes. He maintains contact with the national educational director and receives from him every assistance possible.

3. As far as possible these classes should have a uniform curriculum thruout the party. The curriculum should be carefully prepared by the national educational director.

4. The district educational director may, if he finds necessary, establish such classes in other languages, not only in English. But it is advisable to induce the comrades of various sections who can read and speak English to join the English classes.

Note 1. I do not submit a draft of the curriculum for these classes because it is necessary to have reports from the now existing classes so that by studying them carefully it will be possible to find out what subjects must be taken up during the coming year.

Note 2. I do not speak about the Workers School in New York, because that is a special problem for the C. E. C.

II. Our Elementary Education.

1. The convention of the Workers Party should decide that the months of November, December and January be set aside for intensive educational work in the party.

(a) Every comrade should devote at least one night every week for education.

(b) The branch organizer should keep very strict record of every comrade as to his or her attendance. Only on very important grounds can a comrade be excused for failure to attend an educational meeting.

(c) The leader of the educational meeting may be elected by the branch or shop nuclei, or where there is no suitable comrade for such work the C. C. C. or the D. E. C. sends one. The leader must study the subject very carefully, prepare and deliver a short talk on the subject, then let the members discuss it. If the leader cannot answer a certain question or if he is not sure of its correctness he should immediately write to the D. E. director for information.

2. Subjects to be studied during these three months.

(a) The Communist Party.

(1) Membership and form of organization.

(2) Its role before the revolution.

(3) Its role during the revolution.

(4) Its role after the overthrow of the rule of the bourgeois.

(5) Party discipline.

(6) Communist work in other labor organizations.

(b) Communist work in the trade unions.

(1) What is a trade union: its membership and its role in the everyday struggles of the masses.

(2) Communists' participation in these struggles.

(3) Why Communists must join the trade unions and be active in them.

(4) Our attitude towards the leadership of the trade unions.

(5) Our program of amalgamation and labor party in the trade unions.

(6) Communist factions in the trade unions.

(8) Our attitude toward the splitting of trade unions and dual unionism.

3. Assistance from higher party units.

(a) The national educational director should work out a short outline for every subject; the C. E. C. should supply every educational leader with it.

(b) The C. E. C., as far as possible, should sell the books on these subjects at cost price to the members.

Note 1. The outlines must be translated in various languages so that the language section comrades can use them.

Note 2. Where comrades cannot all come to a meeting the same evening, on account of party work or other important reasons, the branch or shop nuclei can divide itself into two or more groups in such a way that every comrade could participate in these educational meetings.

Note 3. The curriculum is limited to two subjects for the following reasons: (1) because they are the most important subjects to be studied and understood by every member, (2) because we can accomplish more by taking fewer subjects at one time and concentrating our attention to them.

III. Preparation.

1. The party press immediately after the convention should carry on intensive agitation explaining to the membership the importance of the educational work. We should induce the comrades to prepare themselves and be ready to gladly participate in that intensive education during these three months.

2. The C. E. C., the district committees and the C. C. C. are to see to it that every branch should make necessary arrangements for these educational meetings in advance. —A. BIMBA.

P. S. It should be understood that educational work among the party membership must go on the whole year around. But I think it is necessary to carry on intensive education for a certain period of time and find out how much success we can obtain by these new methods.

The Negro and World Changes

By LOVETT FORT-WHITEMAN,
National Organizer American Negro Labor Congress.

THE attention of the National Committee calling the American Negro Labor Congress has been attracted to an editorial appearing in the August 11th number of the Chicago Tribune in which the writer supports the warning issued by Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor against Negro labor unionists taking part in the American Negro Labor Congress to be held in Chicago in the month of October. Mr. Green charges the American Negro Labor Congress to be supported by the Communist element in this country and constituting a great danger to the Negro working class.

The Chicago Tribune in substantiating the attitude of the head of the American Federation of Labor argues that no greater dis-service could be rendered the race than the promotion of Soviet doctrine among the Negro people of America. We, of the American Negro Labor Congress have not assumed a definite position in respect to the social situation in Russia at this time, nor is the American Negro Labor Congress a Communist affair. True, the Communist element thruout America have here and there proffered their sympathy and support for the work towards developing the Congress and the Communist group are only some among many constituting the most progressive elements within the labor movement of America who have taken a helpful and fraternal attitude towards the work of bringing about the American Negro Labor Congress.

THE Negro working class in America suffers all the social abuses of the working class in general, but plus racial persecution. We well know that the ruling class in this country, as in all capitalist countries is better able to maintan itself thru keeping the ranks of the workers divided, either on caste, racial or religious issues. In India with its three hundred and twenty million people, England is able to hold power thru ever keeping alive the caste sentiment, in Ireland it is Catholic against Protestant, in the West Indies, Mulattoes against blacks, and here in our own "free" United States, it is white against black. Mr. Green and the Chicago Tribune charges that the American Negro Labor Congress has for its policy the intensifying of interracial bitterness. He well knows that that is absolutely untrue; it is merely a thin shield to protect his own skin from the growing reaction thruout the labor movement against the policy of restriction on the part of many unions in the American Federation of Labor. The Negro Labor Congress is actuated by the desire to build up in this country a sentiment of common interest between white and black workers, to eradicate the practice of Negroes being constantly used as strikebreakers, resulting always in race riots and the intensifying of racial antagonisms.

The Negro is the most oppressed group in our American life and he is fastly coming to see that the causes responsible for his degradation resides in the social system. It is quite well to say that there is some degree of prosperity among a small section of Negroes in our northern cities, but what about the great masses of the race residing in the southern states, where they are denied every elemental right vouchsafed even tne most undeveloped racial groups residing in any other section of world society. The Negro is admonished to be loyal and support American institutions. Loyalty has no virtue within itself; it all depends upon that to which one is loyal. Is there any virtue in the slave being loyal to his master? Lynching is one of America's institutions. Should the Negro not seek with all means at his hands to undermine this institution? Likewise, with Jim-Crowism, political disfranchisement, industrial discrimination, residential segregaton, etc. The American Negro Labor Congress can by no means be interpreted as a Bolshevik movement among Negroes, but we are certainly not ignorant of this fact that the Jew, before the Russian revolution, was the Negro of Russia, and there was no country in the world more aflicted with racial problems than old czarist Russia. But today, seven years after the Bolshevik revolution, Russian capitalism having been overthrown, causes of racial problems thereby having been removed, the Jew is no longer confined to the Pale settlements, the Moslems of Turkestan no longer being compelled to ride in Jim-crow cars and denied educational facilities, but each and every one of the many racial groups residing in Russia entering into the full currents of the political, economic and cultural life of the nation. Again, we have no definite policy expressing out attitude towards Sovietism, but the Negro in this country has seen one government overturned (Suthern confederacy) and by no means suffered because of its passing.

THE American Negro Labor Congress marks the beginning of a new epoch in the life of the American Negro working class. It shall endeavor to set the Negro upon a new road of political thinking and to bring about a self-orientation and an understanding of a common interest and a common enemy for the working class the world over regardless of race, color, or clime.

The New Course of English Policy

By Irandust

At the same time as the hostile activities against the Soviet Union in the West are being intensified, English imperialism is endeavoring to create an Eastern front against the Soviet Union. The English press is making efforts to exploit in an increased degree the theme of the omni-present hand in Moscow and to frighten the leading groups in the countries of the Near East with the bogey of a "red imperialism of the Bolsheviki" which is said to be directed against the backward peoples of the East. This English propaganda is noticeable in recent times especially in Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan.

In connection with the recent resolution of the Government of Angora to build up a new the Turkish navy, the English paper Near East proposed that Turkey should work on similar lines to those taken by England, on the grounds that the interests of Turkey and England are completely identical, in that both these countries are obliged to carry on a policy of defense against "the aggressive plans of Russia" in Asia, in which proposal it is easy to see a transparent hint that it would be best for the Turkish fleet to be under English guidance. The taking over by the Angora Government of the property of the non-Moslem population of Turkey, which remained unclaimed in consequence of the war, prompted the Morning Post to urge Turkey not to follow in the footsteps of Bolshevism but to take its direction from "Western civilization" and to help England.

At the same time the English press is raising a hue and cry about the Bolshevist threat to Persia and Afganistan which is alleged to have arisen as a result of the demarcation of national boundaries in the Soviet Republics of Middle Asia, and is trying to represent insurrection of the Persian Turkomans, which has been provoked by the activities of English agents, as a Moscow intrigue.

The Daily Telegraph expert on questions concerning Middle Asia recently demanded, in that paper, the revision of English policy in the Near East. He pointed out that the mandatory territories of England represent a narrow corridor at the extreme ends of which lie the potentially hostile districts of Egypt and Persia, whilst in the North is Turkey (and nothing has been done to gain its sympathies) and in the South the sovereign territories of the Sultan of Nedjd and leader of the Wahabiti, Ibn Saud, the whole of whose interests have been prejudiced by England's policy in the last few years. In his opinion the foundations and principles of England's policy in Middle Asia should be revised, as otherwise she might expect to lose her whole influence and prestige in the Middle East.

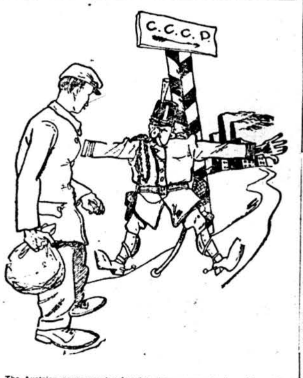
As a matter of fact England has in the last few months developed a feverish activity in Egypt, Palestine, Arabia, Iraq, Turkey and Persia. New perfected methods of diplomacy are being used side by side with the former methods of force and terror.

The English High Commissioners for Egypt and Palestine are being exchanged. The resignation of Lord Allenby in Egypt and his replacement by George Lloyd, the former governor of Bombay, signifies, as has been remarked in the Arabian press, that the English government circles are trying to cover the iron hand of the policy carried out by them in Egypt, with a velvet glove. The replacement of Sir Herbert Samuel in Palestine by Lord Plumer is regarded in English political circles as a preventive measure for possible political complications in the Near East. According to the opinions expressed by the leaders of the Zionist movement, Plumer's appointment signifies a change in English policy in Palestine, with the object of morally disarming Arabian nationalism and turning Palestine into a purely English colony.

In Palestine and Transjordania, England is creating a new strategic base the significance of which is growing, thanks to England having recently taken possession of the harbor of Akabah in the Red Sea and thanks to the transformation of Cyprus into an English colony.

In recent times England has obviously renounced her attitude of neutrality and non-interference between the two States, Nedjd and the Hedjas, which lay claim to the hegemony in Arabia, by confiscating the arms bought by the Hedjas and by making efforts to subject Ibn Saud, the strongest aspirant to a united Arabia, to her influence.

Strictly Forbidden



The Austrian government refused to issue passports to a labor delegation to Soviet Russia for the fear they may learn the truth.

The socialist press of Germany tried to persuade the workers not to send any delegation, but it did not succeed. The German and Swedish labor delegations went to Russia and learned the truth. The Austrian workers were not held up by their fascist government and went anyway. They are now learning the truth for themselves.

English diplomacy is at the same time making efforts to adjust the delicate factors in the relations between England and Turkey. The insurrection in Kurdistan gave the Government of Angora the opportunity of concentrating considerable forces on the borders of Mosul; this threatened to bring about a military solution of the Mosul question, if Turkey should not be satisfied by the decision of the League of Nations. It is characteristic that the examination of the Mosul question in the League of Nations Council which had been fixed for the month of June, is now postponed until the September session in order to give the parties the opportunity of coming to an agreement.

In the meantime English capital openly renounces the actual boycott of Turkey which was imposed by the treaty of Lausanne, and is ahead of all other countries in the economic conquest of Turkey. Last year, among the foreign limited companies registered in Turkey with a capital of 226 million Turkish pounds, 23 companies with a capital of 23 millions Turkish pounds were English.

The more or less conciliatory policy of England in the question of Mossul, is partly explained by the fact that the situation in South Kurdistan threatens the English interests in Iraq; communications have appeared in the press to the effect that Sheik Makhmud has succeeded in defeatitng repeatedly the English troops in Iraq.

A few days ago the government of Iraq signed a treaty accepting 70 English specialists, for periods up to ten years, in the State Government. This is evidence that the transformation of Iraq into an English colony is rapidly advancing.

The change is most striking in the working methods of English diplomacy in Persia. After the inglorious adventure of its puppet Sheik Kheisal, English diplomacy has decided not to play the part of an enemy of the national movement for freedom in Persia, openly, and, as it is endeavoring to persuade Persia to take its orientation from England, it is working out plans on a large scale for the economic enslavement of Persia, with the assistance of American capital.

In England's policy in the Near East, the Anglo-American bloc which has so obviously collapsed in China, continues as before to play an important part. It finds expression in a series of agreements between the interested capitalist groups of both countries, in the first place between the petroleum companies "English-Persian Oil" and "Standard Oil" which have come to an agreement as to the dividing of the treasures of native oil of North Persia, and are offering united resistance to other competitors, especially France. Preparations are being made for the transference of Persian finances to Anglo-American control, for which object the issue of an Anglo-American loan to Persia is planned. Further Anglo-American cooperation in the question of railways and concessions can be observed.

A similar picture is to be observed in Turkey and the Iraq. The "Standard Oil" and the "English-Persian" have come to an agreement with regard to a common exploitation of the native oil of Iraq, and a short time ago a concession treaty was signed in Bagdad with the Government of Iraq. England is trying by this agreement to get America to guarantee the borders of Iraq.

Hand in hand with this a tendency can be observed for the relations between England and France in the East to become strained; this corresponds to a certain degree to the situation in Europe. Thus the attempts of the French to gain a share in the affairs connected with native oil and railways in North Persia is met by England's violent opposition. When communications were published with regard to negotiations between Turkey and France as to the adjustment of the frontiers of Syria, the English press very plainly gave expression to the opinion that France had no right to dispose of Syria. The English press showed similar anxiety during the last visit of Franklin-Bouillon, the French politician, to Angora.

England's attempts to strengthen her position in the East and to create in the East a hostile front to Soviet Russia are, in their very nature, full of contradictions and therefore doomed to failure. The Turkish Government has already declined to have the Turkish navy re-organized by an English mission. The Arabian movement in Palestine and Transjordania against the English rule continues.

The Eastern peoples cannot be deceived by the new mask of English imperialism. This became evident at the Conference for the Limitation of Trade in Arms which took place recently at Geneva, a crass example of a cynical farce, at which the military great powers who hold all the achievements of the modern technique should limit their armaments. In accordance with the interests of England and France, the conference provided for the establishment of forbidden zones in Morocco, on the Red Sea, in the Persian Gulf and in the Gulf of Oman as well as in the Indian Ocean. It endeavored to isolate and weaken the national movement in the East. After a series of protests on the part of representatives of the Eastern countries, the Persian delegate demonstratively left the conference and declined to sign the minutes. According to a communication of the Morning Post, in which a hidden threat is contained, this incident might lead to Persia resigning from the League of Nations. As yet there are no communications as to whether the Geneva protocol will be signed by Turkey and Afghanistan. This shows us what the forerunners of the success of English "stabilization" in the Near East look like.

The American Standard of Living

By M. D. Litman

The capitalist soothsayers compare the standard of the American permanently employed worker with the standard of living of the worker in war-torn Europe or the feudal Orient. The variation in mode of living, hardly enters into their arguments. It is interesting to note that America keeps two sets of books. In one set the figures are forced and inflated, showing the worker wallowing in luxuries as compared to Europe and in the other set the real facts are stated.

Marx Exposed Hokum.

No better exposure of this trickery is needed, than can be found in that immortal work of Karl Marx—Value Price and Profit. It applies to America perfectly.

Citizen Weston presented his argument in this book that a rise in wages, also meant a rise in the cost of living and that in the end the workers will not be any better off. He illustrated his theory thus: When a bowl of soup contains a certain quantity to be eaten by a certain number of persons (get the fixity of capitalist economics) an increase in the broadness of the spoons will not produce an increase in the quantity of soup. Quite clever, is not it?

But—Karl Max told our illustrious Mr. Weston that his illustration is rather spoony and disproved his theory thus: The bowl is filled from the WHOLE product of national labor, which product, due to intensive and modern methods of production, is constantly increasing, and is not fixed, and what prevents the workers from getting more soup, is the narrowness of their spoons.

It is obvious that wuen the workers do not get the increase of this increased production, it goes to the capitalists, who are, as we above stated, diners at our national table and are eating soup with us. Therefore, in demanding an increase in wages, the workers would only ~~be~~ receiving a share of the increase of production.

What Middle Class Eats.

By keeping wages down, while production increases, it not only gives the manufacturing capitalist a greater portion of the product, but it allows waste in distribution, which supports an army of small-fry that live off this increase. This indirect method of feeding a nation, or performing personal service, is typically democratic, if not anarchistic.

The working class eats thru the belly of the middle class and what they get is excrament.

Where Do We Go From Here?

A neat little folder advising the writer to invest "his money" in Muscle Shoals, gives us the following truth:

One hundred men start out in life at the age of 25. (Most men start at 14). At the age of 65 statistics show their fate as follows:

Thirty-six will be dead (in heaven).

One will be very rich. (Don't all talk at once).

Four will be wealthy. (Find your uncle).

Five will be supporting themselves—by working. (At 65).

Fifty-four will be dependent upon friends, relatives or charity.

The proper advice is: Pick your undertaker or charitable institution early.

How Much Soup?

When union wage disputes arise or investigations into living conditions are undertaken, family budgets are prepared by various statisticians and market investigators, to find out just what the worker does with all of his money. For that purpose, a hypothetical American Standard of living is set up.

The following cost budget prepared by the Muncipal Research and Training School for Public Service, speaks for itself. It is represented as a model American budget which has been compiled from government and special investigation committees data.

Just a Little Criticism.

Lack of space prevents a thoro discussion of each item that seems either fallacious or distorted in this budget, suffice to say that wages of permanently employed skilled workers, average about $1,800.00 a year. Unemployment, sickness, strikes, lockouts, poor relatives education and dozens of other items are not provided for. This budget must have been prepared to keep up one of Rossum's Robots, who will be manufactured in 1960.

$440.000 will not clothe a family ot five for a year in such a way as to be acceptable by the average employer when the worker goes out for a job.

Rent, heat and light sufficient to take care of a family of five, can not be gotten in the United States at $44.66 a month, on the basis of one room to a person in industrial centers.

And just look at this: $80.00 a year for medical and dental care for a family of five! Don't you wish that were true? With the adulterated food the worker's stomach has to digest, with miserable working conditions which allow no diversion, $80.00 will buy a cheap coffin, but will not pay the medical bill of a family of five.

How does that statistician account for the presence of three children in the family? Did their working class mother drop them like a cat, or did it cost her $200.00 per child to bring them into this miserable world? And in what condition is the mother now—after the birth of the three slaves? She goes regularly to a female specialist, because, she can't lead a natural life.

We are allowed $45.00 for car fare. That depends on how much the worker spends when he goes to look for a job, as to what portion of this appropriation is left for the rest of the family.

Very amusing, indeed, is the part put away for amusements. Just $20.00 is all it takes for a father, mother and three kids to keep themselves amused for a year.

When one stops to think that to see Charlie Chaplin throw a pie in a policeman's face, costs with war tax 83c, and as it amuses us very much to see that which we would like to do, it can be seen that $20.00 is not enough. As to a higher form of amusement, we have to flip a five-dollar bill when we get into that class.

For organizations, such as church and labor, $13.00 is set aside. We really don't know what comment to make. Let us hope it all goes to labor. Let us note, however, that to be a real American one must possess a klan night gown, which costs $10.00.

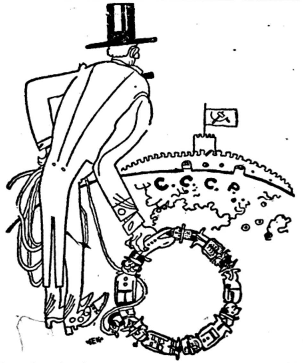
No provision is made for toys for the children, vacation, moving from place to place and a multitude of other necessaries.

Unemployment.

From two to seven million workers are continuously out of work. The January government Labor Review shows 32 per cent of 6,746 establishments as working part time. In some mining sections of the United States the unemployment situation is reaching the 100 per cent mark. Unemployment is driving wages downward, even the sooth-sayers must admit. It results in lowering the American standard of living. If a worker is out of work for only three months, it reduces his standard 25 per cent. To merely exist under present conditions, more and more women are drawn into the breadwinning industry, which in turn produces more unemployment.

Uncertainty of employment, intensified exploitation by the big industrialists and later the Main Street leeches and the 57 varieties of tricksters, unnatural living, ruinious to the health of the workers, makes the much boomed American standard of living, a lot of hokum.

It Can't Be Done!



The gentlemen from England trying to lasso the Soviet Union with a little league of border nations patterned along the lines of the big robber clique. The same job was tried first by the Allies when they invaded Soviet Russia from all sides. The blockade, counter-revolutionary uprisings and civil war nursed by the Allies failed to crush the revolution and it now stands as the beacon of the coming Soviet Union of the World.

By JOHN LASSEN.

(Translated by Simon Felshin.)

NOTE—This poem was written by John Lassen at a time when he suffered a break-down. He was ill for many years with tuberculosis and he died from this disease. The poem brings back stirring incidents from the eventful life of John Lassen. It refers to the time when he was liberated by the populace in Budapest after he had been imprisoned for making an attempt on the life of Count Tisza. It was during the Karolyi revolution that he was liberated. The emblem of the Karolyi bourgeois revolution was a white autumn flower. The populace threw white flowers at the prison gate, then they stormed the prison and freed Lassen. The same thing had been done during the Kossuth revolution in Hungary when a prominent political prisoner was freed in the same manner. Then the poem goes on to speak of America. This is a very powerful poem written in an expressionist manner.

I flew across the ocean.
....then I fell headlong....I broke down in the hallway of Mt. Sinai Hospital.
The solemn faced doctor came and took a big book and wrote in it warningly:
John Lassen, t....b....
But I laughed—
For me they are nothing but two letters..What of it?
HA—HA—HA....for all of shining LIFE had filled me.
Ecstasy of the universe. The great intoxication. The SPLENDOR......
Did not a whole city embrace me once? The white autumn flowers of a whole city were hurled against the prison-gate.
Revolution....Revolution.... Revolution!
And bony fists hammered at the prison gate.
Revolution. Revolution bursting forth. Bourgeois revolution.
Ra—ra—ra— Ra—ra—ra.

Was it all a dream? Mirage? Hallucination?
But oh, incontrovertible fact:
Revolution. Counter revolution. Revolution. Counter revolution—
And my life only an atom in all of that.
Ra....ra....r....
Oh, all things taken together: The prisons. The mice. And the rats. And hunger. And forced labor. All, all of life:
It was beautiful nevertheless.
All of MANKIND within my tiny life.
The heaving ocean threw me forward.
And dropped me into the hospital.

Do not stop, untiring army! Only one broke down on the way.
In Mt. Sinai Hospital.

And though I die—
Life goes on. And is radiant Already new armies are gathering.
Prolet is drawn to prolet.
And song peals forth.
And the city shakes.
....And fighting armies attack.
Flags flutter!
In blood-red purple a new day dawns!
Tra—RA—RA—RAA
Revolution..Revolution.... Revolution!
Oh resounding life. Song of the universe:
On Fifth Avenue worker armies about their rejoicing on the barricades.
Blood, blood, blood! But victory!
What does it matter that once a long time ago in Mt. Sinai Hospital one broke down....?....?
Ha....hooo....Ha....hooo.
Spring! Fragrance! Splendor!
And yet: the Revolution is for ALL OF US!

What About Evolution?

By WILLIAM SCHNEIDERMAN

The evolution trial in Tennessee seemed a far cry from the revolutionery movement, nevertheless it is closely linked up with what Marx has taught us about the class struggle. The theory of evolution has dealt a blow to one of the main prop of the ruling class, the Church, and the Church, and the morons who are frantically attempting to stave off the spread of atheism are doomed to failure.

Why? Because it is one of the inevitable contradictions of the capitalist order, that the spread and popularization among the masses of science and knowledge which is so necessary to the progress of industry means the end of the superstition and ignorance upon which the bourgeoisie depend to maintain their strangle hold on the toilers. For if the workingclass can throw off the influence of religion, then they are likely to go a step further and refuse to accept the other dope they are fed to keep them passive. Just as the economic conditions spread science and atheism among the masses, so do they teach them thru the bitter experience of the class struggle to destroy the "religion" of "democracy and equality."

The theory of evolution has made ridiculous the Bible and all the teachings of the church to intelligent workers, by showing that man is not a product of a god, but is merely a highly developed creature related to the rest of the animal world by a long process of more or less gradual change from the lowest and simplest forms to the highest and most complex. But the capitalist class has been aware of the dangers of the science they are forced to utilize. Their paid men, both scientists and preachers, have hastened to explain that evolution does not conflict at all with religion. One can still believe in a divine being, they anxiously point out, and still accept the ape-ancestry of man. Oh! yes! but the only trouble is that if God didn't create the world as per the Bible, he hasn't a single excuse for existing at all.

The anti-evolution law in Tennessee is part of a wide-spread and vicous attempt to keep the minds of the younger generation especially as dark as possible, and characteristically enough, the campaign was started in a state with a notoriously high percentage of illiteracy and ignorance. The attempt to introduce religion in the schools is a highly desirable one for the capitalists, as exampled by the statement of Roger W. Babson, leading financial authority for the Chambers of Commerce, that "the safety of our investments depends upon the numbers of church-going people in America." No wonder, then, we have Rockefeller Foundations financing zealous missionaries to China and other "uncivilized" countries.

The liberal lawyers who defended evolution in the Tennessee trial against an army of Billy Sundays give a clear-cut example of the control that is exercised by the ideology of bourgeois institutions over everyone but the most advanced section of the working-class. On what grounds did they defend evolution? Did they come out uncompromisingly and state that the facts of science disprove religious superstitions? No, they are seeking to prove that evolution "does not conflict" with the teaching of the Bible. The scientists, too, know well which side their bread is buttered on and refused to risk their Jobs by giving truthful evidence on the witness stand for fear of their masters. We know that scientists can be as revolutionary as they please if they talk about he stars, but not when they get any nearer home than a few million miles.

There is a curious analogy between the role of Marx and Engels in the field of economics and that of Darwin and Wallace in the field of science. In both cases they have contributions that have revolutionized their respective fields, altho in different degrees of importance, and placed them on a scientific basis. Engels was as much under-estimated beside Marx as Wallace was beside Darwin. And finally, in each case attempts have been made to take the real revolutionary significance out of their theories, and render them tame and harmless. Reformist apologists of the Second International have everywhere substituted "evolution" for "revolution", instantly forgetting, however, that even science gives them the lie.

To carry the analogy further, just as the theory of evolution has made the worker turn away from a god to which he has always been told he owes his existence, as has the Marxian theory stripped the claims of the bourgeois economists of the falshood that the workers owe their living to the capitalists. Well-bred scientists still declare that evolution is "in harmony" with religion; in fact, some have shown that it "proves" religion. And preachers chime in, too, with a watchful eye on their salaries. It is only the crude ones, of the Billy Sunday type, who cannot reconcile the two, and who will have nothing but God and the Bible, if it will help their selling real estate in the swamps of Florida.

And for once we agree with them. We, too, will not "reconcile" religion and science, any more than we will recognize the "harmony" between two warring classes. We will wage constant war against mainstay of bourgeois rule, until we have destroyed it forever, for the rule of the workers will use science to emancipate instead of to enslave them and will have no need for mysticism and superstition to maintain itself.

Russian Workers Write to America

Workers correspondents give information about their life.

By ANISE

MOSCOW, July 14.—(By Mail.)—Tens of thousands of Russian workers and peasants are now writing for the Russian press, exposing incompetency, praising institutions that are doing well, suggesting improvements. The "workers' correspondents," which began spontaneously in the desires of workmen to help improve their country, are now a prominent institution in Russia, the unofficial aids to prosecuting attorneys and to all inspecting departments of the land. And since the Russian worker takes a vital interest in the workers of all lands, some of these correspondents are beginning to write messages to foreign workers.

Two of these letters were brought to me the other day and I was asked to translate them and forward them to America. They give, more simply and graphically than I could do, the basic facts of Russian life. The first is signed by the "Workers of O. K. L. Mill, City of Red Lugansk, Donetz Basin; writer, representative E. F. Golovachof," such is the co-operative way in which these letters are often produced, read to an interested group and then forwarded.

COMRADE workers of America,

"We want to inform you how the workers live in the Soviet state, in the city of Red Lugansk, Donetz Basin.

"First, we work eight hours a day, on Saturday six hours. Youth under eighteen work six hours, and all persons working in high temperatures work six hours and get extra milk and special clothing. wages are paid twice a month.

"Every skilled worker gets yearly one month's vacation on full pay. Unskilled get two weeks.

"A worker and his family get free hospital care; when on sick leave he gets full pay as though working. We have a bathhouse at the mill for the use of workers and their families. At the mill is a nursery where the working women leave their children and each three hours they are allowed one hour to nurse them.

"All of us are members of the union and also of the mutual aid society in the union. From this mutual aid fund a worker can get loans, but not more than a month's wages. Almost all workers are members of the co-operatives, through which they get their food and clothing at prices lower than the market.

"Workers are taught how to read and write gratis, no matter how old they are. Even some sixty year olds are learning for the first time. Conditions are improving in many other ways.

"Of course, all this did not exist under the czar. Naturally, the workers prize the Soviet government very much. The iron unity of the workers will break through all plots of foreign bourgeois rascals.

"Comrade workers, we beg you to unite as strongly as you can into iron ranks and to give such a blow to your exploiting bourgeois as we did, and to join with us in our workers' family to toil for the workers and peasants' cause of the whole world. We send fraternal greetings to the whole workers and peasants class of America.

"Workers of O. K. M. Mill, Red Lugansk, Donetz Basin, Correspondent E. F. Golovchof."

Incidently the whole address is given so that anyone who wishes may write back.

Perhaps someone whom this reaches in America, would like to.

ANOTHER letter comes from the peasants' sanitarium in Livadia, on the shores of the Crimea. With shrewd political taste, the Soviet government has used the old summer palace of the czar not for Soviet officials, nor even for city workers, but for peasants. It is delightfully symbolic. They are saying, "Our officials do not choose to sleep in the czar's bed, as Kerensky did, thus showing that he aped the czar; neither do we give it to the city workers, who don't care whether a bed belonged to the czar or not, if it is otherwise a good bed. But we give it to the peasants, the great dark mass of the land, to show them that they are taking the czar's place now. Of course, the peasant is the one person in Russia now who can get some real excitement out of occupying the czar's palace; it gives Ivan something to write home about and tell the gaping neighbors in his village.

So here is a letter from an employe, working in the Peasants' Sanitarium of Livadia:

"Crimea, July, 1925.

"In a beautiful park above the sea gleams a white palace, where formerly the czars rested from the groans of the workers. At present the peasants of Russia rest there, the new rulers. Daily in small groups the patients arrive; now there are more than 300 people. They arrive from all ends of this limitless territory of the United Republics, from the central states and the far removed provinces.

"Here you can meet the bright khalat of the Turcoman, the narrow face of the Khirgizian, the short cut hair and basket sandals of the Great Russian. Various dialects and tongues intermingle. But finally they are all washed, dressed in sanitary clothes. It is not so easy to distinguish them now; they have become less picturesque and more alike.

"The patients like to inquire which room was Nicolai's and which belonged to the czarina and the grand duchesses. With great curiosity they examine the expensive carvings of furniture and walls, the tremendous dining saloon and vast pantries. They talk and argue how many tractors you could buy for the village with this money, or how many new school buildings.

"Most of the peasants can't get over the impression of their trip and of this vast health resort. To them who have spent all their lives in the dead villages, in ceaseless labor, it all seems a dream. What it so long ago, only eight years, when even in dreams he could never have seen himself traveling to a resort for a cure at the expense of the state and stopping in the czar's palace. Even in fairy tales they did not have such things.

"Among the peasants, especially the older women, there are a number of believers, but more by habit than conviction. They will get up from table and hastily cross themselves as they turn around. Then some young neighbor will jocularly remark: 'See what kind of palaces your God built for the czar. Certainly was a kind-hearted God!' The woman will answer: 'O my dear son, more by habit does the hand pull up. What is life in heaven if only we can arrange our life on earth.'

"In this way the Russian peasant regains his health—he who with the worker is rebuilding his own land.

Dramatic schools and dancing colleges are now under Government control; young workers from the factory art schools are one source from which pupils are encouraged. Most of them, however, enter as children and receive a general education as well as specializing in dramatic art or dancing as the case may be.

With the exception of one theatre in Leningrad, all are run at a loss and receive a subsidy from the State to make up the deficit. The one self-supporting theatre in Leningrad is quite the most interesting result of the optional art schools mentioned above. This theatre is entirely run and managed by the industrial workers themselves. Most of them still work their six-hour day in the factory. They have none of them received any other training than that offered by the Trade Union optional art schools. The productions at this theatre have hitherto been confined to what are termed Revolution plays. These plays, mostly written by workers, depict various phases of the Revolution, and are a most curious mixture of tragedy and humor. The Russian equivalent of Bairnsfather's "Old Bill" is a constant character.

Such plays are usually staged without scenery, or only with the merest indication such as used in the old-fashioned harlequinade which used to follow every children's pantomime. The dress of the characters are also mere indications, such as a sword for an officer, a rifle for a private. The highest talent in acting and elocution is, therefore, essential.

This form of post-revolution dramatic production is much in vogue, and has been brought to the highest form of perfection by Meyerhold in Moscow. At Meyerhold's Theatre only wooden screens on ball-bearing runners are used to indicate the scenery. There are no footlights, but a strong limelight is thrown on the actor while speaking, or on whom the audience's attention should be fixed at the time. The rest of the stage and the auditorium are completely blacked out. The whole play is worked at the speed of a cinema film, and in this manner there is no limit to the number of scenes which can be gone through in one act. The attention of the audience is held the whole time, the effects are extraordinarily realistic, and the cost of production is fractional.

Meyerhold himself described this form of staging very aptly: "You do not require illustrations to a novel. The general atmosphere of the story and the most sketchy description will conjure up in your imagination the scene in which the events are laid. Each reader imagines a different picture, but it is always one that pleases him and is in sympathy with the story as he reads it. Everything is in the writing. The same with my plays, everything is in the acting."

Under the nationalization scheme every provincial town now has its national opera house and other theatres. These are all under Government management or sub-let to local authorities. They are not exclusively served by local talent; any artist serving the State is liable to be called upon to serve in the provinces and so provide the provincial public with exhibitions of the best talent in the land.

The price of seats in most theatres is about the same as in Tsarist days. A worker, however, on presentation of his certificate, obtains a reduction according to his category. Thus a worker may obtain a seat in the gallery at the opera for a sum amounting to 2½d. or a stall for under a shilling.

It is too early to judge whether the Revolution will bring forth any really great exponents of the arts. It is, however, certain that the new system of education is granting the very greatest opportunities for self-expression to a naturally artistic and emotional people.

Art Collections

Much might be written regarding Russia's collection of art treasures in the museums and public galleries. These, however, have been extensively reviewed and written on by experts in the past. It is satisfactory to realize that rumors circulated in the European Press regarding their destruction or sale may now be classed with the most of the other information received from certain quarters regarding the situation in Soviet Russia.

As a matter of fact, the collection has been increased to an almost unwieldy proportion by the nationalization of private collections. Jewelry, plate, pictures, furniture, miniatures, armor, china, tapestries, sculpture, arms, altar-pieces, books, and manuscripts in vast quantities are still stored, uncatalogued, in the large attics and cellars of the museums and many of the famous country seats and town homes of the nobility which have been turned into museums or educational establishments.

A large staff of experts and artists is busy sorting and cataloguing this heterogeneous mass. Those specimens of special value are added to the former collections in the existing museums and galleries. Furniture, pictures, and art treasures found in many famous homes and palaces now converted into museums remain as they were found. In the musuems of Leningrad alone there are over 50,000 pieces of china waiting to be catalogued and inspected. Over 5,000 pictures have been concentrated in the great Hermitage Galleries and are now being sorted and classified. A wonderful collection of ikons and religious pictures has been centralized in the Museum of Alexander III, where a large expert staff, many of them foreigners, are engaged on restoration work. Many of these ikons and holy pictures have been found to date back to before the tenth and eleventh centuries. It was found, however, that some had been repainted several times and, in some cases, with an entirely different design. The work of restoration has now removed the later Russian designs, and the original work of the Byzantine artist has been revealed. So far the results achieved have been marvellous, and the experts declare that when the work is finished Russia will possess a collection of early religious art which will be unrivaled in the world.

In all cases when identification has been accomplished only the finest specimens of art treasures are placed in the chief museums, secondary specimens are sent to complete the collections in the provincial towns. Avowed reproductions, of which many thousands posed as originals on the walls of their former owners, are sent to the art schools which are springing up all over Russia or used for decorating the walls of public buildings.

There will be very important additions to the collections of china and pottery, tapestries and books. The increase of Russian work, both early and contemporary, will be enormous.

The Tretiakov Gallery in Moscow is still devoted to Russian painters, and here there have been many notable additions.

It seems improbable, however, that the increase in the intrinsic value of the national collection, from the point of view of foreign art, will be as great as might be expected. The dealers in Europe appear to have conspired to place their reproductions and counterfeits with the Russian aristocracy. The most important collection appears to be that of the Stragonov family, from which some very fine Rembrandts have been acquired. The collection of Rembrandt art in the Hermitage Gallery is now probably the best and most representative in the world.

The palaces of the Tsars and Grand Dukes remain untouched; even the toilet and writing tables are seen in exactly the same state as they were left by their former owners. Stolipin's great seat in the center of a large park on the outskirts of Leningrad has been thrown open as a museum on certain days during the week. The Trade Unions wanted this wonderful house and park as a sanatorium for the workers, but the Government decided that from certain aspects it was of more public value as a museum, and as an illustration of the formal state which surrounded the former Prime Ministers of the Russian Empire.

It is remarkable the zest with which the custodians and experts in these museums are working. Most of them are former employes, but some of them were formerly owners of private collections. Every facility is given them by the State to pursue their investigations. The galleries are well heated and open to the public on certain days only. Work, however, continues all the week and bona-fide students are admitted on all days. The charge for entry is purely nominal. A register is kept at the door in which visitors enter their names and addresses. Careful statistics are kept of the number of visitors, especial note being taken of whether they are local residents or visitors. On all public days large classes of children, workmen, and students, may be seen in charge of a guide or tecaher receiving instruction regarding the exhibits. Many of the classes are often organized parties from the provinces.

Printing and Publishing

The newspaper press and publication of books, leaflets, advertisements, and posters—in fact, the printed word in any form, also comes under the control and jurisdiction of the Commissariat of National Education. The two special departments of the Commissariat dealing wtih the printed word are the National Publishing Department and the Censor (Gosizdat and Glavlit).

Censorship

Application for the permission to publish all printed matter must be made to the Publishing Department. In the case of books and pamphlets the typed or printed MSS. have to be passed by a special Editorial Commission attached to the Publishing Department before final permission for publication can be obtained. The Censor then reviews the book in print after permission to publish has been received. In this manner the publisher and the Editorial Commission, not the author, are responsible to the Censor.

Books

The publication of books has increased very largely during the last two years. It is everybody's ambition to write a book in order to supplement his income.

If the work is accepted a contract is then drawn up between the author and publisher for a specified number of copies. In cases where an author is unable to sell his work to a publisher he may obtain the right to publication by applying direct to the Censor through the State Publishing Department; he can then publish at his own risk or, in the case of some scientific work or work of public interest, he may obtain payment from some organization or the State Educational Department itself. The second and subsequent editions of all publications form the basis of a separate contract and price by agreement. Besides the State Publishing Department there are now a number of private publishers.

Press Censorship

Each newspaper is a self-contained organization with its own editorial staff. There is no obligation on the members of the staff to be Communists, but a Government inspector from the Censor Office reads through the proofs before each edition goes to press. This official, who is a Communist, acts in very much the samo capacity as regards articles and news as the legal adviser retained by most British newspapers, but he has the right to refuse publication of information which he considers contrary to the State regulations. The ultimate responsibility, however, remains with the editorial staff.

Press Propaganda

The organization and control on certain definite lines of the printed word is considered to be one of the greatest trusts and responsibilities of the present rulers of Russia. In the words of Lenin, it will be possible, with the aid of the printing press, to break down the many traditions and customs which are still retarding the progress and correct evolution of the new ideas. The main features of the Russian Press, and, in fact, all literature in general, are therefore devoted to instruction and propaganda on the theories and practice of the many ramifications of Soviet rule.

The economic and social side of life under the new conditions is dealt with by the Press in great detail; and a special feature is the verbatim reports of all speeches made by the leaders at party meetings and congresses. Foreign and political news and the comments of all sections of the foreign Press are well set out, even in the smaller provincial papers. The absence of all sensational news stories of no instructive or public value is very marked. In fact, Soviet newspapers, although perhaps a little dull at times, are considerably cleaner reading than the newspapers of other countries.

Newspapers

The "Pravda" (Truth) is the Communist Party organ. The paper deals with general news, but its special feature is the activity and views of the Communist Party organization. This paper has one of the largest general circulations, and is looked upon as the mouthpiece of the Government. It also acts as a press agency for the provincial newspapers. The rest of the newspapers are divided into sectional categories as follows:—

1. General newspapers—town, provincial and rural.
2. Trade Union newspapers dealing with matters pertaining to their particular union.
3. Peasants, workers and professional newspapers.
4. Economic, military and technical.
5. Co-operative societies and national newspapers.
6. Weekly and monthly periodicals on art, music, literature and agriculture.
7. Rosta, the official Soviet Press Agency.
8. Factory wall papers.

Press Circulation

The comparative daily circulation figures are as follows:—

	1914	1924
No. of publications	447	493
Circulation	2,728,700	2,530,000

In the rural and agricultural districts the number of publications has increased from 131 in 1914 to 168 in 1924; in the large centers, however, there has been a slight decrease. The decrease in general ciroulation is undoubtedly due to the fact that every industrial and agricultural organization has its own club, which subscribes to the principal central newspapers and all the local ones. In this manner it is reckoned that each copy is read by at least ten persons. In most of the workers' clubs voluntary readers read the newspapers aloud at specified hours to members who are unable or unwilling to read. The reading public is, therefore, far in excess of figures suggested in the comparative statistics. The "Peasants' Gazette" and the "Red Star," both peasants' and workers' newspapers, were only started at the beginning of this year, and have each reached a circulation of over 400,000 daily. In the above figures the native, vernacular Trade Union and Peasants' Press is not included.

Wall Papers'

One of the most interesting features in Soviet journalism is what are called wall papers. These consist of printed, typewritten and, in some cases, hand-written slips, which from day to day are pinned on a board on the wall of the factory, club, institute, or other meeting-place of the workers. These slips contain articles, views, news, comments, etc., of the workers themselves. Each wall paper has its own organized editorial and printing staff, and is entirely run by the workers themselves under the auspices of the Trade Unions. Special correspondents are selected from among the workers, who gather news and send anything of general value appearing on these wall papers to some of the recognized newspapers in the cities. The origin of these wall papers sprang from the activities of the Russian Press Agency, "Rosta," which, in the days when paper was scarce, printed its telegraphic news on small slips, which were distributed in single copies to the clubs and meeting-places of the workers, and then pasted to the white wall. The workers soon began to write their own comments on the wall below. When this was stopped they wrote their comments on scraps of paper, often cigarette packet wrappings. From these efforts sprang the organization which is now represented in almost every workshop and club in Russia. These organized wall newspapers are a medium through which the workers can express their opinions, not only as regards general politics, but also on questions concerning the factory or institution for which they are working. Their success has been so great that they have become preparatory journalistic schools. The Factory Committees of the Trade Unions take very careful note of any young correspondent or contributor of merit, and from time to time make selections of candidates for the literary schools or institutes of journalists, where students receive a special training in all branches of journalism. Much young talent is appearing from this source.

Freedom of the Press

The older journalists of today, as in fact the whole of the contemporary Russian Press, are the outcome of 20 years of labor and oppression. Most of the writers have served many years in prison under the Tsarist regime. After the Revolution in 1905 a very strong agitation was started for greater freedom in the Press. The movement met with a certain amount of success until 1909. Repressive measures were then taken. In 1911, however, there was a further revival of the movement, which met with a greater measure of success. Militant action was no longer attempted, but combines were formed of various newspapers with dying circulations. Rights for the publication of new newspapers were also obtained. In this manner various political groups became possessed of the right of publication by several newspapers, of which only one was printed and issued. Directly it was closed by order of the authorities for too free an expression of views it continued its activities under another permit and under another name. In this manner the "Pravda" changed its name twelve times during the period 1912 to 1914, and 16 members of its editorial staff suffered various terms of imprisonment.

As will be readily seen there is still no opposition Press. In spite of this, however, very considerable latitude of criticism is allowed; these criticisms take the form of open discussions on social and economic questions. No attack on the Communist Party is permitted. The authority of the existing Government is in all cases strongly upheld. This is evident in the attitude of the whole of the Russian Press against Trotsky in his recent criticisms, which latter amounted to an attack on certain phases of the present system of rule.

Very few newspapers at present are self-supporting; for the most part they are subsidized by the organizations they represent or the Government, which looks upon them as part of the State educational system. A certain income is received from advertisements. The advertisements mostly consist of theatre notices, notices of party and Trade Union meetings, and co-operative stores, all of which have to be paid for by arrangement.

General Conclusions

From the above necessarily inadequate review of the Soviet educational system it will be realized that every opportunity and encouragement is given to the worker, no matter what may be his or her calling, to obtain the best instruction in any branch of art, industry, science or literature for which he may feel he has an aptitude. The results which were seen by the Delegation in all the districts visited were certainly astounding, especially when it is considered that the whole system has not yet been in operation for three years. Many of these workers had no intention of leaving the factory in which they had worked all their lives or altering their lives in any way. The training they had received in the optional schools or other institutions had, however, given them an entirely new outlook on life and made their leisure hours a pleasure. Others were by these means enabled to quit an irksome and routine job for a profession to which their talents and bent fitted them. A peasant or a worker can by his own energies rise in his or any other profession with the aid given to him by the system. The pathetic feature in our own civilization of wasted and dormant talent, the slave of circumstance, owing to the absence of all possibility of outlet or instruction through lack of means, seems likely to become very rare among the workers of Russia.

CHAPTER X

Public Health and Housing, etc.

Disease

Prior to the Revolution the registered death rate in Russia was higher than any other country in the world. The mortality among children under the age of one year was nearly three times that of any other country in Europe. During the general mobilization at the beginning of the war in 1914 it was found that 45 per cent. of the male population was unfit for military service as not coming up to the standard established at that time. Most of these defectives were suffering from syphilis in a more or less acute form, the disease being rampant in the villages and rural districts. During the war and the Revolution typhus, typhoid, smallpox and malaria were epidemic in all parts of the country; but reliable statistics dealing with this period are not available.

It has now been established from former official records that over 1,500,000 were killed during the war, and that another 1,675,000 lost over 50 per cent. of their working capacity as a result of wounds or sickness. During the Revolution and the Civil War (Denikin's offensive and others) it is reckoned that a further 6,500,000 lives were lost from casualties in fighting, disease, and infant mortality; finally, the famine of 1921 and 1922 carried away 5,000,000 men, women and children, bringing the total recorded losses to Russia during eight years up to nearly 15,000,000.

The first reliable statistics dealing with public health since the Revolution appeared in 1920. The number of registered cases of typhus had then reached nearly 4,000,000 and amounted to 365 per 10,000 inhabitants. In 1921 a cholera epidemic broke out in the south, and for six months the registered cases averaged over 200,000. In 1922 typhoid cases reached 1,500,000 and recurrent 300,000. At the same time scarlet fever and smallpox were epidemic in many parts. Such was the state of Russia in the years 1921 and 1922.

MR. LANSBURYS' EMPIRE - By C. M. Roeback

The following article was written for the Communist press by Comrade C. M. Roebuck of Britain, takes issue with George Lansbury on a very important question. In a recent debate in the House of Commons Lansbury and such a prominent "left winger" as David Kirkwood, with others, walked into the division with J. H. Thomas and Stanley Baldwin on the question of giving preference to goods manufactured within the confines of the British Empire. This action has caused quite a furore in radical circles in England and Comrade Roebuck put the issue fair and square to Lansbury, who usually is in the opposition to the right wing of the Labor Party.

Judging from the "Empire" number of his Weekly, it is very difficult to imagine that Lansbury is still on the side of the workers. Perhaps the best thing is to ask him a few questions.

George Lansbury! In your article last week you say that your support of colonial preference "was a vote in favor of admitting only those goods which are produced under fair conditions." Are you ignorant, or do you only pretend ignorance, of the fact that the vast bulk of the goods concerned in the vote are produced in the Empire under slave conditions?

You go on to justify yourself that "had you been allowed to do so," you would have put in words insisting on "fair conditions." Are you ignorant, or do you only pretend ignorance, of the fact which hundreds of thousands of workers knew perfectly well long before—namely, that it was just these few "words" (just a trifle, just the ending of British exploitation in the colonies) which the Tories would never allow you to put in?

You say that if the criticism is true that Preference duties only benefit the capitalists, then "we should give up boasting of Snowden's wonderful Budget." Are you ignorant or do you only pretend ignorance of the fact that the Communists who are criticising you today are the very people who were alone in exposing Snowden's "Labor Imperialist" Budget, at the time when you did not raise a finger to support them?

You say that, after you had been beaten on the abolition of food taxes altogether, you and your friends "determined to support the partial abolition embodied in the Preference proposals, if the goods were produced under fair conditions." Have you forgotten, or do you only pretend to have forgotten, the unimportant little fact that you and your friends supported the Preference proposals even without that saving clause, and even tho, not being infants in arms, you knew perfectly well beforehand that you could never secure it?

You say that we cannot refuse to take action against "the importation of foreign goods, produced under foul conditions, in competition with workers in our own land or in the Dominions." Are you blind, or are you shamming blindness, to the fact that goods are being produced "under foul conditions," and imported in huge volume, from a section of the British Empire (not more than 85 per cent of it) which you by an oversight omitted from the catalogue—namely, the colonies?

You refer to "a new way by which international action can be taken"—the International Labor Office at Geneva, whose director is "expected" to keep certain records, and where labor and capitalist representatives meet "to discuss and formulate plans": and you go on to declare that, "with a true spirit of comradeship between the workers, it is not only possible but imperative" that we should come to an understanding about sweated labor conditions making trade impossible.

What do you mean, George Lansbury? Do you mean that the director does keep records of colonial exploitation? Do you mean that the Geneva "plans" have ever got further than paper—or that they are likely to? Do you mean that this "understanding" can be arrived at thru the I. L. O.?

Are you, a "Left-Winger," ignorant—or are you shamming ignorance—of the fact, well known to hundreds of thousands of workers, that the I. L. O. is merely a part of the decorations of the League of Nations—the latest capitalist device for preventing world peace?

You say that, when there is a labor government again, "we (who? MacDonald? Clynes? Thomas?) shall create a Commonwealth of partner nations, in place of the Empire founded on force. That sounds very fine; but you also say, a line or two higher up: "We shall not assist in breaking up the British Empire." Now how do you reconcile these statements, George Lansbury?

Are you ignorant, or do you sham ignorance, of the fact that the vast majority of the Indian people (capitalists, workers, and peasants) want independence, and that the same applies to Ceylon and Egypt? Are you aware that in 1919 and 1920 rising in these three countries were drowned in blood by British Imperialism?

And would you kindly tell us what you are going to do when these nations demand independence from your government, and, being disappointed, take up arms against you?

And will you usher in your Labor Government by withdrawing the armed forces from all these territories, as the visible sign that they are not "free partners"? Or does you hatred of bloodshed not carry you as far as this very obvious way of preventing it?

And then you say that the Bolsheviks, "faced with the Russian Empire, claim that they gave freedom of choice to Georgia, the Ukraine, Finland, Poland, etc." What exactly do you mean to insinuate, George Lansbury? Did they or did they not work for independence of the subject peoples, years before the fall of Tsardom? Did they or did they not actually give freedom of choice? Why not speak out in the language of the capitalist press and Emma Goldman, if that is what is in your mind? Or, if it is not in your mind, why use such ambiguous language?

Can it be, George Lansbury, that you want to hide the ambiguity of your own position thereby? Can it be that you want to lead the workers by using phrases that sould revolutionary, while at all costs preventing them from drawing revolutionary conclusions? We shall be sorry to think so, George Lansbury. But what are we to think of your suggestion that British labor, out of the British Empire, should "create" a Commonwealth of Free Nations, or "replace" it by a Union of Free Nations—just as the Bolsheviks did with the Russian Empire—when you manage entirely to slur over that, as the experience of Russia shows, the first step towards your goal would invlove the break-up of the Empire as part of the overthrowing of the British capitalist class?

It is time we had some straightforward speaking from you, George Lansbury. That is what the workers need above all at the present time from those who claim to be their leaders!

The Politcal Situation in the Twin Cities

By JOHN GABRIEL SOLTIS.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 14.—Old man Mahoney of St. Paul, reports that somebody in Minneapolis is instituting a movement to reorganize Minneapolis "for practical political action, and free it from the visionary element which has sought to tie organized labor to a movement that has no attainable objective." That is to say, the left wing and the Communists, whom old man Mahoney considers it [illegible] sacred duty to misrepresent and villify. In this sense he is extremely practical, as a miserable tool in the hands of the democratic O'Connor's machine of St. Paul.

Labor Skates Worried.

Old man Mahoney deeclares that the reorganization move was dictated by the fact, that the disgraceful defeat of the Socialist-Laborites last June, has stirred the labor fakers. And so it has.

However, old man Mahoney tries to leave the impression, that the complete defeat of the laborites was in some way the result of their connections with the left wing and the Communists. This is a piece of sophistry, which would do honor to a Jesuit. Nothing is farther from the truth, and it is not Mahoney's mental senility that causes him to prevent the truth. It is something quite different. What are the political facts in this connection?

Proposed United Front.

First of all, the Workers (Communist) Party proposed a united front of all working class organizations, on the question of mayor and aldermanic candidates. This proposal did not entail the nomination of a Communist for a single office. It was an honest, genuine effort to solidify all the forces of Minneapolis labor, to fight the capitalists on the political front. Our united front proposition was not only turned down, but ignored entirely. The capitalists were feeding Mahoney's Minneapolis allies, raw meat which made them spunky. They slammed the door in the face of the left wing.

Supported Capitalist Hacks.

Instead of putting up a united front labor candidate for mayor, and thus yielding to the desires of the rank and file, the labor fakers headed by the versatile alderman, Bastis, supported capitalist candidates for mayor. To forestall this plain treachery, the Communists entered their own candidate.

In the political estimation of men like Mahoney and Bastis, in order to elect the socialist laborites, an alliance had to be struck with the capitalists, the basis of which was a common fight on the Communists. They thus thot that they would insinuate themselves into the good graces of the capitalist class. Their mercenary political character, suffered, as do all such fellows, from spherical aberration.

In the elections not a single left winger, not one Communist was active, for the simple reason that circumstances in the control of Mahoney's co-workers, made it out of the question, beyond the issuance of a general statement.

Splitting the Working Class.

The situation was this: The socialist laborites were hammering the Communists for no apparent reason at all. While they were doing that, they were deliberately splitting the working class and preparing their own ignominous rout. In reality, when they slammed the door in our face, they left themselves on the outside. No traps which the capitalists set for them, Mr. Albert Bastis, their distinguished trader, led them into it blindly.

It must also be remembered that practically all of the now ex-aldermen of the laborite ilk, were elected on the basis of waging a sharp class struggle fight. In those days of victory, even I. W. W.'s participated in pushing their elections. They won all along the line. The working class was aroused to a pitch of real class enthusiasm. However, good signs, fine booze and shady political and other deals, combined with a total lack of understanding the mechanics of the class struggle, separated them from the left wing.

Power on Increase.

It is significant, is it not, that before the days of red baiting, when all elements of labor acted in the united front, our political power was constantly on the increase; our economic arm was also strong. As a matter of fact, as any honest worker knows, it was the militant left wing of Minneapolis and the state, that promoted both political and economic solidarity. Precisely for these reasons, the capitalast class let loose its labor agents, to destroy this left wing, if possible. It is the labor fakers who are destroying the solidarity of the Minneapolis workers, and the rank and file is aware of it.

Holding Fake Conferences.

Since Mahoney and his allies have joined the camp of the red-baiters, there is no end of fake conferences held by the gentry. Last March Mahoney held one in St. Paul, to eliminate the farm-labor federation. It was too proletarian to suit them. A hand-picked delegation of discredited and self-seeking politicians made up that pow-wow. But the rank and file of farmers and workers have not flocked to the program cooked up at that meeting.

Minneapolis is as clean of the farm-labor association, as Mahoney is of socialism. No artifical conference of red-baiters will instill the workers with confidence in it. The workers demand a labor party, with a left wing leadership and a labor party they shall have! The future is ours!

THE BRICK

What is Truth?
What is Truth?
asked smilingly the World's Tyrant of those who had said he was the World's Great Lie?

There was instant confusion in the intellectual ranks; the bookmen, the poets, the clever cynics withdrew in confusion; they could not answer the Tyrant, for they were lies, too; and their wisdom was empty, and a lie; their books were lies.

There was silence and pessimism and confusion in the world, until a great workingman suddenly grabbed a simple Brick that lay near the throne of the world, and slung it at the head of the tyrant, and hugely laughed, ho! ho! ho! here is Truth, o tyrant!

This Brick is Truth!
Red as life blood, red as the earth from which wheat grows.
Hard as fate, hard as the laws of science.
Useful and wonderful.
Foundation of dreams.
Pavement.
Stuff of sewers.
Stuff of immense living skyscrapers.
Material of barricades.
A joke, a coarse, bold workingman's laugh flung at the head of dilletantes and cowards.
Hard, real, useful, universal.
Dangerous, humorous slugger of Tyranny and Lies.
This Brick is Truth, o Tyrant!

The Picture and the Film in the Revolutionary Movement

By WILLY MUENZENBERG.

ARTICLE II.

NUMEROUS means for agitation and propagandation of the Communist idea are at the disposal of the Communist Parties and organizations; the spoken word in mass meetings, factory meetings, demonstrations, etc. The printed word thru leaflets, papers, manifestos, magazines, pamphlets, and books. These means have been in use since the first days of the working class movement.

Besides these means firmly established thru decades of use, more and more, altho slowly and against opposition, the picture is taking its place in Communist agitation and propaganda. Up to two years ago the picture was virtually ignored in Communist literature. It was seldom that in a book or any kind of pamphlet a picture was used to support and emphasize the text. In no daily paper, in no youth organ, in no woman's paper was it used. Fortunately this situation within the past two years, had been largely improved and more and more the picture serves the Communist daily, magazine, women's paper, etc., to liven up the text—altho still in regretfully limited extent.

OUR enemy controls in Germany alone more than hundreds of variegated illustrated papers, and in Berlin alone there appear every day numerous papers with special pictorial supplements. It is unquestionably necessary and desirable that pictures be utilized in Communist papers to a far greater extent than heretofore. The picture is most tellingly effective upon the children, youth, on the primitively thinking, unorganized, indifferent masses of workers, agricultural labor, small peasants and similar groups. Coincident with the illustrations in the dailies, youth and children's organs, women's and peasants' papers, we must unquestionably tackle the development of the illustrated workers' paper.

Right in the factory an illustrated paper is far easier to sell to an indifferent fellow worker than is a theoretical pamphlet. We must make it possible to combat the stupifying influence of the bourgeois illustrated journals that are now circulated in the millions.

Besides the creation and development of the illustrated labor paper the picture must be fully utilized for our propaganda, by means of photos, cards, picture collections, etc. Particularly for the popularizing of the leaders of the Communist International, for the combatting of the hero-worship toward bourgeois leaders and military figures, and above all, in the education and agitation work on behalf of Soviet Russia the picture can and shall render priceless service.

A further extension of the use of the picture is seen in the stereoptican slide lecture, which in the rural sections of Germany and Czecho-Slovakia, where they have thus far been most used, have had best results. These slides make it possible to present in most convincing and plastic form such themes as the economic upbuilding of Soviet Russia, the life of the Russian worker and peasant, the children's homes in Soviet Russia, the Red army, etc.

ON all these fields a start, altho perhaps, a humble one, has already been made. But next to nothing has been done to put the film into the arsenal of agitation and propaganda weapons of the Communist Parties. Quite properly the enlarged executive of the Comintern in March, 1925, called attention to this shortcoming, and instructed all affiliated parties to concern themselves much more than formerly in turning this weapon to their service. Leading comrades of the International have repeatedly and emphatically pointed out the tremendous significance of the film propaganda.

Vladimir Ilitch Lenin, in a conversation with Comrade Lunacharski, said: "You must powerfully develop film production, taking especially the proletarian kino to the city masses and in still a much greater extent to the village. You must always consider that of all the arts the motion picture is for us the most important."

A statement from Comrade Zinoviev on the motion picture: "The motion picture in the possession of the bourgeoisie is the strongest means for the betrayal and befuddling of the masses. In our hands it can and must become a mighty weapon of Communist propaganda and for the enlightenment of the widest working masses."

N. A. SEMASCHKO, Peoples' Commisar for Health, ". . . the kino gives a vital and accurate picture full of life and true to life, it can agitate thru the Fable, thru the picturization. These circumstances enhances the value of this form of propaganda also in the protection of public health, for today, with the widespread increased popular interest in world questions, with the prevailing universal nervous tension, dry discourses and lectures on public health, no matter how learned they may be, cannot always get to the heart of their audience."

A. V. Lunacharsky, Commissar for Public Education: ". . . The kino proves itself extremely vital. We possess mostly a very busy and highly promising production, but altho we have decided upon a salvation bringing unification of all motion picture activity in the U. S. S. R., and particularly in the R. S. F. S. R., our steps in carrying out this decision are hesitant and uncertain."

K. Woroschilow, commander of the Red Army in the Moscow military district, "The motion picture, as a cultural plane (the carpenter's tool), has won itself a place of honor in the U. S. S. R. It is no less popular in the Red Army than among the worker and peasant masses."

CLARA ZETKIN writes concerning the significance of the film in the Communist propaganda: "On no account can the Communist movement ignore the propaganda power of the motion picture. For it seeks its followers in first instance from those strata deprived of educational opportunity and barred from books, it must call out the foreign-speaking colonial peoples against their masters, and unite the proletariat of all lands. The film is particularly significant for the Soviet Union. Czarism left a heritage of illiteracy and feudalism. Soviet Russia includes great primitive, but culture hungry masses, speaking hundreds of varying tongues. Here the film is a means of popular education of tremendous importance, a tool for the raising of productivity, a weapon in the struggle against unhealthy habits of living, and against plagues, a disseminator of knowledge, an educator, a bringer of culture and happiness."

Let us value to film by the great propagandistic, cultural possibilities that it contains.

When we think of the masses that daily, in city and tiny village, fill the movie theaters, and that of those eighty to ninety per cent are workers or closely connected with the workers, and when we consider further the effect of these pictures upon the masses, knowing their power of mass suggestion, then we welcome indeed the decision and pledge of the Communist Party for the full utilization of this means. To make available and use the film as a means of winning support, in support of our efforts at enlightening the working masses, is the most pressing task of Communist propaganda and agitation. The film can, for instance, be employed for the unmasking and gibbeting of our opponents, in showing the development of the social-democratic party from the first beginnings under Marx and Engels down to the Barmat circle in Hotel Bristol. The effect of such a film can be appraised when one remembers the effect of even only a series of stereoptican slides, dealing with this same subject, during the recent reichstag elections.

THE same applies to a film to meet the militarist and monarchist propaganda prejudice films with a true exposition of the old Russian militarism, showing the torture in the barracks, the beastly treatment of the soldiers, and the grewsome horror of the war. In districts where the clericals are especially strong, a film showing the horrors of the medieval inquisition, would surely not fail of effect on the hitherto loyal supporters of the Zentrum.

But not only against the enemy can our film be directed, it also bears the possibility to present positively the aims and struggles of the Communist movement and of the revolutionary workers' organizations. There can be no doubt, that a film showing the life of a youth, beaten in school, mistreated by teachers, suffers, hungers, and finally comes into contact with the Communist Youth Movement where he finds defense, protection, support, of his interests, is drawn into the mass movement, learns the meeting routine, takes part in demonstrations, etc.; such a film would surely exert suggestive power upon thousands of juveniles and bring great crowds of them closer to the Communist movement.

THE same applies to a film showing the life story of a worker, returned from the war, plunged into the maelstrom of the November events, and on the barricades of Berlin defends his family and his class. Or a really extensive picture along the lines of the Griffith film, "Intolerance," recreates historical periods of revolutionary upheaval, beginning with Spartacus, the peasant uprisings, Thomas Munzers, the great French Revolution, and closing with the great triumphant victory of the workers and peasants of Russia. In the factories or after working hours we could show the workers by means of trick film the constant lowering of their living conditions, of the actual lowering of their wages in conparison to the rising prices, and thus demonstrate the actual working out of bourgeois control of politics and industry.

There are hundreds of motives and objects that can be utilized in film propaganda. We are not oblivious to the colossal censorship difficulties, technical and organizational obstacles, that stand in the way of all these suggested plans. Much ground would already be won if we could put every Communist Party and organization into a position to show a monthly film chronicle of the most important happenings in Soviet Russia, and thus to bring the development of this strongest prop of the international proletarian and revolutionary movement into the clear vision of the masses. Good and valuable as our present agitational and propaganda media, the spoken or printed word, may be, their effect would be tremendously increased if they could be combined with the up-to-date medium of the film.

THERE must no longer be any country in which the Communist Party and its groups do not make extensive propagandist use of the motion picture film.

When Workers Fight For Capitalists.

To the Daily Worker:—It takes very little shrapnel to make a nasty mess of ones anatomy; but it takes an awful lot of perseverance on the part of a disabled veteran to impress this fact on the government doctors, and, if possible, weedle a little compensation out of them. I was one of the poor suckers that got mixed up on the wrong end of the recent conflict. My share of the spoils of war was one fine assortment of wounds—the result of a personal contact with a three-inch shell. One in the side has been particularly troublesome, and has made a serious dent in my otherwise sweet and cheerful disposition.

I had no idea how really well off I happen to be, however, until I went to the veterans' bureau to be examined for a permanent disability rating. This is what took place: One doctor after another, as I was being examined, took great pains to impress me with my entire unworthiness. In fact they as much as implied that I had one helluva nerve to be looking for money from our dear government, just because I happened to be shot up a bit. They told me I was extremely fortunate to get off as easily as I had—to have retained my arms, my lungs, etc., some fellows would consider themselves pretty lucky to be in my shoes—and more to that effect.

This is a stock gag with the M. D.'s. The idea of it is to put the veteran in such a frame of mind that when he goes before the rating board he'll be content if they hand him the minimum amount per month, no matter what's wrong with him.

Well, I finally reached the rating board. In our city this board is supposed to consist of their three best doctors, medical "best minds" as it were. (I'd hate to be treated by one one of their worst).

My first impression of the members of this board was by no means an ordinary one. No, indeed! I felt that here before me were three of the dopiest looking old codgers that had graced my sight in many a long year. That was my first impression. My last was even less favorable.

One of them woke up as I entered. He blinked at me a while and then nudged the guy next to him. They asked a few of the usual idiotic questions, whispered together a while, and then pronounced their momentous decision. The first was a German (hot stuff!). "Vell," he said, "I don't see how we could gif you more dan 10 per cent." That means 10 per cent disabled, and brings in the handsome sum of eight dollars a month.

Since they hadn't taken the trouble to look at my wounds as yet, I suggested that it wouldn't be a bad idea to do so before pronouncing their final decision. They didn't take this in very good part. It meant that one of them would have to stand up. However, he went thru with it, and they began to pull the old gag about how lucky I was to get off so easy, to still have my arms, etc. He started to compliment me on my good fortune in being able to get eight dollars a month, but he didn't get very far. I started to pass out a few compliments of my own. I think I succeeded in conveying to them some idea of the estimation in which I held their bureau, themselves, and their eight dollars a month. At any rate I actually woke up the third member of the rating board. Then I discovered why they have three members on that board; it is for protection, and they need it.

The three of them stood up, faced me bravely, and told me that they considered my language very much out of place, and that if I didn't pipe down they'd have me thrown out. I told them they'd have to throw me out or else give me a decent examination. They finally acquiesced and handed me an order to have some X-rays taken, with the promise that if the pictures showed my kidneys missing or a lung amputated they might increase my rating. Maybe they'll increase it one-half of one per cent. Well, it was a great war while it lasted.

Yours for world Communism,

Another Disabled Veteran.

The War Against Riffs and the Socialist Party of France

By ANDRE MARTY (Paris)

The Painleve government decided under the hypocritical formula: "Respect for treaties and the sovereignty of the Sultan!" (an insignificant puppet of the French government) to carry on war against the Riffs. It could not have been otherwise. When among the most important members of a ministry there are men such as Briand, an upstart adventurer, Caillaux, a typical banker, Schrameck, a born policeman and Steeg, a slaveholder, the hand of capital does not need to pull the wires very firmly with which it controls its marionettes, in order to guide them as it desires; a breath is sufficient.

Every bourgeois government of this country feels itself compelled to destroy the Riffs by military means and by the blockade, for the following chief reasons:

1. The greed of the banks desires at last to "bestow peace"—as they call it—on Morrocco, so that they can exploit it to their heart's content.

2. The free Republic of the Riffs would spur on all the oppressed Arabian peoples of North Africa, Morocco and Tunis to a revolutionary fight for freedom. This however would be a fearful blow to imperialism, especially to the French.

This is why the bourgeois government felt compelled at a moment's notice to carry on war to the end. The leaders of the socialist party (including Blum, Renaudel, Bedouce) who really belong to the left wing of the bourgeoisie, have joined in.

The attitude of the socialists was dictated by their anxiety to remain a government party. Why? Because since May 11, 1924, the socialist party (S. F. I. O.) has, with almost incredible rapidity, drawn close to the bourgeoisie.

When it became a government party, it attracted a large number of electors of the cartel who took their cards of membership not out of enthusiasm for the socialist party, but to innsure for themselves the protection of the mighty ones of the day. In numerous communities it has absorbed those "radical" elements, which form a number of election committees, but no party. Many young lawyers and young doctors "with a brilliant future" have joined the party and, in the majority of the socialist provincial sections, a "brilliant" general staff discusses policy from the point of view of merchants, which has nothing at all in common with the "empty and interminably long discussions of old Guesde who only began to realize the seriousness of the times in the fire of war." (These are the words of a young and "brilliant" advocate of the socialist party). As early as ten months ago—on the occasion of voting with regard to the secret funds—this development became clear in the eyes of those who are less informed. Today it alarms even the old socialists to such a degree that one of them (on June 12 in a leflet of the S. F. I. O.) writes as follows:

"It (the S. F. I. O.) is assuming more and more the aspect of a bourgeois democrat party of the left."

A dreadful saying, for it takes up again Zionviev's thesis, about which there was such a hue and cry years ago and accordinng to which social-democracy is classified as belonging to the left of the bourgeoisie and not to the right of the proletariat. (A proposal that party comrade of Renaudel may have been accused by Renaudel of having sold himself to Moscow.)

The socialist leaders are in a dillemma from which they see no issue.

The one possibility is for them to continue to support the government; in this case they risk losing their last labor elements which will go over to the Communists. Renaudel does not seem to mind very much, as he showed at the session of the chamber on May 27, when he said to our Comrade Doriot: "Let them go to you."

And Poucet, in order to emphasize his contempt for the working class added (session of the chamber on the 27th of May):

"We shall not lose much by it."

It does not matter to them if a few workers leave the party; the support of those in power today will bring them a number of new place-hunters which will exceed the number of those departing.

The other possibility is for them to join the opposition, then however they will become an election party and a void will be formed as they will have no chance of rising, the party will be discouraged, and the really revolutionary workers will, more than ever, go over to the Communists.

This is the reason for the vacillating, oscillating attitude of the socialist party since the end of May. Their fraction in parliament which is guiding them, and that dictatorially (see the last national council) has allowed its internal dissensions and its confusion in all votings since that of May 29, with regard to the Morocco question to become evident, on the one hand by violent disputes in the full hall of assembly as at the division on May 29 for the government (six refraining from voting), or especially at the session of June 16, when there were two socialist votes for the Communists, 84 abstained from voting and 17 gave nationalist votes (!). Finally at the last division on July 9 with regard to credits for the Morocco war, the socialists refrained from voting, but emphatically declared—thru Blum—that this indicated no lack of confidence in the government, and that they were opposed to the evacuation of Morocco.

Be it remarked that abstaining from voting is the normal refuge of those who are too cowardly to take sides. These persons who reproach the Communists with "thinking," funk a discussion in which it is a case of pronouncing a clear and consistent opinion on so simple a question as that of Morocco.

In recent times there has been talk of the formation of a "left" in the socialist party which is grouped around Bracke's periodical, Spark. This opinion has been confirmed by the fact that our press has published resolutions against Morocco which were signed by the socialist sections. The name "left" seems to me incorrect. The name, however, which was recently taken by a fraction of the socialist section of Beziers, is much more exact: "resisters." The group of Spark is really trying to "resist" Renaudel, but—in favor of Bracke. It feels that the party will be compelled to join the parliamentary opposition, as Painleve and Briand have contemptuously declared that they can do without the socialists. The financial projects of M. Caillaux which have been opposed to those of M. Vincent Auriol (socialist) are evidence of the poor opinion which the government has of the socialists.

In any case the support of the socialists is of no use to the government, indeed in a certain sense it interferes with the termination of the war; they are therefore turned out of the majority.

The "resisters" are therefore trying to overthrow Renaudel and to replace him by Bracke and Blum as they fear that the present tactics of the party will only bring them the real hostility of the working class and still more of the reformist trade unions of the industrial districts and will drive the workers to the revolutionary trade unions, to the C. G. T. U., or to the Communist Party, thus leaving the socialist party as a handful of intellectuals, functionaries and opportunist socialists, which would be equivalent to its decease.

If this new formation were a socialist left, if it were Marxist as it claims to be, it would not be content to demand peace in general terms, but it would have to demand the military evacuation of the colonies. It would not even have to make these demands according to Lenin, but simply according Paul Lafargue who, in 1883 wrote from the prison of Ste. Pelagie:

"The manufacturers travel thru the world to find markets for their accumulated goods, they compel their governments to annex the Congo, to tak possession of Tonkin, to make breach in the Chinese wall by canonade, in order to sell their cotton products there. In the last century there was a mortal duel between France and England as to which of the two should have the exclusive right of a market for its goods in America and India. Thousands of young strong men stained the sea red with their blood during the colonial wars of the 15th, 17th and 18th centuries.

"There is a surplus of capital as of goods. The financiers do not know where to invest it; they go therefore to the 'fortunate' nations and build railways for them, construct factories and bring them the curse of work. And this export of French capital ends one fine day in diplomatic complications; in Egypt, France, England and Germany were on the point of flying at one another in order to know which employer should be paid first; or by the war in Mexico whiter French soldiers were sent in order to get the debts paid thru armed intervention . . ."

If there were a Marxist left in the party of the S. F. I. O., they would on the strength of these words of Lafargue insist upon the application of the proposal of the federation of the S. F. I. O. of the Seine, dated May 10, 1911, i. e., the evacuation of the country of Fes.

But these brave socialist resisters do not even dare to demand that the right of self-determination of peoples should be observed for they are against the evacuation of "French" (!) Morocco. In order to justify this scandalous claim, they speak of the "rights earned by the French in their colonies." (Auguste Reynaud, du Var). Everyone knows that in the colonies the soil was taken from the natives by brute force. Only recently, last November, the "Petit Oranais" revealed the scanda: of the expropriation of the Zerruki tribe who, when it made claims before the administration of Mascara (Algiers), was simply driven back by the Spahis with fire-arms. Comrade Jacques Doriot in his brochure on the Morocco war has described how Captain Huot plundered the Bendjates in Morocco and then drove them off their own soil. In that the "left" does not demand the evacuation of Morocco, it condones the brutal exploitation of the colonial peoples. It tries to be pacifist and to draw the whole party into pacifism, but it recognizes the right to "protect" the colonies; it is therefore fundamentally imperialist and slave-trading.

Musings of a Communist Woman

By ANTOINNETTE KONIKOW.

"Votes for women" was once a great slogan. Women were deeply stirred by it and hoped with their votes to make this a better world.

It seems but yesterday when women on the street corners assured us that they will clean out the political stable, they will change the man-made world, they will abolish war! And now women have arrived! Ma Ferguson is governor of Texas, Mother Ross, governor of Wyoming, Ma Rogers represents the fifth Massachusetts district. Indeed—we hear of the rumors of the coming of Ma Curley (wife of our "pure in politics" Mayor Curley of Boston) and even "Mamma" Coolidge is suggested—

The capitalist woman in politics does not worry any more about convictions, abilities, policies. The main attributes of the great women on the political platform are "poise," "moderate speech," "a few good stories," "refined gowns," "appropriate flowers" and the measured merriment face of "Main Street" (the Mrs. Coolidge grin). Women who were to save the world—we find stamped and assorted by capitalist politicians!

We have another country where women are in politics. Women—Communist women had to make no separate struggle for votes, they got it together with the coming of the victorious revolution.

There women would not dare to appeal to voters on the deeds and reputations of their husbands. The greatest leader of the world, Lenin, left a widow. His name is fairly worshipped by millions of workers. But Comrade Krupskaya gets the love and admiration of the workers and peasants of Russia by her own great ability and earnest endeavors. Mostly she keeps in the background, coming forth only when called upon to give account of her own work.

The great mass of women in capitalist society is at present a tremendous help to the powers of reaction. Wherever votes for darkness are counted, women give the biggest number. Should we then regret to have women in politics? No, comrades, such attitude were folly! Woman can only change by personal experience. Life forced her from her home into the economic hell of self-support, experience opened her eyes to the needs of politics. The same pressure of suffering and exploitation will open her eyes to her own fallacy of supporting the old capitalist parties and the reactionary influence of the church.

Our agitation among women is of [illegible] importance. The working of economic necessity that will awaken the sleeping beauty, not with the kiss of a prince-charming, but with the whistle of the factory, the stinging insult from the bosses, the despair of looking for a job, the many hours of toil, and the crying of hungry babes.

Last week there was a business women's conference in Maine: "National Federation of Professional Women." Once fine ladies in parlors used to chat about their servants and maids. Now they are in business and apply their organizing abilities to the better exploitation of the white collared and manicured slave Men—capitalists had taken good care of factory workers in applying the black list, but somehow the pretty stenographers and clerks and the white collared gentlemen of the offices had been overlooked.

It took women to change "the man-made world" at least in this line. Better organization and efficiency must be brought about: the best white collared slave—oh no, not get higher wages, but will be honored by a "golden seal." The "golden seal" will be imprinted upon the willing white collared slave to whom life is but the boss' success. Hand in hand with the golden seal goes the blacklist, the regular way of controlling your help, as one of the business-ladies suggested. Good for you ladies! The "golden seal" will do more to awaken the white collared and manicured slave than many of our speeches!

"Votes for women" will work not thru the ladies with the capitalist mind, but thru the woman-worker. Let her only realize her power. She will arrive!

JOINT ACTION COMMITTEE CALLS RARY STOPPAGE IN SHOPS A NING TO MANUFACTURERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ITY, Aug. 16.—The whole cloak and dress industry of t city has been called upon by the Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, to stop work next Thursday, August 20, at 3 o'clock. The workers will gather in 10 of the largest halls thruout the city and there discuss a general stoppage thruout the industry.

Thursday's meeting is called not only to reiterate the demands of these locals for re-instatement of their officers, for the resignation of President Sigman, and for re-organization of the Joint Board, but it is a particular protest against the interference of the manufacturers in this internal union quarrel.

Going to Call Sigman Bluff.

In behalf of the Joint Committee of Action, Louis Hyman, the chairman, issued the following statement this afternoon:

"From the beginning of our fight with the machine of the Joint Board, we have demonstrated that 60 per cent of the members have renounced their affiliation with the Joint Board, that they are with us, and refuse to recognize that the Joint Board any longer has a moral or legal right to talk for the workers and act as their representatives.

"The discredited officials have used all means in their power to force the workers to recognize them and to take orders from them; but it has all been in vain. The workers would not under any circumstances have anything to do with them. They never elected them and they are not going to be forced to recognize leaders who have captured the offices with the aid of strong-arm men.

Manufacturers Lined Up with Joint Board.

"Their main supporters are the manufacturers who are doing everything in their power to force the workers to recognize these self-appointed officers. The Dress Manufacturing association sent out letters to their members asking them not to engage any workers who have not working cards signed by the appointed manager of the Joint Board, and not to deliver any mail to the chairman except that sent from the Joint Board office. Also hundreds of cases have been reported to us where the association threatened to expel from the organization their own members who were unwilling to discharge their workers for refusing to go to the Joint Board and pay dues. In our opinion such tactics are not only unfair but criminal.

A Warning.

"As a protest against this interference of the manufacturers in our internal union affairs, and their efforts to dictate to our workers what officials they shall recognize and where they shall pay dues, we have decided to ask the workers to stop work on Thursday, August 20th, at 3 o'clock, as a warning to the manufacturers to keep hands off.

"The workers will gather in ten of the largest halls in the city and there discuss the necessity of calling a general stoppage thruout the whole cloak and dress industry to prevent the manufacturers from taking advantage of the present situation to take away the rights and reduce the standards of the workers.

"Thursday's stoppage will also demonstrate, once more, that the vast membership of the union stands with us in this fight, and both employers and union officials will be forced to recognize the fact and act accordingly."

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE so-called Americanization committee of the American legion is all het up over a Communist school which gave a course in economics during the months of June and July in the state of Wisconsin. Stoolpigeons were employed by the legion to get the goods on the Communist school. And they did. They learned that the pupils were taught that capitalism was bad and should be done away with. This pernicious doctrine, it appears, was kept a dark secret by the Communists according to the finks of the legion, and it was only by strenuous and clever work on the part of the detectives that the conspiracy was exhumed.

THE legion, in order to deserve the Dupont powder trust's subsidy is planing to make war on Communist propaganda. It seems we heard that threat somewhere before. This is not novel and it is not funny. The funny thing is the comment made by the Milwaukee Leader, a socialist paper, on the determination of the legion to wipe out Communism. It says that the legion used the wrong methods to crush Communism. To quote: "The American legion should not bother itself so much about that Communist school somewhere in Wisconsin. If the American legion and others would help the socialists to improve conditions in this country, there would not be any Communists to deal with."

THERE you are. A socialist paper invites the scabby legion to unite with it in blocking Communism. American workers who have not followed the history of the socialist parties of Europe may express surprise at this attitude on the part of the only socialist daily in the United States. But Ramsay MacDonald politely welcomed Mussolini's regime. The German socialists supported the Dawes plan. The French socialists are supporting the war in Morocco and the Bulgarian socialists helped Zankov spring the traps that broke the necks of the Communist and agrarian leaders of the working class. The American socialists are only living true to type.

THE governor of Ohio, recently pardoned or paroled 22 state prisoners. Those prisoners were convicted of most everything from shooting craps to manslaughter. The governor did not pardon Dominic Venturato, a miner who is in jail as a result of participation in a strike. The greatest crime in the eyes of capitalist officials is loyalty of a worker to his class.

RECENT railway accidents in France are attributed to Bolshevik propaganda. The effect of the propaganda is so amazing that the engineers become indifferent and let their trains fly over curves and jump ditches at will. This is almost as ridiculous as the order given by the Greek police to people attempting suicide. Unless they warn the police of their intentions, they may be punished severely. But what if they succeed?

THE Baroness Mildred de Vryes Van Doseburg secured a divorce from her husband, whose name is eqally long, on the ground that he was too noble. "To beg he was ashamed and to work he was not able." His wife did not see any fun in lugging a string of empty words around, particularly as she was getting weak with hunger. It is a bad era for indigent nobles.

EVERY navy in the world is behind the navy of some other country. The British sea lords say that their navy is behind the United States navy. The American rear admirals, who won the title from their constant use of a swivel chair, declare loudly that unless this country wakes up, and puts up the dough, our navy—that is, J. P. Morgan's navy—will be behind the Japanese navy. This kind of thing will go on until a war breaks out, when suddenly all those navies become superior to each other. Then, if somebody with an incurable mania for saying what he remembers, tells the world that the navy of the country in which he is incarcerated, is inferior to some other navy, into the can he goes.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN left part of the fortune he amassed during his lifetime of war against the "vested interests of Wall Street" for the erection of a monument to his memory. The following is suggested for his epitaph:

Here lies the body of William J. Bryan,
For a nickel he'd fight
He would kill for a dime
Of brains he had none
His head was a stew
The fact is this monument
Should be in the zoo.

Pressmen and Assistants Unions in Chicago Unite for Joint Action

AGREE ON PACT FOR STRUGGLE AGAINST FOES

Berry's Tools Try to Block Alliance

With a thundering roar of ayes against the weak squawk of two of "Majah" George L. Berry's tools, a joint meeting of locals 3 of the Pressmen and 4 of the feeders, voted last Saturday afternoon to join forces in a working alliance for common action against the employers and in defense of militant trades unionism against the traitorous head of the international union, George L. Berry and his subservient board of directors.

The hall in which the meeting was held, the People's Institute, was packed to the doors, with a determined body of pressmen and feeders when the president of the pressmen took the gavel and declared the meeting open. With the treachery of Berry and his finks in the Cuneo strike fresh in their minds, the men were anxious to get down to business. Also on the platform was President Crambert of the Feeders' Union. Crambert is a Berry tool and tried to betray the Cuneo strikers into going back to work under scab conditions. Crambert and another official of the Feeders' Union, were the only two that voiced opposition to the alliance between the two unions.

Plan for Joint Action.

The meeting was called especially for the purpose of presenting a proposed plan for joint action by the two unions, in wage disputes and in the drawing up of wage scales. A committee of six from each union, consisting of three officials and three laymen from each drew up the plan.

It was rumored that "Majah" Berry was hiding somewhere in the vicinity hoping for a chance to butt in and pull the wool over the eyes of the members. But he evidently thot discretion was the better part of valor.

JACQUES SADOUL IS FREED BY VERDICT OF FRENCH COURT

PARIS, Aug. 16—Jacques Sadoul has been freed by the French court. This third attempt at his life by the French government has also failed. The death penalty has been dropped and he was declared not guilty.

The third charge like the second and the first was treason to the French government because Sadoul showed sympathetic understanding of the Soviet Government of Russia. The acquittal came when the prosecuting judge tried to ascertain whether France was at war with Russia at that time. The answer had to be no, and since the two countries were not involved in war at that time, the conviction was declared void and Sadoul definitely declared not guilty.

BERRY'S FUNNY RACE FOR THE U. S. PRESIDENCY

Thot He'd Get in Like Strikebreaker "Cal"

This is the fourth of a series of articles exposing the record of George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, as a betrayer of labor and tool of the publishers.

When "Majah" George L. Berry hung out his sign and offered himself as a candidate for the presidency of the United States on the democratic or jackass ticket, he made of himself the laughing stock of the country. The capitalists of the United States are not yet in the condition that would compel them to select anybody associated with the labor movement to fool the workers into the belief that a representatives of theirs was running the country, as the British ruling class did when they allowed the faker, Ramsay MacDonald, to take over the reins of government.

Berry had broken so many strikes, that he thot he was another Calvin Coolidge. "Cal" reached the White House, owing to the publicity he got for helping to break the policemen's strike in Boston in 1919. Really, he took too much credit. The responsibility for the fiasco rested with Sam Gompers, who first gave the policemen a charter and then got cold feet when the employers raised the cry of alarm. Gompers betrayed the strikers and they lost. The result was that several hundreds of men lost their jobs and Coolidge saw to it that they never got them back. This is what happens to policemen when they do the manly thing and line up with the workers instead of doing as they usually do, act as strikebreakers. This is what the Chicago police are doing just now in the Amalgamated strike—taking orders from the International

UNION WATCH MAKERS LIBEL HUMBLE SKUNK

United Garment Scabs Not in Dictionary

By CELIA MERSON.
Worker Correspondent.

At a general meeting of the Watch and Clock Makers' Union held last Thursday night, a resolution condemning the scabbery of the United Garment Workers' Union in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers strike was unanimously adopted.

The attitude taken by the officials of the American Federation of Labor in relation to the strikebreaking activity of the U. G. W. was denounced in terms unmistakeable during the discussion.

Said one of the speakers: "Skunk is too polite a name for an individual who consciously scabs on a job, but when a whole organization does it, it is an outrage that an up-to-date dictionary runs short of describing."

K. K. K. AND FARRINGTON AGENTS STARTED RIOT; KLUXER IN JAIL FOR MORTALLY WOUNDING MINER

(By Worker Correspondence.)

ZEIGLER, Ill., Aug. 16.—The ku klux klan is revealed as the co-conspirator with the Farrington gang in starting trouble once more in Zeigler Local Union 992 of the United Mine Workers, from which trouble the shooting and rioting of Tuesday evening arose.

When Farrington's henchmen in the sub-district, led by Sub-District Vice-President D. B. Cobb, deposed the officers of the local by the request of the coal company, the miners of No. 1 mine refused to work.

Some of those who are willing to work regardless of the conditions, went to West Frankfort and got a letter from Sub-District President Lon Fox, instructing the local union secretary to call a meeting at 8:30 p. m.

Klan and Fakers Combine.

About 7 p. m. or 8 p. m. carloads of the ku klux klan drove out of Zeigler toward West Frankfort. later they returned to the meeting, bringing with them Sub-District President Fox, and Vice-president Cobb, board member, Hindman, who is also head of the West Frankfort Trades and Labor Assembly, and another board member named Babbington.

Fox, at the meeting, stuttered around about the contract and the "100 per cent support the men always get from the sub-district officials," but he could not get a single response from the men. They knew him from bitter experience. They gave him a hearing, that was all. He proposed that new officers be elected to take the place of those deposed.

Then Cobb tried to say something. But he made a miserable mess out of it. The men knew that what he said was a lie from start to finish. Then board member Babbington tried to convince the men that the officers were working their heads off for the miners. He also failed to convince anyone.

Alliance With Company Exposed.

Corbishley, the deposed local president then took the floor and for 20 minutes told the miners of Zeigler how things had been done, and produced a hand full of letters and decisions from which he proved his points. He showed that the members of this local union have been handled just as the coal company wanted them to be handled, with the full knowledge and support of the officials of the sub-district and the district.

After Fox had again failed to get the men to elect new officers in place of those whom he had deposed, he got to the point of saying that he would appoint officers of the local if the men would not elect them.

Adjourn Meeting.

Then Stanley Pauray, assistant pit-committeeman, gave about 20 minutes more real exposure of the officials, and told the men they must stnad by those who had fought for them at every opportunity, that such a thing as electing new officers was out of the question and that the men should remain out until the coal company recognized the regularly elected union officials.

The miners seemed to be to a man against electing officers, so the meeting was adjourned.

Official Fakers Blacklisted Union Members.

But while the men were leaving the hall, an ex-checkweighman named Wilson hit an old man named Farthing, knocking him down. A general rough and tumble fight ensued, Sub-District Vice-President Cobb using a black jack until it was taken away from him. This black jack is retained by the miners as evidence of Cobb's kind intentions toward the membership of the U. M. W. of A.

Cobb lost his black jack but he found a good round beating as did President Fox, and Cobb will be getting his mail at the hospital for some time.

Klansman Fires Revolver.

The brave and valorous K. K. K. beat it hot foot for the most part, getting safely away and leaving Fox and Cobb to battle by themselves, tho the fact that they had come there armed to support these fakers is clear.

But one of the K. K. K. fired a shot, which went completely thru a miner named Mike Sarovich and lodged in the Sub-District Board Member Hindman. It must be said that Hindman is reported to be a fairly decent man and miners regret that he should suffer along with their own valued union brother, Sarovich.

Kluxer in Jail.

The kluxer who fired the shot has been lodged in jail. Several miners witnessed that he was the one, told the officers and he was taken in custody. This is the same character who refused to sign the local union election returns last December when the district executive board of Farrington removed the officials so the K. K. K. could steal the elections.

Miner May Die.

Sarovich, the rank and file miner, is not expected to live. He had to undergo an immediate operation and some 30 inches of intestines were removed. Also his bladder was torn by the K. K. K. bullet. His recovery is doubtful

Zeigler is otherwise quiet, but the men are not working. When asked what they would do if Farrington took their local union charter, they reply that at present it doesn't amount to much anyway, and unless the officials give them some support the charter is not worth while keeping.

The miners say that they will not go back to work until their local officers are recognized, and they demand as well the removal of the general superintendent of the mine, Paul Weir. He is almost wholly responsible for the violation of the contract, as he refused to comply with it and the decisions reached under it.

BRITISH BLACK SHIRTS PLAN WAR ON LABOR

Mine Leader Accepts Class War Challenge

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Tenseness of feeling over the coal situation continues despite the tentative settlement and Scotland Yard today was called upon to investigate a threat to A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation.

"We are ready for you and your dupes," the warning read. "We long for the day to cleanse the country of such blackmailers, and we are now 500,000 strong.

"This is the first of three warnings."

The threat was scrawled across a pamphlet put out by the British fascists. It referred to the recent subsidy granted by the Baldwin government to the miners upon their threat to tie up all British industry by a nation-wide strike.

The British fascisti are a force which seems to be steadily increasing in number and just before the coal strike was adjusted a fortnight ago came into daily conflict with the organized miners in Hyde Park and wherever the two opposing forces met. The warning, which the London police are now investigating, serves once more to emphasize the continual clashes between the radical labor leaders and the forces of conservatism represented by the Baldwin government with its overwhelming tory majority in the house of commons.

Cook Storm Center.

Cook has long been a storm center in British politics because of the radical nature of his comments. He is now engaged in a verbal controversy with Sir William Joynson Hicks, home secretary, showing how far apart are the miners and owners, who appear to have the tacit support of the government.

"The miners will not be satisfied, and there will be no peace in industry until wages at least are equal to the cost of living," declared Cook. A vain hope under capitalism.

"In order to compete with the world either the conditions of labor, hours, or wages will have to be altered in this country," declared Sir William.

"Whatever the result of this coal inquiry may be, there cannot be, and there must not be, any further bolstering up of the miners at the expense of other industries.

"Every trade in the country depends upon cheap coal, and unless we can get it we may subsidize until all is blue, and yet the trade of England will go down The miners must understand."

"WE declare emphatically that we have witnessed the devotion of the masses of the Russian people to the Soviet Union."—German Social-Democrat, Offenhagen, in speech at Kharkov, Soviet Ukraine, July 27, 1925.

POLISH TERROR SEEKS LIVES OF THREE WORKERS

Wounded by Police, to Be Court Martialed

(Special IRA Cable to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 16. — A court martial will be held for the Communists Gibner, Rudkovsky and Knievsky, who were attacked and wounded recently on the streets of Warsaw by agents of the Polish secret police. The white terror prosecutor has asked the death sentence for these three workers and their murder is impending.

The three Communists were fired upon by the police, and all were wounded. Several of the police were also injured in the firing. The Communists were taken to prison, were beaten and tortured in an effort to force them sign a "confession" which they refused to do.

The shooting of the Communists was followed by police raids on workers' homes, and one thousand workers were arrested, including four members of the Young Communist League charged with carrying on agitation in the army.

Comrade Turovitch is also to be court martialed.

Prisoners Rebel.

LUTSK—150 political prisoners in a compound in Volinia rebelled against the unbearable conditions they are forced to live under. A battalion of the army was called out and without warning fired into the crowd of prisoners. One was killed and many wounded.

Demonstrate For Lanzutski.

WARSAW—Word that Stanislav Lanzutski was to be tried the second time after he won his first court battle at Przemysl several months ago, passed like wild-fire thru the working class quarter here and caused several large demonstration of protest to be held. One was dispersed by the police. But another, despite police interference was successfully held in the yard of the recently closed headquarters of the building workers' union. Three Communist members of the Sejm addressed the meeting.

Hang Out Red Flags.

The police brot up a large reserve force and because of the battle that took place, continuation of the meeting was impossible. The workers then showed their determination by hanging red flags from houses and telephone wires.

More Trials Coming.

After the present trial in Warsaw, Lansutski will still be required to face another court here and then go to Lodz to answer to charges there which accuse him of calling upon the peasants not to pay taxes.

Neither did his tools, vice-presidents, Marks and McHugh, show up. Berry's business was attended to by Crambert of the feeders who was repeatedly howled off the platform, when he persistently objected to speakers who struck home some telling truth about the corruption of the reactionaries who are on the Berry payroll.

Tho the Cuneo lockout is one of the most important that ever confronted the two unions in Chicago, it was only after they first had the matter of unity settled that the meeting proceeded to discuss the Cuneo strike. Several speakers expressed the hope that the step taken at Saturday's meeting was only the beginning of a movement to amalgamate the entire printing industry. Berry is doing his level best to prevent the various unions from getting together. It is expected that the two unions, in New York, the pressmen and the assistants will follow the example of Pressmen's No. 3 and Franklin Union No. 4 in Chicago.

Fight to Go On.

The fight against the Cuneo open shop scheme is now going to proceed in real earnest. Officials of Pressmen No. 3 assured the members that the union had the funds to carry on the struggle until Cuneo was forced to surrender. It developed that Berry's tools in Chicago, with headquarters at 181 West Washington street have been bringing in scabs from other cities. Members of the Pressmen's Union have been approached with offers of good jobs with the Cuneo company and also jobs as organizers if they betrayed their fellow workers. But these union men spurned the offers of the strikebreakers.

The members of the two unions involved with the Cuneo Printing company are elated over their action at Saturday's meeting. Everybody with the exception of the two officials of the Franklin Union No. 4 declared that it was the best day's work ever done by the two organizations.

Reichstag Passed Tariff Bill.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—The Reichstag yesterday passed the tariff bill.

FARRINGTON TREACHERY TO COAL MINERS PROVEN IN COLD TYPE OF ILLEGAL AGREEMENT HE MADE

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

ARTICLE XVII.

The class collaboration policy of Farrington is clearly shown in the following treacherous agreement which was made in direct violation of the present contract.

The present district agreement provides that no change can be made in it that will add to the cost of production or decrease the earning capacity of the miners. Yet in spite of its terms, Farrington deliberately violates it by entering into a new contract without the consent of the miners.

Proof.

The new agreement once again proves the truth of the Progressive Miners' Committee's statement, that Farrington is one of the greatest traitors the miners have ever been cursed with. The following agreement explains itself:

"Chicago, Illinois, July 21, 1925.

"We, the undersigned commission appointed by action of the two organizations to handle case 9960 coming from the No. 10 mine of the Illinois Coal corporation at Nason, have gone over the data taken by Messrs. Smith and Shaw and having had numerous meetings in Chicago to consider this case have agreed today that the following agreement shall govern at this mine:

"1. THIS AGREEMENT shall be effective August 1, 1925, and continue for the period of the present State Wage Agreement.

"2. On account of new system of mining and working conditions, it is impractical and inadvisable to put this mine on a straight tonnage basis.

"3. Rates of pay in territories being developed for or operated by conveyor or mechanical loading shall be as follows:

"(A) Snubbing, drilling and tamping, either by hand or mechanically—$8.04 per day.

"(B) Shoveling coal on conveyors at the face—$8.04 per day. (With the understanding that the coal shall be drilled and shot by the company, and that the company shall furnish the necessary tools for the proper loading of the coal.)

"(C) Operating coal cutting machines—$8.54 per day. (It being understood that if coal cutting is not available other work will be performed for the time the mine is in operation for the remainder of the shift to be paid for at the above rate.

"(D) Operating Mechanical Conveyors at Loading Head—$7.50 per day. Assistants and others working at Loading Head—$7.25 per day.

"(E) Oiling Conveyors, cleaning up around conveyors, adjusting and cleaning sprays—$7.25 per day.

"(F) Work in connection with assembling, moving and repairing conveyors, when done by other than shovelers—$7.50 per day.

"(G) Men operating mechanical coal loading machines, whether loading into mine cars or upon conveyors—$10.07 per day. (When such men load coal with mechanical loaders, it should be understood that if mechanical coal loading is not available other work will be performed for the time the mine is in operation for the remainder of the shift to be paid for at the above rate, with the further understanding that on the days when such men do no mechanical loading and are given other work, they shall be paid the regular scale of wages for the class of work performed.

"(H) Shoveling into mine cars in territories being developed for conveyor or mechanical loading—$8.04 per day. (With the understanding that the coal shall be drilled and shot by the company, and that the company shall furnish the necessary tools for the proper loading of the coal.

"(I) Shoveling on conveyors in territories being developed for mechanical loading—$8.04 per day, it being understood that shovelers will move and operate their own conveyor when called upon.

"4. All main entries, panel entries, or room and pillar work, which may be driven by hand loading, not in connection with development for operation by conveyor or mechanical loading, shall be paid for on a tonnage basis, and shall be governed by the Franklin County Tonnage and yardage rates.

SLUGGERS AND BOSSES ELECT KAUFMAN TOOL

Tellers Produce Votes as If by Magic

The Furriers' Union, Local 45, called for the election of business agent was the scene of the staging and execution of a fake election. Milstein, the present business agent, packed the hall at 180 West Washington street with sluggers, bosses and what not to put over his election.

The sluggers were seen all around the hall. Before the meeting began the bosses could be seen carrying on a lively campaign in the hallway, on the stairs, in front of the building and in the meeting room for the election of Milstein. They also supplied the votes later on. To make sure the dirty work will be put over skilfully even Charles Gemeiner, second vice-president of the International was imported from St. Paul.

How to Count Votes.

Out of the 275 people present the progressives received 158 votes. Where and how Milstein and his crowd managed to fish up 202 is a mystery only they can explain but they claimed 202. It was only after a struggle that Israelson the progressive candidate, was permitted one teller, Milstein was given three. He was also given two sergeants of arms to terrorize the members as they came in.

A proposition by the executive commitee of the local to invite Morris Kaufman and the N. Y. Joint Board to Chicago to hear the controversy between the International and the N. Y. Joint Board was aprpoved by the local. The membership is awaiting this meeting. They say they are certain Kaufmanism will meet the same fate in Chicago that it met in New York and Toronto.

French Government Rejects Abd-el-Krim's Proposal for Peace

PARIS, Aug. 16.—Peace in Morocco thru the joint Franco-Spanish offensive worked out by Marshal Petain, was emphasized again today as the government's sole policy.

Premier Painleve before leaving for his summer holiday, issued a statement categorically rejecting Abd-el-Krim's demand of complete Riffian independence as a condition to the discussion of peace terms. M. Painleve declared that the decission arrived at unanimously by the Frnech and Spanish governments is that Abd-el-Krim must recognize the sovereignty of the Sultan of Morocco.

PICNIC USHERS IN 8TH WEEK OF GARMENT STRIKE

Amalgamated Members Undaunted by Raids

To celebrate the beginning of their eighth week of their walkout to force the International Tailoring company to sign a union agreement with the Amalgamated, the striking garment workers spent the day at a picnic yesterday at the Forest Preserve, at the end of the Milwaukee Ave. car line.

The strikers, together with their families and friends, were supplied with tickets which gave them free eats, entertainment and transportation for the day. The 800 strikers went to the forest preserve in chartered cars, and in the evening returned to Hod Carriers' Hall, then dispersing to their homes.

No arrests of pickets were recorded over the week end. Patsy De Rosa, who is in the Maxwell St., police station under $105,000.00 bond charged with assault and "malicious mischief," is still in jail, but his release is expected shortly on bail.

The sixteen union officials and strikers who are charged with "conspiracy," on complaint of the International Tailoring company's secretary, Ray Reeder, and Mike Grady, the slugging cop, will appear before Judge Lyle for hearing on August 21.

William A. Cunnea will ask for a change of venue, as Lyle has shown that he is prejudiced in favor of the tailoring company. Lyle, Grady and Reeder want the union men indicted by the grand jury.

Cast Iron Houses Coming Here?

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(FP)—American building tradesmen are wondering whether cast iron houses similar to those being erected in Yorkshire, England, will be introduced in the United States. The houses are constructed, according to report, of cast iron plates at a somewhat less cost than brick houses of the same size. The shells of these houses can be put up in 32 working hours by one skilled worker and four apprentices, the report states.

Barbers Make First Agreement.

BOSTON, Aug. 13.—(FP)—Boston barbers organized in the Journeymen Barbers Mutual Protective Association, Inc., have their first agreement with master barbers and employers: minimum weekly wage, $25; percentage bonus for earnings over $33; and 57-hour work week

BERRY'S FUNNY RACE FOR THE U. S. PRESIDENCY

Tailoring Company, and not preserving the peace.

Was Aping Coolidge.

"Majah" Berry was praised in every capitalist paper in the country for smashing the two strikes in New York. This flattery turned his head. He had no idea that they were only "kidding" him. The capitalists have thousands of men with brains in both parties who are better able to serve them in the capacity of president just now than the swivel chair "majah." Perhaps he would make a good fascisti lieutenant for them, when the time comes to use a Mussolini. But that time is not just yet.

Berry threw his hat in the ring, but it was scarcely noticed. His publicity manager boasted on his business ability, told of the number of industrial enterprises he owned in Tennessee. How he got the money to establish those enterprises was left a dark secret. Everybody did not read the story of Berry's court struggle with the Chicago Printing Pressmen's Local No. 3. This story—it is a hot one—will be told in subsequent articles.

The "Arkansas Kid."

Berry once had his picture in the Police Gazette, under the title of the "Arkansas Kid." Perhaps he expected to get the sporting vote with the slogan: "From barroom bum to president." However, his ability was not equal to his ambition and his race for the presidency was a bigger fizzle than Henry Ford's effort to end the war, when he floated his famous peace ship.

During his campaign for the presidency on the democratic ticket, Berry held a meeting in a Chicago theater. "Everybody" was supposed to be there, but when the "majah" got on the platform, he could see nothing in front of him but empty seats excepting a few of his flunkeys and others who did not have any other place to go. The meeting was under the auspices of the Order of Eagles and Berry's speech was on "Eagledom." How anybody but a moron could talk for over one minute on such a subject is beyond comprehension. Berry is not a moron. If he is, he is a wise one. He is an eagle, and the pressmen agree that he is a bird. The meeting proved to Berry that his friends among are pressmen were few and far between. He realized that if he ran for office in Chicago he would not get enuf votes to light his pipe with.

Got Name Before Convention.

Having gotten as far as the Madison Square Garden convention of the democratic party, Berry at least got his name in the papers, and it is now reported that he considers it beneath his dignity to be president of an international union with only about 40,000 members. It is said that what he wants to turn the I. P. P. and A. U. into is a company union, with a lot of slaves in it that will take any dirt the employers feel like giving them.

Another scheme of Berry's is to get automatic feeders in general use. He has an investigating committee now working in the east to test the practicability of the scheme. Of course Berry's men will find it workable.

Berry called a phony conference in Washington at the Willard hotel, in January, 1925. The automatic proposition was presented to them and only the business agent of Franklin Union No. 4 voted against it. This plan if put into force will eliminate 60 per cent of the feeders, and will not put a dime in the pockets of those who remain.

Has Personal Interest.

It is reported that Berry has a personal interest in those automatic machines. The chief sales manager for the company that manufactures them is a man named Harry Muss, former trustee in Berry's Pressmen's Home in Tennessee. Pressmen are of the opinion that Muss and company stand to make over one million dollars on the sale of those machines in Chicago alone. And if Berry succeeds in making the pressmen accept the innovation, is not Berry entitled to some of the gravy? That's what the pressmen and feeders are saying, and it sounds plausible.

Now that the pressmen and feeders are planning to unite their forces Berry sees one of his best bets vanishing. Like the capitalist, he thrives on the disunity of the workers. The spread of the amalgamation movement is to him a serious danger and he is doing everything in his power to stop it. He knows that amalgamation will not end with the union of the pressmen and feeders but will spread like wildfire over the country. For this reason his tools in the local unions will do everything in their power to sabotage the plans for amalgamation. The progressives are just as determined to go thru with the plan.

Some time ago Berry promised that he would will all his property to the international union. That is just like willing it to himself. At the present time Berry owns the union. Berry also makes the amusing suggestion that every member of the international should also will whatever he has not succeeded in stealing from them to the I. P. P. & A. U.

The Arbitration Fraud

How Berry is serving the union can be seen from his recent action in regard to the demands of Franklin Union. No. 4, which is the feeders local for an increase of wages of $2.00 for day work and $3.00 for night work. Berry showed his loyalty to the bosses again.

Franklin Union No. 4 voted five times asking for strike sanction from the international union, since their March meeting. After a delay of eight weeks the International Union advised the Franklin Union scale committee to issue a new scale card to the members and employers stating that on June 1st, 1925 an increase in wages of $2.00 a week for day work and $3.00 for night work would be in force. The subrates for night workers were fixed at $1.30 per hour where shops work less than three nights a week. This scale was to go into effect and employers refusing to pay it would have to get along without their pressmen and feeders until such time as they decided to comply with the demands of the union.

The local carried out the instructions of the International Union. The new scale cards were issued and the members waited for what might happen on June 1st.

Local Refused to Arbitrate.

On that date the scale committee reported to Vice President Sam Marks and his lieutenants, Andy Portor and John Clark, at Berry's International scab headquarters, 181 West Washington street. The scale committee was informed that the employers were willing to arbitrate and a settlement was possible without having to go thru the unpleasantness of a strike. A meeting was held with the employes. They offered the feeders to arbitrate. The scale committee turned down the proposition, knowing that arbitration always favors the employers.

The employers then turned to Berry, who agreed on the entire arbitration proceedings. The "Majah" sent a letter to all the shop chairmen of Franklin Union, stating that the wage demands would be arbitrated. The Franklin Union was denied the right to hold a meeting as to whether or not they wanted to arbitrate. They were ordered by Berry to remain at work or their places would be filled by International scabs.

On June 22nd the arbiter, Mr. Schick, rendered a decision of $1.75 for day work and $3 for night work and the elimination of the sub scale, which means a reduction of 10¼ cents an hour. The pressmen, without any aid from Berry, received on April 10th an increase of $2 for day work and $4 for night work.

There was no retroactive clause in the Berry arbitration plan agreement. This caused a loss of $50,000 to the members of Franklin Union.

The members of Franklin Union No. 4 have paid into Berry's International scabherder's headquarters over $125,000 in the past three and a half years. This joint is located at 181 West Washington street, a few doors away from where Tom Rickert of the United Garment Workers maintains his scab nest.

Berry has a small army of poison spreaders in Chicago who go about trying to create bad feeling between the pressmen and the feeders, hoping that he would thus be able to play off one union against the other. The pressmen and feeders are now taking steps to block Berry's game, by amalgamating the two locals. This will enable the members not only to fight Berry, but it will also give them greater power in fighting the bosses.

"Open Shop" Coal Barons of Oklahoma Fear Power of the Singing Strikers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the "praying miners," and the "hymn singing" miners of Okmulgee County, Oklahoma, add a new wrinkle to the class struggle in the coal fields of that state. Evidently god, whichever one is worshipped by the Oklahoma coal profiteers, has deserted this breed of "open shoppers" if we are to judge by their actions in ordering their sheriff to use the club of the coal dictatorship to stop the prayers of the coal miners.

• • • •

The Oklahoma coal miners, like those of neighboring Kansas, that gave Alex Howat to the left wing in the miners' union, have always believed in organization, building a strong union as a result. This union has always believed in militant methods. Its delegates have always been in the vanguard at the conventions of the United Mine Workers of America.

Evidently the appeal thru "prayer" to the non-union men who were permitting themselves to be used as strikebreakers, was considered to be a good tactic. Wives, sisters and sweethearts of the striking miners would be taken, in the early morning hours, to the edge of the mine properties. Then they would march, singing, to the very mouths of the shafts, singing hymns as the scabs came to work, and praying for the souls of the men who had taken the places of the strikers. The proceeding seems to have been very effective. Many of the scabs were won over to the strikers' cause.

The strikebreaker is fundamentally conservative. His slavishness to the interests of the master class of today goes hand in hand with his allegiance to some orthodox church. This condition was revealed in the Scopes trial at Dayton, Tenn., where wide stretches of non-union mine fields exist side by side with districts that claim almost a 100 per cent church membership. Tennessee is settled in large part by native Americans, who date back their ancestry in this country thru many generations.

The state of Oklahoma is different. It was originally settled by pioneers from other states, discontented elements from the large industrial centers, in great part. These pioneer elements have learned that in fighting, god was always on the side of the greatest numbers. Or was it Napoeon that said god is on the side of the biggest guns. Nevertheless, the Oklahoma miners have their union, and they are using it as a fighting weapon, and the mine owners do not like the way they fight, not even if they exercise their free speech rights under the first article of the bill of rights of the federal constitution. Certainly the makers of the constitution, a century and a half ago, did not vision that this paragraph in the constitution would be called to the aid of hymn singing and prayer in a coal miners' dispute. But that is what the Civil Liberties Union is doing on behalf of the coal diggers.

"Throwing fear of god into one," is a popular expression, that has several interpretations. The Oklahoma interpretation, as it wins non-union men for the union cause, is not to the liking of the bosses. They see the day of the 100 per cent union, when it will no longer be necessary to sing hymns to frighten religiously inclined scabs out of their trikebreaking roles. One hundred per cent organization means, as in the recently threatened British coal strike, that workers will be singing the revolutionary songs of the working class, instead of the hymns that are to be found in church books. The strikebreaker mine workers of today may fear for their souls, as the strikers sing their hymns today, but the mine owners fear for their rights of private property and their capitalist social system, as they already hear the strains of the singing of "The International" and "The Red Flag" of the morrow. The singing miners of Oklahoma will change their tune and become less agreeable than ever to the mine owners, who even today do not like their singing.

APPEAL CROUCH CASE TO COURT IN CALIFORNIA

Communist Soldiers Will Spurn Pardon

By GEORGE W. WRIGHT.

(President Honolulu Labor Council.)

HONOLULU, Hawaii, Aug. 6.—(By Mail.)—The Crouch case is being appealed from the local federal district court to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in California. The Honolulu judge, William A. Rawlins, refused to intervene, declaring that the civil court had no jurisdiction. This was on the showing of the army counsel that the court martial was correctly constituted, properly convened, and was duly authorized to try the case.

The authorities cited by Attorney Patterson, counsel for Crouch, showing that there could be no jurisdiction over acts not in themselves crimes or offenses against the laws of the United States, were ignored by the judge, who, however, refused to make his opinion, delivered verbally, a matter of permanent record. The drafting of the papers in the appeal of the case has been completed and it will go to San Francisco for review by the California Federal Court.

Will Refuse Clemency.

Walter Trumbull withdrew his petition from the local court when it became evident that an appeal would be necessary, in order to take up the fight on a new application for writ of habeas corpus in the California court after his arrival at Alcatraz.

The two prisoners, interviewed today, declared that they did not intend to ask for clemency from the war department or from the president, and would probably refuse clemency if it were offered. They insist that the issue is clearly defined and must be fought thru to a finish to determine the rights and the status of members of the Workers (Communist) Party. They say they do not mind the delay, and are willing to serve as long as may be necessary in order that the civil courts may decide the question.

They point out that they have been convicted solely because of their support of Communism and in violation of their rights under the constitution, and that it is a question of whether or not the arbitrary opinion of army officials shall supersede the highest law of the land.

Officers Stole Mail.

Both Crouch and Trumbull complain of the autocratic conduct of the local army officers in withholding letters addressed to them for weeks at a time, and in forbidding them access to literature and reading matter that is permitted by the army regulations. They cite instances where books written by Americans and published by Americans have been confiscated by the officers thru whose hands they pass.

They are not allowed to see visitors, and are only permitted to consult with their legal advisers in the presence of a sentry. They do not complain of physical ill-treatment, and both boys are now in fair health.

They will be placed on board the U. S. S. Cambrai, and will be taken to Alcatraz disciplinary barracks, in San Francisco bay, to serve out their sentences.

They express their thanks to their comrades who have been active in their behalf, and their appreciation of the sympathy and kindness which has been shown toward them by comrades all over the United States. They are grateful for the assistance given by the American Civil Liberties Union, the International Labor Defense, and by the little group of friends in Hawaii. To all they send the Hawaiian greeting, "Aloha."

Kansas City to Hear Dolsen Speak Tuesday on Chinese Policies

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 16—Fresh from a series of lectures, which routed him thru California, James H. Dolsen, of San Francisco, will deliver an address on conditions in China and American policies in relation thereto at Kansas City, Mo., Tuesday night, August 18 at 8 p. m., at open forum tent, 12th and Troost streets.

The speaker is a well-known labor editor on the coast, having spoken in most cities there, and is known as a writer on economic subjects. He has received praise for his able presentation of an extremely complicated and important public question.

"Americans generally," he states, "have only the most hazy idea even of what the Chinese Republic is. Few realize that in territory it surpasses this country, including all the latter's possession, nor do they realize what a tremendous force its huge population is."

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 16.—Ironworkers and building laborers are out with union bricklayers striking on the new wing of the Prudential building for which Thompson-Starret is contractor. The strike is part of the jurisdictional fight between the plasterers' international union and the bricklayers.

HARVARD PROF. DARES TO TELL TRUTH OF U.S.S.R.

Speech Shows Dr. Landis Is Student of Soviets

(By Worker Correspondent.)
(Special to The Daily Worker)

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Dr. J. M. Landis of Harvard Law School spoke to a large and enthusiastic audience on "Russia and the Far East" at the Cornell Cosmopolitan Club here. His speech which set out to be a plea for no intervention in China developed into an interpretation of the workers' government of the U. S. S. R. with which Dr. Landis proved himself to be thoroly familiar.

U. S. S. R. Not Russia.

At the outset of his speech he made it clear to the audience that it is incorrect to talk of the workers' republic as Russia, for it is no longer Russia but the Union of Soviet Republics resulting from the union of many other nations such as Ukraine, White Russia, Siberia, Georgia, Armenia and many others. He explained that these nations in the union are autonomous having separate languages and independent domestic affairs but they have one economic, political and military united front under the banner of the U. S. S. R. It is impossible to conceive of this vast country of many nationalities unless we think of it in terms of U. S. S. R.

U. S. S. R. Goes to the People.

He showed that the Soviet government had struck a few notes in world diplomacy by going over the heads of governments directly to the people. He reviewed the many obstacles that Russia was continually confronted with during her reconstruction period. The Allied Powers lined up with the white czarists and supported Kolchak, Udenich, Denekin and Wrangel in anti-revolutionary activities. Bessarabia was backed by English imperialism, Poland by French imperialism, the blockage against Russia was sponsored by the allied powers—all were plotting against the workers' government. Neither in Europe nor America was there any sympathy for Soviet Russia.

Chinese Ask Russia's Aid.

But in the Near East, the Far East and the Orient, Russia was differently received. There she was invited to assist in educating the people. In 1919 a meeting was held in Moscow where Chinese workers asked the workers' government of Russia to help them awaken and enlighten that vast country thru their educational and political programs. Russia was the only country to oppose Chinese intervention by the allies when the treaty of Versailles had provided that Shantung should go to Japan.

Leading up to the recent uprising in Shanghai he showed how it was the result of unbearable working conditions and severe exploitation of this country by the imperialistic powers. "Russia is as anxious for the spread of her gospel of Communism as American missions are for the spread of theirs—and more so because Russia's is more realistic and fruitful and nearer to the hearts of workers than Christianity and its accompanying brutal exploitation.

"We do not want interventions in America but we are doing that freely in China. We cannot blame either the U. S. S. R. or China for the present uprising but only the allied powers. It is natural that the Chinese workers and peasants should revolt and they are glad to have the cooperation of the U. S. S. R."

He made a plea for more sincerity of thought and clearer understanding of international relations.

Now Dr. Landis will probably either lose his job or be forced to change his friendly attitude toward the Soviet Union.

Bankrupt Railroad Would Issue Nine Millions of Stock

Work Despite Prohibition.

MONTREAL, August 16.—(FP)—Union bartenders in the United States are still tending bar despite the prohibition amendment, according to Edward Flore, head of the bartenders' organization which is part of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Union, which is convening in Montreal. One of the questions being discussed by the 300 delegates representing the 38,000 union workers is the prevalence of Asiatic labor in Canadian hotels and restaurants. Flore expects a modification of the eighteenth amendment to allow possibly for sale of light wines and beer.

GERMAN WORKERS IN MOSCOW SIGN STATEMENT REFUTING LIES TOLD BY GERMAN SOCIAL DEMOCRATS

(By International Press Correspondence)

MOSCOW, July 21—(By Mail.)—The statement of the German workers' delegation entitled, "The Truth About the Krasny Putilovez," one-time Putilov works, reads in the original as follows:

"The German delegation owes its thanks to the workers of the Krasny Putilovez for their invitation. We have also finally convinced ourselves that the calumnies spread by international capitalism about Soviet Russia are absolutely untrue, and also that the letter from an alleged group of workers of the Krasny Putilovez printed on January 9 in the "Vorwaerts," and also the article following upon it in the same paper, which declared that the German workers had never been invited, are absolutely in contradiction to the facts.

"We have been able to convince ourselves of this because we have moved in your shops freely, and we have spoken with many workers, among them German workers, attended your mass meetings, and visited in your shops, institutions, workers' organizations, co-operatives, hospitals, cultural institutions, rest homes, etc., and because everywhere we have had the opportunity of discovering the exact feelings of the workers.

"Vorwaerts" a Liar.

"The author of the letter which was published in the 'Vorwaerts' made the following statements: (1) that the Russian working class was never so deprived of all rights as it is at present in Soviet Russia.'

"What is the actual truth?

"We attended a mass meeting in the Krasny Putilovez which would never have been possible before the revolution, and which is today impossible in such a form in Germany.

Spoken Freely.

"We have spoken perfectly freely with the workers in ten large shops (Krasny Putilovez, 9,000; a rubber factory, 14,000; the Siemens works, 2,000; a textile factory, 1,500; the printing works 'Petschatny Dvor,' 1,500; a railway works, 2,000; the brewery 'Krasnaya Bavarya,' 1,000; an engineering works, 1,500; an electricity works, 2,000; a furniture factory, 2,250; the cigarette factory 'Uritzky,' 3,000.)

"And everywhere we have received the same answer, never has the working class in Russia enjoyed such political rights and such possibilities of making its influence felt as at present. As far as the workers of the Krasny Putilovez are concerned, they have two simple workers, one a Communist and the other a non-party worker, in the All-Russian central government.

"The workers in the Krasny Putilovez have 23 representatives in the Leningrad Soviet, and among these there are many non-party workers.

"When we compare the rights of the shop council in the Krasny Putilovez with the rights of the shop councils in Germany, we see, for instance, that the shop council of the Krasny Putilovez has a decisive influence in all economic and wage questions, engagements and dismissals, etc.

"The director of the works is himself an old worker from the Krasny Putilovez who during the czarist period was three times in prison and in Siberia.

"The workers have the right to demand reports from all state and governmental organs upon their activities. The declaration that the workers of the Krasny Putilovez are politically without rights is therefore not true.

"The so-called 'group of Krasny Putilovez workers' declares further in its letter to the 'Vorwaerts': (2) In the course of a few years our minds and souls will be poisoned by the conscienceless and official press of the Soviet wielders of power. We are being suffocated in the atmosphere of this press.

Clinches All Lies About Soviet.

"We have seen that almost every worker buys this press and reads it, and we have never heard such dissatisfaction anywhere here. The delegation was further able to convince itself that hundreds of the Krasny Putilovez workers themselves write in this press. We will bring newspaper cuttings back to Germany with us.

"Articles were also printed which dealt critically with the existing deficiencies. In the works itself, two wall-newspapers appear every fortnight so that the workers have the opportunity of expressing their opinions on the deficiencies in the shop itself. It cannot be said that the Krasny Putilovez workers have no real workers' press at their disposal.

"(3) The letter in question further declares that a crusade has been commenced against the menshevik workers in the Krasny Putilovez works. It is rather extraordinary that no single menshevik, if such persons exist at all, has approached the delegation in any way, and this despite the fact that the delegation is composed in its majority of social democrats.

Menshevik Admits It's No Use.

"A part of the delegation had the opportunity of speaking with an ex-menshevik, and he declared that in 1923 a meeting of the mensheviki in the Krasny Putilovez adopted the decision to dissolve the organization. In the various meeting no single menshevik spoke, nor has any written communication been made to the delegation from such a source altho there was ample possibility of such communication, and many workers availed themselves of it.

"At the same time we wish to use this opportunity to say that altho the works are very old it is in continuous development in economic matters and in some respects it has already reached the pre-war level. With regard, however, to workers' protection, social insurance, the education of the new generation, female protection, youth labor and cultural tasks, no comparison can be made with the situation before the war. To quote only one figure, in 1923, 1,800 workers were engaged in the Putilovez works; today there are 9,000 at work.

"From all that has been said it is clear that the letter which was published in the 'Vorwaerts' does not represent the truth of conditions. This fact shows in all its clearness how necessary a delegation of German workers to Russia was in order to discover the real truth about the workers' Russia.

Signed with the agreement and on behalf of the whole delegation:

THOMAS STAUDT.

PROTEST FIRING OF 4 NEGRO PROFESSORS AT HOWARD AFTER STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(FP)—Dismissal of four Negro professors from the faculty of Howard University by President Durkee at the close of the last school year, immediately following the students' strike, is denounced in a report by A. W. Mitchell, president of the Howard Welfare League, upon his independent inquiry into the facts. Mitchell scores Dr. Durkee for having dismissed these men without investigation or hearing "to their material damage, preventing them from securing employment elsewhere."

Pretense of an economy motive in dropping these teachers is ridiculed in the report, since the money represented by their salaries was at once voted as increases of salaries for other men "and to finance a sampaign of publicity to offset the storm now sweeping against the administration because of its practices."

The four professors graduated from Oxford, Paris, Harvard, Chicago and Pittsburgh universities. One was a Rhodes scholar.

Engineers Afraid to Strike in New York; Use Charts

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. — Demands for salary increases are to be made by use of charts and figures in the attempt of the Association of Engineers of New York to convince the board of estimate and apportionment that city engineers need a 25 per ceint pay raise. The engineers, while admitting that low wages paid discourage young men from becoming engineers, decided not to strike

Rail Strikers Blacklisted.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Three thousand leaders of the striking 15,000 workers on the North Western railway of India are blacklisted from employment as the strike ends, reports reaching Indians in New York indicate. Poverty and lack of outside aid helped the company beat the workers who stayed out over two months. The workers are very poorly paid and live most of the time on one small meal a day. The workers belong to the union of India railwaymen.

Hoover Would Speed Up Filipinos.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(FP)—One of the chief economies suggested in a commerce department report on the growing of rubber in the Philippines is a speeding up of native labor, which is paid from 30 to 50 cents a day.

SWEDISH WORKERS LEAVING FOR HOME; GERMANS VISIT PROVINCES

MOSCOW, July 24.—(By Mail.)—Today the Swedish delegation left Leningrad and sailed for Stockholm. Thousands of workers gave the delegation a hearty send-off.

Tomorrow the German delegation leaves in three groups, one to the Ural district, another to the central industrial district and the third to the Caucasus.

PICKETING FURNITURE STRIKERS REFUSE TO BE BLUFFED BY BOSS

The fifth day of the strike of the upholsterers at the Aetna Furniture company, 269 West 24th St., begins today with more than half of the 23 men on strike parading on the picket line.

The bosses of the Aetna plant made desperate efforts trying to get the picketers to agree to come back to work. He told them that all the "other strikers" were coming back. He threatened to open up the shop Monday with those willing to return. But the picketers knew that all the men who went out in protest against a proposed wage cut are sticking "till the cows come home." The bluffs and tearful stories of the bosses failed to make a dent in the line.

MOSCOW REPLIES TO ATTACK ON CHINESE POLICY

Soviet Program Only Solution in Far East

MOSCOW, July 15.—(By Mail.)—Commenting upon the attacks of the English semi-official press, particularly the Daily Telegraph, on Soviet minister of foreign affairs Tchitcherin's recent utterances regarding the Soviet policy in China and the Russo-British relations, the Izvestia observes editorially that the British semi-official comments did not contain even the least attempt at an essential analysis of Tchitcherin's statements.

Thus, remarks the Moscow organ, there remained unanswered the principle indicated by the Soviet people's commissary of foreign affairs to the effect that the government of the Union considers the creation of centralized democratic China, independent of any foreign pressure, as the only issue out of the present situation capable of satisfying the interests of not only China, but also the countries standing in need of economic relations with China.

English Enslave China.

Now, the English leading press without any proofs at all denies the desire of the Soviet government to contribute to the consolidation of peace by respecting the rights of the Chinese people. But what can more easily provoke a new war than the English policy of enslaving China? asks the Izvestia. And what better pledge of international peace could be found than the Soviet government's program of self-determination of nations?

The Moscow paper goes on to compare the outbreaks of the English press against the Soviet government in reference to the Chinese events with the recently increased attacks on the U. S. S. R. emanating from the same press in connection with the American proposal to revise the rights of extra-territoriality of foreigners in China, and points out ironically that the Daily Telegraph's anti-American diatribe is more passionate and reveals more fear than the anti-Tchitcherin one.

Attack American Capitalism.

The directing lines of Britain's world policy are becoming radically divergent from the American policy. America's proposal of an international conference on Chinese affairs is meeting with favorable response except on the part of England, which alone is interested in the complete suppression of the national movement in China and which alone is carrying on a policy of ruthless repression.

England's isolation in the far east is daily becoming more obvious, with France carefully keeping in the background of the actual events, while Japan is engaged in a complex policy, subtly playing with the Chinese national movement.

It is becoming ever more evident that America is returning to her old traditional policy in China, as she has probably realized that Mr. Hughes' Chinese policy was only prejudicial to American interests. It is also becoming obvious that, after a period of lengthy voluntary isolation, America is gradually stepping out into the world's arena and slowly gaining world hegemony.

Soviet Program Only Solution.

With her pacifist humanitarian slogans, America is undermining the authority of her fellow powers and rivals, working for personal predominance. Frightened at this danger, England is seeking the help of her former ally, Japan, whom she but recently betrayed. Up to the present, however, the Englishmen alone are trumpeting this new Anglo-Japanese friendship, while it is doubtful that the clear-sighted Japanese politicians will be caught in the bait.

In such circumstances, concludes the leading Moscow organ, only the program of the Soviet government, as it is formulated by people's commissary Tchitcherin, is really capable of making sound the far-eastern and the world international relations at large.

TROTSKY EXPLAINS TO GERMAN WORKERS HOW CONCESSIONS TO CAPITAL ARE NOT FUNDAMENTAL

MOSCOW, July 26—(By Mail.)—Today the German workers' delegation visited Comrade Trotsky, head of the concessions committee and put a number of questions to him concerning the concessions policy and the economic policy. Trotsky pointed out in a comprehensive speech that the accusations of the social-democrats that the reconstruction of industry carried out by the Soviet government was proceeding at the cost of fundamental concessions to capitalism, were without basis.

Trotsky showed, on the basis of figures, that in consequence of the waiting attitude taken up by the capitalists to the concessions of the Soviet Union, the latter played only a very small role in the economic life of the Soviet Union.

Nevertheless, having regard to the economic strengthening, the Soviet government would gladly draw foreign capital into the work of raising the technical level and the increase of the speed of the economic reconstruction.

The capitalists, however, should always remember that their hopes of fundamental concessions from the Soviet government were useless, and that the concessions would only play a very subordinate, and never a decisive, role in the economic life of the Soviet Union.

Today, before its departure which gave rise to a new and powerful demonstration of friendship on the part of the Moscow working class, the German delegation held a plenum session and decided unanimously to send a telegram to the Breslau congress of the A. D. G. B. (General German Trade Union Association) demanding that it send an official delegation of the German trade unions to the Soviet Union to investigate the situation in the country and to establish close connections between the trade unions of both countries.

Telegrams are arriving from all parts of the Soviet Union with invitations to the German delegation to visit the various districts.

The Ukrainian trade union council greeted the German delegation, its first group is due to arrive in Kharkov tomorrow, in the name of 1,300,000 Ukrainian workers.

CALLES IMPRISONS A LABOR LEADER TO TRY TO BREAK LABOR UNITY

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 16.—The General Federation of Labor has called a strike intended to spread thruout Mexico and answered at once by half the factory workers of Mexico City, as a result of the Calles government imprisoning C. B. Mendoza, the secretary of the federation, for "inciting a strike" of cotton mill workers.

The textile industry is especially liable to be completely tied up as a result of the first answer to the strike call. The railway workers, free from the paralyzing influence of Morones, the "Mexican Gompers," have recently issued a call for a unity conference, and Communists point out that Calles is trying to prevent labor unity by driving a wedge between the C. G. T. (the Mexican Federation of Labor, which has called this strike), controlled by the anarchists, the more conservative C. R. O. M. (Confederation Regional Workers Mexicana, the largest and most conservative body), and the independent railway unions, in which Communists are influential.

Professional Men Won't Strike.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(FP)—Demands for salary increases are to be made by use of charts and figures in the attempt of the Association of Engineers of New York to convince the board of estimate and apportionment that city engineers need a 25 per cent pay raise. The engineers, while admitting that low wages paid discourage young men from becoming engineers, decided not to strike. Charts will show how city engineers' pay has advanced only 44 per cent since 1914, while cost of living has increased 75 per cent; that the engineer is now by comparison the poorest paid professional worker in city service; that 10 per cent of the engineers receive less than unskilled laborers; that 78½ per cent get less than mechanics and 88 per cent less than foremen-mechanics.

Silk Workers Settle More Mills.

PATERSON, N. Y., Aug. 16—(FP)—Four more silk ribbon mills have signed the new agreement with the Associated Silk Workers Union, restoring the 1918 scale. The union won vacation of the injunction taken against them by Kravitz Silk Co. of Jersey City. The Kravitz mill locked out its workers and is attempting to run open shop.

Price of Food Goes Up in All Cities Charted by Report

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16—The U. S. department of labor, thru the bureau of labor statistics, has completed the compilations showing changes in the retail cost of food in 23 of the 51 cities included in the bureau's report.

During the month from June 15 to July 15, 1925, all but one of the 23 cities showed increases as follows: Boston, 7 per cent; Milwaukee, 6 per cent; Bridgeport, Manchester, and Rochester, 5 per cent; Buffalo, Indianapolis, Jacksonville, and Portland, Me., 4 per cent; Atlanta, Baltimore, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Little Rock, Memphis, Norfolk, Omaha, and Washington, 3 per cent; Charleston, S. C., and Richmond, 2 per cent; and Louisville, 1 per cent. In Salt Lake City there was a decrease of 2 per cent.

Increases from 7 to 18 per cent were shown in all 23 cities for the year period July 15, 1924, to July 15, 1925.

JAPAN YIELDING TO STRIKERS OF SHANGHAI MILLS

Pay Damage, Promise No Brutality

SHANGHAI, China, Aug. 16.—The Japanese consul, S. Yada, acting in behalf of the Japanese cotton mill owners and the Chinese commissioner of foreign affairs, Hsu Yuan, have announced an agreement that will end the strike of the Chinese employes of the Japanese mills. This agreement is the result of conferences that have gone on for two weeks.

The agreement provides for the payment of $10,000 as compensation for the killing of a workman at the Naigai Wata Kaisha mill, which led to the rioting in Shanghai on May 30, recognition of the mill workers' union—provided Peking sanctions the labor laws—and for the adjustment of wages in case living costs increase.

The agreement forbids the Japanese mill foremen to carry arms except in "abnormal" times.

The Japanese own 50 per cent of the cotton mills in Shanghai, employ 50,000 Chinese and operate 1,000,000 spindles. The settlement is expected to do much to alleviate the tense situation in other foreign-owned mills.

Expectation that the wharf coolies would return to work was a disappointment. The American wharves are not affected.

Yellow Socialist Tells Workers to Put Trust in Evolution

By Worker Correspondent.

DAYTON, O., Aug. 14.—The Socialist Branch of Dayton held a picnic at Forest Park with Kirkpatrick of Chicago as their main speaker. Altho their Branch claims a membership of 100 strong there was but a handful present. The speaker's platform was decorated with American flags. I counted nineteen of them then grew tired of the sickening job and stopped counting.

J. Sharts, the lawyer, acting as chairman made an appeal for immediate help to keep their local paper from going on the rocks. The response was very poor. He then introduced the three Socialist candidates running for city commissioners. All of them made vote catching talks avoiding the main economic issue.

Kirkpatrick made a long talk, the substance of which was not to worry about developments in the present system of society for evolution will take care of everythig.

We distributed a goodly number of The Workers Monthly while the meeting was going on but we had to do some fast work before some of their braves have us arrested for distributing a class-conscious workingclass magazine. We also managed to secure a number of subs for the DAILY WORKER. The picnic made me more confident than ever that it will not be long before we will be able to put some of their misled but conscious members on the right and only road that leads towards the emancipation of the laboring class, the Workers (Communist) Party.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it. Send for a catalogue of all Communist literature.

"NO ARBITRATION UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES;" DEMAND PA. MINERS OF FAKER JOHN L. LEWIS

PLAINS, Pa., August 16.—Vigorous objection to any treachery in an eleventh hour surrender of Lewis has been made in advance by the miners of Local 1483 of the U. M. W. of A.

In a letter addressed officially by the local to John L. Lewis at Atlantic City, the miners state their sentiments as follows:

"John L. Lewis,
"Hotel Ambassador,
"Atlantic City, N. J.

"Dear Sir and Brother: Local Union 1483, United Mine Workers of America, in regular meeting assembled with 800 members present unanimously went on record against arbitration and conciliation in any and every form to settle the wage dispute of the anthracite mine workers, and at this time state very plainly to their scale committee that, even as a last recourse, to accept arbitration would be detrimental to the anthractic mine workers.

"Experience with President Wilson's 'impartial arbitration' project in 1920 have taught the anthracite mine workers a bitter lesson about 'impartial arbitrators,' a lesson which prompts the membership of Local 1483 to instruct me to write you on the question.

"It also was unanimously decided to go on record against the proposition of continuing work after September 1, in case no settlement is reached. Local 1483 fully and unanimously adopts the resolution of Pine Grove, District 9, local, circularized to the anthracite membership relative to this.

"Fraternally yours, Pat Kohey, Secretary."

Uncle Sam, Shylock, Forecloses Debt on "Suffering Belgium"

At this joint conference, it is understood, the Belgian envoys will report their government's decision as to acceptance or rejection of the American proposal cabled to Brussels yesterday.

BRYAN SOLD TONGUE TO REAL ESTATE SHARKS FOR $100 PER DAY

NEW YORK, August 16.—(FP)—William Jennings Bryan made over $250,000 in the last few months of his life, believes E. L. Lambright of Tampa, Fla., who headed the democratic convention delegation from Florida last year. Bryan was reputed worth a million last spring but wrote Lambright then that his fortune was less than half that amount. His estate is shown to be $860,000.

Lambright believes Bryan made most of this in Florida real estate and states that Bryan used his "silver tongue" at $100 a day for Coral Gables, Florida, a real estate venture. Bryan sold his home Villa Serena for $200,000 profit.

There Is Many a Grip Between the Teeth and the Lip

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—Charlie Chaplin, famous film comedian is recovering today from blood poisoning which threatened for a time to cause his death, according to a report buzzing along Broadway despite the statement of Dr. James McKenzie, one of Chaplin's attending physicians, that his patient was suffering from a heart attack brought on by overwork. Charlie was bitten on the lip by a Follies chorus girl.

At the Ritz-Carlton hotel where the comedian has shut himself off from friends and interviewers, his secretary insisted Chaplin was recuperating from a "cold."

The secretary did not deny the bloodpoisoning rumor, referring all information as to Chaplin's condition to Dr. McKenzie.

Bus Company Forces Speeding.

WORCESTER, Mass., August 16.—(FP)—On his third appearance in court for speeding, Bus Driver Everett C. Fish of Roxbury told the judge: "Your honor, I was driving fast because the boss made me. The line advertises a certain time from Boston to New York and it gave me the choice of making the time or getting fired.

"Three times now I've been pinched for speeding that bus. After being summoned this time, I refused to maintain the rate of speed they demanded and I drove into New York the next day two and a half hours late, and was fired on the spot. I have a wife and three kids and I'm out of a job now. Who's to blame?"

Hospitals

The former Russian town hospital establishments, although of the most up-to-date character, were hopelessly inadequate to meet the requirements even of the town populations, whereas in the rural districts hardly any accommodation at all existed.

Very extensive measures had, therefore, immediately to be taken to cope with the situation. Large country houses, which had been taken over by the peasants, were requisitioned, and by the end of 1922, 641,965 beds had been equipped by the Commissariat of Health. Owing, however, to the shortage of doctors, and lack of medical supplies, little more than beds and segregation could be provided for the patients. Most of the available supplies were devoted to the 150,000 beds which were set apart for children.

By means of segregation alone, however, great strides were made during the next 18 months, and in May, 1924, the position had already almost returned to the pre-war normal. Typhus still existed, but in June of that year there were only 1,640 patients under treatment, typhoid patients had been reduced to 1,100, and only 634 smallpox cases were reported. Influenza and malaria are, however, still a serious scourge; in May, 1924, 475,000 patients were under some form of treatment for malaria.

With the return to more normal conditions, the Commissariat of Health has been able to reorganize the old establishments and such new ones as had been hastily arranged to meet the period of epidemic.

These establishments have now been equipped and placed in five different categories: Hospitals, dispensaries for out-patients, sanatoria, rest homes, and maternity homes.

The following statistics will give some idea of the reconstruction work that has taken place during the last two years:—

Town and Districts	Hospitals	Dispensaries	Beds
Moscow Town	62	136	13,000
Province	100	160	4,000
Province	300	530	20,000
Leningrad	50	65	10,000
Province	130	160	13,000
Kursk	40	10	500

The total figures for Soviet Russia, as compared with the same area administered by Tsarist Russia in 1913 are as follows:—

	1913	1924
Population	87,100,000	76,000,000
Hospitals	4,769	3,937
Beds	136,117	198,471

The above figures do not include the medical and sanitary arrangements for the railways and waterways. These are served by a special organization and a separate department of the State.

During the revolutionary period the various Trade Unions, factories and other undertakings had organized their own medical services. Under the New Economic Policy these have now all been taken over by the Commissariat of Health. The railways and waterways are, however, in a somewhat different position to other undertakings, and their medical organizations, which constitute a separate department of the Commissariat of Health, still retain a certain measure of autonomy.

The 40,000 miles of communications are now divided into 170 sections on the railways and 120 sections on the waterways. Each section is controlled by a special medical staff consisting of a doctor, assistant, and inspector, and two or three sanitary gangs according to the length of the section. Each divisional doctor is responsible for the sanitary conditions of the whole of his section, not only as regards the railway itself, but also its personnel and the passengers travelling over the section. In the event of infectious disease breaking out in any section he has certain definite powers to deal with the transport of passengers from infected to clean areas.

In 1912 the railways and waterways of Russia were equipped with 143 hospitals and 5,725 beds. These have now been increased to 297 hospitals with 18,000 beds.

Health Resorts and Rest Houses

The former health resorts in the Caucasus, on the Black Sea littoral, and the Crimea, have now been organized as free sanatoria for the workers; last year these dealt with over 700,000 patients.

An entirely new feature in Russia is the numerous large country houses which have been converted into rest houses for the workers. These establishments are neither hospitals nor sanatoria, although they are under the supervision of a medical staff. A worker who is suffering from fatigue, or is run down in general health, by application to his Trade Union is sent to one of these establishments free of charge. The rest houses have a considerable acreage of ground attached to them where games are organized. The prevailing feature of these establishments, which are supported by the Trade Unions, is the organized social life and the general comfort and ease of the surroundings.

Welfare Work

Special mention must be made of the Baby and Motherhood Welfare Department of the Commissariat of Health. This Department has been in operation for the last two years and has already had very far-reaching effect in the industrial areas.

In 1922 special laws were incorporated in the Civil Code dealing with the welfare of the mother and child. According to the law illegitimacy no longer exists, and the same benefits accrue to the mother with a child born out of wedlock as to the mother whose marriage has been registered.

The law establishes that any woman about to become a mother shall be free from all work for a certain period before and after the birth of her child. This varies from eight weeks to six weeks before and after the birth, according to the nature of the woman's work. During this same period she receives full wages and a special allowance regarding food for nine months after the birth, if she is herself feeding the child. On her return to work she is allowed half an hour in every three and a half hours to attend to and feed the child.

No working mother is allowed by law to leave any child under the age of seven years at home or with neighbors while she is at work. The children have to be left at the recognized creche of the factory or institution for which she works. On arrival there the child is washed and clothed in creche overalls. The younger children are amused with organized games on the Montessori system, and rest on beds for a specified time each morning and afternoon. The elder children are prepared for the kindergarten. It is the duty of the Child Welfare Committee to see that these regulations are being carried out.

The Baby and Motherhood Welfare Department has made full use of the Committees of Social Welfare which were built up during the Revolution by the Trade Unions for the purpose of organizing the social side of the workers' lives.

These Committees are elected by the workers of each factory or industrial area and, under the auspices of the Commissariat of Health, now elect from their midst competent members who constitute an administrative committee or bureau, whose sole purpose is to organize and administer the baby and motherhood welfare of the institution or group of workers they represent. This administrative bureau may appoint or engage officers, inspectors, and staff, and is responsible to the Department of Baby and Motherhood Welfare for the administration of creches, lying-in hospitals, and benefits to mothers according to the law and special regulations laid down by the Commissariat of Health.

Further, the Committees organize lectures and public meetings on all subjects dealing with hygiene of the mother and child, and distribute among the workers pamphlets and literature issued by the Department. It is also the committee's province to see that each mother is attended by a certified midwife or doctor. The Committee reports to the Department of Baby and Motherhood Welfare, and elects its representative to attend the yearly conference held in Moscow.

Under the auspices of these Sanitary and Health Commissions it is hoped eventually to penetrate all the towns and villages. Every child up to the age of 3 years and every expectant mother comes directly under the Baby and Motherhood Welfare Department of the Commissariat of Health. At the age of 3 the child's welfare is passed on to the Commissariat for Education, under whose authority are all kindergartens and schools.

Other institutions established lately under the Children and Baby Welfare Schemes are:—

1. Juvenile receiving stations, which are open day and night for the purpose of receiving children found homeless or straying. They remain at these stations until homes are found for them. There are at present over 200 such stations scattered all over the country.

2. Psychological observation stations for studying children with mental and moral peculiarities. There are now 65 such stations, where over 6,000 children are under observation.

3. These observation stations work in conjunction with 375 special commissions, composed of a doctor, a teacher, a lawyer, which are now established all over Russia.

4. Special institutes for training inspectors are now being established, and there are already in operation 275 institutions for mentally and morally defective children.

Village Welfare and Sanitation

The organization in the industrial areas appears to be very complete and efficient, but the rural and agricultural districts still leave a great deal of work to be done. Considerable propaganda work is, however, being accomplished; attractive posters and pictures may be seen in all the clubs, public buildings, and railway stations, and much free literature dealing with this subject has been distributed among the peasants. The agricultural districts of the Ukraine appear to be much better equipped than any other part of rural Russia.

Difficulties met with in perfecting any sanitary and health organizations in the rural and agricultural districts are considerable. Lack of funds, trained doctors, nurses and teachers, has been a serious difficulty. A central institution has, therefore, been established in Moscow, which provides special courses of one year for doctors who have received their ordinary degree, a course of two and a half years for midwives, and a special course for nurses, all of whom receive practical instructions in the institute.

The most serious difficulty, however, in many rural districts is the attitude of the peasants themselves. Any measure of cleanliness or hygiene is resisted to the utmost capacity. Much political capital has been made out of this resistance, and certain riots which have lately taken place in the villages have been attributed to political causes, whereas in reality they were the results of the activities of the Sanitary Commission. There are certain deep-rooted traditions among the peasants almost impossible to eradicate. One is an affection which they lavish on certain household pests known in this country as "bugs." It is considered unlucky to be without them. A peasant when changing house or going on a journey must take a few in his bag or disaster may befall him. Many students have sought the origin of this curious superstition, and the general conclusion is that in the minds of the primitive tribes these little creatures represented the spirits of departed ancestors and relatives.

In August of last year a Special Sanitary Commission discovered in Siberia an isolated and self-supporting tribe nearly 600 miles from any habitation. These people had never used water for any other purpose than to drink. Neither their bodies, their clothes nor their eating utensils were ever washed. Force had to be used to wash them. Unfortunately the first man who was bathed died either from fright or suggestion, and considerable trouble arose. The discovery of this tribe has created considerable interest in ethnological circles in Russia, as it is considered to be the first instance on record of a tribe existing in such complete isolation and unable to realize the use of water. It serves, however, to illustrate the vastness of the Russian Empire and the difficulties met with in the remoter districts.

It is very noticeable that even the most backward and conservative peasants will take advice on all subjects from members of their own elected committees in a manner which they would never have taken it from a doctor or official of the old Government.

Birth Control

The question of birth control is being seriously considered by the Commissariat of Health, and a special commission has been set up for this purpose. The movement is at present confined to instruction and advice given by competent authorities who act through the Baby and Motherhood Welfare organizations. The workers and peasants are advised to restrict their families within the limits of reason. They are told it is better to bring up three or four healthy children at reasonable intervals which will enable the mother to retain her health and devote herself to the upbringing of each child, than to leave the begetting of the family to their natural instincts.

State birth control was at one time seriously considered. The theory being that in a country which is neither imperialist nor capitalist huge standing armies are no longer necessary; while on the other hand the population of workers and peasants should be regulated in proportion to the requirements of the growth of industry and the economic situation of the country.

Abortion

Abortion, practiced by unauthorized persons, which was formerly so prevalent in Russia, is illegal under the severest penalties. A law was, however, formulated, and still stands, whereby a woman can procure abortion by an authorized person in a State hospital, if she is able to give to the medical board satisfactory evidence why she should not have a child. Among the necessary reasons are, her incapacity to bring up the child, the probability of her health or working capacity suffering, or that the period of motherhood would interfere with some public work on which she is engaged.

This, however, has been found to be open to many abuses and likely to injure permanently the health of the woman. Other methods, known to the medical profession are now being considered, and it seems probable that the law will be changed in the near future.

Cleanliness

The Autonomous Federated Republics have been brought into line on the question of Public Health by the organization of regional Health Congresses and the yearly Health Congress at Moscow, to which all Delegates travel free to the place of meeting, are lodged and receive their food and entertainment at theatres and public places without any payment. As may be easily understood, these periodical gatherings of the various organizations all over Russia are a great incentive to the people to enter into the spirit of co-operation with the system.

To the most casual observer who has any knowledge of Russia before the Revolution public places and railway stations are considerably cleaner. The former litter of cigarette ends and the husks of sunflower seeds which the people chew have disappeared entirely. Obscene pictures and finger marks no longer disfigure the walls. It is now possible, though not always agreeable, to enter a public lavatory. Much of this change is due to fines and strict police supervision. Through all streets in the large towns and public places are receptacles for cigarette ends and waste paper. There are rigid restrictions against smoking in the corridors of theatres and public buildings. At times the search for the smoking-room becomes very irksome. Over 800 Delegates sat through the Trades Union Congress without any apparent desire to smoke, and the white walls, which had not been decorated for two years, still remain spotlessly clean. The most curious instance of this care of public property is, however, to be seen in the workers' rest houses mentioned above. These are usually the former country seats of the wealthy. In most cases they have been redecorated, the walls being distempered white or in some light color, and the woodwork, in all cases where paint existed, is enameled in white. The furniture in the living rooms (pictures, hangings and carpets, etc.) is usually that left by the former occupants. These rooms often contain Louis XV furniture, with gilded legs and satin covers. The Delegation entered many such rest houses, which had not been decorated for three years. Hardly a mark had appeared on the walls and the white enameled doors, and there was hardly a chip off the gold-legged chairs. The authorities state that the effect of these rest houses and their luxurious fittings is much greater than any form of propaganda and legislation. A worker or a peasant after a month's holiday in these surroundings returns to his own home armed with a duster and pots of paint, which he utilizes in his spare time by cleaning and decorating his own quarters.

Housing

Housing in Moscow and in many large towns [illegible] Russia presents very serious and peculiar difficulties. During the first period of the Revolution, when private property was confiscated, a general re-shuffle of quarters took place. Little or no system was followed in the forcible requisition of blocks of residential flats. A natural tendency of the industrial workers was to seize any building in the vicinity of their place of work. The non-industrial class was thus forced to find accommodation how and where it could.

CARPENTERS IN DETROIT TAKE SWATS AT FAKER

Bully Started Fight; Others Ended It

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 16.—On Aug. 3, Jack Welsh, then president of Local Union 19 of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, stated that any members who had not signed Hutcheson's "yellow dog pledge" by August 10 would be thrown out of the meeting. Welsh has been feeding on dirt from the hands of executive board member Potts, General Organizer Botterill, and their local flunkey Sharrock so long that few considered his remarks seriously.

Last night at the meeting of Local 19, Welsh seemed to have forgotten his threats, or thought better of them, and all was brotherly love until President Varden, another yellow tool, refused to accept a motion to refuse to pay a bill for six months per capita tax to a district council which Hutcheson put out of business just about that long ago. After some discussion, one brother who loses patience quickly with these quibbling flunkeys, knocked the president gently from his platform. Altho the president had already changed his mind about the motion, another of Hutcheson's curs by the name of Marks struck a young militant by name of Zekit with a gavel, and then things started. Everyone in reach took a swing or a kick at Marks (many did not care to dirty their hands) and whining like the cur he is, he ran from the meeting and did not return. Welsh, who made so much noise last week, sat at a table writing intently and did not even look up to see the fate of his fellow worm, a very wise tho' cowardly policy.

The Second Lesson.

This is the second time a president of Local 19 has ne[illegible] a fistic massage before he could "see" a motion which had a bearing on this struggle between the rank and file and these union wreckers attempting to carry our Hutcheson's czaristic policy.

In the discussion following the meeting, some oldtimers remarked that the only way to peace and unity in this district is to take Botterill and Potts to the station and give them a farewell party, and to put Sharrock and Fish on one of the many scab jobs in Detroit until they learn something of the problem of men carrying tools in Detroit. Others remarked that if Hutcheson were any man at all, he would bring his big carcass to Detroit to stop some of the blows his stupidity brings down on his stupid dupes. Being cunning as well as cowardly and stupid, he stays clear of the broils his feeble belligerency engenders. He is as yellow as the fat saps whom he keeps on the payroll of the union.

GERMANS TRYING TO MAKE DAWES PLAN SAVE THEM

But If They Do, Other Nations Are Ruined

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—In Germany's battle to re-establish her basis for barter with other nations, Germany will drop her prohibitive duties against foreign goods provided nations with whom she bargains grants a similar concession to German goods.

The United States, alone of the important capitalist nations, has negotiated permanent commercial treaty relations with Germany, the treaty embracing a most favored nation clause.

Germany is now launching a diplomatic campaign for the negotiation of treaties with the most important countries of the western hemisphere, Europe and the far east.

By these negotiations Germany hopes to tear down the barriers against her products and to obtain for German made goods sufficiently favorable treatment that they will suffer no disadvantage in competition with the output of other nations. Germany has to get this concession or fail to carry out the Dawes plan. This is her trump card.

Officials explained that the United States will reap the benefit of any preferential treatment given to other nations by Germany. This advantage lies in the treatment accorded American exports to Germany.

Contradiction to Cause Unemployment.

The United States is obligated to give to German goods as favorable treatment as that extended to products of other importing nations. However, if German goods, made by driven slaves of the Dawes plan, do come in, it means widespread unemployment there.

In spite of the "most favored nation" agreements, many nations find clever methods of discriminating against American made products in favor of those of other European countries.

Both the tariff commission and agents of the state and treasury departments have studied these discriminations, but so far no m[illegible]s of meeting the situation has been brot forward.

PROGRESSIVE MINERS' HEAD IN CALL FOR A UNITED FRONT OF ALL MINERS AGAINST OPERATORS

By ALEX REID

The situation in the coal mining industry thruout the country has reached a crisis, and an industrial battle is looming, which if not immediately settled satisfactory may have serious and far reaching consequences. The anthracite miners are demanding an increase of wages with a change in working conditions, and are determined to fight for their demands.

The living conditions of the hard coal miners in Pennsylvania are deplorable, and the operators of the anthracite have repudiated the meager demands of the coal diggers. The gravity of the situation in the hard coal fields has its counterpart in the bituminous fields, and a joint struggle of gigantic proportions is looming and due to break on September 1. The demands are an increase in wages, change in working conditions, and the enforcement of the Jacksonville agreement.

Government Strike Breaking Ahead.

The government is reported to be considering intervention, and force arbitration of the dispute. From very reliable sources we are informed that John L. Lewis may join the hard coal and bituminous issue should arbitration of the question be forced on the miners.

The social conditions of the miners are almost beyond description, their wives and families thruout the field covered by the Jacksonville agreement are starving as a result of long unemployment, which in turn is a direct result of the Jacksonville agreement itself, which Lewis saddled on the necks of the miners without their consent.

Plot Against the Membership.

The agreement forced on the miners at Jacksonville is for a term of three years, for no other reason than to give the coal operators, collaborating with the union officials, time to squeeze out of the industry the militant left wingers who were repudiating the false leadership of the Lewis machine. Lewis clearly saw the progressive miners were not going to submit tamely to the treason of the gang any longer, and the three-year agreement was necessary to enable Lewis to expel the militant miners in as diplomatic a manner as possible.

It is a well known fact that Lewis and the coal mine operators have joined hands to squeeze 200,000 miners out of the industry, and in the squeezing process the militant miners who have been fighting against the Lewis machine (because of his refusal to fight for nationalization of the mines and a militant program in behalf of the miners), are the particular ones to be squeezed out. Proof of this is found in the expulsions of the progressive miners in Illinois, Pennsylvania, Nova Scotia, Alberta, and in fact all over the country.

Betrayal After Betrayal.

The militant miners have very good reason to know the present tactics of Lewis in the anthracite, permitting the coal operators to hold up the joint scale negotiations, and tolerating the demand for arbitration, is a forerunner of the same kind of treachery that the miners received in December, 1919, when Lewis said: "We cannot fight our government."

The miners well remember the coal operators were defeated in the strike of 1919. The evidence was found in the fact that the Railroad transportation system was demoralized for lack of coal. Factories were closed down also for want of coal and transportation, and in fact the miners had victory practically within their grasp, and that victory was acknowledged on every hand, when Lewis surrendered to Judge Anderson (to save his cowardly person from detainment) and forced the miners to forego the fruits of their well fought battle.

Coke Miners Sold Out

However that was not the only instance of his contemptible treachery to the miners, we well remember his treachery to the coke miners in Pennsylvania. Here, as in many other places the miners were the victims of his treason. In 1919 the coke field coal diggers came out on strike to support the United Mine Workers, who were on strike at that time, and when the strike was settled, and the union miners went back to work, Lewis refused to recognize the coke miners and by his refusal to do so, aided the Pennsylvania coal barons to defeat the men who made possible the victory of the United Mine Workers in that strike.

The Nova Scotia, Alberta, and West Virginia miners, and in fact the miners throughout the whole mining industry have been betrayed in similar a manner.

Always Oppose Arbitration

At all times the coal diggers have bitterly fought arbitration, knowing from experience that arbitration has been used against them whenever they submitted their dispute to it. An outstanding case occured a couple of years ago in Pennsylvania, and when victory was practically within the grasp of the fighting colliers, their officials joined hand with the coal operators, agreed to arbitration, and were defeated.

The present maneuvering of Lewis is indicative that another treacherous move is on foot and the Progressive Miners Committee point to the fact, that if John L. Lewis was sincere, and desired to aid the bituminous miners, he would not need to link up or tolerate the Jacksonville agreement with any suggestion of arbitration of the Anthracite question.

Move That's Suspicious

The fact that Lewis is even tolerant of such suggestions have put the miners on their guard. It was and is now the duty of Lewis to call out on strike every miner to force the coal operators to live up to the Jacksonville agreement, and in view of the fact that the hard coal operators are refusing the miners their meager demands, a more logical time could not be found to bring out on strike the whole of the miners in America, and fight to a finish for the demands of the American miners as a whole.

The impending struggle of the miners must be broadened, and made a National strike as the fight for wages and conditions all over the American mining fields is the same and nationalization of the mines is the battle cry of the miners even in spite of John L. Lewis. The miners are also demanding Government relief for the unemployed, and a bitter fight will be made for this in the coming battle.

Where Progressives Stand

It is very noteworthy that the Progressive Miners Committees have pointed out the fact that the Jacksonville agreement had ceased to exist a long time ago, but John L. Lewis has repeatedly and continuously misled the miners on that score. Lewis now admits the truth of our assertion that the Jacksonville agreement is being violated at will and practically admits the coal operators have destroyed it.

The Progressive Miners Committee demands that Lewis join the issue of the hard and soft coal miners, and go into the struggle with a solid front of the coal miners in America, in the fight for their present concrete demands.

Building Boom Is Still On, Claim of City Commissioner

If building in Chicago keeps up its present pace the record of 1923, when permits were issued for $329,604,312 will be exceded by at least $25,000,000, Commissioner Frank E. Dougherty said.

He gave out the figures for the first seven months of this year as $225,917,650. In 1923 for the same period the figures were $204,887,112 and last year $179,510,270.

Dougherty's estimate of a total of $350,000,000 for the year is based on data showing that more than 60 per cent of the total is issued during the first half of the year.

RAIL STRIKE IN INDIA LOST, ALL LEADERS FIRED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, August 16.—(FP)—Three thousand leaders of the striking 15,000 workers on the North Western Railway of India are blacklisted from employment as the strike ends, reports reaching Indians in New York indicate.

Poverty and lack of outside aid helped the company beat the workers who stayed out over two months. The workers are very poorly paid and live most of the time on one small meal a day. The workers belong to the union of India railwaymen.

Grafting Governor Will Be Released; Why Not; He's G. O. P.

McCray's case will be taken up in detail by the pardon attorney's office at the department of justice, according to Sargent.

It was indilated that a delegation who met Sargent yesterday relative to MrCray's pardon made a favorable impression.

FRANCE RILED BY AMERICAN IMPERIALISM

Houghton Puts Screws on Despite Yowls

PARIS, August 16—Suspicion and frank hostility were apparent today in the French attitude toward the intervention of American Ambassador Houghton in the Franco-German parleys in London over the German security pact. So outspoken are the criticisms of a section of the French press that further diplomatic denials may be expected from embassy circles in the British capital.

Kilkenny Cats at It Again.

Both the political enemies of Premier Painleve and M. Briand, the foreign minister, as well as those critics who correctly attribute to the United States money making as the sole motive and moving force in American diplomacy, have seen their opportunity. The fact that Ambassador Houghton is reported as having told M. Briand that the United States favors a bi-lateral pact with Germany is being used with telling effect.

Of course the settlement of the French war debt to the United States comes in for heated discussion and the Midi advocates a combination of the European debtor nations to resist payment to Uncle Sam.

The Echo de Paris, ultra-nationalist organ of the naval and military cliques, declared that "Germany mobilized Ambassador Houghton to make the French agree that the pact should be bi-lateral, meaning that Germany can declare war against France without the sanction of the league of nations."

"A League of Debtors."

"Hoguhton's role along the Thames bank is obvious because of his long stay along the 'Spreebank,'" was the ironical comment of L'Action Francaise, the royalist organ, which hates everything favoring of democracy, and adds: "Houghton, who was associated with the Dawes plan, is well prepared to lead in the subjection of European debtor countries."

Headlining "When Do We Organize a league of Debtor Nations?" the Paris Midi declared that the war debts were incurred collectively and payment should be discussed collectively.

KLUXERS USE TEAR GAS IN NEW ENGLAND

Pitched Battle Watched By Hundreds

READING, Mass., Aug. 16—Clashes between 400 hooded klansmen and 300 antis began last evening at the hour set for the klan meeting on the Smith farm at Franklin Junction, on the main automobile highway to Andover.

Between 200 and 300 men and women, who watched the gathering of the klan from motor cars parked on the highway, left their automobiles and stood in the street.

Suddenly a volley of shots was fired in the direction of the watchers, police say. The crowds in the road sought cover.

Telephone calls to the state police were immediately sent out.

Meanwhile, the battle between the klansmen and antis began in earnest. The klansmen retreated to a circle in the center of the farm.

Soon a cry of alarm arose from those in the highway. Tear gas bombs, such as used in the world war—apparently a new weapon with the klansmen—had been released.

For a short time it seemed as if the klansmen had routed their opponents. Automobilists moving along the highway felt the tear gas but sped on to escape. The antis moved back from the field. The antis, however, recovered from the effect of the tear gas and resumed the attack. Stones and clubs were hurled at the klansmen.

Reading police, with drawn revolvers, rushed in between the two factions. A truce was ordered under penalty of death. Other police, from nearby towns, joined the Reading policemen.

At this point in hostilities, four motor cars loaded with klansmen swept out of the klan meeting field. The automobiles were headed directly at the crowd in the highway. There was a mad scurry to get out of the way of the wheels of the motors. The crush of people was so great, however, that the cars were stopped, hand-to-hand battles ensued.

From the running boards of the automobiles, anti-klansmen lunged heavy blows at klansmen. The klansmen returned the attack. Noses were smashed and eyes battered.

Robert Watson the occupant of one car, driven by his son, defended himself by swinging his revolver about his head. His son's clothing was nearly torn from his body. Police arrested Watson on a charge of carrying a revolver but he displayed a state permit and was released.

Morask and Davidson were arrested during the battle about the klan cars.

As the automobiles backed up into the klan meeting field, the two forces—klan and anti-klan—began drawing up in battle array.

State troopers began coming up on motorcycles from barracks as far away as Framingham. They joined with the Reading police in forming a lane thru which the klansmen's cars were allowed to leave the field. In the confusion attendant upon the getaway there were many automobile collisions.

The two prisoners were hurried to police headquarters here and placed under guard. State troops were deployed about the building and all approaches were guarded. Police estimated 500 men were assembled in Reading Square, a short distance from the police station, awaiting the taking of the prisoners to Woburn court.

SKYPILOTS HIT HARD WHEN OILY BUBBLE BURSTS

Baptist Minister Lays Blame on "Bad Luck"

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 16—Rev. William E. Rutledge, retired baptist minister and editor of a St. Louis church organ, is alleged to have drawn some 2,000 of the nation's ecclesiastical brethren into a half million dollar oil fraud bubble, today attributed his predicament to "bad luck" in denying that his petroleum company had been organised with the ultimate purpose of fraud.

Under $3,000 bond, Rev. Rutledge was exceedingly downcast over the collapse of his enterprise, the Economy Oil Company of Kirkwood, Mo.

His arrest came yesterday within a few hours after his return from San Antonio, Texas. Federal inspectors revealed they had been investigating the organization for more than a year.

Stockholders in the former minister's company represented almost every state in the union and 90 per cent were ministers of the gospel, postal inspectors revealed.

Child Tells of Her Slavery, 16 Hours a Day in Bean Fields

NEW YORK, August 16—(FP)—How children work with their parents in American bean fields is told by an Italian girl now 17. "Ever since I can remember I have spent every summer in the bean fields," she begins. She says her mother used to carry her around in her apron.

"It was hard for the children because many mornings they had to go to work without any breakfast because they couldn't get any milk. . . At the begining of the season we begin our days' picking about 7 o'clock in the morning to seven at night. But during the middle of the season we had to work about 16 hours, from 4:30 in the morning . . . One of the hardest things was to carry the bag of beans to be weighed.

"I remember of a little boy about 12 years old carrying on his back about 110 pounds of beans. He just about could walk. Toward the end of the season the weather got very could but everybody had to pick all day long for about 30 or 40 cents."

Judge Lyle and the Amalgamated

According to American law those accused of crime are assumed to be innocent until they are proven guilty. This, however, is only an assumption. It is one of those handy fictions that are used to fool the workers into believing that they are equal with the capitalists before the law.

As a matter of fact the workers are always assumed to be guilty whether they are proven innocent or not, in the eyes of the capitalists and their retainers.

Judge Lyle proved this a few days ago, when he referred to the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers who were brought before him by Lieutenant Grady, as "criminals." He immediately assumed that every charge made against them by Grady was true. In placing the exorbitant bail of $105,000 on Patsy de Rosa, an Amalgamated member. Lyle proved conclusively that he considers the Amalgamated Clothing Workers a criminal conspiracy against the capitalist system in general and against the International Tailoring company in particular.

Had a capitalist been brot into court on the flimsy charges framed up by Mike Grady, former boon companion of the Dean O'Bannion gangsters, it is quite likely that Grady would experience another one of his frequent suspensions. How did Grady get the faked-up evidence that he used against the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers? By simply going to Ray Reeder of the International Tailoring Company and taking that open shopper's word as gospel. Grady did not care whether Reeder was telling the truth or not. He had at least one powerful motive for making the raid on the Amalgamated, outside of his chronic willingness to do any dirty work that will bring him money.

Grady spent months in "exile" because of his connection with the high-jacking ventures of the late gangster Dean O'Bannion. Dean was also a political ally of state attorney, Robert E. Crowe. Note, how this interlocking directorate of gangsters, capitalists, police, judges and states attorney works! Grady was recently suspended for getting mixed up in a drunken brawl in Colosimo's Cafe, in the notorious red light district, where the Johnny Torrio booze and vice ring make their headquarters. Lieutenant Grady just got back on the force thru political influence a few hours before he raided the Amalgamated headquarters. Grady's brother is a representative in the Illinois assembly.

It is on the word of a man with such a shady reputation as Lieutenant Grady that Judge Lyle held sixteen trades unionists in heavy bail and one on a $105,000 bond.

Judge Lyle is playing up to the big business elements and is working hand in hand with the police department. The International Tailoring Company, resorted to raiding the Amalgamated headquarters owing to its failure to secure an injunction preventing picketing. They could not find any legal means to prevent picketing which is not forbidden by the Illinois state laws.

The arrested men are held in the detective bureau contrary to law. Judge Lyle knew this. He also knew of Grady's shady record. Yet he showed his colors by blurting out: "I am confident that some of those who are before me are guilty of slugging, and if I could indentify them, I would send them to jail for five years."

Thus spoke the capitalist judge. And yet there are workers who still believe that they can secure justice under capitalism.

They cannot. Judge Lyle is only one of thousands of his kind. He is a servant of the capitalists of Chicago. He is there to do their work. And he does it. He is class conscious. Judge Lyle would not vote for a Communist candidate for office, because he knows the Communists are out to serve the working class. Unfortunately the workers are not as class conscious as Judge Lyle. If they were, a capitalist mayor would not be in the city hall. A capitalist chief of police would not have charge of the armed forces of the city and capitalist judges would not be on the bench to send trades unionists to jail.

The trade union movement of Chicago must fight side by side with the Amalgamated in this struggle. The Chicago Federation of Labor should take action. Every local union in the city should let Judge Lyle know what they think of his action in putting a union man on the same level as the high jacking gangsters, that Lieutenant Mike Grady protects occasionally.

A Renegade Squeals

When Paul Smith, the paid disrupter of the American Federation of Labor, went to work in Minneapolis to oust the Communists out of the Trades and Labor Assembly, he promised the rank and file that once the hated reds were elimitated, the employers would take to the unions like a brown bear to her cubs. But Smith's promise has not been fulfiled.

The employers had the best of the bargain. The employers knew what they were about and so did Paul Smith. They knew that once the Communists were eliminated the militancy would evaporate from the assembly like water out of a kettle on a fire.

Not content with getting rid of the Communists, the employers are now howling for the scalps of the renegades who dropped their progressive camouflage at the first signal of danger to their meal tickets.

The employers are now branding the renegades as reds. This is positively unfair, cry the renegades. It is giving the labor movement of Minneapolis a bad name, they whine. Communists believe in the class struggle while the renegades believe in co-operation with the employers.

The renegades are willing to do anything that is required of them. But the employers are suspicious. They prefer the old reliable frauds who never stayed from the feed bag. There is nothing hurts a traitor's feeling so much as to learn that the price of his treachery is not forthcoming.

Striking workers are criminals in the columns of the capitalist press. Yet the workers support the capitalist press! Why not support the DAILY WORKER that helps you i nyour fight?

The Reorganization of the Workers Party

LETTER TO THE C. E. C. FROM THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

To the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America.

DEAR Comrades: During the visit of the representatives of your Party to Moscow we held with them a consultation on the immediate tasks of the Workers Party in the sphere of organization and the methods of the carrying out the decision of the Plenum as expressed in the Theses of Comrade Zinoview on Bolshevization in the Section dealing with the duties of the Workers Party, the second point of which (the decision) states that it is necessary "to fuse the national sections of the party into a real united party." The conclusion arrived at in our consultations on this question was unanimously agreed to by all present.

We observe with great satisfaction that the Workers Party has recently been achieving undoubted successes in its political activities. Nevertheless, it may be safely said that these successes would have been greater if the Workers Party possessed a proper organizational structure. Every member of the Workers Party is aware that there is no party or political organization in the United States, apart from the Workers arty, which really stands for, and endeavors to defend the interests of all toilers. Nevertheless, every member of the Workers Party will admit that this party—the only party of the workers and farmers—is still far from having received from the majority of the workers, the interests of whom it is out to defend, that recognition which the party should and can win. It is obvious to every comrade how much stronger would be the position of the American workers and farmers if they followed the Workers Party and if the influence of the latter were the dominating factor in the movement of the masses. Therefore, every member of the Workers Party should ask himself the question, what in reality is preventing his party from gaining that influence?

PROVIDED the policy of the party is a correct one it may be safely said that one of the chief reasons for such a state of affairs lies in the defects of the organizational structure of the Workers Party, which are greater than in any other party and therefore affect it to a greater extent than other parties. It cannot be denied that it will be extremely difficult for the party to consolidate its successes, and that the extension and interpretation of its political influence will be hampered very considerably both in respect of embracing by our agitation the wide sections of the workers and farmers who are still outside our influence and by winning over those workers from other mass organizations which our enemies still hold firmly in their grasp, as well as in the protection of our movement from possible destruction by the bourgeoisie, if our party does not posses a well-constructed organization. This consideration, in our opinion places before the Workers Party, with greater insistence than ever before the question of a correct organizational structure.

For a party of the working class a proper structure is, first and foremost, a guarantee that its decision will be carried into effect by all its organs and members.

WHAT importance can a party have, what part can it play in the political life of the country, if its decisions remain only on paper, are not carried into effect, and assert no influence on real affairs? The party must know how to act, counting upon the whole of its membership and the help of its organs. For that purpose its organization must be a united and centralized one. If its organs and members act in an isolated way, each after its own fashion, it is hopeless to expect useful and desirable results. Moreover, the party must be able to bring the masses into the movement, which demands that its structure should be such that its organs can penetrate deeply into the non-party mass of the workers, exert influence over them, organize them for the struggle, guide their organizations and also introduce the decisions and slogans of the party into those organizations.

The present organizational structure of the Workers Party is not adapted to these requirements. Those advantages which centralized activity bring a working class party are absent in the Workers Party. It does not even possess a real single guiding party center capable of directing the activities of the party as a whole, nor does unity prevail in its ranks. A party of the working class can, if it has a centralized party organization, simultaneous lay duties upon the whole party and direct the whole of its forces towards putting them into effect. The result is a situation in which the party is able to carry out its policy firmly, uniformly, and without distortion, in all parts of the country and in all organizations in which the party has its members, and, in fact, everywhere where the members of the party come into contact with the non-party workers and peasants. The federal structure of the Workers Party stands in the way of such a successful conduct of its work. Each of its 17 national sections represents almost a separate and independent party within the Workers Party, enjoying a large portion of independence in relation to the leading organ, the Central Committee. The National Sections have their own district, town, and national bureaus; they summon their own conferences and collect their own membership contributions. The fundamental organizational requirement of a party defending the interests of the whole working class, namely, that the decisions of the leading party organs should be carried out by all the party organizations, is to a large extent dependent in the Workers Party on whether the national organizations are willing or not, to carry out the corresponding decisions of the superior party bodies. Therefore, unlike a centralized party, the Workers Party as it is at present constituted, is not a party of united action. The party members of the various national sections are not fused together into one whole, but divided among themselves. They do not discuss questions interesting all the workers and the whole party. They live the exclusive life of their own national minority, or of its working class section, so isolated from the American workers that they even do not sufficiently know the direct interests of the whole working class of the United States. As a result, instead of unity of action, instead of general decisions which would unite and consolidate the party, disorganization and differences inevitably arise in the course of its work.

OF course, we do not for a moment believe that this state of affairs exists because the various national sections desire it, or that it is not in any way due to objective causes and the past development of the party. It is also clear that the absolutely essential reorganization of the Workers Party, with a view to centralization, cannot be at once accomplished upon the mere orders of the Central Committee. It is quite natural that in so nationally diversified a party as the American party centralization cannot be as easily achieved as in some other working class parties. But the abnormality of the present situation must be made clear to every member of the Workers Party whatever national section he belongs to. It is necessary that every member of the Workers Party fully realize the absolute necessity for centralization, the actual harmfulness of the present divisions in the ranks of the party, and realize the part which national sections ought to play, in such a party like the American party. If that is achieved, then whatever the difficulty which the task of reorganization may encounter, their solution will be possible.

The beginnings of the reorganization above referred to are already to be found in the successes achieved in the work of the existing factory nuclei in the Workers Party. It is essential that the formation of these nuclei should be vigorously proceeded with, a task which according to the DAILY WORKER has already been well begun. The factory nucleus is the best organizational method of uniting comrades belonging to different nationalities and bringing them into contact with the working class masses. Therefore, the work of properly organizing the party will be best accomplished by the organization of factory nuclei. The party should also make it its duty to form street nuclei. In these nuclei the national factor will no longer count, too. We will not dwell here on the question as to how the factory and street nuclei should be formed, since that question is dealt with in special instructions and resolutions, from which you may obtain all necessary information. We would only refer to one fact which we learned from the reports in the DAILY WORKER on the work of the factory nuclei. In these reports the names of active comrades are openly mentioned, and facts are cited which may assist the employers in taking repressive measures against the members of the nuclei. We desire to draw your attention to the fact that a nucleus, without isolating itself from the non-party workers and clerical employes ought so to conduct its work as not to permit the employer or his agents to see how the nucleus is working or to ascertain who its members are. The activities of a nucleus must be concealed from the eyes of the enemy and yet kep close to the working class masses (see our letters of December 6, 1923, No. 1313, and January 10, 1925, No. 490 on this subject).

ANOTHER essential step in the reorganization of the party should be the creation of united party committees in all towns and urban districts, which would unite under their leadership all the members of the party residing in the given town or town-district, independent of nationality. The town and town district committees which according to your delegation, exist in New York and its districts, cannot meet the demands of a centralized party, since they, in fact, do not guide the party work; the work is not carried out in the various national groups according to the instructions of the New York town or district committees. But the situation is still worse in other towns where there are not town district committees, and where there is no sign of united party work, since if the national groups receive its instructions at all regarding party work, it is only from the bureau of their own national section.

While devoting every possible attention to the creation of nuclei, the party must also make it its aim to set up district and town party committees. In the town district—into which the large town must be divided, if that has not already been done—meetings must be summoned of all the members of the nuclei already formed and from all the national groups still existing in the given town-district. If the number of members in such a district is too large to make it feasible to summon a general meeting, a town district conference may be summoned instead consisting of delegates from all the nuclei and the still existing national and other groups of the given district. At the district meeting, or conference, a single town district committee for all the national groups or nuclei should be elected to carry out all the work of the district. Town committees should be elected in a similar way in small towns, where it is not advisable to mark off town district. In very large towns, such as New York, Boston, Chicago, etc., the town committee should be elected at the conference of towr district delegates elected at the district meetings or conference.

Some remark should be made concerning the election of town district committees and the town committees in small towns.

WE must make one, very important observation regarding the composition of town district and town committees. They must not be federal bodies, or, so to peak, coordinating bodies, or, so to speak, co-ordinating gards himself as the representative of "his" national group and believes his tasks to be to defend the interests of "his own" national organization. Therefore during the preparations for summoning and conducting the electoral meeting (or conference) it must be clearly emphasized that at the meeting the participants must regard themselves as members of a united party and not as representatives of national sections, and that questions, even those which concern their sections, can only, and will only, be considered from the point of view of the whole party. Similarly, the lists of candidates for the district and town committees must not be drawn up on the principle of proportional national representation. In the election to the committee, one must consider the capacity of the comrades elected to guide the party organization, and the condidates must therefore be put forward only on INDIVIDUAL considerations. Nevertheless, the candidates should be selected from all the large national sections, so that the future committee should be guaranteed contact with them. This remark applies also to the elections to the Central Committee.

It is equally important for the rule should be adopted that where factory nuclei already exist their representatives should unconditionally be elected to the party committees, and in numbers guaranteeing the influence of the factory nuclei in the affairs and work of the given party organization. If the factory nuclei are already sufficient numerous, their representatives must be given the majority of the party committees.

THIRDLY, it is equally important to bear in mind the necessity of arranging the general meetings of the nuclei, the party meetings, the conferences and the meetings of the party organs (committees, etc.) in such a way that the comrade belonging to the various national groups should be able to take part in the meetings, themselves speaking and understanding everything that is said—in a word that they should feel no inconvenience from the fact that they know no language but their own. To that end it is essential that at all meetings where comrades from different national groups attend there should be translators, they should be so organized as to hamper the proceedings of the meeting as little as possible.

One more remark regarding the size of the town districts. In certain towns the town districts are inordinately large both as regards territory and the number of inhabitants. For instance, in New York, Brooklyn, which has a population of two million, is regarded as a single town district. Of course, it is impossible to cover and be of service to Brooklyn without dividing it up. In determining the size of districts the possibiltes of helping them must be borne in mind. It should also be borne in mind that the town districts must coincide with the muncipality, or unite within their territory several municipalities wards, without breaking them up.

When the Workers Party in the towns adopts the system of town district and town party committees common to all nationalities it will already be possible to some extent to carry into effect the decisions of the leading party centers throut the whole organization, from top to bottom and to carry them into the factories, workshops and other undertakings. The question of district committees and organizations will then be solved with less difficulty.

The election of town district and town committees—which can be proceded with even before nuclei have been formed in the majority of the factories—is, after the formation of nuclei, the second radical step towards the re-formation of the federal-national organization of the Workers Party. With the growth of the nuclei the national organisations will cease to be the fundamental part of party structure, and will begin to play a different role.

How Not To Fight Loreism

By Rebecca Grecht.

The Communist International, in its recent decision on the controversy within our party, has been clear and definite in its determined stand against Lore and Loreism. It has called upon both leading groups in the party to unite to combat this tendency and its leaders. The Parity Commission has reiterated the statements and demands of the Comintern. The struggle against Lore and Loreism becomes therefore the task of all leading elements in the party, and must be undertaken by the membership in every section of the party. In our young movement, first hewing out its leadership and cementing its ranks on the basis of Leninism, this is a vitally necessary task. The Bolshevization and unification of our party depends upon it. No compromise on this issue can be tolerated.

The problem of the struggle against Lore and Loreism, while it exists for the entire party, is particularly important in New York. This is the seat of Loreism in the party, manifesting itself in the Volkszeitung and the German Bureau, in the Jewish Federation, in the needle trades group, and in some important English branches. It is here, where the leading figures of the Lore group carry on their activity, that the fight is concentrated. It is here that the sincerity, firmness, and determination of the majority and minority groups in the struggle against Loreism can best be tested.

The minority in New York have been loud in their verbal protestations of opposition to Loreism. With great oratory, they have declared their intention, in speeches, of rooting out all remnants of the 2½ International tendency in our party. An examination of their recent activity, however, establishes the fact that the minority is not sincere in its struggle, and is in actuality tending to sabotage the attempts of the party to eradicate Loreism from our ranks.

We had several instances of this before the decision of the Parity Commission was made. Comrade Gitlow's needle trades resolution, by which the opportunist group in the needle trades was given indirect support and encouraged in their fight against the C. E. C., is a case in point. Equally so is the defense of Comrade Poyntz by the minority, their attempts to shield her from the attacks of the C. E. C. as a militant leader of Loreism, shown by their introduction of resolutions turning the attack against Poyntz into an attack against the C. E. C. But the most conclusive proof has been given in the elections for delegates to the New York District Convention, just concluded. Here was the acid test of the good faith of both majority and minority groups in their struggle against Loreism. And while the majority group has in several instances repudiated such action, the minority of New York has made deals with the Lore group for election purposes in important branches, has actively furthered such alliances wherever possible in order to obtain support for their candidates.

The aim of the minority is to capture the party convention at all costs. As one young comrade of the minority stated—and he was merely expressing the views of the leadership he follows—"We have one object—to defeat the majority. All means are justified to that end." In pursuit of this aim, the minority have demonstrated in New York their readiness to compromise with Loreism, to conveniently ignore Loreism where it suits their ends, to consummate or wink at alliances with outstanding Loreites where such guarantees the election of their delegates to the convention.

A number of cases can be cited. In the Jewish Harlem branch the minority and Lore groups had a common slate, and the votes of minority leaders of that branch elected Salzman, the leader of the Lore group in the Jewish Federation. Comrade Lifshitz local minority leader, was present at the meeting, supervising the alliance.

In the English Harlem branch, Comrade Amter, minority leader, entered into an alliance with Comrade Poyntz, designated by the Parity Commission as a Loreite to be combatted, resulting in the election, by the common votes of both groups, of two minority comrades and one Loreite, the latter of whom has severely criticized the C. E. C. for its fight against Poyntz and Lore.

In the Jewish Bronx branch No. 1, the minority and Lore groups brought in a common slate, including three representatives of each faction. One of the Loreites on the slate has been consistently fighting the C. E. C. policy in the needle trades and suports the opportunism of our comrades there. But she received the vote of every minority comrade in the branch.

These instances of election deals—and others can be given—definitely demonstrate that the minority in New York is not carrying out the decision of the Comintern and the Parity Commission to wage an organizational and ideological struggle against Loreism. The minority, who have been put on the defensive by these acts, seek to justify themselves by giving the Loreites with whom they have united clean bills of health, declaring them to be "good communists" because they stated they were no longer Loreites and were ready to support the minority.

Here we must point out a special problem faced by Communist parties in their struggle against the right wing. When the Communist International attacks the social democratic groups in the Communist movement, when it begins a campaign against the right wing forces within our ranks, that is a signal for a sudden wholesale desertion of this group by some of its leading followers. Those who have for years, perhaps, been consistent supporters of the right wing tendencies are overnight changed into "Comintern Bolsheviks." Communists, however, must beware of "paper" and "speech" desertions from the ranks of the right wing, must guard against such lightning changes brought about under the stress of special circumstances. We must carefully search beneath superficial declarations. Such changes, a more disciplined and conscious acceptance of the Communist line, must always be welcomed; but they are to be seen, not in eleventh hour election statements, but in actions, in policies.

When, on the eve of election of delegates to the party convention, statements repudiating their former connection are made by such comrades as Saltzman and Poyntz, who have been among the staunchest supporters of Loreism, these cannot be accepted as made in good faith. And when the minority in New York accepts such statements as justification for their alliances, we must declare this to be an evasion of the decision of the Comintern.

Nor can the boasted fight of the minority against Lore himself be their defense. For the struggle against the Two-and-One-Half International ideology in our party is not a struggle against Lore only. It is a struggle against Lore and Loreism—against not only the leading representative of this group, but against the tendencies represented by this comrade wherever they manifest themselves in the party. Were Lore alone the danger in the party, the whole matter could be easily settled. But the grave danger to our movement lies in the penetration of Loreism into the various sections of the party, in our political and industrial work, and in the activity of leading followers of Lore thruout our ranks. Not only Lore himself must be combatted, but Loreism and the followers of Lore. Any attempt to whitewash the leading Loreites means to give Loreism a new lease of life in the party.

We cannot conveniently shove the entire question of Loreism into the office of the Volkszeitung and the German bureau, and then proceed to make deals with prominent Loreites in other sections of the party. The struggle against Lore must proceed on all fronts. The election alliance made by the minority group in New York with the Lore group carries with it a dangerous significance. In effect, it means a denial of the existence of the Lore tendency and the Lore group in the party. In spells the liquidation of the struggle against Loreism in our ranks.

This must be unequivocally condemned as against the decision of the Communist Intrnational. The New York membership must repudiate such deals, must emphatically declare tnem to be acts of disloyalty to the Comintern. They must declare to the minority that oratory at membership meetings and articles in the press are not in themselves indications of determination to wage the struggle against Loreism, but that concrete actions will be considered, and upon them final judgement will res

Taxi Cabs Haul Strikebreakers

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE Paris correspondent of the Chicago Tribune declares that "England would sell her soul to get Germany's aid against Russia in the approaching war." This is the French view, he says. There is no doubt of the truth of this opinion. Britain is in a unenviable position, with danger threatening her from home and abroad. The truce in the struggle between the miners and the operators only postpones the inevitable. British capitalism is being carried toward the rocks on a revolutionary current, faster than most people think.

THE two sections of the left wing of the Hindoo nationalists have united. Disunity among the oppressed is always welcome to the ruling classes. Sometimes factionalism is inevitable and beneficial, when policies must be clarified and a right line adopted. But thru all factional struggles, the goal of unity on the basis of agreement on principle must be striven for. Those who persist in chronic factionalism have no place in the ranks of the revolutionary movement. They are only aiding the enemy.

IT is well that the Hindoo revolutionists have united. This is bad news to the British government. It is safe to say that when India breaks away from the empire the power of Great Britain is shattered. And Britain is now waging unofficial war on the Soviet Union, because she knows that the Soviet government is looked upon as a friend by all the oppressed people of the east.

THE Morroccan campaign is liable to get France into serious difficulties. Marshal Petain, returned from the front with the news that France needs 500,000 men in order to whip Abd-el-Krim. Can France muster half a million men for a campaign against a people struggling for their freedom? It will be much harder to excite the national prejudice of the French workers against the Riffians than it was against the Kaiser. There is now in France also a Communist Party which has already shed lustre on the banner of the Communist International by its gallant fight against the French government over the Riffian war.

BESIDES having trouble in the Riff, France has a big fight on in Syria. The fact that Britain is aiding France's enemies does not add to the equanimity of the French ruling class. An undersecretary of the French foreign office had his pockets picked in the British foreign office. Some diplomatic documents were missing. Perhaps the wily French diplomat left the documents where they could be seen by John Bull. John is afraid there is something on between Paris and Moscow that is not to his advantage.

IT can be said, that outside of the United State every other capitalist government in the world is skating on thin ice. The only two really stable governments in the world are

Florida Central Body for "Hands Off China"

PALMETTO, Fla.—In accordance with the "Hands off China" policy, the Trades and Labor Council of Sarasota, Fla., at its last meeting held Friday, July 24th passed a resolution callling upon the A. F. of L. to oppose United States intervention in China.

The resolution was introduced by a delegate from the Plumbers' local union, who outlined the aspirations and policies of all intervening powers, and the inevitable perpetuation of the existing lot of the working class, a yoke of misery and degradation. The courageous stand of the Chinese worker's and students' movements was also commented on.

Sarasota is the millionaires' west coast of Florida most popular winter resort. Twenty-seven millionaires have seen fit to follow in the foot steps of John Ringling "of curcus fame" who has a palatial home in these parts, and whose name is synonymous to Sarasota.

Cuneo Plant Is Losing Thousands of Dollars

The Cuneo Printing company is losing thousands of dollars every day, with the pressmen and feeders who refused to work under open shop conditions more certain than ever of final victory. Never was there such enthusiasm and determination to win exhibited by any set of workers.

It is reported that the Cuneo bosses are not at all satisfied with the services rendered to them by Berry and his gangsters. Not that the "Majah" is not doing the best he can, but he is defeated in his dirty work by the determination and the activity of the strikers.

Premier cabs have been seen hauling scabs to the Cuneo Printing plant. The pressmen and feeders want to know why members of one union should haul strikebreakers to help the bosses take the bread and butter out of the mouths of other union men? It is believed that when the matter is brot to the attention of the Premier drivers that they will refuse to transport the rats.

SOVIET RUSSIA AND JAPAN HAVE NO WAR ALLIANCE

Tokio Envoy Welcomed by Russians

MOSCOW, Aug. 17.—Recognition of Soviet Russia by Japan means that the two countries hope to develop profitable commercial connections, but the foreign observers who pretend to see in the step confirmation of the acceptance of a secret military treaty between the two obviously have ulterior motives in spreading a falsehood, declared the new Japanese ambassador to Soviet Russia, Tanaka Tokitsi, in an interview today.

Ambassador Tanaka explained that the declaration of forty Japanese businessmen who came with him from Tokio are concerned solely with the coal and oil concessions of Sakhalin, and for the time being will not attempt to extend their interests in Siberia.

"Just now the Japanese business interests in Sakhalin will have their hands full and will probably use all their capital developing the island. We hope, however, in the future, to expand our connections with Soviet Russia still more."

NO PRODUCTION IN STRUCK SHOP OF TAILOR BOSS

De Rosa Refuses to Come Out on Bail

The eighth week of the strike of the employes of the J. L. Taylor-International Tailoring Company began yesterday, and following a picnic in the Forest Preserve, District No. 4, they demonstrated by their mass picketing and their enthusiastic spirit at the strike meeting that the raids conducted on the headquarters or the Amalgamated Clothing Workers last week by Mike Grady, slugging cop, did not phase their solidarity. The International has failed in its attempt to star production in a rented plant at Rock Island.

All union members arrested in the raids, which were ordered by the International in a new desperate effort to break the strike, are now out on

BERRY HATCHES PLOT ON UNION IN BAWDY HOUSE

Notorious Dive Scene of Conspiracy

This is the fifth of series of articles exposing the treachery of the notorious labor faker George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmens' and Assistants Union. Berry became a great industrial magnate in Tennessee with the money he took out of the treasury of the international union.

George L. Berry's conspiracy to wreck the Chicago pressmens' union, for daring to call a halt on his looting of the treasury funds, was hatched in the notorious booze and gambling joint, known as the Vestibule Cafe, located on the North East corner of State and 22nd Street on the South Side of Chicago.

Present at the framing of the plot in "Polack Ben's" emporium were: Seymour Singer, now scab-superintendent in the Cuneo Printing plant; "Majah" George L. Berry; Sam Fox, former stoolpigeon for the police chief of Minneapolis and Shuford Marks, now Berry's leading scabherder in Chicago.

The plan was laid on the night of the very day that local No. 3 of the Pressmen had agreed to pay up their dues and assessments on condition that Berry would cut out his scabbery and turn over a new leaf. The strategy mapped out by Berry and his pals, was to goad the press-

CARPENTERS' OWN BUSINESS AGENT IS BOSSES' TOOL

Los Angeles Local Is Inflicted with Pest

By HELM VOLL.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 17.— A certain business agent of the carpenters is seemingly determined to leave no stone unturned to the end that the Carpenters' Union of this city may become a full-fledged company union.

Company Union Defined.

"A company union is one whose officres look after the interest of the employer first, last and all the time. While only pretending to be concerned about the welfare of the members," said a carpenter the other day. It may be so, but it looks like the official referred to is not even "pretending."

He Hates the Alien.

This agent wants us to ask our fellow workers the question: "Are you a citizen?" If they are not, it becomes our duty to see they are removed from the job. It makes no difference that they are members of the "Brother-

NO PROGRESS TOWARDS ANTHRACITE PEACE AS STRIKE DEADLINE NEARS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 17.—No progress had been made today towards a resumption of the conferences between anthracite miners and operators.

John L. Lewis, head of the miners, announced that he plans no conferences with any representatives of the operators. Major W. W. Inglis, who headed the operators' sub-committee which met the miners' representatives at Atlantic City, likewise said he knew of no new move to bring about a resumption of the conferences.

MIKE SAROVICH, RANK AND FILE LEADER OF ZEIGLER, ILL., LOCAL, DIES FROM KLAN BULLET WOUND

ZEIGLER, Ill., August 17.—Mike Sarovich, one of the most active and trusted of the militant miners of the Zeigler local of the United Mine Workers of America, died here yesterday from the results of a shot fired by Ellis Hargis, a member of the ku klux klan, at the local union meeting last Tuesday.

Sarovich was mortally wounded through the abdomen, by Hargis, who with other klansmen had come armed to the meeting along with Lon Fox and Cobb, the Farrington machine officials of the sub-district, to force the Zeigler miners back to work after they had spontaneously quit in protest against the removal of their trusted local union officers headed by Local President Henry Corbishley.

Fox and Cobb had unsuccessfully tried to compel the miners at the meeting to elect new local officers, and had adjourned the meeting after saying that if they failed to elect new officers they would appoint them.

The K. K. K. then started a fight, one knocking down an old man of 60 by the name of Farthing, and Hargis, a K. K. K., according to witness, drew a gun and fired, supposedly at a younger brother of Farthing, it being understood that the K. K. K. were seeking vengeance upon the Farthing brothers for renouncing the klan, to which they had once belonged.

Buried Monday.

Whomever Hargis was aiming at, the fact as testified to by miners is that his shot struck Sarovich and, passing thru his body, seriously wounded Hezzie Hindman, an official of the West Frankfort central labor body.

Sarovich, a rank and file miner who has earned the respect and affection of his brothers in the union, is to be buried today. Meanwhile the miners continue their cessation of work.

CHARGE AGAINST W. P. ORGANIZER IS DROPPED

Hold Simons in Jail for Eighteen Hours

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 17.—The Derby, Conn., authorities were put in a shameful predicament when they were compelled to back water and drop a charge of "breach of the peace for exhibiting indecent literature" lodged against District Organizer William Simons of the Workers Party, Connecticut District. Sunday afternoon Simons sold the Workers Monthly, August issue, at a picnic in Grassy Hill, Derby, run by the Weavers' Social Club of the Shelton Looms (Sidney Blumenthal's). A supernumerary officer ordered by the lieutenant to bring in anyone distributing or selling literature conducted Simons to the police station.

At the station, Simons refused to tell the lieutenant his pedigree unless he was told if he was under arrest, and if so, on what charge. This brot immediate transfer to a cell, Simons being denied the right to call up his lawyer.

Half an hour later a comrade came to the station, who had also been at the picnic, and was told that Simons was arrested for a breach of the peace and held for $500 bail. Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and $500 to be raised. Real estate from New Haven was not accepted, a certificate of ownership signed by the town clerk of New Haven being demanded. Comrades collected $360 in cash in four

SIGMAN STRIKES SNAG IN LOCAL 35'S PRESSERS

If You Go Home You Vote "Yes", Is Rule

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Another stormy meeting of pressers took place Thursday night when the Dress Pressers, a section of Local 35, held a business meeting.

The Joint Board tried to pack the meeting with cloak pressers, but this move was thwarted. President Sigman came to address the meeting, and he was booed and hissed and constantly interrupted during his speech. Many people left the hall when he began to talk. Others remained to shout such remarks as: "Who do you represent?" "To what Joint Board do you expect the pressers to be loyal? There is no Joint Board." "What have we to do with the clique that rules the union?" "Out with you."

Against the resolution favoring the Joint Board, Davidson was the principal speaker, and he spoke also against President Sigman.

At the end of the meeting the vote on the resolution was called in the special manner that the Joint Board seems to have adopted for all its "loyal" locals. The chairman said, "All those in favor of the resolution please rise—meeting adjourned." When everyone rose to go home it was counted as a vote and there was no call for "Noes."

FEDERATION OF LABOR DESERTS A. C. W. STRIKE

Agree to Obey Scab Order of Green

The Chicago Federation of Labor, by a vote of 63 to 23, decided at its meeting Sunday to abide by the order of President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor that they do not interfere with the scabbery of the United Garment Workers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The federation had written a letter to Green urging the executive council of the A. F. of L. to stop the organized scabbery of the United Garment Union, which has been sending strikebreakers into the shops of the International Tailoring company, where the employes, members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, are on strike.

Green repiled to the request that the Amalgamated be accepted into the A. F. of L. that it was unthinkable when another A. F. of L. union is in the field (the scab United Garment Workers) to accept the dual organization.

This was the letter which the Chicago Federation agreed to obey. They also agreed to accept the order of the executive council of the A. F. of L.

TRIPOLI JOINS AFRICAN REVOLT, ATTACKS ITALY

Natives Hold the Main Caravan Route

PARIS, France, Aug. 17.—The revolt of the African races against European imperialism has spread to Tripoli, where 700,000 Senussi Arabs are in rebellion against the rule of Italy. Since an Italian column was wiped out south of Benghazi, by the natives, the revolt has not been put down.

The column was proceeding south in war formation under the command of Major Ruggero, and its supply caravan was captured. Two hundred Italian troops were killed or wounded. The natives still control the main caravan route between Tripoli and Egypt.

Riffs Attack Melilla.

PARIS, France, Aug. 17.—The Riffians have launched a new offensive against the French invaders and are threatening Melilla, the Spanish stronghold.

The French and Spanish agents have made efforts to break the solidarity of the Moroccan groups by offering a separate peace to the Jebala, with political and economic autonomy, but the offer has been refused.

Spaniards Shoot Women.

The chief of the Spanish general staff has admitted the truth of reports that Riffian women were killed under his orders. "Our sentries have shot women when they were in gun-running parties," he said.

"The Riffs got much of their ammunition from the neutral Tangier zone, and at night women laden with arms and cartridges, with a few armed men scouts around them, have crossed the border. Our sentries have shot and killed in such cases."

In eleven district conventions of the Workers (Communist) Party held thruout the country on Sunday, the policies and leadership of the Central Executive Committee of the party received endorsement by a very large majority.

The Chicago convention, with 101 delegates, voted for the resolution of the C. E. C. majority by 73 against 28 for the minority. A full delegation of seven supporting the C. E. C. was elected.

In New York the vote was 107 for the majority against 93 for the minority. The delegation of 11 will be divided 7 and 4.

Buffalo supported the majority by a vote of 25 to 3, electing two majority delegates. Detroit was divided 33 majority, 23 minority, electing 2 majority and 1 minority delegates. Cleveland stood 36 against 17, electing 3 majority and 1 minority. The Minnesota district elected a full majority delegation of 5, and the California district followed suit with a delegation of 3. The contention of the Oregon and Washington district, by a vote of 34 to 2, elected 2 majority delegates. Connecticut elected 1 majority by a vote of 12, none against; two abstaining. "BEST PEOPLE" FORBID STRIKING MINERS TO PRAY FOR SCABS' SOULS

NEW YORK, August 17—"Wire churches here or Rotary Club or Lions Club or Chamber of Commerce," J. W. Hinton, secretary Henryetta, Okla., Coal Association, telegraphed to the American Civil Liberties Union, in asking them to investigate how the best people of Okmulgee, Okla., are supporting sheriff John Russell's ban on miners' outdoor prayer meetings for the souls of scabs.

Four miners have been arrested for violation of the sheriff's order and will be assisted in defense by E. C. Marianelli, Civil Liberties legal representative in McAlester, Okla.

Marianelli informed the Civil Liberties Union that "This is not a strike but a lockout. The miners worked nearly one year. They are still willing to work under the existing unexpired wage agreement. The operators have repudiated same arbitrarily.

"They have cut wages 30 per cent, evicting miners from company houses and prohibiting public meetings, picketing, parades and public prayers. The latter means, on the part of the miners' wives, was most effective in inducing scabs to quit work."

men into violating the laws of the international union so that he and his tools could step in and take the charter away. This is the policy he has followed ever since.

Berry Getting Rich.

While the members of the union were turning over their hard earned money to the international, thinking it would be used to better their conditions and provide for supperannuated members, Berry was building up a big industrial machine in Tennessee with union funds. It was his political ambitions that first brought the situation to the attention of the Chicago pressmen.

An editorial printed in the Rogersville Review a paper owned by Berry, proved to the pressmen that Berry was blossoming out into a second Henry Ford at their expense. The editorial which is given here prompted the members of local No. 3 Chicago to start an investigation into the business methods of the international officials. Here is the article as it appeared in Berry's paper on April 4, 1918:

"A suitable candidate for the democratic nomination for governor is of first importance to the commonwealth. The successor to Governor Rye should embrace his war time policies and should likewise be a man of established business ability in order to successfully cope with the many vexing questions that confront the government.

"The Hon. George L. Berry of Hawkins County, and a native of East Tennessee, embodies all of the requisites necessary to properly fulfill the functions of chief executive of the state.

"Mr. Berry's record in support of the goverment is second to none in America. As a member of the Committee on Industry of the National Council of Defense he has put forth possibly as great effort next to president Wilson as any one in maintaining industrial peace and a continuous industry in support of the war program. His time and services for month have been given to the government work without compensation.

"His selection as a member of the executive committee of war saving stamps movement indicates the fact that the goverment appreciates his services in the promotion of this great financial program.

"At this writing Mr. Berry is in Europe, as a member of a war commission appointed for the purpose of co-ordinating the industries of our allies with that of the United States. No commission has been tendered to any man that is of greater importance in the furtherance of the war program of this country than that on which Mr. Berry is serving at this time.

He's a Financial Wizard!

"The financial condition of the state and business judgement necessary for its conduct require the services of a man who is not only familiar with business but one who has made good in his own behalf. In this regard Mr. Berry is aptly suitable. He is one of the most extensive farmers in the state of Tennessee, one of the most extensive lumbermen, the director of a large mercantile corporation, the builder and owner of a large hydro-electric plant, a newspaper publisher and the founder and builder of a model little city, Pressmen's Home. His business success has been due to his great energies founded upon life's practical experience. He is distinctly a self-made man; there are no failures chalked against him. There is no record of inefficiency in any walk of life. He is a leader in his party, having taken part in the last three presidential elections as a speaker for the national party. He was a candidate for governor in 1912, but after being defeated for the nomination by Governor Rye took the stump in behalf of the nominee and rendered the greatest support in the matter of speeches of any man in the commonwealth in the interest of the democratic party.

Not Popular In Union, Tho!

"His loyalty to the gevernment is needed by the state. His experience as a man of national activity is needed by the state. His business knowledge will constitute a valuable asset for the state government. There is not a more popular man in East Tennessee than George Berry. As the democratic nominee for governor thousands of republicans will support him. He is eminently the strongest man the party can offer in November for the governor of the commonwealth. Sullivan county, the democratic county of East Tennessee offers George L. Berry for governor."

When the pressmen in Chicago, who furnish a large part of the international treasury, saw this article, they naturally were surprised, where did this "extensive lumberman" and this director of a large mercantile corporation, a hydro-electric plant, a newspaper publisher get the money with which he become so famous?

BRICKLAYERS ON STRIKE IN N. Y. AGAINST FULLER

Company Advertised for Non-Union Workers

WASHINGTON, August 17.—Altho the Bricklayers' International Union has maintained a policy of refusing to call strikes on hospital construction jobs, all members of the organization have quit work on a big hospital addition in New York City, according to General Secretary J. J. Gleeson. They stopped work when an individual member showed to them an advertisement published in a newspaper in Florida, advertising for bricklayers to work "open shop," 9 hours a day, on a job which the union had struck. The firm publishing this advertisement was the Geo. A. Fuller Co.—the same firm that has the hospital contract in New York. A copy of this advertisement is show in Gleeson's office.

The Fuller concern is the largest involved in the jurisdictional dispute between the Bricklayers and the Operative Plansterers' International; it became a party to the trouble when it signed an agreement with the Operative Plasterers recognizing their jurisdictional claims as against those of the bricklayers. Reports reaching the bricklayers' headquarters in Washington indicate that the work struck by them remains tied up, except for the employment of four non-union men in Florida to replace 25 bricklayers.

hood" of long duration and in good standing. They may have been born in America, North or South, yes, even in the U. S. A., but if now for any reasons whatsoever, they are without the rights of citziens, they are without the right to earn a living by following their trade, under union or any other kind of conditions, according to him.

Russia, I am told, gives workers citizens' rights the moment they put foot on Russian soil, without any red tape, regardless of nationality, race, or creed.

Our business agent goes so far as to deny members of his own "Brotherhood" the right to work for a living because of circumstances over which they had or have, in the last analysis and majority of cases, no control.

Flowers for Cheap Boss.

He recently proposed to the District Council that they buy a wreath of flowers and present same to an employer at the opening of an auditorium at 18th and Grand, thereby showing our appreciation of him having hired union carpenters. The council turned it down. He then bought the flowers with money from his own pocket and presented them as coming from himself and the carpenters.

When the business agent took the matter before his own local and the bill was allowed, he expressed regret over the inability of the council to buy flowers for their friends because of lack of money. On the job in question the carpenters worked for one dollar per day less than the scale.

Said a carpenter: "I see no sense in giving a boss, payink less than the union scale, flowers, while those who pay the scale and live up to union rules, receive nothing. None of them should get anything. The carpenter, or any worker for that matter, is entitled to all he gets and then some."

to keep their hands off the Amalgamated strike situation.

On on aye and nay vote the motion to accept Green's letter appeared defeated, but the machine stuck by President John Fitzpatrick in the rising vote.

A little later one delegate asked, "Are we to undrestand that we are to approve the strikebreaking of the United Garment Workers?" and Fitzpatrick answered: "That matter has been referred to the executive board."

Thus the Chicago Federation of Labor refuses to take decisive action against the tactics of the A. F. of L. union, and actively support the strike of the Amalgamated, despite the fact that the International Tailoring company is advertising for strikeberakers under the name of the A. F. of L.

American Workers Must Fight Plan to Enslave China with Dawes Plan

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the pendulum swings back from the occident to the orient. When the Dawes plan was imposed on Germany, the German workers charged that they had been Chinafied; that they had been reduced to the slavery of Far East coolies. Now another Dawes plan over China is proposed in an effort to Germanify the restless oriental republic.

The whole plan for subduing China is given serious consideration at the Institute of Politics still continuing at Williamstown, Mass., where cures are offered for discontented peoples everywhere, to salve their chains, and content them with their slavery.

Lionel Curtis, of London, raised the question that the League of Nations should be the instrument to net China into Dawes slavery. A Britisher should be the last to make such a proposition. It is the British that have made of Shanghai an English port, and with its imperialist allies have turned the streets of this Chinese city into a charnel house, staining crimson the pavements with workers' blood. British bait will not attract the Chinese to these new imperialist schemes.

Dr. William E. Rappard, Swiss member of the permanent mandates commission of the League of Nations, very evidently an inspired spokesman, declares that, "the league would be delighted to assume the task (of Germanifying China), on two conditions: first, that China should not only accept, but welcome, and, indeed request intervention of the league; second, that the United States government should assure its co-operation."

This is an artful play with words. Yet their meaning is very clear. It is not difficult to buy up a few Chinese "generals," win over native capitalists in league with foreign profiteers in the exploitation of Chinese labor, and thus present the appearance of a Chinese appeal to the league, denounced by revolutionary workers everywhere as "the black capitalist international." There are always anti-labor traitor elements in every country "willing and anxious" to sell out to foreign exploiters. That is the maneuver on which imperialism rides into power over many subject nations. Mexico, Central and South America have had their experiences in this hemisphere, from which all peoples threatened with subjection under the American dollar should profit. The working class elements in the Chinese Republic have profitted by these experiences and they will not easily be led astray by alluring imperialist subterfuges.

Dr. C. C. Batchelder, who is considered fit to be a professor on international relations for New York University, offers it as his belief that China will accept intervention by "the league." He bases his conclusion on his experience as a "commercial attache" in China. His inspiration explains his conclusions. But it does not give a true interpretation of the developments that may be expected.

This intervention of the League of Nations in China, the effort to impose a Dawes Plan over the Chinese people, is a threat to tighten the imperialist grip not only upon China but upon the whole world. American workers are even now suffering under the effects of the Dawes plan, that they did not combat effectively, altho the Communists everywhere energetically urged them to action. Another opportunity to fight now offers itself. American labor must fight all intervention in China, under the direction of the League or Nations, or from any other source. They must fight the effort to impose a Dawes slave plan on China.

those of the Soviet Union and the United States. Capitalism is still powerful here. But it is bound to disintegrate. The same fate will befall it as befell the system of Europe. And when Europe goes down to rise up as a federation of Soviet republics, the process of disintegration of capitalism in the United States will proceed by leaps and bounds.

WHAT religious people do and get away with, beggars description. In New York a policeman saw what he thought was a man dressed in white clothes walking along Fifth Avenue. Thinking it might be some millionarie taking a stroll, the cop touched his hat respectfully, but on looking more closely he was convinced that the pedestrian was even minus a string of beads. The policeman offered the nude traveler his coat to protect at least some portion of his indecency, but his generosity was spurned by the naked one, who declared that he was on his way to the Waldorf Astoria to meet the Lord, and he wanted the Lord to get an eyefull. This was too much for the cop who had a different conception of what the same Lord would like to look at. He took his charge to the station.

THE writer once knew a perfectly sane person in Boston. At least outside of the fact that he went to church regularly, he acted normally. But one Sunday afternoon this man took a little catholic prayerbook and went out on the street preaching the "word of god" like a Salvation Army exhorter. An Irish policeman, hearing the name of Christ mentioned rather too frequently thought the offender was swearing. Catholics seldom use the name Christ outside of a church except for emphasis. Thinking was acting and the cop brought his club down violently on the head of the over-enthusiastic christian, who went to heaven shortly afterwards. The cop thot he had finished off a protestant and was perfectly satisfied that he had done his duty.

ANOTHER clergyman is arrested and charged with sodomy. Every day stories of this kind appear in the press. Yet there are no editorials pointing out that religion has a tendency to incite those suffering from it to sodomy. Had all those clergymen who violate the moral code, been atheists or agnostics, the air would be filled with the shrieks of raving preachers advocating the execution of those found guilty of doubting the authenticity of the bible.

then went into the printing business for himself, but he was equally unfortunate or rather his creditors were. He trimmed them all. "Yellow Kid" Weil, the famous confidence man, who checks on imaginary banks had nothing no Linderman allias Lindy. After leaving his creditors holding the bag, this incurable strikebreaker even went so far as to separate a friend of his from his violin. This got Lindy alias Linderman into the toils of the law, but a legal understudy in the office of a well known lawyer got him out of the toils. This understudy is a brother-in-law of "Stuss' Singer, scab superintendent in the Cuneo plant.

Singer's brother-in-law got the job in the lawyer's office thru the influence of Shurford "Marble-top" Marks. Linderman beat it out of Chicago but he was brot in here again and is working at his favorite profession, which is strikebreaking.

Among the many changes made by the pressmen against Seymour "Stuss" Singer, is that he was the cause of Johnny Grant's death, a progressive pressman who was fighting Berry during the 1919 strike in New York City. Singer is reported to have blackjacked Grant, the beating bringing fatal results.

Another rat is "Zeb" Maranville, from Kansas City. "Zeb" brot twelve men into the Cuneo plant to scab, but ten of them returned when they learned the cause of the trouble.

hours, but this would not do. A Russian comrade working in one of the mills offered a bank book that night, but this would jeopardize his job, and his offer was not accepted by Simons. The result—a little stretch of 18 hours in the coop.

At 9 o'clock Monday morning, Simons pleaded not guilty to the charge as stated above. They tried to rush the thing thru, but Simons demanded a continuance till Wednesday. Appearing with Attorney Somers of Meriden on Wednesday, Simons was informed that the Monday morning charge was dropped, and a charge placed of vending merchandise without a license. Altho the prosecuting attorney admitted that a newsboy needed no license, yet Simons was fined $10 and costs, amounting to $22 in all. Appeal was taken to the Court of Common Pleas in New Haven, the case coming up early in September. While the New Haven and Derby papers featured the radical propaganda distribution, they did not tell the truth, omitting entirely the dropping of the silly, preposterous charge first made. It is apparent to the workers that the Derby authorities tried to drive the Workers Party out of that city.

Shelton is the home of Blumenthal's. The local police chief, taking orders from the mill owners, desired to designate the corner for us to speak on. He told us to come to him before 12 o'clock on the day we wished to speak, which makes advertisement among the mill slaves impossible. The Workers Party could not consent to such a ruling. Since there is no city ordinance, it is not necessary to get permission from the police chief. Such is our contention.

The first noon meeting, the first held in years, was not stopped; the reason, it appears now, being that the cops were asleep at the switch, not even knowing it was going on. Last Tuesday the workers were informed about it, and about 450 were listening to Simons tell about the insipid charge over in Derby, when the pompous chief arrived, enraged, and arrested the speaker for speaking without a permit. Simons was released after two hours on bail of $100 cash. (In the Derby case the court reduced the bail to $300.)

At the back of these arrests is the story of the Shelton Looms, of the Workers Party aid to the strikers six weeks back, of carrying on propaganda thru leaflet distribution and speaking to the Weavers' Social Club. The Weavers have decided to participate in the Textile Workers' Conference in New York on Sept. 6th. This propaganda is becoming a thorn in the side of the Shelton Loom owners. And the police of the two neighboring towns are co-operating with the mill magnates. The effect of the arrests has been to show the Shelton workers that the police and the courts are against them and on the side of the boss. Never have those workers heard more about the Communist message. They are beginning to understand it and sympathize with it.

bail with the exception of John (Patsy) De Rosa. De Rosa, who is in the Maxwell street station under $100,500 bail, refused to allow the Amalgamated to put up this bail, declaring he would rather stay in until Friday, when the case comes up for a hearing before Judge Lyle.

William A. Cunnea, attorney for the Amalgamated, will ask for a change of venue on the ground that Judge Lyle has shown prejudice. Judge Lyle stated he thot De Rosa guilty.

Bernard Raeling, one of the strikers, who was charged with "malicious mischief," appeared in the Maxwell police court yesterday, and his case was continued until Friday, when the sixteen other union officials and strikers will appear on similar charges. The union officials are also charged with "conspiracy." Raeling is out on $3,000 bond.

Two pickets, Sarah Mondella and another girl striker, were taken from the picket line by police yesterday and arrested. They are charged with "disorderly conduct."

The strike benefits were paid as usual yesterday, $12 to strikers with dependent families and $8 to the others.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—(FP)—All injunctions in recent New York labor history are outdone by the amazing decree issued by Supreme Court Judge Churchill against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union in its strike against the International Clothing Co. The writ not only forbids "picketing in any manner whatsoever," but bans congregating of strikers within eleven city blocks of the plant.

Judge Churchill's injunction is first aid to the firm, following a second walkout which stripped the plant of most of the strikebreakers imported since the original walkout seven weeks ago. In reply the union announces it will keep the strike flag flying in New York as in Chicago, where success is approaching.

JOE LODA'S CASE EXACTLY LIKE ONE AT ZEIGLER; FARRINGTON AND OPERATORS IN CONSPIRACY

By ALEX REID

(Secretary Progressive Miners' Committee.)

ARTICLE XVIII.

The following resolution passed at a miners' meeting of Local Union No. 2553, recites the facts of one of the latest outrages of the Farrington machine, and shows an example of the treacherous moves of the fakers in the miners' union.

It is such incidents as this that has brought about the Zeigler situation, and no one knowing the facts will be surprised to see a similar condition to the Zeigler situation break out at any time with Farrington the chief victim of his own treachery.

The miners in the Springfield territory are bitter and ready to go to the mat with Farington and his worm, Walker. The resolution is as follows:

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 9, 1925.

To the Officers and Members of All Local Unions, United Mine Workers of America, in a regular Meeting of Local No. 2553, Greeting:

"WHEREAS:—A desperate attempt is now being made by the Peabody Coal Company, assisted by the officialdom of the United Mine Workers of America, District No. 12, to take from the membership of Local Union No. 2553, the checkweighman they have elected to serve them, a right given them under the joint contract and the state laws of Illinois, and all for the purpose of taking from the membership a man who has ever been watchful for the interests of the miners of Local Union No. 2553, and who in the performance of his duties as checkweighman did discover the company weighmen attempting to steal from the miners employed at Peabody No. 6, and as a result of his watchfulness in detecting this scoundrel the Mine Workers' officials did agree that Joe Loda was to be deposed and that another must take his place, another presumably more suitable to the coal company and less watchful for the interests of the rank and file, and

A Conspiracy.

"WHEREAS: We know of no more desperate frame-up than was hatched against Joe Loda, for example, Joe Loda was charged with using abusive language against the company weighman whom he caught red-handed in the act of stealing from the miners, Joe Loda denied the charges and the company presented two company sucks, the company top-boss, who strange to relate happened to be present when the stealing was attempted, and the company weighman, both of whom testified as the company directed; Joe Loda a United Mine Worker and the check-puller a United Mine Worker denied the company's accusations, but regardless to that in a very few hours after Joker Young and Dan Clark had handled this case it was turned over to a commission who were ready waiting for it and Joe Loda was deposed by actions of this commission.

"We cannot recall where such hasty action has ever happened in this board member district in unloading Joe Loda, especially when other cases of long standing prior to the Loda case had never been handled and thus this hasty action in geting Loda's case into the hands of a commission within a few hours after the board member had handled it, and the commission agreeing to the removal of Loda within a few hours after receiving this case, lends color to the accusation of a frame-up in Loda's case, and Violation of Ageement.

"WHEREAS: After the decision was rendered to depose Joe Loda as check-weighman, the mine superintendent, Mr. McMurdo, did make an agreement with the mine president and mine committee, to the effect that Joe Loda could remain on the tipple until such time as the miners could arrange for a meeting, and thus by his making of that agreement to allow Loda to continue at work, he violated and abrogated the agreement that was reached by the commission that deposed Joe Loda and the miners successfully turned the tables on framer-up McMurdo and defeated him at his own game. But McMurdo who was hastily called up over the telephone and told of the blunder he had made and he hastily attempted to break his agreement that he had made, but to no avail, as the mine workers, the other party to the agreement, refused to break the agreement and without the miners' consent the agreement could not be broken, so McMurdo instead of using the courts of the miners and operators to get a reopening of the agreement that he had made with the miners, ignored and violated the state agreement and courts set up by it and entered into the civil courts of the county for redress and had Loda removed by a deputy sheriff from the tipple. What do you suppose would have happened to the miners had they taken that procedure?

"And will McMurdo be penalized for shuting down the mine to enforce something contrary to the joint agreement as it provided for in article 20 section (d) joint, agreement which reads as follows: Any operator who shall lock out all or any material part of his employes in order to enforce some condition in violation of this agrement shall be fined one dollar ($1.00) per member affected for each day or part of a day the mine is thus thrown idle.

Farington Betrayal Clear.

"McMurdo did call the officers of the local union to his office and informed them the mine would not resume operation until they had elected a new check-weighman when he knows that the joint agreement declares that "in cases the men must continue at work pending a final settlement, and McMurdo prevents this from being done by shutting down the mine and going into the civil courts of the county. And in view of all these gross violations of the contract Frank Farrington has taken the side of the operators and declared in a telegram that Loda must be deposed and a new check-weighman elected, in face of the fact that he informed Joe Loda and others that he would stand behind Loda and if McMurdo had entered into an agreement with the mine commitee to allow Loda to remain on the tipple after the decision to remove him had been made, then he would see that Loda remained on the tipple for the rest of the time.

"We feel that all the above information should be printed and sent to the various local unions to let the rank and file know what is going on and to enlist their support against those who are destroying the purposes of our union and making it a useless weapon for their emancipation, therefore be it

For Publicity of Education.

"RESOLVED That copies of this resolution be sent to all local unions and printed in every daily and weekly paper that it can be gotten so that the rank and file may know what is going on, for after all education is the thing that will free the workers and destroy the tyrants that are seeking to have us return to nonunion wages and conditions."

Signed—JOHN LUCAS, Pres.

MINER WHO TRIED TO EXPOSE GRAFT OF BOSSES FIRED

Farrington and Owners in Cahoots

By E. B. HEWLETT.

WEST FRANKFORT, ILL., August, 17—Because the Farrington machine is in alliance with the coal companies against the miners, William Schroeder has been discharged from the Orient mine No. 2 under a faked up charge of "abusing the boss," one Luther Jones, a brother-in-law of Rodenbush, a mine company official.

The connection between Rodenbush and Schroeder's discharge can be traced as follows:

Gyped Out of Pay.

The West mine at West Frankfort, Illinois, shut down the first of January 1924, falling to pay their miners for the last two pay days. Schroeder was among the members of the West Mine Local, but lacking work, went to Chicago and was employed there until October 1924.

Receiveing a letter from a friend, saying that the bosses of Orien mine No. 2 were selling jobs at prices of from $80 to $100, he at first couldn't believe it. But he went to West Frankfort and found it was true.

To Expose Job Selling.

Deciding that he should expose the job selling, but knowing he would never get the money back, he went to the Sub-District officials, Fox and Cobb, and asked them if they knew that Mine Manager Pollock and Mine Superintendent Rodenbush were selling jobs.

"Yes," said Fox and Cobb, "but we have no proof."

Schroeder told them that he would get the proof if the Sub-District would furnish the money to buy the jobs. Being badly in need of a showing to make for the approaching election, Fox and Cobb agreed and with the money furnished, Schroeder and his buddy bought jobs and went to work the same day.

Fakers Thirst For Bosses' Gore—Before Eelection

But the bosses, Pollock and Rodenbush, were too slick to let themselves be caught handling the money. They had agents. One of these agents was arrested and fined $200 for having an employment office without a license Schroeder was the complainant.

The ditrict election, too, was approaching, and Farrington took the case out of the hands of the Sub-District to make propaganda for himself. Witnesses were called. Schroeder getting eleven miners who bought their jobs to testify at the hearing, before the Sub-District officers, that they had bought their jobs.

I brought up the last witness, and after he made his confession, Schroeder and I went our separate ways home. But Fox at once went to Schroeder's house and quizzed him. He wanted to know if Schroeder is a member of the "red party" or a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER, and what did Hewlett know of the job selling case, did Schroeder know Hewlett was "leader of the red party in West Frankfort," etc.

Schroeder who merely wanted to see the injustice righted, disclaimed all knowledge of "red" parties and stated that he was a plain miner wishing to see fair dealing.

O, But After The Election!

The election came and passed. Farrington lost all his burning passion for investigation and prosecution of the job selling mine manager and superintendent. In fact he held a conference with Ricemiller, President of the Operators' Association, and both agreed that even if a few foolish miners paid for their jobs, that did not prove that Manager Pollock and Super intendent Rodenbush had sold them. Farrington and the operators let the case be lost.

But every miner knows that Pollock and Rodenbush were guilty, and after Farrington was safely elected, the mine owners were waiting a chance to get even with Schroeder. That Luther Jones, a brother-in-law of Rodenbush, whom Schroeder accused, is the one caused Schroeder's dicharge is evidence that Farrington, the bosses, and Lon Fox and Cobb, are all involved in the job selling and all deserve everythig the miners can give them—of unpleasantness.

"FOREST FIRES? LET 'EM BURN," SAID BILL, AS HE SNORTS OVER SKID ROAD OFFER OF UNCLE SAM

(By W. J. McVEY—Worker Correspondent)

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 17.—Forest fires are raging in Montana, Idaho, Oregon and eastern Washington.

Wage slaves are in demand to go out in the mountains and risk their lives fighting fires for 30 cents per hour to save the timber for the lumber barons, that they may pay the slaves starvation wages in order to pile up huge profits for the lumber trust.

An Unfair Contract

Uncle Sam not only pays these fire-fighters 30 cents per hour for this dangerous work, but he ties them with a contract, binding them to stick to the job 20 days, if needed that long.

In case a slave quits before the expiration of the 20 days contract he is charged with board, and the contract does not specify what price he must pay for board.

"Economy Cal" at Work.

So, if a fighter should quit before the 20 day limit Uncle Sam reserves the privilege of charging him board and transportation which may bring the 20 cent slave out in the hole.

In the meantime "Economy Cal" is knocking down $100,000 per year being a jumping-jack for Wall Street.

A haze of smoke hangs over Spokane, the smell of burning vegetation is in the air; in the meantime a 20 day contract, and an offer of 30 cents per, is stuck under the down-and-outs nose on "the skid-way" to go out and risk his life fighting forest fires.

What Bill Had To Say.

Yesterday I said to one of McGoldrick's $3.40 wage-slaves: (McGoldrick the high-muck-a-muck of the "4 L's" and the chamber of commerce); "Bill, you can get a job fighting fires."

He replied: "Not me. I tried that once. If they'd put old timers on the job to boss the men I would not mind it, but they put bench legged, white collared know-nothings over men out in the woods who do not know how to protect the mens' lives; a man is liable to burn to death under these incompentents. And they look upon an old time timber man or lumberjack with contempt.

Snobs Risk Men's Lives.

"I remember one time we were fighting fire over in Montana, under one of these incompetents with a pull, and I almost lost my life. He kept a bunch of men in one place till we were surrounded with fire and we had a hard time making our escape.

"The boss would not ask the old time woodsmen anythng. He seemed to look upon us with scorn and contempt.

Upstart Boss Riles The Crew.

"He had us carrying water up a high hill with an incline of about 30 degrees, when there was a big spring on top of the mountain that was the head of a running creek where we could have carried water down hill instead of up.

"This upstart of a boss from the city knew nothing of the spring and we could not tell him because he would not ask us and because he treated us men, who had spent the best part of our lives in the mountains, with contempt.

Forest Fires.

"We carried the water up that steep mountain side rather than tell such a boss where the big spring was on top of the mountain, while if he had treated us like men, instead of dumb animals, we would gladly have given him any information in our possession."

The Short Grass Season.

"No" he continued. "I will stay with McGoldrick about another month for $3.40 per, then the grass will be short and scarce, then they will lay me off. They always lay us off to cut grass when the grass is short."

And Bill, the one-time I. W. W. picked up his lunch pail and walked off a mile or more to McGoldricks lumber mill, to earn dividends for the lumber barons.

Why Bill, the Ex-Wob, Walked.

He walked because six cents car fare was too much to pay when a man had to support a family on three fourty per.

NON-UNION COAL MINE MAKES 1,326 PER CENT PROFIT; BUT IT IS NOT THE ONLY COMPANY

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Wage cuts of 5 per cent to 10 per cent handed employes of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. after helping the company make record profits, illustrate the difference between workers and owners in the modern industrial system. The stockholders were assured at the same time that their customary dividends had been earned more than twice over.

Goodyear explained the wage reductions by a possible increase in crude rubber prices. But this is challenged by the fact that the company set aside a $3,000,000 special raw-material reserve to meet the increase if it comes and besides Goodyear owns rubber plantations in Sumatra. Increases in the price of raw rubber when reflected in the price of finished products tend to increase the corporation's profits.

Goodyear's profit for the 6 months ended June 30 amounted to $11,394,267, an increase of 68 per cent over the same period in 1924. After paying bond interest and dividends on the prior preference stock there remained over $5,000,000 for the holders of regular preferred stock which represents the real investment of the owners. This amounts to $8.31 a share or at an annual rate of nearly 17 per cent.

After dividends on this preferred stock $3,182,000 remained for the 831,585 shares of no par common stock which is shown on the company's books as worth $1,000,000. The profit on common is at an annual rate of about 600 per cent. Where is the excuse for reducing the wages of the company's productive workers?

U. S. Steel profits for the second quarter of 1925 were a surprise even to Wall Street which figured that declining operations would produce some decline in the companys earnings. But Judge Gary's report showed no such thing. Evidently the steel trust has found the secret of maintaining steady profitts even when wages sag.

Net earnings for the three months amounted to $40,624,221 bringing the total for the first half of the year to $80,507,213. The Wall Street Journal points out that profits in June at 65 per cent capacity were fully as large as those in April at 82 per cent capacity.

Earnings for the second quarter after paying interest and preferred dividends meant $3.06 a share for common stockholders. For the six months the rate was approximately 6 per cent or at an annual rate of 12 per cent on stock which was originally all water.

1326 Per Cent Profit on Coal.

Island Creek Coal Co., prince of non-union coal profiteers, reports record production for the first six months of the year with profits equal to $6.63 a share on the 118,801 shares of common stock. As the stock has an original par value of $1 a share this means a 663 per cent profit for the six months or at an anual rate of 1326 per cent. Not quite up to past performance, but still a satisfactory record for the worst coal year in a quarter of a century.

DISTRICT FIVE GOING TO RUIN UNDER P. FAGAN

Disruption the Rule, Fagan Aids Owners

By TOM RAY.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 17.—That conditions are going from bad to worse in District 5, United Mine Workers of America does not in the least disturb the fakers. While the last few mines operating are gradually closing down they continue to flirt with the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce.

Local Union 280, located at New Eagle, Pa., on the Monongahela valley, one of the National mines, No. 4, extended an invitation to the members ordered expelled to address the membership on conditions of the district regarding the expulsions and the methods used relative thereto by the district executive board.

Fagan Disrupts Meeting.

The meeting was called to order by the president with approximately 200 members present, the proceedings went along smoothly until correspondence was read, then, Pat Fagan rose and took the position that he as president of District 5, U. M. W. of A., refused to participate in a local union meeting where non-bona fide men were in attendance, naming Jas. Oates and Tom Ray, whom he declared were expelled, while he promised to debate the question relative to expulsions after the proceedings had been disposed of regularly.

Part of the proceedings of this meeting by previous action contained a program of demands, (1) unemployment and the measures necessary for relief; (2) proposition for active fight against the coal operators establishing the 1917 scale; (3) immediate settlement of all grievances obtaining at the mines that are working, such as the loading of very large cars, also the pushing of large cars, the violation of the "dead work" scale rates, also the reduction in the outside scale rates, etc.; (4) active campaign of relief for the miners' families where the dependents were imprisoned and a campaign for immediate release; (5) abolition of the expulsion policy by the district executive board with reinstatement of expelled members.

Threatens the Charter.

This program was opposed by the yellow traitor, Fagan, who occupied three hours attacking the Communists and progressives intimidating the local union membership by stating that he would be compelled by law to revoke the charter of local unions if they would permit Ray or Oates to said meeting or have anything to do with the program proposed. However, Fagan did not have all of his own way. Wm. Fullerton replied by expounding the Communist position in such a manner that he is without a doubt a credit to the labor movement.

Later, came my turn outside after adjournment of said meeting to speak with Oates to the members who possessed the courage to remain to hear our side of the question. Fagan stating that our program may have a paragraph containing the acceptance of the 1917 scale, altho he knew better.

He knows that his own methods will soon establish the 1917 scale if he gets away. By his method our union is going out of existence by the slow process of starvation.

I hope that the day is not far distant when the membership of the United Mine Workers will rise in their might in opposition to the Lewis policies of selling us out to the operators as he done in 1919, 1922, 1924 where 200,000 miners were removed out of the coal industry.

Of Course They Didn't!

I wonder if Lewis and his gang of absolute hypocrites thought that the operators would remove non-union men. And even at that the same gang is responsible for there being a condition as a non-union territory.

Betrayal after betrayal has been the lot that befell the miners and any member that raises a voice against their activities is to be rewarded with expulsion. Howat in District 14, McGaughlin, District 26, Myerscough, District 5, Thompson, Watt and Perry in District 12.

Farrington the arch traitor and hypocrite, who allied with John L. Lewis after accusing him of accepting a bribe of $750,000 from the Wall Street bankers now does the dirty work in District 12.

Agreement Gone to Smash.

At some mines in District 5 there are a few miners working under the pretense that they are doing necessary work when the truth of the matter is that they are only helping the coal barons to break our union. This exists in Local Union No. 3365, McDonald, Pa. Local Union 1982, Oakdale, Pa. Others working around the mines for rates above the regular scale rates to the amount of $8.00 per day, but this is credited on account as payment for rent.

These conditions did exist in Local Unions Nos. 2012, 1973 but have been stopped recently. There are other conditions where outside labor is being permitted for $5.00 per day, and others where there are three different prices on the same jobs.

Proud to be With Militants.

Fagan in his attacks made several statements that the progressives were members of the Foster-Merrick gang. Well, we admit that we are and very proud of being with the militants and for all of the money in the world, along with silver spoons and the banquets, dining and wining with the bosses, where we often find the Lewises, B. & O. Bills, Greens and Murrays, including the whole bloody lot, we would not change places with you.

Instead, we will fight you until we are successful. When we have done that we know that someone else will take our places and complete the job.

LEMBERG—Polish agents, representing the French government are taking advantage of the starved condition of 350,000 peasants in Volinia and Galicia to persuade a large force of the younger people to "go to France." The Communist Party has exposed this as a ruse on the part of the French government to forcefully acqurie a fighting force in Poland to be shipped to Morocco under the guise of importing Poles to "work in France."

GRAFTING UNION HEADS BETRAY HOTEL WORKERS

Raise in Salary Only Convention Action

By ADAMSON

(Worker Correspondent.)

MONTREAL, Canada, August 16.—The Hotel Workers' International convention in session at Montreal is lauded as evidence of prosperity by the Montreal Star, which makes mention of the fine clothes and diamonds worn by the delegates, in glaring headlines on the front page of the issue of August 10.

To look at that body of fat bellied men one would not think they were supposed to represent the poorest paid, poorest organized industry in this country.

These victims of the speed up, bad air, bad food, are a different appearing people to those referred to by the Star, the majority of them are perpetual office holders who have nothing in common with the worker on the job whom they are supposed to represent.

The convention is a matter of formality, the delegates are hand picked and simply go for the trip and to serve the machine.

In 1923 the convention was held in Chicago. (Morrison Hotel). One of the worst slave pens in the country, but is labeled as union thruout and is O. K.'d locally and by the International fakers who allow the Morrison Hotel to advertise and cater to labor conventions as a union house, which is far from the truth.

At the Chicago convention the plea was made that if they be allowed to raise the per capita tax from 20c to 25c that the international would place organizers in this field and make an effort to organize this city, that has been two years now. But we have not seen an International organizer in this city yet although the per capita was raised. And this time with another convention in session we see the official journal full of resolutions which propose to raise the per capita tax to 40c for the purpose of raising the international officers' salaries. They do not even see fit to promise anything to the workers this time, the workers in the hotel industry are to be pitied. As many of them are laboring under the thought of someday being a manager or proprietor. After a few years of such man killing work they find themselves broken in health and not able to do the work any longer. They are let out without any excuse, and another man younger and stronger put in his place. The worker in this industry seldom comes in contact with workers' literature.

He only sees the papers his boss reads and comes to believe that their interests are the same.

The hotel workers are beginning to read the DAILY WORKER and they find that it supports them in their struggles.

Silk Workers Settle More Mills.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 17.—Four more silk ribbon mills have signed the new agreement with the Associated Silk Workers' Union, restoring the 1918 scale. The union won vacation of the injunction taken against them by Kravitz Silk Co. of Jersey City. The Kravitz mill locked out his workers and is attempting to run openshop.

CHILD TELLS OF BEAN FIELD WORK

NEW YORK, August 17.—How children work with their parents in American bean fields is told by an Italian girl now 17 in The American Child, organ of the National Child Labor Committee. "Ever since I can remember I have spent every summer in the bean fields," she begins. She says her mother used to carry her around in her apron. "It was hard for the children because many mornings they had to go to work without any breakfsat because they couldn't get any milk . . . At the beginning of the season we begin our day's picking about 7 o'clock in the morning to seven at night. But during the middle of the season we had to work about 16 hours, from 4:30 in the morning . . . One of the hardest things was to carry the bag of beans to be weighed. I remember of a little boy about 13 years old carrying on his back about 110 pounds of beans. He just about could walk. Toward the end of the season the weather got very cold, but everybody had to pick all day long for about 30 or 40 cents."

Cholera in Shanghai.

SHANGHAI, August 17.—More than 1,000 Chinese have been stricken in an epidemic of cholera which is spreading rapidly. There is an average of 50 new cases daily and the death rate at present is 12 per cent of the total ill. So far there have been no cases among foreigners.

Repatriation of Canadians.

QUEBEC, August 17.—The Quebec legislative assembly will shortly consider a bill calling for a federal grant of 20 million dollars for the repatriation of Canadians now in the United States.

IMPERIALISTS TO REJECT AUTONOMY TO THE CHINESE

Students Riot Against Peking Appointee

PEKING, China, August 17.—It is reported from Tokio that the imperialist powers are in accord in refusing to grant China's demand for self-determination, and are going to assert in their reply to China's demand for autonomy that China's loans (which have been forced upon her by the imperialist powers) must first be paid—and, of course this is impossible except that the foreign powers give up their "right" to collect customs duties—a thing they have no intention of doing.

On customs, the most the imperialists will do is to allow China to raise the duty on salt and take that only as a support of the Chinese government. Chinese bitterly resent this, saying that giving China only the duty on salt is like allowing a starving man to take the salt which is sprinkled on food, but not to eat the food.

News from Nanking reports a riot at the National Southeastern university, the chief government institution in China, when the new president named by the Peking government but heartily hated by the students, tried to take over the management. When the students protested, the police which accompanied the new appointee attacked them. Angered by this, students smashed furniture and windows. The new president will find it hard to carry out his orders to open the institution when the school term starts.

INCREASE OF UNEMPLOYED LABOR IN PROPORTION TO EMPLOYED IS SHOWN TO BE STEADILY GROWING

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Stabilized unemployment is the new policy of the corporations as revealed in the monthly employment reports of the U. S. department of labor. The figures for the first six months of 1925 show that the violent job slump of May and June, 1924, has been avoided only by maintaining a lowered average in the previous months of the year.

Factory employment, according to the report, decreased 1.1 per cent in June compared with May; the total paid in wages decreased 3.1 per cent and average per capita earnings 2.1 per cent. These are the most marked decreases shown in any month since July, 1924, and are due chiefly to curtailment in the automobile, boot and shoe, cotton goods, and iron and steel industries.

Special Fields Gain

But employment in June shows an increase of 4.9 per cent compared with June, 1924, while total payrolls are up 8.9 per cent and per capita earnings 3.8 per cent. Some extraordinary gains are registered by individual industries. These include 31 per cent in agricultural implements, 30 per cent in automobile tires, 23 per cent in automobiles, 16 per cent in silk goods, 13 per cent in carpets, 12 per cent in stamped and enameled ware and 11 per cent eacr in the rubber boot and shoe, hosiery, and fertilizer industries.

Spectacular gains in total wage payments compared with June, 1924, include 39.5 per cent in automobiles, 35 per cent in agricultural implements, 32 per cent in automobile tires, 30 per cent in carpets, 19 per cent in hosiery, 18.5 per cent in silk goods, 16 per cent in iron and steel, and 12.5 per cent in the cotton goods industry.

Bankers Control Production

Those gains do not reflect increased prosperity for the wage earner. They are balanced by material losses in the early months of 1925. Bankers intervened and prevented the wild excess of production early in the year which characterized 1924. Thus the department's employment and payroll indexes show the total distributed in wages the first six months of 1925 as just about equal to the same period of 1924 while employment this year has averaged 2.5 per cent below the first half of 1924.

Using average employment throughout 1923 as the standard, employment in each of the first 6 months of 1923, 1924 and 1925 shows the following percentages:

Employment	1923	1924	1925
	Pct.	Pct.	Pct.
Jan.	91.8	95.4	90.0
Feb.	95.2	96.6	91.6
March	100.3	96.4	92.3
April	101.3	94.5	92.1
May	104.8	90.8	90.9
June	101.9	87.9	90.1
Av. Pct. of 1923	99.2	93.6	91.2

The general level of employment in 1925 is about 8 per cent under 1923. It is more than 20 per cent under the average of the first 6 months of 1920. It is, in fact, 3 per cent below the average of the first half of 1915, although since that time the country's population has increased 15,000,000, of which the 10,000,000 over the age of 15 would be available for productive employment.

There has been either a big increase in the margin of unemployed workers or an extraordinary diversion of productive labor into unproductive callings, probably both.

HEARTY WELCOME TO GREET U.S.S.R. AIRMEN IN CHINA

Over 250 Organizations Will Be Represented

PEKING—(By Mail)—Four Soviet airplanes, of the Moscow-Peking aerial expedition, are expected to reach here. They will land at Nanyuan, on the erodrome of the Aviation School.

The Chinese government has taken a number of measures to extend a courteous welcome to the aviators. H. E. General Chang Hao, chief of the department of aviation, has personally supervised all the necessary preparatory steps. Mr. Shen Tsu-wei (the son of the minister of foreign affairs, shen Jui-lin) was appointed as "liason" officer to keep in touch with the embassy of the U. S. S. R. here.

The department of aviation has wired to General He Sui to come to Peking and appoint 40 men to meet the Soviet flyers. All the ministers and other departments and institutions concerned have also named representatives, while the ministry of communications sent Messrs. Chang Yu and Wang Shi-tzu, as its representatives, to meet the Soviet aviators at Kalgan.

A public committee for organizing the reception of the Soviet flyer has been formed, representing over two hundred and fifty public and social bodies and special organizations. Among the institutions and societies represented upon this committee are: the Peking Chamber of Commerce; the Peking Education League, the All-Peking Teachers' Union; the All-Peking League of Reform of Public Education; the Peasant Union of the Salvation of the Mother Land; the Peking Labor Union; the Peasant Relief Association; the Society of Women's Professional Education; the National University; the All-Chinese Students' Union; the Society of Anti-Imperialistic Struggle; and numerous other organizations.

LaFollette's State Machine Smashed by Old Guard of G. O. P.

OSHKOSH, Wis., August 17.—The fight to restore Wisconsin in the G. O. P. ranks will be led by Roy P. Wilcox, former state senator and candidate for governor in 1918.

Wilcox was named as the "regular" republican candidate for United States senator on the fourth ballot of the convention held yesterday to select a man to oppose Robert M. LaFollette, Jr. in the special fall election to fill the seat held by the late senator La Follette.

Dean H. L. Russell, of the university of Wisconsin College of Agriculture, who led on the first two ballots, withdrew.

Wilcox in accepting the nomination urged the support of Wisconsin republicans for president Coolidge and the federal administration and declared his purpose to fight to put republicans back "on its pedestal in Wisconsin."

The poorer classes of dwelling formerly occupied by the workers was deserted, and consequently fell into a hopeless state of disrepair. Owing to the lack of any ordered system of administration and responsibility for upkeep, many of the stone buildings taken over by the workers themselves depreciated to such an extent that they were rendered practically uninhabitable. By 1920-1921 the position had reached a crisis. Over 25 per cent. of the housing accommodation in Moscow and Petrograd was found already to have become uninhabitable and derelict. Owing to the fuel crisis during the winter the empty wooden houses were pulled down and used for fuel, and in many cases the window frames and doors of the abandoned stone buildings were removed for the same purpose.

In 1920 the population of Moscow had fallen from 2,000,000 in 1917 to a little over a million people. From that date, however, owing to the depression in the agricultural districts, and the commencement of reconstruction in the industrial areas, a great influx of population into the cities took place and has steadily continued. By the end of 1923 the population of Moscow increased to over 1,500,000, and in other industrial centers had almost doubled itself.

Nationalization

Under the banner of Communism, during the first years following the Revolution, the houses were claimed by the tenants as communal property. This doctrine had already spread into the factories, which the workers, with the support of their Trade Unions, were also claiming as their own. The position threatened to become chaotic until, under pressure from the Communist Party itself, the Fourth Trade Union Congress, which met in 1921, was forced to abandon its attitude, and by Government decree all real property became vested in the State.

At this time Lenin's New Economic Policy was first put forward; it was, however, nearly a year before it became operative throughout the whole system. Under this scheme, which embraced all economic branches in the State and permitted a measure of private ownership and trading, all small houses of a capital value up to Rs. 10,000 (£1,000) were returned, where possible, to their former owners. Private traders, known as Nepmen, were encouraged to rent or purchase from the State on a leasehold basis, larger buildings which were in need of repair; these they undertook to place in a certain standard state and to be responsible for their upkeep during their tenancy.

House Committees

Under the old Communist policy housing associations and committees elected from among the tenants had been set up for the purpose of administrating the buildings in which they lived. With the New Economic Policy these committees were made to conform to certain State regulations, and regional Government inspectors were appointed from each district.

In the larger buildings which were occupied by the Nepmen, or had been purchased under the new scheme, it was soon found that these housing committees were apt to take all possible measures to exclude the workers from their premises. In many cases rents and other conditions were imposed which made it impossible for the worker to become a sub-tenant. In 1922, therefore, the Government issued a decree which handed over 10 per cent. of the total floor space of each building to the Town Soviet. District inspectors then allocated this 10 per cent. among the industrial workers. The attitude of the committees of buildings inhabited by a majority of Nepmen and associates, however, still remained adamant. As a result of this the Govrenment took serious measures, and these committees were forced to accept the workers on a level footing and to admit them to executive positions on all housing committees.

Rent Regulation

Early in 1924 further legislation was found necessary to fix the tenants' rent on a sliding scale. These rents are now calculated on the square sajen (7 ft.) of floor space occupied by the tenant, and range from ten kopecks to five roubles a month, according to the wage or income of the occupant, that is, in accordance with the category into which he falls. Each tenant is allowed from 16 to 20 square arschines (one arschine equals 28 in.); extra accommodation may be acquired, if available, at three times the regulation rent.

Rents are paid to the house committee, which is responsible for the allotment of floor space, the general upkeep of the buildings (including external and internal repairs), cleanliness, lighting, heating (where central heating exists), order in the building, and the upkeep of the pavement in front of the house. Much depends on the composition of these committees, and often very different results are found in adjacent houses occupied by the same class of workers.

Extra floor space is allotted to doctors and certain professional men, a doctor being allowed an extra room in which to receive his patients.

Housing Regulations

A visitor to Moscow who is able to pay the prices asked in the State controlled hotels can find accommodation; he will otherwise have to apply to the Town Soviet, which will hand him over to a divisional inspector, who will allot him quarters. He will then have to pay according to the category of workers, or otherwise, in which his calling places him. He can feed in a co-operative dining-room, but if he is not a member of a Trade Union he will be charged as much as 80 per cent. more than the tariff allowed to industrial workers; he will also be liable to be moved out of his quarters to make room for a recognized worker or professional man.

Results

As may be imagined, the result of these housing arrangements in large cities is having a marked effect on the social and family life of a large section of the community.

The majority of the workers have undoubtedly obtained better housing facilities. Pride of public ownership is quite remarkable, but only among the more educated and the higher grades of worker does it appear to have been extended into the homes. Cleanliness and order in public places are slogans of the day, but very little attention appears to have been yet paid to fresh air and ventilation.

Family Life

In the majority of cases the worker on returning from work leaves, as soon as he has finished his meal, for his club, his technical studies, or a meeting. The worker's wife and children, over a certain age, who are not eligible for membership, are allowed to participate in the social side of the club. In this manner he is encouraged to take them with him. There is, however, very little family life.

Housing arrangements, which have certainly improved the hygiene and social position of a large section of the workers, and given them greater opportunities for collective organization, have probably been a great factor in accomplishing one of the principal aims of the Revolution, that is, the breaking up of middle-class society. The professional classes, administrators, and employes are now forced to live in one room, or at the most two rooms. Social intercourse among families has therefore become impracticable. The Russian institution of the family tea party and gathering is now almost extinct. Both men and women are, in the majority of cases, employed during the day, and have no particular desire after the day's work for social functions of a private character, even if they are able to afford such luxuries. Feasting and gaiety can undoubtedly be obtained at a price, but are now confined to the few, and to rare occasions.

Housing Scheme

The present housing crisis is, however, only temporary, and its duration depends on the possibilities of the complete realization of the new State housing scheme, the fulfillment of which will greatly benefit all classes of the population.

The scheme embraces the construction of garden cities outside the towns and industrial areas, but connected by a system of electrical railways or tramways. Many of these little cities have already been built outside the larger towns. The houses are detached or semi-detached and each stands on about one-eighth to one-quarter of an acre of ground. The roadways or streets are of great breadth and each plot is self-contained. The plans of the cities and the houses are usually the outcome of competitions at the local factory art schools and all include a large co-operative store, school and club.

The houses themselves are built on the latest recognized housing plans, with high rooms, up-to-date sanitary appliances, and labor-saving devices. They vary in size, but usually consist of four rooms, a kitchen, bathroom, and outhouses. A single house is costing the Government about £800 inclusive of drainage, land and roading, and a double or semi-detached house costs £1,200.

As these garden cities become inhabited the flats in the towns are correspondingly evacuated, giving greater accommodation to the brain worker.

In Leningrad there appears to be no shortage of houses. It is the only town in Russia where a whole flat is obtainable for one family. In other towns at present families are confined to two or three rooms at the outside.

Prisons

The whole system of prison administration and the treatment of non-political prisoners in Soviet Russia is based on the latest theories of criminal psychology. The humanizing of prison life is a striking feature of Russian administration. The ordinary criminal is detained in prison not for the purpose of punishment, but with the view to educating him to become a useful citizen and worker.

This is perhaps one of the most remarkable changes in Russia, and is apparently working with the most excellent results. The atmosphere of a Russian prison is now more that of a workshop of free workers than that of a house of detention or a jail.

Large workshops have been installed wherever space is available, and in the older kind of prisons the large broad corridors leading to the cells have been utilized for this purpose.

Each prison is self-supporting as regards general requirements. A large kitchen, staffed by prisoners, prepares the food for the establishment. An up-to-date steam laundry works at full pressure, doing the prison washing, the washing for railways, Government offices and institutions, such as co-operatives and hospitals. All the prison furniture, clothes, boots, and other requirements are manufactured on the premises, and outside orders for Government departments, etc., are fulfilled when possible.

A prisoner on entering the prison is placed to work at his own trade. In the event of his not having learned one, he is allowed to choose to which trade he will become apprenticed. He then commences work at Trade Union hours and wages. The wages are paid to him monthly in the form of a check which his family or relations can discount for cash, or which he himself can discount for goods at the prison co-operative store. In the event of a prisoner refusing to work at a trade, he is drafted into one of the workshops and left alone to idle. In all cases, however, he invariably commences work after a few days' idleness in order to obtain pay and privileges received by his comrades.

The prison fare consists of tea and bread in the morning, a midday meal with as much soup as a prisoner cares for, with a ration of ¼lb. of meat or fish, which varies from day to day. In the evening tea and bread is again served out.

The cells are open all day, and in most cases consist of a dormitory of some ten or a dozen beds, which are drawn up against the wall during the daytime. These beds consist of an iron framework across which is stretched thick canvas or sailcloth. A pillow and blankets are supplied, and the prisoners are allowed to supplement their own bedding. Each prisoner is supplied with a small table, and pegs on which to hang his clothes. At the end of each corridor, or set of cells, is a common lavatory and washing-room. The beds may be let down during the daytime if a prisoner desires to rest when off duty.

In some cases meals are served in a common dining-room, in others prisoners select from their midst squads to fetch the food from the kitchen. These squads are responsible for cleanliness and the washing of utensils and the cells.

At night all cells are locked, and warders patrol the corridors.

The system, of course, varies slightly in different prisons according to the accommodation and arrangement of the building. The most systematic measures are taken to eliminate all signs of the old prison system. There is no prisoners' guard, and the prisoners wear their own clothes. They are not numbered, but are known by their names. The most startling feature, however, in these establishments is the arrangements for guards and warders. Weapons of defense, such as rifles, revolvers, swords and whips, are never seen within the precincts of the prison. In fact a uniformed official is seldom observed. Such soldiers and militia men who patrol the interior of the prison from time to time have the appearance of being unarmed, although in reality they carry a Mauser under their coats. The warders themselves are all skilled workers and instructors in the trade at which their gangs are working. In every section of 15 working prisoners is one warder who himself works with the gang either as foreman or instructor. All are dressed in civilian clothes, and to the visitor it is difficult to distinguish a warder from a prisoner.

It is indeed a remarkable sight to witness a large carpenter's shop of over 100 prisoners working with ordinary implements, such as hammers, chisels, and saws, with only two, apparently unarmed, militia men strolling among them and six working warders. These prisoners consisted of burglars, bandits, and men convicted of robbery with violence.

Formerly armed warders stood at every corner and at the end of each corridor. A special guard was stationed in an iron cage, with direct communication with the guard-room, to guard him from attack.

There is no segregation of the sexes during working hours. Men and women work together, and in one tailoring shop visited by the Delegation a man and woman, who happened to be husband and wife, were seen working at the same machine.

Each prison has its own co-operative shop run by the prisoners themselves. The shop is stocked according to the requirements of the prisoners, and goods are supplied at cost price. Clothes, boots, and such commodities as can be manufactured in the prison workshops are supplied to the store from the prison.

Political prisoners come under a special category. They do not follow a trade, neither do they earn a wage. Those serving long term sentences are allowed separate cells which are reasonably furnished, and there is no restriction to the amount of literature they may receive; it has, however, to pass through the censor, as does all the correspondence they receive or send out. Except in cases where solitary confinement is incorporated in the sentence, they are allowed free intercourse with eacn other at certain specified hours. Although their accommodation in most cases is of a higher standard, their lot, generally speaking, is more severe than that of the ordinary criminal. Political prisoners are looked upon as being incarcerated as a danger to the public safety, whereas the ordinary civilian criminal is looked upon as a delinquent who, by education and humane treatment, can eventually be guided into the paths of useful citizenship. Political prisoners in the Caucasus seem to be worse treated than in Russia; their conditions leave much to be desired and, it is stated, differ very little from those which were in vogue under Tsarist Russia.

In none of the prisons do the churches function, and there is no religious service of any kind. In some cases the church is utilized as a store, a co-operative, or a prisoner's meeting house where the prisoners are allowed to elect their own workshop committee for the purpose of organizing their work, and the co-operative stores.

General Conclusions

The conclusions reached by the Delegation in respect of public health, housing, and the prison system, were that the Soviet Government was achieving most remarkable results. Although Russia in these matters was, before the Revolution, perhaps the most backward of European communities, yet it has in many respects already been brought up to the level of European standards; at the present rate of progress it may be expected before long to set an example that, if it is to be followed, will require a fairly radical reorganization in States that are at present leading Europe in these matters.

CROUCH SENDS FINAL MESSAGE TO U. S. WORKERS

Entered Alcatraz in Calif. Yesterday

By PAUL CROUCH.

GUARD HOUSE, Fort Shafter, Honolulu, Hawaii, —(By Mail)—We are leaving for our future prison home, Alcatraz, California, August 8th. We will be sent back on the transport Cambria.

Our fight in the courts for freedom of thot and speech for Communists will be continued and, if necessary, taken to the United States supreme court. Federal Judge Wm. T. Rawlins of Honolulu said he did not have jurisdiction over our cases. The higher courts will not have that excuse.

Before leaving for Alcatraz, we wish to express our appreciation for the efforts made in our behalf by the DAILY WORKER, Young Worker and other Communist Publications and by the working class in general. It was because of these efforts that our sentences were reduced. The great reduction in our prison sntences was a victory for the Workers (Communist) Party and other class conscious workers' organizations.

The defenses of capitalism are not impregnable. They could be crushed like an eggshell by the united forces of labor.

We enter Alcatraz military prison on August 14.

We may not be permitted to communicate freely with the outside while in Alcatraz. Our final message to our comrades, before entering our island prison, is:

Carry on!

Work unceasingly for the revolution!

FRANCE REFUSES TO ENTER ANY ANTI-SOVIET WAR WITH BRITAIN AND BREAKS ANGLO-FRENCH BLOC

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, August 17.—France has determined that she has more to gain out of friendship with the hated Soviets, for all the Soviet government stands as a challenge to all capitalist nations, than in joining with Britain, her imperialist rival and making war on the Soviet Union.

This is the meaning of a highly confidential letter to Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, from Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, politely declinig the British proposal to make an "anti-Soviet bloc" whose only purpose would be to war on Russia.

Undoubtedly Suspicious Circumstances.

Briand puts his announcement in the form of an expression of fear that the formation of a Baltic anti-Soviet bloc would immediately provoke a conflict which would involve Poland and Roumania, France's proteges in the east.

Briand says that his alarm springs from the recent visit of M. Putsa, Esthonian foreign minister, and M. Meyerowitz, the Lithuanian foreign minister, to London. These puppet nations are controlled by Britain, and Briand naively suggests that their visit means something.

Probably, and the fact that both French and British military experts have said that nothing could prevent the red army from occupying Bessarabia and the whole flock of Baltic states if were provoked by an armed sortie from this quarter, is truly enough to make France think twice about prodding the red bear. And then there is the financial bankruptcy staring France in the face with Syria and the Riff piling up monetary and political retributions.

With the Soviets offering provisional recognition of about one-sixth of pre-war Russian debts which are held by small French bondholders, mostly peasants, economic concessions which offer a pulmotor to French trade, France's reluctance to an anti-Soviet war bloc becomes open opposition. With this maneuver, Soviet Russia may break her most powerful enemy, British imperialism, and discourage any armed assault upon Soviet territory.

That France is more and more hostile to England is shown by this incident and it is significant that it follows close upon the heels of Briand's own visit to London, where nothing was settled between Paris and London, in spite of all polite formalities.

British-French Alliance Collapsing.

There on last Monday, Briand held a secret conference with Austen Chamberlain, so secret that he entered the British foreign office by the back door and climbed a rickety, dark stairway.

However, it is clear that the conference was in vain so far as harmonizing the French and British views, not only on Soviet Russia, but on the matter of the so-called "security pact" and the admission of Germany to the league of nations.

Unofficial information shows that the only way the two foreign ministers could "agree"—was by agreeing in advance not to discuss the highly controversial issues at stake in the differing views toward Germany and the "security pact." Briand went back to Paris with conditions unimproved and it is worth note to observe that he wrote the letter concerning French oppositioh to war on Soviet Russia shortly after he returned to Paris.

PEKING PICKET LINE ISOLATES HAUGHTY BRITON

Cuts Off Food, Water and Everything

PEKING, China, Aug. 17—The striking students and workers have placed a successful picket line around the British legation and his British majesty is hard put to it to get anything to eat. Everything possible is being done to prevent anyone taking food into the legation.

Almost the whole staff of 200 servants are on strike. The few scabs left have to be heavily guarded by British marines when they go out to buy supplies, and even then the shopkeepers will not take the risk of selling to them. The only rift in the lute is the strikebreaking tactics of other legations, whose imperialist attaches buy food and smuggle it in to the British legation.

Needless to say, Soviet Ambassador Karakhan's staff is not guilty of such scabby treatment of the Chinese liberation strikers. The British minister, highly indignant at being made to do his own flunkeying, has registered bitter protest with the Chinese government, but is not assured that it can do anything.

The British legation is cut off from electric light, telephone and water service, and the great joy of the strikers is to see at a distance the haughty British minister groping his way with candle in hand thru dirty and disorderly rooms, aiding his family in rustling something to eat and drink, while cursing lustily at the strikers.

The strikers demand that the Shanghai case be satisfactorily settled in accordance with the thirteen demands made there shortly after the massacre by the British troops.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

BELGIAN DEBT RATE, U. S. KEY TO ENGLAND

Uncle Sam Closing in on John Bull

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—There is every indication that a compromise will be reached in the Belgo-American debt negotiations next week that will permit Belgium to discharge her indebtedness to the United States on slightly better terms than were prescribed as "standard" in the British settlement.

A considerably larger stake than a mere 1 per cent interest rate on $480,000,000 is in the center of the table in the Belgian negotiations, and it is for this reason that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Senator Reed Smoot are en route today to Plymouth, Vt., to lay the case before President Coolidge.

One per cent on the Belgian debt would amount to less than $5,000,000 a year, a figure which, while substantial, is hardly large enuf for which to risk the success of the negotiations.

The larger stake may be said to be 1 per cent on nearly $7,000,000,000, or $70,000,000 a year, and that is a sum not to be sneezed at even in these days of $3,000,000,000 congresses.

The $7,000,000,000 represents what the rest of the world, outside of Great Britain and Belgium, now owe the United States. More than $6,000,000,000 of it is owed by France and Italy alone.

The French and Italians are due at the paymasters' window next month.

Members of the American debt funding commission are fully cognizant that the French and Italian governments are watching every move in the Belgian settlement closely, and they know, furthermore, that both governments are going to insist upon the liquidation of their debts on absolutely the best terms the United States has accorded to any debtor.

Hence the somewhat embarrassing position of the American negotiators. If there was the Belgian debt alone to consider, it is altogether probable that the 2 per cent interest rate tentatively suggested by the Belgians would be accepted without undue quibbling.

But if Belgium is granted a 2 per cent rate, then France and Italy will both demand the same rate, or a lesser rate, and if a settlement should be reached all around on that figure, then the specter of British settlement will rise to confront the American government.

Britain, economically depressesd, heavily taxed, and with a serious unemployment problem, is paying 3 and 3½ per cent on more than $5,000,000,000. British taxpayers being none too well satisfied with the settlement anyway, government officials can picture the howls that would go up in England for a revision of the Baldwin settlement should France, Italy, and Belgium obtain more generous treatment than was accorded Great Britain. Administration officials are keenly anxious to avoid any such embarrassing situation.

BUILDERS AT WORK

THE DAILY WORKER AND THE STRUGGLE

LEADING TWO BATTLES.

That the DAILY WORKER is the organ of struggle is well seen in Chicago today. Two strikes are in progress and two picket lines are being held. These are two battle fronts on which labor is staging a glorious fight and as usual—against the bosses and necessarily and at the same time against the reactionary officialdom.

In both the battles of the needle trades workers (in New York as well as in Chicago) and in the strike of the printing trades, where Berry is again attempting to sell out the workers in a dastartly betrayal, it is the DAILY WORKER that is leading these fights, that gives direction in policy, that solidifies the ranks and gives heart to the fighting workers.

And as usual—it is ONLY the DAILY WORKER. No other paper does or would dare to. No other paper is owned by workers and written by workers and no other paper is ONLY for the workers.

Time after time—often in many fights in one day—the DAILY WORKER has done this since its beginning nearly two years ago. That is why thousands of workers have given their unstinted support to this paper—that's why those thousands of workers are increasing in numbers daily.

The DAILY WORKER does battle every day for the best interests of the workers ONLY—for your interests. Give your sub—get a sub (often!)—become a Builder of the paper that is a Builder of the labor movement.

BRICKLAYERS OFFICIAL GIVES HIS SIDE OF JURISDICTIONAL WAR: PROGRESSIVES CHIP IN

WASHINGTON, August 17—Secretary Gleason of the executive board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' international union has issued to the membership Circular No. 12, defending the refusal of the Bricklayers to work for contractors or builders who refuse to recognize the jurisdictional arrangements set forth in the agreement made in 1911 between the Bricklayers and the Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers' international union.

"The stoppage of work which has taken "place," says the circular, "is much more in the nature of a lockout than a strike, for the reason that the employers have created conditions under which our members have felt it impossible to continue at work."

It describes the "invasion of the territory and rights of this organization by the Operative Plasterers" as having been planed by the latter in 1923, and as having been started in Florida, with the formation by the Operative Plasterers of "dual or rival unions." An aggressive campaign, the Bricklayers declare, was inaugurated and still continues, "for the purpose of disrupting the Bricklayers and forcing its plasterer members, regardless of their wishes in the matter, to take membership in local unions organized and chartered by the Operative Plasterers."

Lots of Red Tape—No Industrial Unionism.

In the present circular no reference is made to the action of the Bricklayers in abrogating a clause in their 1911 agreement with the Operative Plasterers in order to bring before the national board of jurisdictional awards the question of jurisdiction over certain work then in dispute between the two unions. The Operative Plasterers refused to permit this procedure, and declared the entire 1911 agreement nulified by the action of the Bricklayers.

The Bricklayers now appeal for restoraiton of the 1911 agreement, pointing out that it was entered into as a final settlement of all questions in dispute between the two organizations. It provided that plasterers from any community might work wherever they could find employment, without having to belong to both unions, and that whenever the plasterer members of the Bricklayers' union in any locality should, by a two-thirds vote, in regular meeting, declare their desire to affiliate with the Operative Plasterers, they could do so.

Amalgamation Defensive.

Resolutions adopted by the Bricklayers' general convention last September, declaring it to be their purpose to spare no expense to bring about an amalgamation of the two organizations, are described in this circular as a defensive measure in answer to the Operative Plasterers' declaration of war made in 1923.

"The Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' intrenational union wants peace and has pointed the way to peace," it says. "It wants a restoration of the amicable relations that formerly existed, together with the contentment and satisfaction that existed thruout the plastering membership of both organizat[illegible] . . But if the Bricklayers' un[illegible] must defend itself against unjustified aggression in order to preserve its integrity it cannot, in fairness, be expected to do less than make the best defense possible."

Off Fuller Co. Jobs.

In conclusion: Notice is served that members of the union will not work for the Geo. A. Fuller Co., which "has seen fit to advertise for and to employ nonunion bricklayers to do their brick work in Florida."

The Progressive Building Trades Committee has repeatedly pointed out the jurisdictional war between these two unions as caused by a reluctance on the part of the officials of both the Bricklayers and the Operative Plasterers to block the movement for amalgamation really desired by the membership of both unions.

The Progressives point out that the present bitter strife merely plays into the hands of these reactionary officials and may be is deliberately concocted to stir up hatred between the members of the two unions and prevent the normal and fraternal progress of both groups toward amalgamation.

Amalgamation, the progressives assert, will only come about when the members of both unions, tired of the continual sabotage of their unions by self-seeking bureaucrats, take the bull by the horns and amalgamate their unions while pushing the squawking officials of both sides off the scaffold.

SOVIET TRADE HERE DOUBLES OVER LAST YEAR

1925 Business 250 Per Cent of Pre-War

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Russian trade with the United States in the six months ending June 30 last was nearly 250 per cent that for the first half of the year 1913, and was about equal to the total for the entire year 1924, according to a report by Chairman Hoorgin of the Amtorg (official) Trading Corporation to the Russian Information Bureau in Washington.

The turn-over in this half-year was $58,779,736, of which $52,610,645 represented purchases of American goods for shipment to Soviet Russia, and the remaining $6,169,091 represented sales of Soviet products in the United States.

This business was done chiefly on a credit basis, through banks or individual American firms. It does not include imports of manganese, which is shipped direct to American firms, nor the operations of the Russian cooperatives of farmers and dairymen, who maintain their own foreign trading organization.

Cotton Largest Item.

Cotton was the largest item of Russian purchases here—Russian money purchased $26,479,500 worth of this crop and shipped it to Murransk. Machinery and supplies for the extension of Russian industry and agriculture cost $9,000,000. Flour was bought in America, to the amount of $17,822,395.

In return, Americans bought $3,831,012 worth of Russian furs, and lesser amounts of such things as sheep-casings, licorice root, flax and hemp fibre and caviar.

Machinery For New Factories.

Hoorgin stated that while cotton made up 75 per cent of all Russian purchases in this country last year, in 1925 it represents only 50 per cent. Where last year Russia bought only replacement machinery and parts this year it has been buying mostly basic machinery. This machinery is to be used in new factories—textile, electrical, metallurgical and others.

While Russia's good crops this year will make purchases of American flour necessary, she will be able to buy a great deal more of our machinery. Her own cotton crop is 38 per cent better this year than last, but her consumption of cotton is growing so fast that she will not decrease her buying of that material.

British Propaganda.

Economists in Washington, studying those figures, are beginning to give serious heed to the suggestions coming from continental Europe, that British business is behind the propaganda against American recognition of Moscow. The argument runs this way: Britain must always be the jealous rival of her next strongest economic competitor in Europe. Soviet Russia is making giant strides toward that economic leadership which Germany surrendered during the war.

If British business, now in desperate straits and looking ahead to utter ruin, can induce the United States to help her draw an economic blockade once more around Russia, British markets may yet be restored. Propaganda against the Russians must be handled in America, through American politicians and bankers and editors, if Russian industrial expansion is to be seriously checked.

SPEAKER AT TOPEKA INDUSTRIAL COUNCIL SAYS UNSKILLED WORKER MUST BE ORGANIZED AND AIDED By JESSE KEEBLE

(Worker Correspondent)

TOPEKA, Kan., August 17.—At the industrial council meeting last night at Labor Hall the Labor Day committee reported that Mr. Combs, a lawyer of Kansas City, Mo., would be the principal speaker.

The report from the forum committee stated the open forum would start after Labor Day. Nothing definite was done in regard to workers' study classes but the principal conversation among delegates seemed to be in regard to the need of education for workers.

There were not enuf officers of the different unions present to do anything definite in regard to the building of a new labor temple at Topeka. A motion was passed stating that it was the desire of the delegates present that a building be built or purchased to be known as the Topeka Central Labor Temple and to be used as a meeting place for the Industrial Council and the different labor unions.

Mr. Newlun, a railroad worker who went out in the big railroad strike, was a visitor and gave a short talk emphasizing the necessity of organizing the common laborers and of giving them due consideration when they were having trouble on a job when they are already organized. He showed that there was too much of a tendency for the skilled workers to not take up the fight for the common laborer on construction jobs but go ahead and work and ignore the fight of their weaker brothers. He claimed the railroad strike was lost because the unskilled workers were unorganized, uneducated to union conditions and uncared for by the skilled workers.

There was nothing else for them to do to better their conditions but to go in and take the better positions when the strike gave the opportunity. He appealed to the union men to use all their influence to organize and better the condition of the common laborer. Mr. Rock, president of the Hod Carriers and common laborers, was present and made a talk along the same line. He stated that what the speaker said was true in regard to the shops here—that the strikers' places were filled up by the common laborers who had been neglected and ignored by the unions.

The Dawes Plan No Miracle Worker

According to data on the industrial situation in Germany, the condition of business is worse there now than at any time since the Dawes plan was ratified. Trade is so slack that twelve commercial and technical expositions have been cancelled. Evidently the Dawes plan, which was touted as a cure-all for Germany's ills has fallen far short of being a miracle worker.

Hundreds of thousands of German workers are unemployed. Workers are being shot down in the streets of Berlin by police. In all probability Germany is on the eve of another serious industrial crisis.

Capitalism is doomed. All the wise men of the East and of the West cannot save it. A Dawes plan may be able to set the wheels of industry in motion, but no Dawes can find a market for goods if such a market does not exist.

As usual the German workers will suffer from the breakdown of German industry. They suffer when they are employed and they suffer still more when they are unemployed.

While German industry is going to pieces and the standard of living of the workers is descending, the delegation of German trade unionists in the Soviet Union are able to report that the conditions of the workers and peasants in Soviet Russia are improving and that their industries are constantly on the up-grade.

This object lesson cannot fail to have its effect in stimulating the German workers to cast off their fetters and establish their own rule on the ruins of capitalism. Only then will they be able to put an end to unemployment and poverty.

Adding Insult to Injury

The reason the workers in the oil fields are not organized is because they were paid so royally that the incentive to organize simply did not exist, writes an oily press agent in a capitalist paper. As if nobody ever heard of the conditions of the oil slaves in the fields of Wyoming and other states!

The press agent adds insult to injury by admitting that the oil workers have been toiling for a stretch of twenty-four hours a day. If there is a human being living who likes to work for a boss twelve hours at a stretch, he is welcome to the luxury. But he has not been located to date except in the columns of "successful" fiction.

The responsibliity for the lack of organization among the oil workers rests mainly with the reactionary bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor. The oil workers are exploited as mercilessly as any other category of labor in the country. The oil magnates are rich and have at their disposal the officials of the states and counties in which they operate. Those uniformed officials together with private detectives make it impossible for any organizing effort to succeed that is not backed up by the collective might of the labor movement.

Those who are now at the head of the American Federation of Labor are too busy collaborating with the employers and acting as stoolpigeons for the capitalist government to make any serious effort to organize the workers in the oil fields or elsewhere. The job of organizing the unorganized is waiting for the progressives and radical workers. If it is left to the reactionaries, it will never be accomplished.

Uniting for Action

No more encouraging news struck the eyes of the workers of the United States in many months than the story in yesterday's DAILY WORKER of the action taken by Locals 3 and 4 of the International Printing Pressmens' and Assitants' Union, when they voted to accept a proposal for joint action against the employers in wages and disputes over working conditions.

This action was taken despite the efforts of tools of George L. Berry, the scabby president of the International, to block it. The few Berry henchmen who dared open their mouths against the unity pact were howled down and talked down by the membership and their leading spokesmen.

No group of organized workers in the entire trade union movement of the United States have been more mistreated than the pressmen and feeders. At every step they have met the combined opposition of the employers and the empolyers' tool, George L. Berry. It seems they are not going to tolerate Berryism any longer.

The Chicago locals of the I. P. P. & A. U. have set a splendid example to the entire printing trade. This first step is important, because the first step in the right direction is always the hardest. There is no better way to break sectional and craft prejudices than by melting them in the furnace of a common struggle against the enemy. This applies to all other unions operating in the same industry as well as to the pressmen and feeders.

Amalgamation! This is the golden word that should be on the lips of every class conscious worker in the craft-ridden trade union movement of the United States.

General Feng, of China, is said to be going back on chirstianity. He is. Feng is actually calling on his countrymen to free themselves from the imperialist robbers who looted China with the aid of the bible, dope and the sword.

France politely informs England that an anti-Soviet coalition might endanger the peace of Europe and particularly of Poland and Roumania. France's devotion to peace is not due to the existence of the Red Army! Perish the thought.

If the pressmen keep after "Majah" George L. Berry, he may have to go to war for a living. He will need all his "military" experience in defeating the determination of the union members to get rid of him.

George Bernard Shaw declares that he is insane. We believe George is a little too hard on himself. He is not crazy but just getting a little bit foolish.

The Reorganization of the Workers Party

ONE has to grasp the new role of national sections in order to understand that a correct reorganization of the party will only help to strengthen the work among the proletariat of each individual nationality. Even before now, the national sections of the Workers Party have to a certain extent exercised some influence upon the public opinion of the workers of their nationality, since it was they chiefly who were the active workers, in all the, sometimes fairly numerous, educational, social and other working class institutions in their language (such as for instance, the "People's Houses" of the Finns). Moreover, the national sections actually control their point of view of general party interests. For instance, a party policy was not always pursued, since the national sections, owing to the fact that they are separated from general party life and the inadequate (and sometimes distorted) understanding of general party duties which resulted, could not always be fully acquainted with the forms of agitation and propaganda corresponding with the aims of the party in each given period. Moreover, this work could not be sufficiently intensive, since its nature was dictated by local interests and did not embrace the interests and aims of the struggle of the whole working class of the United States. Only by bringing the national sections together and fusing them will it be possible to extend and intensify their activity.

The existing national sections, or federations must not lose their mass character. On the contrary, they must attract all the workers and clerical employes of their nationality who accept the view of the class struggle.

THE existing national federations by their agitation and propaganda work in the working class bodies and organizations of their particular nationality must win the workers belonging to the national minorities of America away from the influence of the social-democrats, the nationalists, the clericals and other bourgeois tendencies. The national federations must be a reservoir drawing the best elements into the Workers Party and the workers and clerical employes of their particular nationality into the American Trade Unions. The national federations must not isolate themselves from one another, but on the contrary set up closer contact not only among themselves, but also with the American workers belonging to their trade unions, and interest themselves generally more than hitherto in American life.

It will of course be understood that the national sections in the form above indicated cannot enter the Workers Party as a whole. The party members belonging to the present national sections must join the party nuclei of the factories where they work, or, if they do not work in enterprises, the nuclei of the streets in which they reside.

It is there that they must pay their party dues. Thus the national sections will not form parts of the Workers Party. The members of the present national sections will enter the party thru the nuclei.

All members of the Workers Party, Finns, Germans, Russians, etc., must set up party fractions within their wide national sections, which will elect their town district, town regional, state and national leading organs (bureaus). BUT. . . . The national fraction bureaus must abandon their isolation and become bodies for adapting the party members of their nationalities to general party life. Hence in the work of reorganization the duty arises of bringing the national fraction bureaus close to the general guiding organs of the party, indentifying them with the general party machine, thus enabling them to strengthen and improve the quality of their work.

THAT is why such a structure must be created for the agitational and propaganda party committees. In order to guide the work in the agitational and propaganda departments of the party committees the national fraction bureaus should be included in full force, or where this is not required, in part, so that they may be able to conduct the work among their nationals in their own language. The leadership, responsibility and control of their activities lie with the Agitprop Department and the correspondent party committee as a whole.

It will therefore be seen that the national bureau fractions will be by no means limited to the extent of their activities, but on the other hand they will be included in the system of a united party machine and their functions will be different from what they have been hitherto. While the national bureaus hitherto were independent leading party bodies representing the national sections in the party, and had the right of directing the whole work of the national section without exception and to collect membership dues, they will now lose those functions, but, on the other hand, will become a part of the general party apparatus, working under its control and direction and according to its directions and performing the whole of the agitational and propaganda work among their own nationalities.

The Central Committee should see that statutes be drawn up regulating the work of the fraction bureaus of the national sections in their new form. These statutes should provide for the ratification by the Agitprop Departments of the party committees of the decisions of the national fraction bureaus, the summoning of national conferences with the agreement of the competent party committee. etc.

WITHIN a town district the comrades belonging to one nationality and using one language avail themselves of the Agitprop Department of the town district committee (that is, the competent national bureau) for agitational and propaganda work among the workers of their nationality within the town district, within the working class organizations, etc. The most capable comrades should be entrusted with responsible work—reports, lectures and other forms of propaganda and agitational work among the workers of their nationality in their native tongue. Comrades speaking the same language may and should be assembled within the limits of a town district, in order to listen to reports and to take part in theoretical discussions, in order to raise the level of party education and to determine the methods of agitational, propaganda, party educational and club work. These meetings have no right to adopt DECISIONS on party questions—questions of policy or internal party questions, etc This right belongs to the factory nuclei, the street nuclei and the locals, (where they still exist) the general meeting of the party members or the party conference which are to be the party organizations of the urban district or town, since for the party there can be no difference of interests demanding discussion or decision by a national section alone. The work of the Agitprop Departments of the town disrict committees, as all the activities of the latter are directed by the town committee, which also has its Agitprop Department, which in its turn includes the national fraction bureaus, whose function it is to control the agitational propaganda work among their own nationalities. Similar bureaus must be formed in the superior party committee (Regional and Central Committee).

Within the non-party working class organizations and instances of the various nationalities—Finns, Poles, Jews, etc.—such as cooperatives, People's Houses, mutual aid societies, etc., the duty of the party members of the corresponding nationality is that of a party fraction with the same functions as the party fractions within the Trade Unions have or should have (see our instructions of February, 1924, on fractional work and the corresponding section of the thesis on party structure adopted by the organizational conference). In these national non-party organizations—such as cooperatives, mutual aid societies, clubs, people's houses or printing, publishing, newspaper and similar limited liability companies—the comrades come into direct contact with wide sections of workers, clerks or farmers of their own nationality and speaking in their own tongue. Consequently the influence of the party will to a large extent be exercised thru the national fractions in the above-mentioned organizations, and the work and policy which the national sections of the Workers Party are carrying on at present, as well as the agitational and propaganda work among the working class masses of their own nationality, will be carried on inside of the national fractions in close contact with the corresponding party committees. While the agitational and propaganda work will be conducted by the reformed national bureaus, included in the apparatus of the Agitprop Departments, the work of the fractions in the cooperatives, publishing houses, banks, etc., will be directed by other corresponding departments of the party committees, trade union, organizational, etc. It is therefore necessary to organize such national Communist fractions in all non-party organizations, Latvian, Lithuanian, Jewish, Polish, etc., both town district, town, regional district and national. The national fractions in all the above-mentioned organizations—workers' clubs, workers' insurance societies, sport societies, etc.—will carry out the policy of the Communist Party, raise questions for discussion and bring forward proposals corresponding with the general tactics of the party, or upon the special decision of party bodies, will carry on agitation on the instructons of the Workers Party, explain the activities of the fracton among the non-party working class members of the organizations, etc., etc.

AT the head of the national Communist fractions of the local, district and central national bodies of the organizations there should be bureaus for guiding the fractional work. Their activties as we have said, will be guided and controlled by the competent party committees—town district, town, etc.

It should also be provided that the bureaus of all fractions of similar institutions of one nationality, for instance fraction bureaus of Finnish workers' cooperatives, may have a single central bureau uniting the activities of all the local and regional bureaus. Those bureaus in their turn should maintain contact with the local regional and central committees of the party thru the corresponding departments of these committees. The latter may also unite the fraction bureaus (cooperatives for instance), of all nationalities, in order to exchange experiences, coordinate activities and even for united action. As in the case of the nuclei, we shall not here give theses regarding the fractions, but would refer you to the instructions which were adopted by the Presidium in February, 1924, and by the organizational conference in March, 1925.

The alteration of the functions of a national organization within the organizational structure of the party, raises the question of party dues. It will of course be understood that after reorganization party dues will not go to the national organizations but to the town committee (thru the town district committees), which should retain a certain percentage for its own needs and transfer the remainder to the superior party committee. The question will arise, as to what means the national organizations will conduct their work (agitation, propaganda, education, etc.). The only answer can be that this work will be financed by the party committees which will assign the necessary funds for this purpose.

The very first steps towards the reorganization of the national sections will come up against the question of the party press. The situation which at present exists in the Workers Party with regard to the party press is entirely abnormal. As a matter of fact, the party and the Central committee have no control whatever over the party papers issued by the various national sections in their own languages. The papers of the national sections can write what they like, without even following the general policy of the Central Committee and the party. This "freedom" of the press from party control is in full accord with the general independence of the national sections of the party centre. This situation must also be changed especially after the election of party committees common for all nationalities. The Central Committee must place the party press in all languages under its control. The Central Committee or some other competent party committee must be in a position to give direct instructions on policy to the editors of all papers which are recognized, or desire to be recognized, by the party as party papers. The party should transmit its instructions on policy to the press thru the competent national fractions, i. e., thru those party members who are shareholders in a national paper, or are on its directing bodies, editorial boards, etc. In this way the Central Committee may, thru the corresponding fractions, exercise a controlling influence over a paper which is not officially a party paper, introduce desirable comrades on to the editorial boards or have them appointed as editors, etc Of course with regard to the papers which belong to the party the Central Committee must have the unconditional right of directly ratifying the appointment of the editors.

IN Conclusion, we desire to draw your attention to two important points.

FIRSTLY it is quite clear, as we stated above, that it is no easy matter to reform the old structure of the party immediately. The old organization has become deep-rooted a fact which must not be underestimated. Therefore, great caution must be observed in the reconstruction of national sections. First of all, an extensive Ideological Campaign must be initiated for the reroganization of the Workers Party, for transforming it into a centralized party and for breaking down the federalist principle of party structure as absolutely failing to comply with the requirements of an active proletarian party. This ideological campaign must be pursued simultaneously and parallel with a determined agitation for the construction of the party on the basis of factory and workshop nuclei explaining this measure. A number of instructive reports for agitators, editors and active workers must be devoted to questions concerning the reorganization of the Workers Party, and these comrades must be clearly given to understand the need for this measure and be made active advocates of reorganization. The Central Committee and the other competent party committees must direct this campaign in the press. It will thereby become possible still further and still more extensively to acquaint the members of the party with the proposed reconstruction and its absolute necessity and usefulness. The comrades belonging to the national sections must understand that their organization is not a measure directed against the national sections, but that it exclusively pursues the general aims of the party and is in the interests of the whole party, including the national sections themselves. The aim of reorganization is not, by clumsiness and carelessness to destroy the organizations and work created by the national sections, but to strengthen the organizational influence of the Workers Party over the proletarians of all nationalities in the United States. By making use of all the available material, by demonstrating the advantages of the new forms of organization over the old, by treating the question seriously and in a business-like fashion, and insistently quoting the arguments in favor of the reorganization of the Workers Party, insistently repeating them if necessary in the press, at party meetings, conferences, etc., the leading organs of the party may achieve success, all the more since the first practical steps and the success which accompanies them will speak eloquently in favor of the course adopted.

The second point is this: Perhaps in addition to the inevitable conservatives and sceptics there will be found comrades who under-estimate the difficulties and who will want to break up the national sections before the new form of organization—the nuclei—will be sufficiently numerous and strong in a particular town district, town or region and sufficiently adapted to life, to serve as a foundation for the new form of party organization. We issue a warning against such a step. Only when the town district and town committees, as the result of the organization of factory and street nuclei, establish close contact with these nuclei, will it be possible finally to reorganize the old organization, the national sections and the given town district or town. To break, however, one organization without creating something in its place, would be extremely disastroous. The first thing is to organize factory and street nuclei, to set up ward, town district, town and regional committees, which are to be elected at the meetings or conferences of all the members of the party of all the nationalities in the ward, town district, town or region (we repeat that the organization of certain ward, town district, town, etc., committees may be proceeded with even before there are nuclei in all factories and streets). At the town or town-district conferences the delegates to the party congress are to [illegible] elected. The Central Committee, e[illegible]ed at the congress, after carefully [illegible]mining all the pros and cons and a[illegible]eful preparation, will thru the reg[illegible]own or town-district committee[illegible] to the reorganization of [illegible] the existing 17 na[illegible] are sufficiently p[illegible] reorganization on th[illegible] the fraction as above set [illegible] when the reorganization of the [illegible]tional section has given good results, of which we do not doubt, it will be possible gradually to proceed to the reorganization of the remainder.

The rate at which reorganization is undertaken you must determine for yourselves. We shall help you in every way we can. But for that purpose you must send us information as to the progress of the work.

English Imperialism in Cyprus

Declaration of the Communist Party of Cyprus on the Inauguration of the Colonial Constitution of the Island

TO the workers of England and the International proletariat!

On the 1st of May, the very same day on which the proletariat of the whole world, under the red flag, proclaimed once more its just demands and protested at the same time against the dishonesty and baseness of the various fascist governments and against the endless intrigues of the imperialists, here in Cyprus, in the corner of the Mediterranean, English imperialism, by "letter patent," declared Cyprus to be a colony, thus adding three hundred thousand workers and farmers more to the millions of colonized peoples who are bound in heavy chains behind its bloody chariot.

This fact was not allowed to pass unnoticed by the bourgeois press of London, which hastened to pronounce and comment upon it in accordance with the interests of its patrons. Many newspapers were full of praise for the new political change in the island, as conferring more liberties on the country, while others, inspired by the Foreign Ministry of Greece, vociferously proclaimed that it was the duty of England to cede the island in favor of Greece in accordance with the well-known desire of its inhabitants.

English workers!

Proletarians of the whole world!

THE Communist Party of Cyprus as the only sincere defender of the real interests of the inhabitants of this miserable island, is compelled to appeal to you in order to protest on the one hand against the lies of the bourgeois press which has always been continue its unjust rule over the island, and on the other hand against the lies of the bourgeois press which has always been accustomed to blur the truth in seeking to misinterpret the real aspirations of the enslaved peoples.

Imperialist England which has always been exceedingly cautious in concealing from the peoples she has enslaved her real plans of exploitation by means of granting sham pseudo-liberties, has played the same game in Cyprus, for the famous legislative council which was set up in 1878 was nothing more or less than a puppet in the hands of a sly and immoral governing clique.

The duly elected representatives who were returned to this legislative council were possessed of no real legislative power, as everything was entirely dependent upon the whims and the boundless ignorance of the colonial office, which had only one aim: to suck from the blood of the country, the shameful tribute of £92,000, a share of the Turkish debt, in total disregard of the prevailing misery of the suffering pepole.

THIS was the state of affairs down to the 15th of May this year. Let us now examine what are the liberties so graciously granted along with this our official colonization.

It is absolutely absurd and an abuse of language to talk of liberties! The increase of the native seats on the Legislative Council from 12 to 15, which has been trumpeted all over the world as a magnificent concession of further libetries to the population of Cyprus, is simply a piece of bitter irony, for the number of official parasites has at the same time been increased from 6 to 9, so that the same order is maintained. No other change has been effected. And how is it with regard to the share of the Turkish debt of £92,000? This continues to be a heavy burden on the shoulders of the long-suffering people at a time when the financial crisis in the Island is admitted to be without precedent. Has not Cyprus become a colony? By what right is the payment of this barbarous inhuman tribute demanded, when there exists no real indebteness to Turkey? It can only be characterized as a suppression of the weak peoples by capitalism. The English treasury finds it necessary to fill its huge coffers in order to maintain that invincible guard, the English fleet. It is of no concern to its administration whether this money is wrung from starving villagers, clad in rags, who, unable to earn their daily bread, are obliged ot feed on roots and old herbage.

BUT we not only protest against the continuation of the foreign yoke, we also protest against the clergy and our bourgeoisie who are clamouring in favor of the union of Cyprus with Greece. This bourgeois minority, consisting of money-lenders and big merchants in close co-operation, is struggling hard for the union, as it sees by this means an easier way to achieve its plans of exploitation against the poor villagers and peasants of the Island. We strongly protest against the national aspirations of the bourgeoisie which are trumpeted forth now and again, and declare that the Cyprian proletarians and the masses of the Cyprian peasants are against the national dreams of the bourgeoisie, for they know very well that under the union a new yoke is waiting for them, far worse than the present, a new conscription and new duties as guards on the sea coast.

Workers of England!

The workers and peasants of Cyprus appeal to you and ask you to take up their claim against the constitution of their slavery to imperialism.

Proletarians of the world!

ON May day, when our conquerors were officially proclaiming to us our condemnation to live under British imperialism, our thoughts turned to you, who with your huge processions demonstrated once more to our exploiters that you mean to stand together, ever watchful guardians of our rights. We have placed our faith in you for the attainment of our real liberty, for our autonomy.

Down with imperialism!

Long Live the liberation of the peoples!

Long Live the international proletariat!

Long Live the International Social revolution!

Shell Shocked Dough.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(FP)—Protests by rich owners of country estates around Northport, Long Island, against construction of a 1,000-bed hospital for shell-shocked soldiers of the late war have been overruled by the federal board of hospitalization. These tragic invalids, shrieking at the horrors they cannot forget, will be housed in a $3,000,000 building in the neighborhood of some of the men whose fortunes were made, or were multiplied, while the slaughter on the western front went on.

AS W[illegible]T

By T. J. [illegible]

THE fossil remains [illegible] thal man was disco[illegible] last June. The scien[illegible] is quite excited about it. T[illegible]ther-thaler was ape-like in his appearance, say the scientists, but his brain was about as large as it is today. Let us hope, not as empty. Well, this is going too far. We confess that modern man is away ahead of his long distance ancestors in many ways. There are exceptions of course. Perhaps it is not fair to judge all the Neantherthalers by the skull that was dug up in Galilee.

SEVERAL thousand years from now, fossil remains of William Jennings Bryan may be dug up. It would not be just to the present generation, if the scientists of the future should assume that the brain pan of the "Commoner" was typical of all the other mental storehouses in the United States. Thoughts like these sometimes prevent us from accepting all the conclusions of the scientists.

"YOU ain't goin' to pray no mo' " is the slogan of the coal operators of Oklahoma who have sent the sheriff to the mine pits to prevent the wives of the striking miners from invoking godly aid to convert the strikebreakers to the ways of decency. Strange to say the prayers had effect. At least so we are told. There is a suspicion in my mind that the wives of the miners hurled something else besides prayers at the strikebreakers. When the workers don't pray, they are enemies of religion. When they do pray, they are blaspheming. If the miners take our tip they will stop praying and begin acting.

THERE is a likelihood that a strike will take place in the anthracite region on September 1. It is also possible that the bituminous miners may down tools simultaneously. Such a threat has been made by John L. Lewis, head of the international union. Lewis cannot be trusted to take any action that would benefit the miners unless he feels that his own prestige and position are at stake. The operators have played ducks and drake with the Jacksonville pact. A national strike in the coal industry

CUNEO PRINTING PLANT FAILS TO PRODUCE GOODS

Company Losing Money Thru Lockout

The Sears-Roebuck Company is getting nervous over the inability of the Cuneo Printing Company to turn out its catalogues scheduled for delivery by Sept. 1st. Scab foremen and scab pressmen are not able to do much of anything, but what they succeed in turning out is very inferior work.

The exposes published in the DAILY WORKER are getting under the hide of Seymour "Stuss" Singer, the scab superintendent and former pal of the New York gangsters who killed the gambler Rosenthal. Pressmen and feeders are being brot in from all parts of the country, but most of them leave as soon as they learn that there is a lockout on.

Berry Agreed to Pact.

It is now admitted by representatives of "Majah" Berry that while the feeders were in arbitration proceedings the international officer held a conference with Cuneo. The printing boss was asked if he would agree to the decision of the arbitrators. Cuneo's answer to this was that he would if the international would make the pressmen abide by the agreement with reference to the reduction of pressmen on the machines. Berry promised Cuneo that he would see to this, even tho the pressmen three times refused to ratify the tentative pact made between the executive board and Cuneo.

It is as a result of this decision of Berry's that the pressmen and feeders at Cuneo's are now locked out, with Berry trying to supply their places with "union" scabs.

The prospects for a successful ending to the dispute are brig.... It is rumored that Premier taxi drivers are refusing to haul strikebreakers to the Cuneo plant.

POLITICAL PRISONERS DEMAND BETTER FARE; ARMY FIRES AT THEM

LUTSK, Aug 18.—One hundred and fifty political prisoners in a compound in Volinia rebelled against the unbearable conditions they are forced to live under. A battalion of the army was called out and without warning fired into the crowd of prisoners. One was killed and many wounded.

BERRY IS NOW RAISING MONEY FOR NEW CHURCH

Chicago Tribune Prints Liberty in Scab Shop

This is the fifth of a series of articles exposing the crooked career of George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union. The members of the international union are now determined to get rid of Berry and Berryism.

It is worthy of notice that Berry in his boost for the governorship of Tennessee never mentioned the fact that he was president of the International Printing Pressmens' and Assistants Union. Evidently he did not want the ruling classes of Tennessee to know that he had any connection with labor. The pressmen were only good for furnishing him with the money with which to initiate his industral enterprise.

Still At His Tricks.

When the pressmen of Chicago finished their investigation they discovered that "Majah" Berry, the war patriot, who helped the capitalists to keep the workers quiet during the slaughter, had dug into the old Age Pension Fund to the extent of about a quarter of a million dollars and an almost equal amount from the War Emergency Assesment.

Berry had not stopped playing tricks with the membership since Judge Cochrane decision declared that the "Majah" was guilty of embezzlement. Berry is now building a chapel for services to dead soldiers buried in France. He called the fund "Popular Subscription" but it did not prove very "popular" so he had to have his puppets at the convention make it a "compulsory" popular subscription. Each member was soaked one dollar for this fake scheme. According to Berry's own figures there is over $40,000 in this fund at the present time.

It was during one of his appearances during the litigation over his embezzling ventures that a federal judge ran him out of the court for appearing in his uniform with the obvious intention to impress the judge with his patriotism. Berry had to change his vestments and come back dressed like a normal person.

How The Bosses Buy Berry.

An excellent example of how the printers purchase Berry and thus secure relief from union obligation is furnished by an editorial in the July issue of the American Pressman, edited by Berry. In this editorial the Chicago Tribune is praised highly for

ANTHRACITE DEADLOCK STILL UNBROKEN, THO MINERS FEAR SELL OUT

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 18.—Continuation of the conference between miners' leaders was expected here today as union chiefs from both anthracite and bituminous fields flocked the headquarters of the United Mine Workers.

While union officials said nothing but "ordinary union business" had been discussed, it was learned that plans for the threatened anthracite miners' strike on Sept 1 were gone over.

The next move in the deadlock betwene the miners and the operators is seen in a possible ""get-together" call for arbitration, which has tricked the miners before but which Lewis may accept after some bluster in spite of the pressure being put upon him from the Progressive Miners who oppose any and all arbitration schemes.

A. C. W. UNION TO ANSWER RAID AT MEETING TONIGHT

City Organization to Aid N. Y. Struggle

An answer to the raids and arrests conducted by the city police, carrying out the orders of the International Tailoring company, will be given by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers tonight at the Labor Lyceum, Ogden and Kedzie Aves., at a meeting of all shop chairmen and officers of the union. The meeting was called to discuss the union's strike against the International.

The Chicago joint board of the Amalgamated has met and pledged aid to the New York Amalgamated strikers who are carrying on an extensive organization drive as well as a strike against the International plant in New York.

The New York strikers will be supplied with as much funds as they need, it was said by Chicago Amalgamated officials. The Chicago organization is in a better position as the fight here is concentrated in one plant, and there is no vicious injunction to fight as in the case in New York city.

A member of the Amalgamated, Sophie Klovestke, who is not a striker, but who was walking the picket line with friends, was arrested on a charge of 'disorderly conduct" yesterday, altho she was doing nothing but picketing. She will appear in the Des Plaines street police station this morning for a hearing.

The J. L. Taylor-International Tailoring company's project in Rock Island has failed, it is reported, the Tri-cities workers refusing to act as strikebreakers. The local manufacturers who induced the International to go to Rock Island in order to introduce "open shop" conditions there, have been reproved by the International bosses for "misinterpreting" conditions."

It has been disclosed that the same group of Rock Island "open shoppers" who invited the garment bosses to their city had the government arsenal there closed in order to throw the workers out of jobs and reduce wages.

AETNA FURNITURE WORKERS VICTORS IN SHORT STRIKE

Thank Daily Worker as Their Only Aid

The upholsterers of the Aetna Furniture company of 469 West 24th St., who struck early last week when the firm tried to force a second wage cut on them in addition to a ten per cent cut on piece rates which they had agreed to, have won their strike completely and went back to work yesterday with all their demands accepted by the management.

Monday morning, the superintendent summoned in the committee which had been elected by the strikers, from off the picket line, and agreed to rescind the second cut and to recognize the shop committee which the strikers had set up as the authorized spokesmen in the shop to adjust grievances in the future. Also, those workers whom the firm had said could not come back at all, are not to be discriminated against, but are to be taken back without prejudice with the rest.

Thank the Daily Worker.

At a meeting of the strikers yesterday morning, they discussed their experience and the agreemnt, and in the name of all the strikers the meeting thanked the DAILY WORKER for the assistance that had been given them and expressed the hope that in the future the DAILY WORKER would grow and prosper as the real workers' press and lead in the whole labor movement.

The strikers came to the conclusion that their only hope lies in the left wing labor movement being able ultimately to take the leadership of the American labor movement, as they could expect no aid from the present yellow leadership of the Upholsterers' Union, which had sold them out before and now refuses to organize them at all. They are not opposed to the union and hope to be able to join when the union leadership ceases its opposition to admitting workers to membership.

Daily Worker Only Aid.

The strikers declared that the only aid they had in winning their strike was from the DAILY WORKER, the organ of the Workers Communist Party, and all promised not to forget that they were obligated by their own interest as workers, to participate in the labor movement under the

LABOR PARTY OF LIMA WINS THE PRIMARIES

Expect to Elect the City Commission in Nov.

LIMA, Ohio, August 18.—Three labor candidates, including two socialists and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, will run on a labor party ticket in the November elections for city commissioners as a result of the non-partisan primary election just held.

About one-fifth of the 20,000 voters of Lima turned out to the primary election in which party tickets were ruled off by reason of the non-partisan law, altho the definite labor party candidates, Corbin N. Shook, the former socialist mayor and Edwin Blank polled the highest votes on a platform of the labor party, while Lawrence Long, of the B. of R. T. who had come out as an independent before the labor party ticket was proposed, ran sixth, which will permit him to run in the final election which will choose three of the six highest primary candidates.

Expect Larger Final Vote.

Indications are that the November election will see the three labor party candidates, Shook, Blank and Long, pitted against the three old commissioners with the prophecy of local Communists that the labor party ticket will win "with a more startling vote than that of the primary."

The primary brought out about 25 per cent of the total voting strength in comparison to the 92 per cent shown in the presidential election last year.

Labor Party Platform.

The labor party platform was the center of attraction and the campaign from now on will make it the entire issue, the Lima trade unions supporting Shook having made the election the talk of the local unions, where even the republican chairman of the Machinists' local congratulated the success of the labor party at the local meeting.

Shook led the primary race with 1,783 votes, Blank came next with 1,489 votes, while Long who ran sixth as above noted, had 925 votes. According to local Communists, the labor party candidates expect to have control of this city of 50,000 inhabitants after the November electios

HYMAN CHALLENGES SIGMAN TO SHOW ANY MASS SUPPORT IN I. L. G. W.; STOPPAGE THURSDAY

NEW YORK CITY, August 18.—Plans for Thursday's stoppage in the ladies' garment industry in this city are proceeding with every prospect that a great majority of the workers will respond to the call issued by the Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22.

Altho President Sigman has prophesied that there will be no actual stoppage, he has supplemented this prophesy with a letter to he workers threatening them with loss of their jobs if they stop work. According to Louis Hyman, chairman of the Joint Committee of Action, this is an example of the sort of terrorism that has been going on continuously since the raids on Locals 2 and 9 headquarters on June 15.

Sig Is Getting Funny.

"Yet President Sigman quotes the constitution at us," says Mr. Hyman, "denounces us for un-union-like tactics, and says we ought to 'accomplish organization changes in a constitutional manner.' Evidently President Sigman is becoming a humorist. It was a committee appointed by him who drew up this constitution, and it was his Objection and Election Committee which barred from the ballot for delegates to the convention anyone who opposed his reactionary constitution. When by chance some delegates were chosen who were hostile to Sigman and his machine, they were unseated.

"Last June, the day after he had captured by force the headquarters of Locals 2 and 9 with all the records and property in these buildings, President Sigman sent us a letter notifying us of our suspension and demanding that we turn over the books and property of the local, 'in accordance with the constitution.' How does he dare to speak of the constitution after such acts of terror?

Blue Sky Locals.

"And how can he talk of our gaining any system of proportional representation in our union when every convention is packed with delegates from out-of-town locals, which like mushrooms spring up on the eve of conventions just to serve the ends of the machine. It is with these locals that Sigman voted in our present constitution; it is with these locals that he can carry thru anything that is to his liking.

"He reproaches us with trying to form a dictatorship and forcing it on the members; yet it is we who were legally elected and have the confidence of the members. He came into office only thru the aid of these fake locals at a packed convention, not by direct vote of the membership. If he is so confident that he represents the will of the members, why does he not follow our suggestion for a referendum vote on our demands for his resignation, for our reinstatement and for a reorganization of the Joint Board? (Of course we mean a referendum counted by some impartial committee, and not such a one as was taken on the governor's commission report, where a vote of about 3,000 was stretched to 14,000.)

Asks Show of Power.

"And if President Sigman is so opposed to dictatorship, why does he use gangsters to force the members to pay dues, and seek the co-operation of the employers to force the workers to recognize the Joint Board, when they no longer consider it a legal body of the union?

"The Joint Committee of Action has called upon the cloak and dressmakers to stop work on Thursday to demonstrate their protest against the Joint Board and all its actions, and to prove that they cannot be terrorized, nor any longer enslaved by the corrupt machine of the union."

VIENNA FASCIST BANDS IN ANTI-JEWISH RIOTS

One Hundred Arrested, Many Are Injured

VIENNA, August 18.—One hundred and six fascists were being held by police here for taking part in the antisemitic riot, staged at the opening of the Zionist Congress. The fascists, several thousand of whom came here from out of town, were bent upon breaking up the Zionist meeting.

The head of the Vienna police had forbidden hostile demonstrations, but before order was restored the entire police force of 6,000 was forced to charge the rioters with drawn sabres. A score were injured.

MASSACRE AT CANTON TOLD BY WITTNESS

Over Hundred Dead and Wounded

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 18—The following is the text of a suppressed declaration and appeal of the Chinese staff, students and workmen of the Canton Christian college, concerning the massacre of Chinese at Canton, sent via this city by mail.

On the 23rd of June as a patriotic demonstration protesting against the killing of our fellow-countrymen by the British and the Japanese in Shanghai and elsewhere, a body of citizens which was composed largely of farmers, laborers, and students who were unarmed and defenceless paraded on the street of Canton.

When we were marching peacefully and orderly on Shaki road in Chinese territory opposite the Anglo-French concession of Shameen, the British troops there which were fully equipped with arms and protected by sandbags fired upon the crowd first by rifles and then by machine guns and naval guns.

The firing resulted in over a hundred dead and wounded including many of our students and staff.

As we were on the spot where the British fired at, we were showered with bullets and shells and we escaped death only by a narrow margin. We saw troops first started firing at us and how they kept firing without Appeals to British Lion.

In view of this horrible atrocity committed by the British troops at Shameen, we, the entire Chinese staff and student body, and workmen of Canton Christian college, wish to appeal to the citizens and governments of the foreign countries for symathy and support. We appeal especially to the British for an objective inquiry into the matter, and for a just and amicable settlement.

As eye-witnesses on the scene of the tragedy we wish to point out that the responsibility for the crime rested with those foreign consuls and authorities who directed the firing.

In this connection we wish to state that the outrages which took place in Shanghai, Hankow, and Canton were symptomatic of the unequal and unjust relationship existing between China and the foreign states. Bound by unequal treaties, enchanced by foreign control, and paralyzed by foreign exploitation, China is an international cripple.

In order that peace and amity may be established between China and the foreign states, the treaties that are of the nature of 'iniquum foedus' should be abrogated at once, and new treaties on the basis of equality and reciprocity should be made.

It is important to remember that the present unrest in China in regard to foreign relations is due chiefly to the rising tide of nationalism in opposition to the rights and interests that the foreigners exacted from China by virtue of treaties and agreements that were imposed upon China by circumstances of war. Since the unequal and imposed treaties are the fundamental causes of the present unrest, we must abolish them. To this end consular jurisdiction must be given up; foreign settlements, concessions, and leased territories must be restored; restrictions on tariff autonomy must be removed; spheres of influence must be renounced; control of customs must be surrendered; the stationing of foreign troops and warships must be evacuated; and the maintenance of wireless stations and other warlike establishments must be done away with.

Moved by the deep sorrow of our countrymen, prompted by a profound sense of justice, and guided by a pure and unselfish motive, we appeal to the whole world for sympathy, support, and justice.

COMMUNIST CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR IN TOLEDO TELLS THE DEAR LADIES TRUTH ABOUT "VICE", CHILD LABOR

By A. W. HARVITT
(Worker Correspondent)

TOLEDO, Ohio, August 18.— William Patterson, who is the Workers Party candidate for mayor of this city, spoke before the league of women voters in their hall Tuesday evening.

Comrade Patterson was invited along with the other candidates who will run in the primary election for the nomination of candidates for the office of mayor of Toledo.

The invited guests who spoke during the evening were: Fred Mery, business men's candidate; Alvin Jones, dry candidate and reformer; Tommy Devine, candidate of the Devine-Socialists who promised the ladies to vote for anything the dear ladies asked for.

Immediately upon arriving at the hall each speaker was handed a questionnaire with the questions they were to answer in their speechs.

Communist Answers Questions.

These questions were pertaining to the injunction abatement law in regard to prostitution, and houses of prostitution.

This law states that all such places of ill-fame can be closed and padlocked and the occupants stopped from doing business.

The law says also that the owners of the building can be enjoined from renting a building for such a purpose, and the building shall be closed and padlocked as a nuisance.

The other question each candidate was to answer was in regard to street trades, such as selling papers on the streets by children less than twelve years of age.

The other candidates, including the yellow Socialist Divine Tommy, all promised to abolish these evils and anything else that these dear ladies wanted done in the future.

Comrade Patterson gave the dear ladies a shock by telling them the truth.

The Communist candidate is a member of the Longshoremen's Union, and perhaps he seemed a little brusque to the ladies, as he speaks in the proletarian language. He used unvarnished English in telling the ladies about prostitution and its cause.

Speaker Tells About Injunction.

The speaker informed the ladies he knew some of them were intelligent enuf to know that a mayor did not have any power to issue an injunction to start with, but that injunctions were issued by capitalist judges against labor unions that were fighting the bosses for the bare necessities of life. He told the audience WHY this injunction law was never used against the owners of houses of prostitution, because wealthy real estate men who controlled the capitalist courts owned much of the property that was rented for these purposes.

The speaker said: "If I promised to do this,—which I am not going to do, —I would be powerless to carry out that promise, because the courts are the place where injunctions are issued, but the courts do not issue injunctions against wealthy property owners, but against labor."

The speaker then told them that the Workers (Communist) Party is against prostitution, but it would not be by injunction they would stop it, but by abolishing the capitalist system so that one class could not live by exploiting another.

Soviet Russia Abolished Prostitution.

The speaker told them that there was no prostitution in Soviet Russia where the dictatorship of the proletariat prevails.

He told them that the courts belonged to the workers there, and were used in their interests and not as here, to enjoin them from striking for more pay and better conditions.

Ridicules Reform.

Comrade Pattreson ridiculed reform and said that Toledo was the most reformed city in the United States, but that it did not seem to help it any.

He told them that if working girls received enuf in wages to live on, there would be less prostitution.

Communist Party Not Reformist.

Then he said: "Ladies, the Communist Party is not a party of reform, but when the Communists get control, they will abolish the capitalist dictatorship and establish the proletarian dictatorship."

Communists Would Abolish Child Labor.

In speaking with reference to the street trades participated in by children under 12 years, Comrade Patterson told the audience that Communists have always stood for the complete abolition of all child labor in any form; not only of babies, but of any child below high school age.

He said:—"The only way to abolish the grinding of our children into gold for the plute class is to abolish the exploitation system of wage slavery, and thereby destroy the capitalist system completely." The speaker told his audience that this would not reform the vice conditions that now prevails in Toledo, but would abolish all vice and other crimes of society now existing because of capitalism.

Arrest Mine Leaders.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—(FP)—When Gomer Jones, vice president, District 21, United Mine Workers of America, and S. A. Robertson, another union official, were arrested in Arkansas under a revived 1917 injunction on a charge of planning to parade thru the streets of Greenwood, Ark., the American Civil Liberties Union volunteered its aid from New York to fight the case thru to the highest courts.

I. W. A. IN NEED OF IMMEDIATE FUNDS FOR MANY CASES

Workers Facing Trial, Others in Prison

In an effort to raise funds to meet the exigencies of a large number of defense cases it is being called upon to handle, International Labor Defense, is circularizing thousands of names of persons in or sympathetic to the labor movement. In the letter, I. L. D. is asking supporters of labor defense to give 10 cents and to get nineteen of their friends to give a similar amount for legal defense for working class defendants and for relief and aid to class war prisoners and their families. There are more than a half hundred workers facing trial in various parts of the country for their activity in the labor movement and more than 100 more serving sentences on charges growing out of strikes, frameups and labor persecution.

From Every Part of the Country.

Enclosed with a letter appealing for contributions is a pamphlet, "Labor Defense," which contains the constitution, manifesto and program of the national conference held in Chicago on June 28th last. To this conference came delegates from workers' organizations in all parts of the country who gathered to found International Labor Defense, a non-partisan workers' body for the defense of all class war prisoners.

One contributor writes: "Sending more than the petition calls for. Enclosed find five dollars for defense. Times are tough in Frisco and we all have hard sledding getting funds, but our prisoners have to be looked to, so we will have to do it, even if it should mean pulling up the belts a hole." Another accompanies a contribution with these words: "I want you to know how much my heart is in this work. Nor is it commisseration. It is approval of their (class-war prisoners) ideals and aims and admiration for their heroism."

Workers Party Helps.

In addition, branches of the Workers Party are being sent the contribution lists, by courtesy of their national office. It is expected that this work will receive energetic attention from the members of the party in view of the fact that a portion of the cases that International Labor Defense is handling involve members of the Workers Party.

GREEK ATTACK BULGARIAN OUTPOST AS DISORDER CONTINUES IN SOFIA

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Hostilities have broken out on the Bulgarian frontier where it was reported from Constantinople that a band of Greeks have attacked the Bulgarian outpost at Caratepe. Several hours of fighting occurred.

From Bulgaria reports of internal disorders continue to be received. A Sofia dispatch said the Macedonian leader Taskalow was murdered at the Betanovici railway station.

contributing a four color rotogravure machine valued at $25,000 to the Technical Trade School at Pressmen's Home.

Yet the magazine Liberty, which is owned by the Chicago Tribune and edited in the same offices as the Tribune, is printed in the scab plant of W. F. Hall. Was the rotogravure machine Berry's compensation for letting the Tribune get away with a scab magazine?

Yet knowing that the Chicago Tribune company, has its magazine published in a scab plant, Berry writes as follows: "The Chicago Tribune has done a very great and encouraging thing. This newspaper has done more toward helping the International Printing Pressmen and Assistant's Union of North America in its educational project than all the rest of the talk that has emanated from various sections of the country. The Tribune's commendation has a ring of reality to it. It is substantial; it is a genuine contribution to a cause that is deserving not only of the fullest confidence and co-operation of our membership, but of every newspaper publisher and employing printer in America."

This is gentle hint to the other publishers to come across if they want Berry to do his best for them.

How little Berry takes his professions of trade unionism to heart is shown by the fact that he accepts the advertisements of non-union concerns in his magazine, The American Pressman. One of those firms is the "Save-M" Fire Extinguisher Company of Cincinnati, Ohio.

If more proof is required that Berry is only a fake trade unionist, here it is: The Clinchfield Mercantile Company, of Rogersville, Tenn., owned by Berry and Joseph C. Orr, secretary-treasurer of the international union, purchased clothing from the Schaeffer & Weedon Company, and supplied the same non-union clothes to convalescent members of the International Printing Pressmen's Union quartered at their home in Tennessee.

It is a generally accepted practice on the part of trade unionists to insist that their purchases be manufactured by union labor. While the reactionaries in the labor movement are trying to substitute propaganda for the trade union label for organizing activities, nobody will deny that the practice of insisting on purchases carrying the union label is beneficial.

That the clothing firm from which Berry purchased clothes for the inmates of the Pressmen's Home was a scab concern is shown by the following letter from the general organizer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Cincinnati to Franklin Union No. 23 of New York City:

"Dear Sir and Brother: We have your inquiry, regarding the Schaefer & Weedon Co. who supplies clothing for your Pressmen's Home and Hospital.

"This is an anti-union concern, who have been fighting us for the past two years bitterly.

"Fraternally yours,
"Jack Kroll, General Organizer."

During the great steel strike led by William Z. Foster, now secretary of the Trade Union Educational League and national chairman of the Workers (Communist) Party, Berry made a bitter attack on the steel workers and the strike leaders. But Berry did not get away with this.

During the Montreal convention of the American Federation of Labor, Berry was standing in the lobby of the Windsor hotel one evening when a delegate of the boilermakers approached him and said: "So you are the man who insulted the representative of our union in the general strike committee of the steel workers?"

"Don't you like it?" was Berry's brazen reply.

"Take that!" shouted the boilermaker, as he landed a haymaker on Berry's map. Zowie! The sparks could be seen flying. Practically every face in the lobby cracked with laughter. Even those who were drinking with Berry took a malicious joy in seeing the faker get a wallop.

"A crack like this was never heard on this continent since the date of the San Francisco earthquake," said one delegate.

That was the third time Berry got beaten up at conventions. The previous year the members of the I. P. P. and P. U. thrashed the strikebreaker at the Atlantic City convention.

In 1919 Berry rented the Half Way House at Edgemere, L. I., and housed his scab members furnished by his Hale Spring Employment Agencies in New York. Employers consider Berry the best trained strikebreaker in the country. His closest aids are: William McHugh, John M. Brophy, S. B. Marks and Joseph C. Orr.

"The Rats Must Go."

The following refrain was very popular among New York pressmen in 1920:

"The rats must go, we all should know,
The rats must go, I say;
So join this throng, with word and song,
And drive (vote) the rats away."

The Chicago pressmen and feeders are now determined to get rid of the rats and of the rat-in-chief, George L. Berry. They are going about that work methodically. The pressmen claim that Berry is an alien in the union, that he does not even belong in the labor movement as a member of the rank and file, not to speak of being an international officer.

One of those who was on Berry's pay roll in Chicago was the notorious Moss Enright, the professional murderer. Enright met his Waterloo early in 1920. The following dispatch was sent from Chicago to New York in 1920, with titles and headlines:

"Berry sends many thousands for criminal use—Special from Chicago. Story at printing pressmen's meeting, June 8, 1920."

"President Hass sprung a big surprise—the astonishing affidavits were read with letters from Berry and Orr to Rosenheim, a full confession from Rosenheim and others. The reading took up to 12.45 p. m. Moss Enright, who was recently murdered, was in the employ of I. P. P. and A. U. by George L. Berry. Bogus No. 3 and No 4 cards were printed at the home of the I P. P. and A. U. to pack No. 3 and 4 meetings at $500 a man to be paid to Enright. Berry still owes $1,700 on this bill. Forgeries committed. Three men were to be bodily harmed. Hass, Kapps, Sangwin were named. Bogus stamps and bogus working cards by the hundreds and real I. P. P. and A. U. due stamps of No. 3. We are all amazed with this news We thank our officials and give them full authority to go to the limit as they see fit."

This is the way Berry used the money of the international. Hiring murderers to make war on the progressives who blocked his efforts to loot the treasury.

But tho Berry does not like radicals in the union he has a great hankering for royalty. Did he not initiate the prince of (Wails) Wales, heir to the throne of the British empire, in Local 25, New York? The prince was in the United States doing his stuff for the ruling class of Great Britain. The prince now boasts of a card, No. 01, qualifying him as a journeyman and honorary member-at-large of the I. P. P. and A. U. David Boyle and Joseph C. Orr issued his highness the card. The men who are locked out by the Cuneo Printing Company may slap themselves on the back and get all the consolation they can out of the fact that they have a member of the royal family in their union. What a contemptible flunkey Beery !

Miracles of Catholics and Protestants Cannot Save the Polish Terror

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Boston Herald carries the headline, "Poles Celebrate Rout of Bolsheviki." Then follows the story of a celebration held in the church of "Our Lady of Ostrobrama" on what was called the fifth anniversary of the "Miracle of the Vistula," as a result of which it is claimed that not only Poland, but all capitalist Western Europe, and its so-called "civilization," was saved from Soviet Rule.

The working class of Boston is catholic when it turns to religion, paralyzed by this Roman creed. While enslaved to the catholic church, it is doubly oppressed thru the fact that in industry it is also held in chains by protestant exploiters, who constitute the local bourgeoisie.

Thus the Boston Herald, protestant, owned by the shoe machinery trust, builds its alliance with the catholic church in an effort to tell the Polish workers, found in large numbers in all industries thruout New England, that "A Miracle" saved Poland from the Bolsheviks in 1921.

• • • •

Increasing masses of workers and poor peasants, who have seen the best among their numbers thrown into prison or put to death these past five years, with an even greater persecution continuing today, have grown to realize that their only hope lies thru a Polish Soviet Republic, that the victory of the Polish Communist Party thru a proletarian dictatorship in 1921, would have placed Poland within the Soviet Union in the struggle for the new day for all labor. Instead they live today in the greatest misery, condemned to unemployment and all the suffering incident to it, and when they protest in the streets, they are shot down by the mercenaries of the terror rule imposed upon them.

• • • •

Polish workers in the United States are becoming acquainted with these facts. They know that in 1921, the allies of the Versailles peace tried to launch an offensive against Soviet Russia and Soviet Ukraine, using Poland as its catspaw. It was to be another effort to overthrow the Soviet Republic. The offensive was carefully launched. But the Red Army was ready. It struck back with one of the most terrific blows that Workers' Rule has so far dealt its capitalist foe. The imperialists at Paris, London and Washington were compelled to witness their Polish hirelings hurled back off Soviet soil in crushing defeat. The workers of the entire world were startled and enthused by the heroic exploits of Budenny's red cavalry that thundered up to the very gates of Warsaw. This remarkable drive of the Soviet horsemen, that took them 700 miles from their base of operations, stands as an unsurpassed achievement in all military history.

• • • •

But it was not a miracle that saved Warsaw and Poland. Instead of sending its air fleets over Warsaw, dropping bombs upon the population, the Soviet airfleets dropped tons of leaflets from the skies, calling on the workers to rise and achieve their own victory. The Soviet army was not an army of conquest. It stands as the power that protects the Soviet Union. The Polish workers must win their own victory. In 1921 they did not raise to a realization of their mission. They were not strong enough to break their own chains. They did not cast off the black oppression that held them as in a straitjacket. The Polish capitalists and landlords maintained their slavery rule over them.

• • • •

But the Soviet Union still stands at their eastern border as an inspiration to all oppressed Polish workers and peasants. No miracle, in all the religions of the catholics and the protestants, can stop Soviet Rule from winning its triumph in Poland, not even the "miracles" recognized by the Polish catholic churches or Cal Coolidge's own protestant New England.

hard and soft, would be the way to tackle the problem of relieving the miners from the evil effects of that contract.

WHEN the Jacksonville pact was signed, the left wing in the coal miners' union represented by the Progressive Miners' Committee pointed out that this agreement would wreck the union. Lewis wanted a long term contract. Under the pressure of the government, the operators concided that. There was an election campaign coming and the G. O. P., of which Lewis and most of the big operators are members, did not want a coal strike on their hands. It might mean a democrat in the White House.

THE predictions of the progressive miners turned out to be only too true. The operators not only violated the Jacksonville pact whenever it suited their purposes, but they also rode rough shod over working conditions secured by the miners after many hard struggles. Lewis always favored the operators. Now, when 70 per cent of the soft coal produced in the United States comes out of non-union pits, he begins to threaten a general strike. What preparation is he making for such a strike? None that can be seen.

WHEN the British miners felt that a strike was inevitable, they entered into negotiations with the general labor movement and when the bosses threw down their challenge, labor was so powerful and determined that the government surrendered. This is what A. J. Cook, secretary of the British miners' federation said a few days ago in commenting on the situation: "I realize now the power we have. Revolution will come. I want a revolution that will have a disciplined army behind it—a revolution that will not only have discipline but will be organised with an objective ahead of it, a revolution understanding its goal."

CAN anybody imagine John L. Lewis making a speech like that? Only recently Lewis boasted that his executive committee aided the department of justice in exposing the radicals in the union to the government. Lewis, like George L. Barry, of the pressmen, and thousands of other labor leaders, are agents of the capitalists and nothing else. Their interests and those of the master class are as identical as those of the Irish bailiffs who used to throw tenants out of their homes at the behest of the landlords. If the American miners go into battle under the leadership of Lewis, they are going into battle under a severe handicap. They must organize to get rid of Lewis at the same time that they fight the greedy coal barons.

ZEIGLER MINE PICKETS DEMAND OLD OFFICIALS BE RETURNED TO LOCAL

ZEIGLER, Ills., August 18.—The "wild cat" strike at Zeigler, which to date has taken a toll of one life, flamed anew this morning when a few scabs who yesterday started work at the mines, were halted at the mine shaft by pickets and told "there will be no work here today."

The pickets are unwilling that operations should be resumed at the mines until the old local officials, who were deposed by the sub-district officials be reinstated.

STOP WORK TO ANSWER SIGMAN BOSS COMBINE

NEW YORK CITY, August 18.—The Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is calling all cloak and dress makers to stop work on Thursday afternoon at three o'clock and fill ten of the largest New York City halls with their numbers in order to show the manufacturers who are secretly aiding the Sigman gang in the Joint Board that the rank and file look to the Joint Action Committee and not to the Sigman gang for leadership, and mean to permit no boss or bosses to trifle in union affairs. A general stoppage will be discussed if this continues.

The circular distributed throut New York shops states as follows:

Sisters and Brothers:—It is nine weeks now since we are conducting a bitter struggle against the machine of the Joint Board and the International.

In their attempt to suppress the revolt of the membership against their corrupt rule, the officialdom resorted to the most despicable methods. No weapon was too degrading for them to employ in their conspiracy against the membership.

Alliance With Bosses.

All their methods have been a total failure. The cloak and dressmakers have offered an iron wall of resistance against all the vicious attacks. The Joint Board has now made an open alliance with the bosses in order to break our ranks. This open betrayal of the workers has gone so far that the bosses have practically become the chairmen in the shops and force the workers to pay dues to the Joint Board and discharge them by the hundreds at the instigation of the Joint Board machine.

This loyal service on the part of the bosses has been rewarded by giving the bosses a free hand to disregard all union rules and act as they please in their shops. Thru a secret understanding between the Joint Board and the employers, hundreds of workers have been thrown out of their jobs, under the guise of "reorganisations." Even the Unemployment Insurance Fund, to which every one of us has contributed his or her share, is used as a weapon to force the workers to pay dues to the Joint Board.

Must Say, "Hands Off."

Cloak and dressmakers! You have always shown a splendid spirit in our struggle. You have at every opportunity demonstrated your readiness to defend what you believed to be right and permitted no one to trample upon your rights.

The time has come when you must say to your employers: "Hands Off!"

The time has come when you must say to the Sigman clique: "Out With You!"

The time has come when you must declare before the entire world that you alone will decide who your representatives are to be and not the employers.

In order to demonstrate your power and make an end to the present situation, we call on you to stop from work on Thursday afternoon, August 20, 3 o'clock sharp, to demonstrate your determination to carry this fight to a successful conclusion.

Come to the halls that will be assigned for you. There you will act upon the question of calling a general stoppage against the employers in the event that they will continue to interfere in the internal affairs of our union.

It is your solemn duty to come and voice your opinion. It is your duty to come and decide the fate of the cloak and dressmakers.

We call on all the cloak and dressmakers: Operators, sample workers, pressers, cutters, finishers, tailors, drapers, examiners and all other workers in the trade to come and decide the outcome of our struggle.

honest and courageous leadership of Communists.

When the boss called in the strikers and agreed to grant their demands, he said he did not know that they were "all Bolsheviks" and seemed surprised that they had taken their grievances to the DAILY WORKER—"a Bolshevik paper."

Capitalist Press an Enemy.

The workers replied that no capitalist paper, like the Tribune and the others, would aid them at all, on the contrary, the capitalist papers were opposed to aiding them, and they had gone to the one and only genuine workers' newspaper—the DAILY WORKER.

A foreman who was mean and hostile to the workers, tho he had formerly been a member of the union, is discharged so that any economy made is not to be taken out of the workers' already scanty wages.

The firm was very ashamed to have published that it was the cheapest paying concern belonging to the manufacturer's' association. The workers are going back this morning in a solid body, fully determined to stick together in the shop and not to permit further wage reductions.

WHY MR. SINGER WAS EXPELLED FROM THE PARTY

Himoff Shop Workers Solidify Ranks

By a Worker Correspondent.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 18.—To some members in the camp it may be a great surprise to know that Mr. Singer is no longer a member of the Workers Party.

Can't Be Done.

To those who are still believing that Mr. Singer, can be foreman, right hand of exploitation on one hand—and a fine Communist on the other, we submit the following reasons why he was expelled:

1. He was against the first of May celebration, he advised fellow members, that they will be fired if they all stay away from work on the 1st of May.

2. Mr. Singer laid off, or caused to lay off, of several active party members.

3. Mr. Singer is the "Rush" of all in the shop—producing high profits for Mr. Himoff and Co., and as such, for the above and other reasons was expelled from the Workers Party.

A man, not a member of the Workers Party, who is known as "Honest Abe" who through his foolish betraying of workers in the shop, cannot be trusted—and he, also, spread his "loyal" cards when he refused a week of holiday with pay.

Served the Sucker Right.

He stated, "I will take the money—extra—and continue to work."

But Lord Himoff said, "No, if you don't want rest, I will give you only half pay."

It serves the sucker right, and a kick-out will be next, and right step for you, too.

What About a Rest for All?

In the name of justice, why not give all the employes a week off with pay, Mr. Himoff? All of them work honestly for you. Why not treat them all with the same measure?

Boss, You Can't Beat Us.

We wish to assure you that there is no way to lay off the dangerous element in your shop.

All of them in the shop are exploited, and as long as they are exploited they will be your enemies.

So you better quit firing. The fired one are not guilty of anything; they simply know their duty and they did it, and others follow them.

Long live the worker who fights with spirit for better conditions!

Down with traitors!

How Workers Should Not Live—But Do

To the DAILY WORKER: Green Bay, Wis., is favorably located, in one of the most prosperous states in the union. One would think so at least if you draw your conclusion from the daily press.

Green Bay has a population of over 35,000 and as one passes thru the city one sees many large factories.

One year ago many of these industries were operating full time while today they stand idle for the most part.

I visited at a construction job on the Brown county fair grounds. Carpenters receive $2.50 and $3.00 for ten hours. The workers are unorganized.

There are however two carpenters locals, A. F. of L. in the city. Wages for men I could not learn, for women it is 25 cents per hour. Hundreds of men are idle while women are forced to do heavy work.

When operating full force, the American Writing Paper Co. employs about 350 persons. At the present time 35 persons are employed, mostly young boys and girls. Here wages for boys are $3.50 for ten hours, while girls get from $1.25 to $2.00.

In the department stores where girls are required to dress well, look well, and act well, wages are $1.00 to $1.50 per day for eight hours. The girls are unorganized.

They Have Their Little Jokes.

I applied for a job at the federal employment office, the only one in Green Bay. Here are some of the questions asked the applicant. Where were you born? Citizen? How old? Where were your parents born? Are they citizens? What grade were you in when you left school? Why are you out of a job? Do you own property? Ans. No.. Why not?

The job in question was one as cook, hours were from 5 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. wages were $30 per month.

In the land "of the free, and the home of the brave," the workers are so meek as to permit themselves to be questioned in this manner.

The cost of living is exorbitant. Rent, for a five room cottage ranges from $35 to $45. Wood is $9.00 a cord, coal $16 per ton.

Some one at the employment office said that every few days some one ends his misery by jumping into the bay.

And even this avenue of escape from capitalist tyranny will end with the freezing of the bay.

I visited the Labor Temple and found there are six very weak locals in the city, with a city fireman as local organizer.

These are the rewards the workers reap by foolishly supporting the present system.

FLOWER MAKERS FIRST STRIKE IN N. Y. SPREADS

Arrest Nine Pickets, Others Beaten Up

By ESTHER LOWELL.
(Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(FP)—Each day is bringing hundreds more of flower and feather workers to the ranks of the first thousand who struck for unionization of the industry. Most of the additions to the strikers' forces are girls who cannot work while the men who do the painting are striking. Already nine pickets have been arrested and some of them were severely beaten. All were dismissed in court.

The strike of the artificial flower and feather workers is their first. For many months the union members have been building up their organization, Local 853 of the American Federation of Labor's federal unions. Workers have been forced to stay at their jobs 45 to 60 hours a week, many of them in unsanitary, poorly ventilated little shops.

Some of them are required to clean up the shops after work hours with no extra pay. The average wage of both men and girls has been $16 or $17 a week, declare Charles Palagreco, business agent, and G. Rizzo, financial secretary, of the union.

Demand Union Conditions.

But now strikers are demanding changed conditions: the 44-hour week; pay and a half for overtime work and double pay for Sunday and legal holiday work; general increase of 25 per cent in wages; minimum wage of $15 a week for learners and $20 for learners in the color work; no non-union labor; no hiring and firing at the bosses' will; equal division of labor during dull seasons; collective bargain with the union; recognition of the union's delegates and representatives in all relations between employers and workers.

August is the second busy season of the year and the fall rush continues thru September, so that the workers are striking at a strategic time. The spring season is from February to April.

In addition to the health hazards of poor ventilation, unsanitary surroundings and dusts, the workers who do pressing are exposed to gas all day and others inhale poisonous alcohol fumes from the dye preparations. The evils of home work are also being fought by the workers.

Manufacturers are taxing themselves a minimum of $50 each for an anti-union fund to fight the strike. The textile trade paper announces that "several of the manufacturers have engaged detectives to protect the men working in their factories from intimidation!" But the spirit of the strikers is splendid.

Those arrested were greeted as the heroes and heroines of the fight when they returned to the strike meeting and one of those beaten aroused much sympathy by his black eye from a policeman's fist. The workers enthusiastically decided to continue the strike to win, altho strike benefits will not be forthcoming until after the second week of the fight.

Several years ago the girls in the trade struck and attempted to organize but did not maintain their strength long. During the past year the men working as colorers started a union, secured the aid of the A. F. of L., and began organizing all workers in the industry. Most of the workers are Italians and the rest are Jewish.

Are You a Monkey? Is Big Question of Mike Gold's Farce

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Are you a monkey? That you will be able to determine at the outing of the International Labor Defense on Sunday, August 23, at Pleasant Bay Park. The screaming farce "Monkey or Man" by Michael Gold will be given by a fine group of comrades, and a fine performance is promised. Athletic events by the Workers' Sport Alliance, fun for the children, refreshments, organizations of foreign-born workers in their national costumes, and a movie of the whole affair, will be the features.

Who does not want to be there? Who does not want to go into the movies? Everybody does, and everybody will be there. Tickets cost 35 cents and you will be doing one of the best things in your life to help the class war prisoners who are in the capitalist prisons.

Reserve the date for yourself, your family and friends. Sunday, August 23, at Pleasant Bay Park is going to be the red letter date in New York City.

30,000 Fewer Farmers Last Year.

WASHINGTON, August 18.—There were 30,000 fewer farms in the United States last year as compared with 1923, and a reduction of land in crops of 1,200,000 acres, or one-third of 1 per cent, the department of agriculture has found in a survey of the situation.

CROPS IN SOVIET RUSSIA SHOW A SUDDEN IMPROVEMENT, 1 MILLIARD POODS MORE THAN IN LAST YEAR

MOSCOW.—(By Mail.)—According to the central bureau of statistics the crop of the U. S. S. R. on July 1 was estimated at 3,923,000,000 poods; on July 15 the estimate was increased by 100,000,000 poods. The general crop is now estimated to be over four milliard poods. This will be one milliard poods more than last year. Last year the crop per capita was equal to 20 poods, this year 28 poods, and in some places 50 and 60 poods.

The seeded area of flax increased 20 per cent; sunflower, 18 per cent, or twice as much as in pre-war times. The general seeded area in 1925 is 4 per cent larger than in 1924 and is equal to 72,000,000 desiatines of grain.

Table Shows Improvement.

The bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture has published very interesting figures about the improvement of conditions of crops from June 15 to July 1 of this year in comparison with the same period of last year:

	1924		1925
	June 15	July 1	June 15	July 1
North Caucasus	3.4	2.1	3.5	3.7
Caucasus	3.4	2.8	3.6	3.5
Siberia	3.1	2.9	3.0	3.1
R. S. F. S. R.	2.7	2.5	3.1	3.3
White Russian S. S. R.	3.1	3.0	2.9	3.1
Ukrainian S. S. R.	2.7	2.4	3.4	3.5

Last year, in the most important period of vegetation, the conditions became worse. This year, on the contrary, there has been an improvement.

Samara Crops Good.

Samara province, located in the drought region, is having an exceptional crop this year. The gross crop of the province will be equal to 100,000,000 poods.

According to the Central Bureau of Statistics the total crop of the Ukrainian republic will be not less than 1,008,000,000 poods. In the prewar times the maximum of the Ukrainian crop was 1,080,000,000 poods. In 1926, 1,016,000,000. 329,000,000 of this year's crops can be sold.

The Department of Finance is introducing new bonds to the value of 300,000,000 roubles. The loan is for 4½ years and it will pay the bondholders 10 per cent. The loan will be devoted to the reconstruction of Soviet industry and agriculture.

Export of Soviet Wheat.

This year the export of wheat to England will commence in August. Some wheat for France will be shipped very soon from the southern ports of the U. S. S. R. to Marseilles.

The fisheries on the Murmansk coast have been very successful this year. In one day the fishermen caught over 50,000 poods of herring. In 1924 the total catch of herrings was only 10,000 poods.

Seeded Area of Sugar Beets.

According to reports on the convention of sugar beet growers, the seeded area of sugar beets in 1925 is 6½ times larger than in 1923, and covers 345,294 dessiatins. The program for 1926 is to be 495,000 dessiatins.

Moving Pictures Help Agriculture.

With the purpose to acquaint the cotton growers with the modern methods of growing cotton, the Trans-Caucasian cotton committee is preparing motion pictures illustrating the modern cotton cultivation. The pictures will show the most important methods and the modern machinery in cotton growing. Special lecturers, experts in cotton growing, will demonstrate these pictures and will explain all about modern cotton industry.

Cigarmakers Must Organize Workers in Trust Factories

BOSTON, August 18.—(FP)—The gradual passing of the handwork cigarmaker and his displacement by the machine process was emphasized at the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Cigarmakers' International Union. Since the last convention, two years ago, the number of workers making cigars by the out-and-out hand method has fallen to 7,817 from 13,305, a decrease of 5,488 in two years.

The union's strength is with the men cigar workers and in the smaller shops; its weakness with the women workers and the trust plants. There are 13,863 union men in the trades in the United States and Porto Rico, out of a total of 32,198, whereas only 3,236 women carry cards in the international union out of a total of 51,198.

The 221 Tobacco Trust plants employ a total of 46,987 cigarmakers and packers, 7,178 men and 39,809 women, all non-union. There are altogether a total of 3,140 non-union establishments and 7,180 union establishments, but of the union shops nearly half are one-man plants employing the manufacturer alone.

Gangsters Beat Up a Shop Chairman That Opposed Sigman Rule

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 18.—Two gangsters were fined $25 each in the Jefferson Market court on a charge of disorderly conduct for the beating of Julius Stupackewitz which took place on July 21.

On that day, Stupackewitz had been picketing early in the morning and there was no interference of any kind on the picket line. But when, after riding down-town from West 39th street on a trolley car, he arrived at 7th avenue and 21st street, three men jumped out of a taxi and began to beat him. Stupackewitz had a police whistle which he managed to draw from his pocket, and as soon as he blew it the gangsters ran.

They were caught by policemen, arrested and arraigned in the Jefferson Market court where their case was postponed until August 5. Again it was set over until today, when both men were fined and discharged.

Stupackewitz, who was badly beaten about the head and face, was one of the speakers at the shop chairmen meeting at Cooper Union on July 21, the day he was attacked. He appeared then with his head bandaged and told the members of the way the Joint Board, thru its agents, made war on the workers.

HERO OF SHOP CRAFT STRIKE DIES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—(FP)—Back from Needles, Calif., where the Colorado river breaks thru the Mojave desert to the Gulf of California, and where the Santa Fe railroad maintains divisional headquarters, comes a belated chapter in the story of the defensive strike of train crews which took place there when the railway shopmen were on strike in the summer of 1922.

Jim West has been fatally shot, and has died in a hospital at San Bernardino. He was chief of police in Needles for many years. An automobile thief, whom he sought quietly to arrest, killed him without warning.

Railroad Refused Aid.

West was a hero in Needles because of his record in that famous strike. The "boys" were refused an engine and car with which to rush him over the desert to San Bernardino. They raised $1,200 in ten minutes and paid the company for the engine and car. He died next day.

When the shopmen's strike was at its height, and Santa Fe engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen had complained that the lack of repairs to the engines and cars made their work unsafe, the company imported a force of gunmen who rode on the trains and tried to intimidate the train crews into doing some of the work of shopmen. When the brotherhood men refused, and when conductors asked gunmen for their tickets, the gunmen thrust the muzzles of revolvers against the ribs of the conductors, and with obscene and abusive language threatened to "show" them. A delegation of the brotherhood membership appealed to the Santa Fe divisional officials and were ordered out of the office.

Daugherty Sends Them to Jail.

They decided to stop work until their lives were protected by the withdrawal of the gunmen. Two hundred stopped work. They informed the passengers on trains that were delayed at Needles that the passengers were welcome to be guests in their homes, or to have meals at the company's fine restaurants at the strikers' expense, pending an adjustment. The passengers took the situation in good spirit, but the Santa Fe and the then attorney-general of the United States, Harry Daugherty, at once raised a false cry that a criminal conspiracy had been carried out to "maroon in the hot desert" a lot of invalids, women and children, and to stop the movement of the mails.

Daugherty sent a hard-boiled special prosecutor to Los Angeles, secured a federal indictment of the leaders, and eight of them were found guilty of conspiracy and were sentenced—six of them to jail. The last of the six has recently been released.

Government Gunmen.

But the men stood pat. Daugherty rushed 192 special deputy marshals to Needles, and under cover of their power the company withdrew its own gunmen, thereby enabling the strikers to resume work. The deputies began operations by ordering all strikers away from railroad property, including the restaurant, which is located in a city park along the track. Chief of Police West, single-handed, stepped in at this point and offered to defend the rights of the people of Needles to gather in their own park. He forced the deputies to retreat. During all the weeks of armed invasion of the town by Daugherty's deputies, Jim West stood guard over the rights of the strikers.

That is why a blacklisted striker passed the hat when West was shot down, a few days ago.

Coolidge Stands by Santa Fe.

The reason why R. H. Clements and five or six other men served time for having defended their own lives against Santa Fe gunmen was that their local lawyers—before general officers of the brotherhood got into action in their defense—overlooked a legal technicality in the first trial. Appeals to the higher courts and to President Coolidge failed.

President Robertson of the Locomotive Firemen and Grand Chief Griffing of the Locomotive Engineers signed an appeal to Coolidge on Oct. 1, 1924, reviewing the wrong done these men, and asking that Harlan Stone, then attorney-general, drop his opposition to the granting of a new trial. Coolidge stood by Stone, Daugherty and the Santa Fe.

Minneapolis Trade Unionists to Hold Meeting on Sunday

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., August 18.—On Monday evening, August 24, the left wing group of the Trade Unions, will hold their regular bi-monthly meeting at Moose Hall, 43 South Fourth street, hall No. 1.

A special feature of the meeting will be an address by Brother Hedlund of the rail workers, on "The Conflict between the officialdom and the rank and file."

Hedlund is well-qualified to treat the subject thoroly.

All progressive unionists are invited to attend. Interesting business will also come before the body.

No left winger should miss this meeting. Advertise it in your unions. Don't forget the time and place.

NUCLEUS LEADS STRIKE IN N. Y., WIN PAY RAISE

Workers Enthusiastic About Communists

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Shop Nucleus No. 7 has again demonstrated the superiority of its form of organization to that of our present branches. It has demonstrated this clearly by conducting a successful shop strike in a shop that has not had a successful strike ever since its existence.

The workers struck for an increase of about 16 per cent in the piecework rate. The strike centered around one department of the shop which employed 250 workers. Thru the activity of the nucleus these workers struck 100 per cent. A delegation representing the workers then called upon the employer, who categorically refused to see them.

It did not take five days before the boss had to succumb. He then stated that he was ready to see the delegation and listen to the workers' demands. After some negotiation, the two sides compromised on one-half of the demands which had been asked for.

According to reports from this nucleus the workers of the shop are enthusiastically behind the Communists, who were the acknowledged leaders of the strike, and it is expected that this nucleus will double its membership in the next few weeks as a result of its success.

This is the second successful campaign conducted by the nucleus in this particular shop.

OKLAHOMA MINER IN BITTER WAR FOR THE UNION

Prayer Unavailing in Class Struggle

HENRYETTA, Okla., August 18.—Approximately 2,500 miners are idle here as a result of a strike that started early in May. The coal mine Operators in Oklahoma, like their brethern thoroughout America violated the Jacksonville agreement, and attempted to operate the mines on the 1917 wage scale which is approximately 33 per cent less, than the Jacksonville agreement.

Prayer and fasting is the watchword of the "striking women" in the Henryetta coal mining district. Public prayer is almost universal in the district, and fasting, or something very like it is going on in scores of homes where the miners are finding the long siege difficult to bear. The women are asking for money for food, they are asking for it daily and asking for it with growing fervor and indications point that they will not meekly ask for it much longer.

Starve Rather Than Scab.

According to the operators, six mines are operating sucessfully as non-union, under the 1917 wage scale in the district. This district has been the scene of bitter struggle for many months. The coal operators have used every means to destroy the miners' union, and force them back to the mines under the starvation scale, of 1917, but the miners have steadfastly refused to go near the pits until the operators agree to live up to the 1924 agreement.

In this peaceful community the miners' wives make their daily trip to the coal mine and plead with the scabs to quit, but to no avail. The scabs were imported shortly after the strike commenced, and have remained under the protection of the coal company and soldiers ever since.

When they were brought in at first, the miners strenuously protested, with the result that the armed forces of the state were brought to subdue the miners and protect the scabs. As is usual, the agent provocator was brought into play, trouble started and martial law declared. One man joined his early forefathers, and the usual rounding up of union leaders took place.

Terrible Privation In Homes.

Since that time, the miners have fouht gamely, but today their conditions are pitiful to behold. During the last four years the miners of Oklahome worked an average of 100 days per year, and with the cost of living comparatively high and steadily increasing all the time, the miners finally find themselves in starvation and no relief in sight.

On Wednesday of last week, a union aid committee found 16 families without food of any kind. The committee was sucessful in finding a little flour ration to be distributed among them but stated many families were bordering physical collapse.

Although little relief is in sight, the miners are determined to fight it out to the bitter end, their watchword is "no backward step" in Oklahoma.

MINNEAPOLIS C. L. U. NOW A PERFECT MORGUE

Exclude All Life by Ousting Communists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., August 18.—The Central Labor Union has decided to meet bi-monthly, instead, as now, weekly.

The redbaiters were compelled to make this change, as only a mere handful attended the dignified sessions of the C. L. U. And even this handful is always complaining about the lack of vitality in the C. L. U.

To overcome this dangerous manifestation of unrest, on the part of some delegates, the labor fakers proposed heroic measures to head it off, about a month ago. They interested the C. L. U. in birth control.

However, this proposition did not stimulate the desired interest; the workers did not respond, perhaps because it was a false alarm. The sessions of the C. L. U. remained dull, uninteresting, save only when the credentials of some Communists were presented.

Recent reports of the organizer of the C. L. U., fairly teem with sad tales of woe, concerning the unfriendly and ungentlemanly attitude of the bosses, who refuse to meet with the unions, to discuss and adjust the grievances of the workers.

That is too bad, since nobody can make the Communists the goats for this unpleasant situation, as it affects the rank and file. The C. L. U. is in the hands of the most "bona fide," "legitimate," honest to goodness respectable trade unionists. That explains why the C. L. U. is a morgue.

The bi-monthly meetings will not improve matters any. While it is generally concluded that Paul J. Smith with his local cohorts are experts in wrecking and smashing unions, they are positively worthless in constructive work. That is not their mission. Only the admission of Communists to the C. L. U. will make it a [illegible] functioning body.

LEASE PRISONERS INTO SLAVERY IN LOUISIANA

One Worker Is Leased for $16 a Month

NEW ORLEANS, August 18.—Southern Louisiana, originally settled by the pirates, and home of the original slave owner of the South, has again reverted to slavery. In Covington, a small town, not many miles distant from here, where the inhabitants make their livelihood by attending the wants of tubreculosis victims, who journey thence to the piney woods, the police jury has leased John Meyers, who is serving out a 0-dollar fine,—for violating the liquor law, to Warren Thomas, a farmer, for $16.00 a month.

John Meyers, a human being, is thus placed in the same position as a chattel slave before the war of the states in 1861—toiling from early morning till the sun sets in the western horizon in the chivalrous South. The parish, which claims that it costs 75 cents a day to board each prisoner in its "hogs-groo," welcomes the idea of getting rid of its prisoners and at the same time getting $16.00 per month. This action is legal in the state of Louisiana, under the terms of Act 204, of 1908, which permits the leasing of prisoners.

Trucks Kill Worker.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Aug. 18.—Milvin Smith, 27, Columbus, Ill., was fatally crushed today when two heavy trucks of the Eoff Road Construction Company collided between Pittsfield and Barry. Two other members of the construction crew were painfully hurt.

Workers Hear Dolsen Tell Story of Sino Fight for Freedom

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 18.—About one hundred workers heard James H. Dolsen explain the Communist position regarding the struggle of the Chinese workers and peasants for the freedom of their country from the "Great" powers. Copies of the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Monthly were sold. The audience listened very attentively to the speech. Local DAILY WORKER readers helped to arrange the meeting and promised to continue building up the paper as one of the most effective means of arousing the class consciousness of the workers here.

In order to hold the meeting in the public square, it was necessary to secure a permit. Upon being asked for this permit, the chief of police asked only one quesion: "Is it going to be a religious or patriotic meeting?"

SHINNSTON, W. Va., August 18.—Fifteen-year-old Helen Puschover defied the state police, and was arrested.

When Helen, an orphan, called a scab a "starve out," a state police walked up to her and told her not to say that again. And she defiantly repeated it.

The real reason she was arrested was because she was one of the active persons on the picket line at Owings, W. Va.

She was arrested at 6:30 a. m. Saturday morning and taken to the Haywood police headquarters and held under $500 bond. The yellow dogs and state police have been keeping a close watch for her for the last four months.

MACDONALD'S ATTACK ON SOVIET NOTES TO CHINA ARE ANSWERED

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—The Moscow papers reproduce Mr. Coates,' the secretary of the Anglo-Russian parliamentary committee of the former "Hands Off Russia" Society, coments upon Ramsay MacDonald's statement recently published in the Daily Herald, in which MacDonald criticized Karakhan's recent notes to the Chinese government.

"Why has MacDonald found anything improper or michievous in these notes?"—asks Mr. Coates, and he goes on to say that it is "not unusual for a government thru its diplomatic representatives to express sympathy with another nation, whose citizens may have been afflicted with some misfortune.

"The labor government under MacDonald himself afforded an example thereof, when it sent a message of sympathy and condolences to the Soviet government on the occasion of Lenin's death."

1 Murder Per 5,000 in Open Shop Heaven.

NEW ORLEANS, August 18.— St. Clair Adams, former New Orleans prosecutor, tells the bar association that the city in proportion to its size is one of the wickedest in the United States. Chicago has 1 murder per 100,000 inhabitants, while New Orleans boasts of one for every 5,000 population. New Orleans is the open shop paradise.

REPORT ON LABOR CONDITIONS

PART I

CHAPTER I

Trade Unions

Labor Conditions

A report on labor conditions in the Union of Socialist Sovietist Republics must begin by pointing out that in Russia the workers are the ruling class. For unless the reader bears this in mind throughout he will be misled by much in Russian labor conditions that at first sight seems very much the same as with us. Really everything is quite different; because in Russia we have a regulation of the workers' rights that they have put upon themselves for their own well-being. Elsewhere we have a restriction of the workers' rights put upon them by the wealthy. Such regulations are in Russia the result of agreement between the workers and their own expert governors and managers to whom they have entrusted their institutions and their industries, their factories and their farms. Elsewhere such regulations are the result of treaties and truces between the entrenched interests of a wealthy ruling class and the assaults of a working class that as yet never rules but only rebels.

No one who grasps this—and these reports will, it is hoped, make it plain—will ever be misled by the lies he can read almost daily that the worker in Russia lives a life as limited as, and with even less liberty than, with us. The Russian workers are the ruling class of Russia. They enjoy the rights of a ruling class. They are beginning to exercise its responsibilities. They still have much to learn, but they have made a start. In a village school visited by one of the delegates the children were learning to write in copybooks in which over "God save the Tsar" had been pasted, "Once we were slaves, now we are free."

Elsewhere in Europe the industrial revolution in the course of a century had taken the power from the old rulers of the upper class, the landed gentry, and given it to new rulers from the middle class—the men who have made money. This has been for us a mixed blessing. The old ruling caste had its training and traditions, its sense of public responsibility and its own personal relations with its dependents. The new ruling class has none of these things. The Bolshie who denounces the Bourjouy as a vulgar and vicious plebeian can make at least as good a case as the Bourgeois who denounces the Bolshie as a vile and violent proletarian. But in Russia this process of transfer of power from the upper to the middle class, was only just beginning. The replacement of the upper class, whose economic power was their hold on the land, by the middle class, whose economic power was their hold on capital and credit, was interrupted while in an early stage by the social revolution of 1917, that transferred power straight to the workers. What is now going on—has been going on since 1921—and will go on for the rest of our lives, is the working out of compromises in Russia between the Bolshevist ideal of a society based on public work and the Bourgeois ideal of a society based on private wealth.

These compromises made to suit the very different conditions and characters of the Russian would not, as they are, suit us. But there is much to be learnt from them if we will bear in mind all the time—that the Union of Soviet Republics is not the United Kingdom—that Russians are not British—and that a Soviet institution is, in its origin and object, quite different from the English institution into which it has to be translated. All this must be remembered, for example, when we speak of a Russian Trade Union.

Trade Unions

(a) Pre-War Period.—The course of the Russian Revolution can be very well seen in the light of its effect on Russian Trade Unionism. Russian Trade Unionism must not be confused with the Russian medieval guilds and craft unions which kept a liveliness long lost elsewhere in Europe. Russian industrial Trade Unionism proper was, when the Revolution broke out, at the first fighting stage of its development, and never was in Russia such a protection against armed revolution as it has been elsewhere. This was because the industrial population was of late growth, was shut out from any share in ruling the country, and was condemned to the worst possible conditions of life. Russian Trade Unionism which began with a political movement, that of the Russian Social Democratic Party, would in time have educated the people politically and elevated them economically. But it was shut down by Tsarism and remained illegal until 1905; though at times it was encouraged and even exploited by Tsarism, as in the "Gapon" and "Zubatoff" Associations. In 1906, after the first rebellion, Trade Union membership reached 200,000. But the unions were then again suppressed and driven underground, where they came finally under the control of revolutionaries.

(b) Revolutionary.—The Revolution, when it broke out, used the unions as a revolutionary force. But even so unionism was from the first divided as to the class war. The more skilled a trade was and the higher its social status the more opposed it was to class war. For example, the printers were against—the metal workers for war. In the railways the clerks were peaceable, the others warlike. The anti-war unionists supported the middle classes with strikes and sabotage; and the first phase of the Revolution was fought within the ranks of the unions themselves. The Third Trades Union Conference (June, 1917), based on a membership of 1,500,000, showed a majority against class war. But after the Bolshevist Revolution the First Trades Union Congress (January, 1918), with 2,000,000 members, came out for War Communism. Thereafter, Trade Unionism became throughout the reign of War Communism (1918-1921) an important instrument of government.

The first thing the unions had to do on behalf of the Communist Government was to restore control over the Factory Committees. These committees were the first machinery of the Soviet system and the motor that drove the Revolution. As in Germany and Italy, the Factory Committees took over the management from the owners and the technical staff. As in Russia the former were absentees and the latter were sabotaging the Revolution, this was necessary. But it would have had in time a very bad effect on production. For the committees began to claim that they owned the factories; thus converting the workers into a new body of private shareholders. This, of course, was all wrong. The leaders of the Revolution accordingly turned to the Trade Unions as a means of enforcing nationalization and of protecting production. The Factory Committee was gradually reduced to one-third of the membership of the Management Committee—the remaining members being appointed by the Trade Unions and the Supreme Economic Council. Finally, the Third Trades Union Congress in 1920 declared that the Factory Committee had nothing to do with the management, and began the movement back towards expert management.

At the same time another move of the Factory Committees was checked in the interests of the union movement. The committees had started Central Councils in Petrograd and other large towns which were rapidly ousting the Trade Unions. This was checked by the Third Trades Union Conference in June, 1917, but was not finally stopped until the First Trades Union Congress in January, 1918, which put an end to the Central Councils, and made the Factory Committees local units of the Trade Union by applying generally and compulsorily the principle of One Factory, One Union. This meant that every worker in one factory, whatever his occupation joined the union to which the factory belonged. For example, in a machine tool factory, not only were the carpenters and bricklayers employed on factory repairs made to join the Metal Workers' Union, but so also were the cooks. In the same way railway repair shopmen join the Railwaymen's Union and railway stock builders join the Metal Workers' Union.

This principle of "One Factory, One Union," has become a permanent part of the Soviet system. One result of it is the getting rid of all overlapping and competition between unions—another is the division of unionism into 23 national industrial unions which are permanent and not as elsewhere constantly amalgamating and seceding.

The giving of governmental duties to the industrial unions was a war measure, and the stability of the new State under the storm and stress of foreign invasion and domestic insurrection was undoubtedly due to the strength thus obtained. Instead of the State being, as it were, perched on one leg, that of parliamentary representation, the Russian State was propped by a tripod—a representation through the Soviets, another through the Trade Unions and a third leg that was never fully grown, the Co-operatives. The next step was to make membership of a union compulsory, and to suppress the opposition maintained by the Menshevists as late as 1920. But, unfortunately, no sooner was this done than the unions began as official organs to lose contact with and the confidence of the mass of non-partisan workers.

As the Trade Unions became more and more State organs controlling production, so their Central Executives grew in administrative authority. Out of them there grew several government organs of the first importance. The first of these was the Council of Labor Control, which, as State ownership developed, became the Supreme Council of National Economy, a change of name which expressed the changed nature of the Trade Unions' responsibility. This Council was in fact an Economic Executive equal in importance to the Council of Commissaries, the Political Executive. Meantime the Central Executive of the Trade Unions themselves was, and still is, the Central All-Russian Council of Trade Unions created in July, 1917.

During this period Trade Unionism and Communism were practically the same. The Third Congress in April, 1920, of whose 1,229 delegates 949 were Communists, passed a resolution to the effect that the Trade Unions should conform their policy to that of the party.

(c) Recent Reconstruction.—When the New Economic Policy was coming into force in the winter of 1920-21, the part to be played by the Trade Unions was still under dispute between the Bolshevist policy of Trotsky, who wished to make the Trade Unions into Government organs which should actually themselves run the industries, and the Trade Union point of view, supported by Lenin, that the unions should look after the interests of the workers. The Trade Unions and Lenin won. And the New Economic Policy, as adopted, relieved the unions of much of their responsibility for managing industry and administering national production and restored them to their original duty of regulating work and wages. The first move in this direction came from the Central Committee of the Communist Party on December 28th, 1921, and was adopted by the Central Council of Trade Unions in February, 1922. By the time the Fifth Congress of Trade Unions met in September, 1922, the new policy was already under way and the task of the Congress was to reorganize the unions on their present basis.

The restoration of the unions to their usual functions, though it reduced their numerical strength, at once restored their moral status as the workers' own organization. Village and Home Craftworkers (Kustarni) were dropped from the Unions, and membership fell almost by half, from 8,500,000 in July, 1921, to 4,500,000 in October, 1922, after which it again began to increase. The process of restoring the unions to a voluntary and contributory basis was thereafter continued without further loss of membership. Collective voluntary membership was introduced in 1923, then individual membership, and finally individual payment of contributions. Individual membership and payment is now the rule for 76 per cent.

The membership in January, 1924, was 5,646,000, and in October, 6,034,000, the membership having increased during 1923 by 32 per cent. for industrial and 31 per cent for non-industrial members. The percentage of unionists to the whole body of workers was as high as 93.4 on January 1st, 1923, and 92.9 on January, 1924. The more important of the 23 unions are the railwaymen with a 750,000 membership, the clerks with rather less, the metal workers, teachers, textile workers with 500,000 each, sanitary, food supply, miners, landworkers, builders, all with about 250,000. The proportion of women is 28 per cent. and is decreasing.

Trade Union Organization

Enrollment may be collective or individual, and from it are excluded village and home craft workers (Kustarni) members of craft unions (Artel), business managers, landowners, etc. The Russian Trade Union Movement today is organized under the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions (A.R.C.T.U.), which contains representatives from the 23 Central Trade Union Committees, and is elected by the annual All-Russian Congress of Trade Unions. Locally, the unions are organized under Provincial Trade Union Councils. More than 60 are under the direction of nine regional bureaux, the remainder coming directly under the A.R.C.T.U.

The horizontal organization is first the Inter-Trade Union Provincial Council, and at the head the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions.

Trades Union Congress

The All-Russian Congress of Trade Unions consists of one delegate for each 10,000 members; but provincial branches have a delegate for 3,000 members, two delegates for 15,000 and three for over 25,000, elected at provincial conferences. Branches with less than 3,000 are grouped and elect one delegate per 10,000. Only subscribing members may vote.

Trade Union Finance

In the absence of any published balance sheets of the unions it is difficult to get a clear idea of how they stand, more especially as any available funds are freely allocated wherever they seem most wanted. Thus, since a year ago, the A.R.C.T.U. has given monthly grants of 1,500 roubles to the Land and Forest Workers for organizing expenses, and another 5,000 roubles to make up the subscriptions of provincial branches to Provincial Councils; and yet another of 1,500 roubles to support their organ the "Agricultural Laborer" (Batrak).

The turning over of the educational enterprises of the unions to the State is not complete; much adult education being retained by the unions as described in the subsequent section dealing with it. In respect of this, subsidies, as there described, are received from the State and it seems likely that this also allows the unions to undertake expenditures which are only indirectly educational.

It is clear that so long as the Trade Unions continue to do so much work for the State they will, like the co-operatives, continue to receive support from State funds. There are, for example, large grants to Trade Union educational work from the co-operatives which themselves are subsidized by the State.

The financial position of the unions seems to be improving. In January, 1923, the A. R. C. T. U. and about half the Central Executive Committees were in deficit, but in January, 1924, only three of the latter. In 1923, the Provincial Inter-Union Councils in deficit were reduced from 60 to 15 and now ten; though more than half the Provincial Councils are still in deficit. Contributions are beginning, however, to be better paid, especially where individual payment has been re-introduced. In 1923, only about 60 per cent. of the contributions were being paid—in 1924 about 70 per cent. The normal subscription which is 2 per cent. of the wage, is received by the Factory Committees and remitted to the section which administers the funds, paying 10 per cent. to the Inter-Union Provincial Council, and up to 25 per cent. to the Central Executive of the union.

Trade Union Status

The legal status and the industrial functions of the unions are defined in the Labor Code and have little that is unusual. The legal function of the unions is defined as (a) representation and (b) protection of the workers.

Trade Union Activities

(a) Restriction of Activities.—Under War Communism, contributions were were paid by the State, out of national funds; but under the New Economic Policy the unions suddenly found themselves obliged to pay their own way. Their difficulties were increased by the depreciation of the currency and the heavy deficits in their budgets. Thus Central Committees' expenditure sometimes is four times the revenue; and in local committees the deficit is generally one-third the total. This heavy expenditure is partly due to the efforts of the unions to carry on what remains to them of their political and educational work for the State. Want of money soon put a stop to most of the useful educational work of the unions. Their primary schools were first given up, then the technical schools in many cases, and occasionally even the adult classes for illiterates. In most cases this work was transferred to the educational authorities. But although this work is being yearly cut down for want of money it still causes heavy outgoings on salaries and administration. In the course of 1922, provincial Trade Union officials had to be reduced by three-quarters, and central officialdom by one-third. But salaries still constitute a very large part of the expenditure. In other respects economies have been so drastic that of the great scheme for linking up the Trade Unions all over Russia, only the central organization remains intact. The Provincial Councils survive, but the 504 district offices have been reduced while the local secretariats have almost disappeared. In the central organization the 15 departments have been reduced to 8, and the 268 officials, of whom 55 were Communists, have been reduced to 215 of whom 50 are Communists.

SOVIET MINING DELEGATION IN THIS COUNTRY

Will Order Machinery and Equipment

NEW YORK, August 18.—A delegation representing the Combined Coal Mining Industries of the Donets basin in Soviet Ukraine, known as the Trust "Donugol," has arrived in this country for the purpose of placing orders for mining equipment to be carried out thru the Amtorg Trading Corporation. The delegation is headed by the Vice-President of the Trust "Donugol," Simon V. Ivanov and the manager of the Department of Mechanization, Arkadi A. Kisselev.

Other members of the delegation are Prof. Sheviakov of the Ekaterinoslav Mining Institute, Chief Mechanic of the Trust, Robert P. Vagner, and mine directors and engineers Nicholas I. Levtschenko, Zakhar E. Zorin, Ivan S. Lebedev, Dmitri M. Sushevsky, and Michael M. Shibaev.

To Study Mines.

Prior to placing their orders, the delegation will make a study of coal mines and mining equipment works in this country with a view toward determining the types of equipment which are best adaptable to the industries of the Donetz basin.

According to Ivanov, the question of the kind of equipment will require careful consideration since the Donetz industries occupy a leading position in the industrial reconstructon program whch is at present being carried out by the Soviet government.

The Donetz Basin is the chief source of hard mineral fuel in the Soviet Union furnishing about 75 per cent of the total output.

Output Increasing.

In recent years the output of the mines in the Donetz Basin has been constantly increasing and the production program for the operating year 1925-1926 provides for a further increase of about 65 per cent over that of last year, bringing up the total to over 800,000,000 poods, or about 14,000,000 tons.

The importance of the Donetz Basin is augmented by its situation in the vicinity of the large Ukrainian metallurgical industry which has also shown rapid progress during the past year, having increased the total production by 84 per cent over that of the previous year.

The delegation of the Donugol will spend a month in this country. Some members of the delegation, however, expect to stay longer for the purpose of supervising the filling of the orders.

TEACHER BARRED FOR DEFENSE OF SOVIET RUSSIA

NEW YORK, August 18.—Dismissal of Benjamin Glassberg for "conduct unbecoming of a teacher" in 1919 is upheld after six years' consideration by the state board of education. The New York Teachers' Union has been active thruout the period in fighting for Glassberg's reinstatement. The American Legion protested. Frank D. Dilbert, acting commissioner of education, handed down the decision which bars Glassberg from again teaching in New York schools.

Glassberg was accused of making statements which caused his "pupils to receive and retain sentiments of disloyalty to and disrespect for and contempt of the constituted authorities of the national government in time of war, and of the board of education of the city of New York."

Specifically, Glassberg was charged with stating to his classes that the United States government was systematically suppressing true reports about Russia and the Soviet government and that he, Glassberg, as a teacher could not tell the truth to his pupils.

"While the evidence presented upon the trial tending to show that appellant was guilty of the charges against him is not conclusive," the department states, "it is sufficient to justify the application of the rule that upon appeal to the commissioner of education that person shall sustain the findings unless there is "some reversible error in the conduct of such hearing prejudicial to the appellant."

NEW ORLEANS, August 18.—The Jefferson Construction company is defendent in a suit for $100,000, filed by Mrs. Ruby Grice, who claims her husband, a painter, met his death owing to a scaffold falling 80 feet, which was made up, it is alleged, of inferior and defective lumber, and insecurely erected.

BANK CLERKS OF FRANCE STRUCK FOR LIVING PAY

Communists Take Lead in Wage Raise Demand

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(FP)—"The strike of 20,000 bank clerks in Paris, Cherbourg, Nimes, and other widely separated cities of France is indicative of the increasing difficulty of the workers of France to make both ends meet," says Hays Jones, Federated Press correspondent visiting in New York from France. "Discontent has been brewing among the bank clerks for a long time and recent increases in taxes and living costs coupled with the diminishing value of the franc have been observed keenly by them.

"I have talked with French bank clerks," says Jones, "and have been surprised at the low wage they receive. In several provincial banks affected by this strike, clerks have told me that they receive 20 francs a day. The Paris scale is slightly higher, clerks occasionally receiving as much as 1,000 francs a month, $50 in American money at the present exchange rate.

Forced to Wear Natty Clothes.

"Of course 1,000 francs has a greater buying power than $50 in America. It would more nearly equal $80 in the American market. But bank clerks find this not enuf to keep up the standard of dress and living demanded by their employers. These requirements are much the same as in America: natty clothes and impeccable personal appearance.

"The 15,000 Paris clerks are not all the city's financial workers by any means, but they are enuf to indicate that the banking institutions of the city are severely crippled. This is further shown by the fact that the minister of finance is afraid that the strike will hurt the new French gold basis bond issue. With the support of 10,000 clerks in the provincial cities they should win their strike.

"The cost of living has risen rapidly and steadily in France and especially in Paris.

Many Strikes Predicted.

"A long series of strikes and industrial disturbances is bound to follow the recent piling up of living costs and taxes. I expect that other workers will follow the bank clerks' action. Their strikes will be more effective and orderly because organization is stronger among the mechanical workers. Government employes and pensioners received an increase during the spring session of the legislature. Their unions insist, however, that the increase was not enuf. Other workers in France have not received any increase of wages to balance against increased costs largely caused by augmented taxes and the Riff war.

"As an indication of the low wages of French workers generally, I add that the slogan of the French Communist Party is: 20 francs a day for every worker!"

GERMANS VISIT THE UKRAINIAN SOVIET WORKERS; PLEDGE EXPOSE OF SOCIAL-DEMOCRAT FALSEHOOD

(By International Press Correspondence.)

MOSCOW, July 27—(By Mail.)—On Sunday afternoon a group of the German workers' delegation consisting of 18 members, 8 Social-Democrats, 8 Communists and two non-party workers under the leadership of the Social-Democrat Offenhagen, arrived in Kharkov. They were received with enthusiasm by the working class of Kharkov.

After a meeting in the open air at which Uvarov welcomed the delegation to the capital of the Ukraine in the name of 200,000 Ukrainian workers and the social-democratic miner, Schelsinger, expressed the will of the delegation to learn the truth about the Soviet Union, the delegation began its investigations by examining the town.

The Kharkov working men and women, employes, officials, Red Army men and athletes formed cordons along the street for a distance of three miles and greeted the delegation with enthusiasm.

A part of the delegation, including Offenhagen, visited the president of the Ukrainian Central Executive Committee, Petrovski, with whom the delegates had a conversation upon the political and economic situation in the Ukrainian Soviet Republic which lasted two hours.

The delegates were particularly interested in the relations between the Ukrainian Soviet Republic and the other Soviet Republics of the Union, in the situation of industry and agriculture, in wages, etc.

To the question of one of the delegates who asked how much he and the rest of the government members drew in wages, Petrovski replied that the highest wage possible was 100 rubles. On his part, Petrovski asked about the wages of the German president and the members of the German government. The delegates put detailed questions upon the composition of the state officials, the situation of the intellectuals, etc.

Another group visited the prisons, examined the system there thoroly and declared that the condition in the Ukrainian prisons with regard to hygiene, moral and material considerations, were on a far higher level than the prisons in Germany.

The delegates talked with the prisoners and were surprised to discover that most of them received holidays in order to perform the work on the land at home, and that the prisoners had a club of their own which they managed themselves. After examining various cases of punishment the delegates declared that the level of punishment was much milder than in Germany.

The delegation visited the Ukrainian trade union council, the peoples' commissariat for labor, the central council for social insurance and the central committee of the metal workers' union after which they formed themselves into groups according to occupation and visited various factories. In the metal works "Sickle and Hammer," the delegates held long discussions with the workers upon all questions concerning the life of the working class, after which a meeting was held, at which the delegates, amongst other questions, asked how many religious workers were present. Amongst a thousand workers there were four.

Further, the delegates visited the newly built workers' colony in which they showed great interest, and asked if the Communists and the non-party workers lived under exactly the same conditions. They convinced themselves that this was the case and discovered instances where Communist workers were less favorably housed than non-party workers.

In the evening a mass meeting took place in honor of the German delegation at which Petrovski, the people's commissar for justice, Skrypnik, and the chairman of the Ukrainian trade union council, Uvarov, delivered speeches of greeting.

Offenhagen declared in his speech that he was deeply moved by the real regard of the Russian and Ukrainian workers for the delegation. "We were not able to imagine the immensity of your successes. And your economic successes are still smaller than your ideological ones, above all less than the great success that the workers feel themselves masters of the country, but your economic successes are also surprising, particularly in the Ukraine which suffered most from the tortures of the civil war.

"We wish to make no promises which we cannot fulfill, but we promise to expose the campaign of lies which have been spread about you and to tell the German workers untiringly that the Soviet Union is the one and only country of the workers, a real peoples' state.

"We know well that there is no absolute freedom in your country, that only the working class enjoys complete freedom, but we know also that freedom for the bourgeoisie would mean suicide for the revolution.

"Before our departure we were told that everything we would see would be made up especially for us. Potemkin villages would be prepared for us, etc. Today we can only laugh about it.

"We declare emphatically that we have witnessed the devotion of the masses of the Russian people to the Soviet Union. I have never in my life seen such enthusiastic, fiery and joyful demonstrations of workers as I have seen in Leningrad, Moscow and Kharkov

"The slogan which we shall take back to the German workers will be 'nearer to the Soviet Union.'"

After the speech, Offenhagen embraced the chairman of the meeting, Petrovski. The meeting gave the German delegation enthusiastic ovations.

An equally enthusiastic reception for the German delegation is reported from Perm, Rostov on the Don. The delegation is studying eagerly the conditions in the working class organizations, shops and factories, official institutions and schools.

BUILDERS AT WORK

JUST A WORD OR TWO

THIS IS A DELICATE SUBJECT!

At all times in the year a fighting paper of the workers has a difficult time in existing. It is always as poor as the workers in whose interests it battles.

It must depend on subscriptions and occasional donations alone. "Businessmen" who have no desire to help the workers will not advertise. "Fake" advertising, even tho it "pays," will not be accepted.

The summer time is particularly a difficult one. July and August are dangerous. "Dog days" for every newspaper and a working class newspaper has a most difficult time indeed. So in these days, when the DAILY WORKER has often to gasp for breath, it isn't only because of the heat. The stacks of unpaid bills, the money owing to the "Daily" by workers for subs, for bundles and for books—make it difficult for the DAILY WORKER to function properly.

At this time when the DAILY WORKER is having "rough weather" it is proper to give out a modest and gentle and a most delicate hint that this is the time to pay your bills.

If you want to help the DAILY WORKER out of danger in this crisis—pay. No matter how little you owe . . . pay it. No matter how much you owe . . . pay as much as you can no matter how little that is.

GIVE THE DAILY WORKER A BETTER CHANCE TO BUILD THE LABOR MOVEMENT.

STRIKE TIES UP YALE BUILDING, ASK MORE WAGES

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 18.—Nearly 3,000 building trades unionists of New Haven are affected by the strike declared for carpenters, electrical workers, roofers, plumbers, steam fitters and painters to assist the already striking hod carriers and building laborers in winning their demands.

Work worth over $3,000,000 is held up, including Troup junior high, Hopkins grammar school, the new Yale dormitory, theater and church buildings.

Only bricklayers are not striking because of an agreement which prevents them from joining in labor difficulties for two years to come.

Laborers and hod carriers have been striking over two weeks for 75 cents instead of 65 cents an hour pay for laborers and 85 cents for hodcarriers. Complete unionization of jobs is also demanded. Master builders have repeatedly refused to consider the union workers' demands so the general building strike was called.

Democracy Springs a Leak.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—A small sensation was sprung in the senate elections committee today when it was discovered that 200 ballots cast in the contested Iowa senatorial election between Senator Smith W. Brookhart, and Daniel F. Steck, democrat, are missing.

The missing ballots are from Winterset precinct in Madison county. The tally books show that 139 out of the votes were cast for Steck, and 61 for Brookhart.

The committee ordered an immediate investigation.

SCIENTISTS TO ATTEND SOVIET ACADEMY JUBILEE

200th Anniversary Will Be Celebrated in Sept.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 18.—The Russian Academy of Sciences at Leningrad, founded at the end of the reign of Peter the Great, has completed its program for the celebration of its two hundredth jubilee anniversary in September, according to advices received by the Russian Information Bureau here. Prominent scientists from a score of countries will attend. The program, extending from Sept. 5 to 14, includes sessions at both Leningrad and Moscow, gala performances of the opera in Leningrad and of the Moscow Art Theater in Moscow, banquets tendered to the visitors by both cities, and a State breakfast in the Kremlin.

Americans to Attend.

Leading American universities and scientific societies have been invited to send representatives. Among those who will attend, as reported in Russian papers received here, are Dr. H. H. Donaldson of the University of Pennsylvania and Professor Frank A. Golder of Leland Stanford. Dr. Judah L. Magnes, formerly of New York, has been invited to represent the University of Jerusalem.

Mr. Henry Mapers and Professor Archibald Thomson will represent the London Royal Society at the jubilee. Among the delegates from Germany will be Professor Einstein, Carl Neuberg, director of the Biochemical Institute in Berlin, and Gustave Tammen, professor of chemistry at the University of Goettingen. Fraternal greetings have been received from a number of American scientists.

The Russian Academy comprises 46 scientific institutions and numbers 462 workers. Its presidium consists of 41 academician members, and four Russian and fifteen foreign honorary members, and it has 144 Russian and 167 foreign correspondents. The library of the Academy now contains over 4,000,000 books and manuscripts. Since the revolution several of its institutes and museums have greatly expanded. During the year 1924 the Academy held 64 meetings, at which 112 scientific papers were read, it published 55 scientific books, and it sent out 76 scientific expeditions.

Expands Under New Regime.

Leibnitz, the German mathematician, drew up the original program of the Academy. In its long record of distinguished scientific service, perhaps its best known work is the exploration and charting of Russia's great expanses of territory. Under the late czar the Academy was handicapped by the general administrative disorganization, and during the period of civil war its scientists suffered great hardships, but with the economic recovery the Academy has entered on a new period of expansion.

Quitting Under Fire

The action of the Chicago Federation of Labor at its last Sunday's meeting in bowing to William Green's endorsement of the scabbery of the United Garment Workers' Union in the strike of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers against the International Tailoring company, was a sorry piece of work, but just what could be expected from an organization that accepts the leadership of Fitzpatrick and Nockels.

Fitzpatrick and Nockels reluctantly condemned the Tom Rickert scab organization in the first place. They would not have taken action but for the fact that they were goaded into doing so by the DAILY WORKER and the radicals and progressives in local unions affiliated with the federation. Even then, nothing was done except the passage of a resolution. Nockels, the secretary of the central body, in a speech, declared that Rickert was justified in scabbing on the Amalgamated. It was a case of self-preservation, he said. What can be expected from men who have such a selfish conception of the functions of leadership in the trade union movement?

Twenty-three delegates to the federation voted against accepting the ukase of scabby William Green. This is encouraging. It is the one bright spot in an otherwise odious proceeding. Every militant union member in the country, every class conscious worker rejoiced when the Chicago Federation of Labor laid the lash of its condemnation on the official backs of the strikebreaking crew that runs the company union, known as the United Garment Workers. Their rejoicing was destined to be short lived.

Those who voted against hauling down the flag to Tom Rickert and his crew at last Sunday's meeting were Communists, radicals and progressives. All the old reactionary outfit voted to support Fitzpatrick and Nockels. There were delegates from the pressmen's union present at last Sunday's meeting. The pressmen are faced with a situation somewhat similar to that with which the garment workers are confronted. The pressmen and feeders in the Cuneo printing plant withdrew their labor when asked to work under open shop conditions. Their international president is sending in scabs to defeat their purpose.

If the pressmen and feeders were building on Fitzpatrick sticking up for them against Berry, they were leaning on a broken reed. Fitzpatrick has definitely broken with the progressive wing. His condemnation of the United Garment Workers was merely a last flicker from the waning fires of his former progressivism. When Green cracked the whip Fitzpatrick and Nockels thought of the porterhouse steak and their nice easy chairs at 166 West Washington street. They took the hint and resolved that they would be good boys in the future.

This is one of the most contemptible cases of quitting under fire that the American labor movement records. Fitzpatrick and Nockels cannot for long fool the organized workers of Chicago with their periodical tirades against the Communists. The former fake progressives are every day exposing themselves as the most subservient tools of the reactionary bureaucracy of the A. F. of L. With Tom Rickert scabbing on the garment workers and George L. Berry scabbing on the members of his own union, both under the banner of the American Federation of Labor, the workers are confronted with a serious situation. No time must be lost in proceeding to alter this state of things.

The Lesson of the Aetna Strike

The unorganized millions of American wage workers are unorganised, not because they are unwilling to belong to labor unions, but because the reactionary leadership of the labor unions of America is indifferent and even hostile to bringing them into the ranks of organized labor.

More and more it will be seen that the example of the striking upholsterers of the Aetna Furniture company of Chicago is an illustration of what will be necessary if the workers wish to unite their forces in spite of the indifference of the reactionary leaders of the craft unions.

The formation of the shop committee of the Aetna workers, which must represent all departments of the shop, and their successful strike against a double wage cut, is illustrative of the method and result of coalescing the unorganized workers in their first effort at building a shop committee system which will eventually compel the hostile leaders of unions to accept the at present unorganized masses upon a basis of industrial unionism and will, as well, insure the workers in such shops as have strong shop committees an iron protection of complete solidarity against the bosses.

The workers of the Aetna shop have publicly acknowledged that the DAILY WORKER was their one aid in addition to their own solidarity in winning their strike. It was only a little strike, with demands readily seen as justified and purely economic. But its significance may be great if, from the experience and example of the Aetna strikers, the unorganized masses of America will learn the lesson that one of the keys to organized power is the formation of shop committees to bring into action on equal basis the unionized and non-union, of all crafts and all degrees of skill, without regard to race or sex or skill. We trust that the Aetna workers will not stop short of such organization and try to spread it to all shops in their industry.

Such shop committees must be formed as rapidly as possible in every factory and shop of this country.

An American professor who is a member of the slavery committee of the league of nations got in bad with his government for throwing some light on slavery conditions in Portuguese East Africa. The Portuguese capitalists protested and Washington advised Lisbon that the professor was only speaking for himself.

Germany demands the return of her colonies as a condition to entrance into the league of nations. Germany claims to be just as "civilized" as any other nation and is willing to carry her share of the "white man's burden." But Abd-el-Krim is not adding to the popularity of that once favored outdoor sport.

Time to Become Full-Fledged Communists!

By Moissaye J. Olgin

To the members of the former Jewish Socialist Federation.

Dear Comrades:—

Nearly four years have elapsed since we broke away from the socialist party. Three and a half years have passed since we joined the Workers Party as "Number Two". For over two years and a half we have enjoyed membership in the legal Workers (Communist) Party which is the American section of the Communist International. It is, therefore time for us to give ourselves an account as to where we stand, especially now, on the eve of the party convention.

When we combined with the Jewish section of the then illegal Communist Party, we looked upon ourselves as a group quite different from the Communists. True, we considered ourselves to be Communists, too, and we platonically recognized the leadership of the Comintern, but we spared no effort to maintain our separate identity as the Jewish Federation, and when we spoke of mutual readjustment in the future and of "ironing out differences in the process of work", we meant by it that the comrades of the Communist Party would be forced to accept our leadership and follow to the line of our group.

This line, barring individual differences, reduced itself to the following:

a. We demanded that the illegal Communist Party dissolve itself within the Workers Party, the latter to be recognized as the American section of the Comintern.

b. We opposed the drastic centralisation of the Comintern, demanding more autonomy for the Workers Party.

c. We considered ourselves to be the sponsors and leaders of a broad mass movement, while the Communist were in our eyes a group of sectarians divorced from actual life.

d. Many of us failed to understand the policy of the united front, which to some appeared as a "Communist hoax" devised to trick the social-democratic leaders into an uncomfortable position, to others as a shadowy and entirely unrealizable proposition which has no bearing upon actual life. A considerable section of our group saw no field of activity for our party outside of conducting Communist propaganda.

e. We chafed under the control of the Communist Party, we considered it a senseless mechanical control which we fought with extreme bitterness, unwilling to take into account the peculiar situation of our Communist comrades.

Underlying all this was our organzational patriotism, our devotion to the old federation, which we considred well nigh perfect. (It was this peculiar attachment which prompted us stubbornly to fight for the retention of even the name federation).

Three years and a half have passed. We have learned many lessons in the course of our work, and we are in a position to view our former conceptions with a critical eye. We must admit that a large portion of our conceptions were un-communistic, half-communistic, in the nature of the two-and-a-half international. We must admit that we committed many an error in consequence of our failing to understtand Communist tactics. Thus we were happy when three "underground" Communists broke the discipline of their party and voted with us in the executive committee of the Jewish Federation ("No. 2") of the W. P. We did not understand that a Communist who deliberately ignores the orders of his party concering his work in an outside organization which does not belong to the Comintern (the W. P. and its Jewish federation of that time were, in law and in fact, only sympathizing organizations where Communists were supposed to conduct party work) is, obviously, of scant value as a Communist and his "conversion" should cause very little rejoicing.

Subsequent events proved this elementary truth. One of the three was expelled from the party with our consent. The other two occupy the extreme right flank of the right wing opposition. The gain for the movement from their lining up with the federation leaders is thus, a very questionable one.

Another illustration is our attitude towards Zivion-Hoffman and Salutzky. We ought to have realized from the very start that Zivion was not even a left-winger and that there was no place for him in our midst. We ought to have confronted Salutzky with an ultimatum demanding that he either put his shoulder to the party wheel as behooves a Communist, or get out of the party and spare us his venom. We did neither. We disliked parting with one who had been friend in the Jewish socialist federation; many of us felt closer to him than to the Communist comrades.

Many more of our steps could be analyzed to prove that we were far from communist understanding and and communist tactics. (Remember how we disliked the term, "manouvre"). We admit all this frankly, because it is better to acknowledge old errors than to attempt to gloss them over or to conceal them. There can be no doubt, however, and you, comrades, cannot fail to agree, that since then the situation has radically changed. The life of the Party and our activities within the Party have assumed a totally different aspect.

a. The Party is legal. It is the American section of the Comintern. We are members of the Party with full rights. There is no more "Number One" and "Number Two". We all agree that in case of urgent necessity we shall have to go underground.. We now form fractions within other organizations in order to secure communist leadership. There is no difference in this respect between the comrades of whatever dirivation.

b. It would be preposterous to demand now more autonomy for our Party. We are fully aware of the tendency of the Comintern to become one great world party where national sections would be as closely connected with the main body as district committees are now connected with the national parties. We know now that strict discipline on a national and international scale is made imperative by our very situation in the capitalist states. We have had occasions to observe how communist discipline helped us build the Party, consolidate our ranks, increase our influence out of proportion to the numerical strength of the Party. We are witness to the fact that direct intervention on the part of the Comintern prevented us from committing errors and made it possible for us to overcome a crisis. Whoever still continues grumbling against the 21 points and communist discipline is an incurable centrist.

c. We must have the courage to admit that if the members of the former Jewish socialist federation have been instrumental in developing a left wing mass movement among the Jewish workers, they are not the only ones who deserve credit. Quite the contrary if anybody deserves credit for this achevement, it is the Party which developed its activities under the leadership of the Comintern and Profintern. True, we all did our share of work. We have established connections with the working masses. It cannot be denied, however, that the Trade Union Educational League is not a creation of the members of the former Jewish socialist federation. Neither were they the sole drafters of the left wing program in the Workmens Circle. And if the Comintern has recognized the party activities in connection with the creation of a farmer-labor party to have been a valuable kind of work among the masses, certainly not the members of the former socialist federation have distinguished themselves in this branch of mass work.

A left wing mass movement has come into existence because the Party has led into proper channels the accumulated dissatisfaction of the working masses. Had we remained alone as the Jewish socialist federation, had we not been backed by the Party, the Comintern and the Profintern, we would not have been able to give rise to a mass movement and, should it have started spontaneously, we would not have known whither to direct it. It is childish to assert that we are the grand masters of a mass movement and that it is only due to us that the Party has made inroads into the mass of the Jewish workers.

A glimpse at the elements active in the movement will only prove that we can claim no monopoly of leading the mass movement. Comrade Salzman is no closer to the masses than is Comrade Benjamen Lifshitz; Comrade Siegel cannot be credited with wider mass activity than Comrade Costrell; Comrade London is by no means closer to the masses than Comrade Mindell, and as to Comrades Sack or Aronberg, they are certainly no less intimately bound up with the union movement than are Comrades Zirlin or Zimmerman or Ross Wortis. To claim that "we" are the mass movement is to be deluded by an organizational partotism which is without foundation.

d. The united front tactics has become the daily activity of our party, the meaning and value of which we all understand. We have all learned to know that even at the present time, notwithstanding numerical weakness, our party must be a party of political struggles, a party living and fighting in close connection with the working class its everyday life and battles. We have been forced to concede that the party must not confine itself to propaganda, that the road to a mass party leads through manifold class activities at the head of the working-class. We have learned that maneouvering is a nessesary element of Communist tactics and that propaganda pure and simple would turn our party into a sect.

a. Mechanical control is no more an issue. There is no such thing in our party. We are all under the control of the party institutions. Every one of us both controls and is being controlled.

It would seem that under such conditions we should have long forgotten the old federation with all our former just and unjust claims. We live in a different time, we are members of a new party; we work in new surroundings; we are faced with new problems. It would seem that we should have assimilated with the party and forgotten all differences in the process of work. Unfortunately, it appears that not all comrades have become one with the Communist Party, that some of the former members of the socialist federation still keep apart in what constitutes a separate camp in opposition to the Party and to its leading elements. It appears that the prevailing moods of this camp are reminiscent of the moods of the old federation, and that the arguments it advances are very much akin to the claims of the former "Number Two".

There is no use arguing with the leaders of this camp. If three years of work have not had the effect of welding them with the Communist Party, there is little hope of their ever being assimilated. But it is to you, comrade in the branches, who are sometimes inclined to listen to those leaders and sometimes follow them out of sheer habit, because you are wont to look upon them as upon respected comrades and because you do not take a clear account of the situation,—to you a word of warning is urgent at the present juncture. It is time for you to forget the old socialist federation. Having become members of the Communist Party, your party allegiance must be your sole consideration. To be communists of proven loyalty to the Party must be your highest pride. To this end it is necessary that you be cautioned against the former leaders of the Jewish socialist federation whose propaganda among you keeps you artificially from merging in the Communist Party and the Communist International and thus hampers the growth of our Party.

The old division into "Number One" and "Number Two" is no more. Yet you are being told that the Party treats you like stepchildren. This is not true. The Party does not draw any line of demarkation between its members of whatever former group, provided they accept the Communist outlook and follow the ideological and tactical lines of the Party. If the Party treats certain comrades with a measure of caution, it is because they themselves have drawn a line between their little group and the Party, because they keep on denouncing the Party, unwilling or unable to represent its views. Why indeed should the Party recognize such comrades as its spokesmen? Why should it not be careful about members who are not one with Party? If it exercised no discrimination it would not be a Communist Party.

Tales of conspiracy are being peddled among you. The bugaboo of a sinister "caucus" has been brought into play in order to stir your imagination. ("Bittelman's caucus", "Costrell's caucus", the "Olgin-Yuditch caucus"). It is the task of the "caucus", you are being told, to conspire against the members of the former socialist federation. This is all woven out of whole cloth. The name caucus is here being applied to those comrades who put their party allegiance and the party disciplines above their mebersrip in the former socialist federation. The vicious "caucus" is nothing else but the Party, the Central Executive Committee of the Party and all those who carry out the policies of the Party. If only your dissatisfied elements tried to put themselves into close contact with the party as a whole, if they tried to forget their past and their group allegiance, they would soon realize that there is no conspiracy and that nobody is interested in waging a fight against them. The very fact that these comrades see conspiracies, persecution and discrimination everywhere, proves their aleinating themselves from the Party, their looking upon it with suspicion. First they put themselves into a seperate camp and then they complain that they are being treated as an unassimilated and unfriendly group. First they develop an attitude of suspicion towards the party representatives, and then they are dissatisfied when they complain that they are being treated as an unassimilated and unfriedly group. First they develop an attitude of suspicion towards the party representatives, and then they are dissatisfied when they are not being treated like Communists of good standing.

You are being told by the leaders of the former socialist federation that there is no difference between them and the Party. This is camouflage. They have retained a great deal of their former ideology which does not allow them to become communists. One instance of our party life may serve as an ample illustration. You all remember the attitude of the leaders of the former Jewish socialist federation towards work among the unions. It was one of the beliefs of those leaders that the Party ought to leave the greatest freedom of action to those who are active in the unions as they, it was asserted, know better than the party how to conduct the work of the left wing. The federation leaders are now careful not to make such assertions openly, but when you follow the activities of their adherents in the needle trade you will recognize those ideas in practical operation. You are being told that both main currents of our party, the majority and the minority, are wrong and that the only corect line is that of the federation group. But does not this declaration vividly recall to your mind the days when the socialist federation people had the sad courage to declare that everybody was wrong: the Communist Party, the Comintern, the representatives of the Comintern in this country, and only "we", the federationists, were in full possession of the unalloyed truth? There were then some federation elements who conceded that the Comintern might be right, but, they said, the Comintern adherents in America were "no good",—and this view still holds sway among some members of the former federation.

The group was dubbed Lorietes. The name is not very well chosen. Lore is only a pretext, a peg the disgrunteled use to hang their grievances on. Having discovered in Lore an opposition to the party and to the Comintern, this Federation group leaned against Lore. When they found Juliett Ponytz in a feud with Communism, they crowned Poyntz their prophet. When the needle trade group proved to be stubbornly resisting, to the detriment of our Party, the policies outlined by the Party, which are the policies of the class-struggle, they closed their ranks around this group fighting the CEC and defending the opportunist deviation. Should a new right wing opposition develop to-morrow anywhere in the Party, one may be sure that the leaders of the former federation would discover an affinity of souls between themselves and the new oppositionists and that you would be told that they were the champions of truth.

You must realize, comrades of the rank and file of the former socialist federation, that you are being utilized for a fight against the Party. It is you that give substance to the opposition of the federation leaders. Their weight, whatever of it they possess, is derived from the fact that you live by tradition, that you do not think who are the leaders you support. You must now realise that you are an instrument of an opportunist opposition in our party, that your blind devotion to your former socialist federation is detrimental to friends from among the leaders of the the Party and to Communism.

You are being utilized as an army of defense for every opportunist deviation that develops within the communist ranks. We mentioned those three communists who broke the discipline of the Party. There are more than three of this kind. They are to be found in every communist party. They are not dangerous when they have not the backing of masses. They become a real menace when they have secured the support of masses, or at least a certain number of workers. It is significient that the above mentioned three communists affiliated themselves with the federation leaders. This is no accident. All opportunists of whatever description rush to the federation leaders. This is because the latter are in a position to "deliver" them a mass of rank and filers, and this mass are you, comrades of the former socialist federation.

Do you like this role, comrades?

A curious combination is being achieved over your heads: a match between the federation leaders and those communists whose communism became of a doubtful nature. The federation leaders as such would not be able to assert themselves within the party because they lack even communist phraseology and have not had a minimum of experience in communist practice. On the other hand, the doubtful communists would have no guts to make themselves vociferous in the Party, if it were not for the "mass" that they command with the aid of the federation leaders. As it is, one group of party opponents helps the other: one furnishes the opportunist "theory", while the other delivers the votes, your votes. All this bargain is being accomplished on your account, due to your uncritical attachment to your old friends.

You carry on your backs the extreme right wing of our party,—that which eats at its vitals, which undermines discipline, which softens our struggles on the various fronts, which has been branded by the Comintern. You carry this unsavory load because you allow yourselves to be fooled by tales of horrors, because you do not wish to cast a critical look around.

Time has come to realise your situation.

By allowing opportunism to utilise you as its tools you put yourselves into the position of second rate members. Do you not wish to be members of the Party with full rights?

By listening without criticism to the tales of your former friends and leaders from among the socialist federaitno you are directly injuring the cause of communism in the United States. Do you wish to do so?

A convention is at hand. It is time to cleanse our party. It is time to bolshevise our party. If you, rank and file comrades, turn your backs to the opportunist leaders, they are helpless and their game is lost, which would mean that our party has become so much stronger, so much more united.

The eyes of the entire Comintern are watching our convention. If you become one with our Party without any reservation, our convention may become the beginning of agreat period in the history of our Party.

The Party is mine! must be our slogan. Everywhere, all the time, through joy and sorrow, through errors and their correction, through victories and losses, through gropings and finding,—always with the Party, in the stream of Party life, permeated with the spirit of the Party, always along the line of the Communist International.

Some of the Advantages

By ISRAEL AMTER.

THE United States government has issued a leaflet to the workers of the country containing the following points:

"1. The soldier's paymaster never fails in business, or fails to pay the wages of his employes.

"2. The 'factory' does not shut down and lay off its employes when times or dull.

"3. He never has to quit work and go 'on strike.'

"4. He doesn't lose any time because of bad weather or sickness—the pay goes on just the same.

"5. He doesn't have to worry about 'getting a job.'

"6. He doesn't worry about the cost of clothing or of beefsteaks or of rents. No matter what the cost, he gets his clothing, his three square meals a day, and a comfortable healthful home to live in, just the same.

"7. Neither does he worry about doctor's bills nor dentists' bills—Uncle Sam pays them.

"8. If he wants to see the world.

"9. His service will take the lumps out of his back, broaden his shoulders, deepen his chest, develop and train his muscles and his mind; in brief, it will make him a more capable and useful man."

THIS appeal of the U. S. government to workers of this country is very illuminating. It pictures in clear words that the lot of the worker is to worry about his job, about his rent, doctor's bills; to be in danger of losing his job, to be forced out on strike; his work narrows his chest, bends his back and makes a machine of him, so that his mind hardly works.

This is the truth of modern industry under the capitalist system—and it is good that the government openly says so. "Enlist in the army and be sure of your job." "Enlist in the army and see the world." "Enlist in the army" and you won't have to bend your backs in front of a hot furnace. You won't have to mine coal deep down in the earth. You won't have to risk your neck at the top of a skyscraper. It is true, that you will have to learn to kill other workers in other countries. And you are always sure of your job, for we have plenty of wars coming. There is China, and there is Japan. The Philippines are in revolt. The German workers may get fresh and want to reject the plan formed by our vice-president, Mr. Dawes. And there is Soviet Russia, that the capitalists of the United States and the whole world hate. We will send you out into wars against all these people. You are sure of your job.

WE sent you across the Atlantic to shoot down German, Austrian and Bulgarian workers and peasants. We sent you into the north of Soviet Russia to shoot down the Russian peasants who together with the workers had established a government of their own. When you came back home—those of you who did not belong to the regular army, you were out of a job. 1,000,000 of you tramped the streets looking for a job, hungry and without a home. But now we offer you a chance to 'see the world.' Be a soldier. Learn how to use a bayonet. Learn how to jab a fellow's guts out of his body. Learn how to use poison gas and hand grenades. Think of the fellows that can be killed by a single bomb. Oh, it is glorious when it is done for Wall Street! The fellows you kill are only workers—and there are too many workers. That makes all the trouble. We can work their wives and children in the factories just as well—and we make bigger profits. If you win the war for us, our influence—the influence of Wall Street—will be spread all over the world. Won't that be a 'grand and glorious feeling?" The flag of Wall Street flying all over the world?

"Join the army—and be sure of your job."

Killing of Soviet Soldier at Polish Border Protested

MOSCOW, Aug. 18.—Demand has been made by the Soviet foreign office for an investigation by the mixed commission meeting today at Yampol of the circumstances in which a red soldier was killed on the White Russian border.

The Soviet foreign office in a note to the Polish government protested that the soldier in question was killed by the Polish guard and demanded a full inquiry.

NEEDLE BOSSES FACING STRIKE

THOUSANDS OF GARMENT WORKERS FLING CHALLENGE OF BATTLE AT JOINT BOARD AND MANUFACTURERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, August 19.—In answer to a rumor that employers are threatening to discharge all members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union who stop work at 3 o'clock Thursday, Aug. 20, the Joint Committee of Action assured the members of the union today that if any employer attempted this an immediate strike would be called in his shop.

The Joint Board officials, realizing that a mass of thirty or forty thousand workers are planning to walk out on Thursday, are making this last desperate effort to stem the tide by calling on the manufacturers to issue threats.

"There is such a strong sentiment among the workers in favor of this stoppage that the union officials are frightened," says Louis Hyman. "They realize at last that their machine is tottering and that the workers instead of being impressed by their terroristic methods are all prepared to defy them.

"We have 10 meeting halls already engaged, and we are trying to find five more. If the Joint Board and the employers want to turn this two-hour stoppage into a permanent strike let them try to carry out their threats and see what happens."

How the garment workers are meeting the united front of the Sigman gang and the bosses may be seen by the following resolution of the dressmakers of Local 22:

Resolution of Dressmakers.

"We, the dressmakers of Local 22, assembled at a general membership meeting in Webster hall on Tuesday, Aug. 18, adopt the following resolutions:

"Whereas, the clique of the Joint Board and the International, together with a few discredited members of our local, are now carrying thru a fake election for a new executive board and manager of our local, without our consent and in the face of our most outspoken opposition; and

"Whereas, thru this fake election they aim to take possession of the records and the property of our local, in order to terrorize the membership for their loyalty to our struggle for a union controlled by the rank and file, and to force them to recognize and pay dues to the discredited Joint Board; therefore be it

"Resolved, that we most emphatically condemn this fake election which is intended to force the membership to submit to the autocratic rule of the Joint Board machine; and declare this act of calling this fake election against the will of the membership a disgrace to the labor movement.

"We hereby declare that we shall not recognize, nor have anything to do with the fake executive board and manager, and call upon the entire membership of our local to do likewise.

"The only officers of our local recognized by the dressmakers are the members of the executive board and the manager whom we have legally elected and to whom we have given our most loyal support in the present struggle.

Warn Bosses, "Hands Off!"

"We give our most hearty approval to the Joint Committee of Action, of which our executive board is a part, for its prompt and courageous action in arranging a two-hour stoppage in our industry on Thursday, Aug. 20, at 3 p. m., as a warning to the employers not to take advantage of our internal struggle to undermine our union standards; (2) to force our employers to keep out of this struggle; (3) to compel the officials of the Joint Board, who have long been repudiated by the members, to leave our union; (4) to decide on a general stoppage in our industry should the Joint Committee of Action deem this necessary.

"We pledge ourselves as one man to cease work at the call of the Joint Committee of Action, and to remain on strike until the united front of the discredited officialdom of the Joint Board and the bosses has been broken, and our struggle for a strong and militant union, able to defend the interests of our membership, has been crowned with success."

BERRY LOOKS ON UNION AS HIS OWN PROPERTY

Reactionary Leaders in Judas Iscariot Role

This is the sixth of a series of articles exposing the crooked career of George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union. The members of the international union are now determined to get rid of Berry and Berryism.

The reactionary bureaucrats who control the policies of the American Federation of Labor usually cover up their treachery by constant tirades against the radicals. Today the Communists are the only radical group functioning inside the trade unions and because they are constantly working towards the aim of uniting the scattered forces of labor and giving the movement a militant character, they have drawn down on their heads the wrath of the reactionary officials.

The Fakers' Smoke Screen.

One would imagine that those bureaucrats were paragons of personal virtue and nuggets of altruism, by listening to their speeches or by reading their articles against the radicals. They always charge the Communists, progressives and the honest elements in general with being against the government, which is the capitalists' government, with seeking to destroy the unions, which is a brazen lie, and also with trying to secure personal advantage at the expense of the rank and file.

George L. Berry is only one of the species. The pressmen and feeders are certain that Berry is the most corrupt of the lot. But the progressive miners feel the same way about John L. Lewis and the carpenters the same about William Hutcheson. The difference is only one of degree. Why is this the case?

The fact is that those reactionary bureaucrats look on the labor movement in the same light that the democratic and republican politicians look on the city of Chicago, for instance: "It's a fine city to loot!"

That is the attitude of the politicians towards city, state and national governments. They seek election for the purpose of robbery. It is called graft nowadays, but only when they are caught.

The Unholy Alliance.

Berry, Lewis, Hutcheson and company take the same attitude towards

"The Prince" has come back to ten-o'clock-land. For six long months "His Royal Highness," Fowler McCormick, scion of Harold and Edith Rockefeller McCormick, has been living in that strange and uncomfortable country where people get up at 5:30 in the morning, where they ride street cars, instead of limousines, where they work eight hours a day, and consider the movies a big celebration.

In other words Fowler has been working in his father's International Harvester factory at Milwaukee.

After he spends a few days at home, resting, etc., he expects to take a vacation trip to the Canadian lodge of Mrs. Fifi Stillman.

DETROIT CARPENTERS FIND HALL BLOCKED BY HUTCHESON FAKELRS IN COMMAND OF STATE COSSACKS

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 19.—Hutcheson's union wreckers, John Potts and Sam Botterill, having forfeited the confidence of the membership by their expulsion policy, having the refusal of the Detroit police department to do their dirty work, recalling with pain their sad injunction experience in Wayne county courts, have turned to the last resort of entrenched privilege, the brute force of the state constabulary.

When the members of Local Union No. 19, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, assembled for meeting, they found Potts and Botterill stationed at the door of the hall surrounded by the state cossacks, pointing out those who had earned the official displeasure by remembering their manhood and refusing to sign Hutcheson's yellow dog pledge, and ordering their removal from the premises.

Insists on Gettting Pinched.

After a dozen or so had been refused admittance, Jack Reynolds, former president of Local Union No. 19, insisted on entering the meeting. He was forcibly ejected from the entrance and bullrushed to the street. Returning to the fray and again demanding admittance, he was placed under arrest by orders of Pottts and taken to the 12th Street police station, where the inspector insisted that Potts swear out a warrant.

This Potts, mindful of the opinion of Judge Hunt in the injunction case which the inspector was reading, refused to do. It was then discovered that the jurisdiction in this case lay in another police precinct and Reynolds was removed to the Trumbull station, under police escort and accompanied by Potts.

After a lengthy discussion in which the inspector went into the merits of the case he suggested that they jointly lay their differenres before Judge Hunt.

Evidently Potts did not consider Judge Hunt partial or credulous enuf for his purposes, for he declined to act upon the suggestion. After the inspector had washed his hands of the whole proposition it was agreed between Potts and the captain of the cossaks that Local Union No. 19 should adjourn forthwith. Then Reynolds was released.

Fakers Leagued With State Police.

It was stated by a member of the constabulary that there were twenty of them in and about the building and that they had come direct from Lansing for this job by orders of Governor Grosbeck.

The "cap in hand" attitude of Potts towards the police is typical of the petty tyrant who cringes before authority and tyrannizes over those whose livelihood he controls and from whose sweat he lives.

Potts represents that strata of the labor movement which has graduated so many members into the fink, thug, and "labor agent" fraternity. When the rank and file ends his career as a "labor leader" he will have qualified as a police organizer and may organize a state constabulary for Indiana if it is not as yet so "blessed."

Surpassed Expectations.

We have remarked before that Hutcheson's slimy crew in Detroit would continue to plumb new depths of infamy. We admit, however, that they have surpassed even our expectations in this direction. We urge the membership of the brotherhood to keep their eyes Detroitward if they wish to get the low-down on the blacklegs who represent the general office in Detroit. Since Hutcheson's tale of woe has turned the stomachs of the Detroit police officials he has earned the contempt and censure of a Wayne county judge, and must even revolt the state constabulary, there will be nothing left for the Fat Boys of Indianapolis but to "tell it to the marines."

AS WE SEE IT

CALVIN COOLIDGE lets it be known that he will lop another $40,000,000 off the tax bill of the wealthy owners of the United States. The plutes naturally make merry and plan to take long trips around the world and purchases new fineries for their wives and other parasites. In the meantime the textile workers of New England are drawing in their belts and taking their ten per cent wage cut as best they can.

ONE of the readers of the DAILY WORKER does not like the way certain people are lacerated in this column from time to time. Recently a dead czarist was complimented for putting his carcass to good use for the first time, by supplying fertilizer to a few feet of Russian soil. Our subscriber objected to this on the ground that the language was a trifle coarse. Perhaps, but that is how we feel about grand dukes.

ART BRISBANE says that European civilization is not perfect, but that it is superior to the Abd-el-Krim brand. Therefore, observes Art, France is defending civilization, such as it is, and the Riffs must be slaughtered. Brisbane inevitably takes occasion to say a good word for the airplane as a weapon of murder. One of those days the truth will break out that Art and William Hearst, his employer, have considerable money invested in airplane factories.

IT is generally agreed that capitalism in Great Britain is by no means as healthy as it used to be. The empolyers are howling that they cannot make any profits. There are one million and a half of workers unemployed. This means that large percentage of the working class population of England is starving. Yet, according to the newspapers the ruling classes of England are eating, drinking and making merry as never before.

THE latest fad in London is giving freak supper parties at which the guests wear masks specially designed to accentuate their personalities. The supper usually starts at midnight and ends when the guests are all played out. THIS is the way the capitalists fritter away the wealth produced by the workers. Yet, we are told those who seek to put an end to this hellish system, are foes of the family. SHOTS ARE FIRED THRU WINDOW OF WORKERS' HOME

James King Active in Cuneo Lockout

What is believed to be the beginning of a campaign of terror against the locked out employes of the Cuneo Printing company, happened last Tuesday night when the home of James King, at 2622 North Austin avenue, member of the Presemne's Union, and one of the locked-out Cuneo employes, was shot up by gangsters believed to be acting under the instructions of Seymour "Stuss" Singer and Sam Freeman, both tools of "Majah" Berry and both gunmen with unsavory reputations.

Singer is superintendent at the Cuneo printing plant and Freeman is a sort of lackey for Harrington, business agent of Web Pressmen's Local No. 7.

Had Narrow Escape.

King did not get home until after twelve o'clock at night. He was on the picket line until late and he lives away out on the northwest side. His wife had just left the dining room to go into the kitchen about 11:30 at night when she heard what she thought was the sound of the backfiring of an automobile. One of the explosions sounded like shooting and she went to the window, lifted the shade and looked out. There was no automobile in sight.

Found the Bullet.

She paid no more atention to the matter and when her husband came home she did not mention the incident.

But yesterday morning while going about her work, she lifted the shade on one of the dining room windows and found a bullet hole. The bullet, a thirty-eight slug, was found on the floor where it fell after hitting the

Report Troops Rushed to Damascus

PARIS, France, August 19—The foreign office denies reports that an offensive has been launched against the Riffians in Northern Africa. Marshal Petain has left for Morocco, and it was announced he will have charge of the operations against the natives.

Altho there are already 84 battalions of French troops in Morocco, the military leaders are clamoring for 20 battalions more. Premier Painleve has admitted that if he is forced to keep the troops in Africa thru the winter it will be a tremendous expense and the shaky financial situation is expected to be made more acute.

Reports from Jerusalem state that fighting between 4,000 French troops and 20,000 Syrians is about to take place. Troops have been sent to Damascus by Gen. Sarrail, "to maintain order."

Sarovich Killed by Farrington Gunman

ZEIGLER, Ill., Aug. 19—A dozen deputy sheriffs accompanied Sheriff Henry Dorris here yesterday armed with fifty warrants for the arrest of 25 miners, members of the Zeigler local of the U. M. W. of A., charged with conspiracy in relation to the fight in the local union hall last week precipitated by the shooting down of a militant miner, Mike Sarovich, by Alex Hargins, a K. K. K.

Henry Corbishley, who was deposed by the Farrington gang of the Sub-District officials, from his position of local union president shortly before the meeting date, is among those arrested, but late yesterday furnished bonds at Benton, Ill.

Coroner's Verdict Blames K. K. K.

At the coroner's inquest on Sunday, a verdict was rendered stating that Sarovich came to his death from a gunshot wound inflicted by Alex Hargis, the klansman.

Five witnesses testified. Clarence Strumm, John Korniski, Dan Radisin and Rado Jurvick, members of the Zeigler local who attended the local meeting called by the sub-district officers to force the men back to work who struck spontaneously when the Farirngton sub-district machine removed Corbishley and other local officers, stated that Hargis was seen sitting at the front of the hall along with the sub-district officials, Fox and Cobb at the early part of the meeting.

Deliberate Murder.

About the time trouble started, he went out, but returned at once and barred the door. He was described as standing in the half open door of the hall with the crowd trying to get out as the meeting had adjourned. He had one foot on the top step of the stairway and the other inside the door when he drew a gun and fired into the miners at point blank range.

Savorich cried out that he was shot, and Mack Ashman, police magistrate of Zeigler, testified that he visited Sarovich at the hospital, when Sarovich was convinced that he was near death. Sarovich told him that Hargis, the ku klux klansman, had shot him. He died Saturday night.

Murderer a Farrington Gangster.

Hargis, the K. K. K., is among the klan gang which supported the Farrington machine in the local and sub-district and had gone to the meeting with the sub-district officials in an automobile and with arms, evidently to precipitate trouble. He was arrested the morning following the fight in the hall and released on bonds, but rearrested Saturday night when Sarovich died.

Sarovich was 30 years old. He leaves a wife and other relatives in Montenegro with a host of friends among the Zeigler miners, among whom he was known as a courageous and sincere fighter for the labor movement.

The coroner's jury recommended Hargis be held to the Franklin county grand jury for murder.

Berry Considers Union His Property

the labor movement. It is no accident that they not only sell the workers to the employers, for gain, but that they also loot the treasuries. Those burglars have no ideal love for the capitalist system. They would not die for it, unless they were faced with the choice of hanging with the capitalists or hanging without them. The capitalists happen to have the money under this social order, so the fakers throw in their lot with them.

For all the world those labor skates remind one of the trained rams that are used in the Chicago stock yards to lead the sheep to the knife. Those rams are well taken care of and they trot back and forth thru the sheep alleys day after day, always leaving the sheep to get their throats cut and returning for more. Gompers was the leader of the trained rams while he was alive. William Green has taken his place. George L. Berry is one of the lesser rams, of which there are thousands.

Became Corrupted.

Many of those reactionary labor leaders originally entered the movement with good intentions. But their souls were easily corrupted and they fell for the "long green," became cynical and skeptical, and finally degenerated into betrayers of labor. Others seing how well some labor leaders got along, saw in the trade union movement a career and joined with that end in view. The rank and file who pay the dues and suffer the exactions of the employers are the victims.

Since the labor officials, the reactionary ones, began to turn the unions into business institutions, the opportunities for raking in the coin have increased immeasurably. Several international unions have banks and some of them have several banks, and investment companies. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has banks in many cities and the leaders of the union sit around the same table with the biggest bankers in Wall Street. The union also owns mines in West Virginia and Kentucky, which they are running non-union. How can labor unions fight the employers and be business institutions at the same time? It can't be done. The unions have a legitimate function and that is to organize the workers for fighting the bosses, as this is the only way the boss will be compelled to shell out part of the loot that he steals from his employes every day they work for him. The stronger and the better organized the workers are the more of their product can they force the boss to cough up.

Helping the Enemy.

When the unions drop this function, they simply become organizations for helping the employers fleece the workers. This is the tendency that is growing among labor officials today. We call it class-collaboration, which is another way of saying co-operating with the boss in getting as much profits as possible out of the workers. Does any rank and file member of a union believe this kind of a policy is to his advantage? Not if he has any brains and knows how to use them. This policy benefits the employers and the reactionary labor leaders. What the leaders receive as remuneration may not be learned until the workers and farmers of this country are running the government and capitalism is gone the way of the dodo. But we know that their services are worth money. Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Locomotive Engineers died recently. He left a fortune of $125,000 behind him. His salary was $25,000 a year and he was personally interested in several business ventures. He was only beginning to make big money. Had he lived a few years longer, he would be as wealthy as William Jennings Bryan.

Not Surprising!

Is it surprising that those labor fakers should hate the radicals, progressives and particularly the Communists? There is not a labor faker in the United States who does not curse William Z. Foster regularly, morning, noon and night. Foster is the secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, an organization composed of members of trade unions who carry on an educational propaganda inside the unions. One of the principal slogans of the T. U. E. L. is "Amalgamation," that is, joining all the unions in one industry into one organization for common action against the employers. The steps taken by the pressmen and feeders of Chicago last week, in ratifying an agreement for joint action, is a step in the direction of the fulfillment of this policy. The labor skates have a deadly fear of amalgamation and for that reason they denounce it morning, noon and night and they tell the world that the radicals are getting "Soviet gold" to overthrow this government and destroy the unions.

"Majah" Berry is one of the gentlemen who hurl this offal at the workers, but after you get thru reading the subsequent articles of this series, you will come to the conclusion that if there was any "gold" lying around, the first to apply for a share of it would be this same fake "Major."

The next article will give a brief history of the efforts of Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 to force Berry to stop looting the old-age pension fund and the war emergency fund for his shady business ventures.

POLICE AGAIN COME TO AID OF GARMENT BOSSES

Pickets' Bail Placed at $3,000

The J. L. Taylor-International Tailoring Company instituted a new campaign of police violence yesterday. Sam Gier was arrested while walking the picket line. Gier's bail was placed at $3,000, altho the only charge placed against him was "disorderly conduct."

Members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers declared that the high bail placed against Gier, and the fact that he was doing nothing but peaceful picketing, shows the intention of the garment company again to bring about wholesale arrests before the busy season starts.

The rush season of the year begins in only two weeks, and the strikers, who have been out eight weeks, declare that violence and threats will fail. A settlement with the union is looked for at the start of the busy season.

Local Union No. 144 of the Amalgamated announced that the strikers will be given two tickets each, free of charge, to their picnic at Riverview Park the Sunday before Labor Day.

The shop chairmen were to meet last night at the Labor Lyceum, Taylor and Ogden Aves., to discuss possbile future police violence and other matters pertaining to the strike.

The Amalgamated is determined that the International shall not smuggle orders into other smaller union shops, and one purpose of the shop chairmen's meeting was to take measures to safeguard the strikers against such an attempt.

The arrest of Gier and the high bail placed against him serves as a warning that new desperate efforts to club the strikers into submission are to be made. Last night's meeting was an answer to the police raids conducted on the Amalgamated headquarters a few days ago when 64 of the union members were arrested.

The hearing of the sixteen Amalgamated officials and strikers held a high bail on charges of "conspiracy" and "disorderly conduct" will be held Friday before Judge Lyle at the Maxwell street police station.

the family! Whatever may happen to the bourgeois conception of connubial propriety, the workers are determined that the idle parasites, male and female, will have to work or starve when the final battle between the exploited and the exploiters is over.

THE workers of New York are given a very instructive lesson in the folly of non-partisan political action, in the injunction issued by Judge Churchill against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Judge Churchill was endorsed by the New York Trades and Labor Council as a "friend of labor." Yet, the injunction he handed down on the demand of the International Tailoring company is the most drastic on record. When will the workers wake up to the realization that those "friends" always turn out to be their enemies?

THE labor fakers are never tired of ringing the changes on the activities of the Communists in the trade unions. They accuse us of injuring "the cause." What they really mean is, that we injure their business, which is selling the workers. "Majah" George L. Berry is a shining example of this species. He is scabbing on the union employes of the Cuneo Printing company. Yet the Chicago Federation of Labor, which recently issued a long letter denouncing the Communists, is silent over Berry's scabbery.

EVEN our worst enemies know that the Communists are not out to divide the workers but to unite them. The Communists insist on solidarity in the trade union movemnet. Only workers who accept its program can join the Workers (Communist) Party, but all workers employed in the same industry must be members of the same union. That is our position briefly. Does this mean breaking up the unions? No, it means solidifying them. Of course, the traitors like Berry want to keep the workers divided so that they can pit one union against the others and retain their power.

High Tariff Protected Dinner Pail Fraud Is Exposed in New England

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, barks a little at the great textile interests of New England crushing the workers under a new wage cut. Green's bark will not frighten these open shoppers.

Green threatens that he will carry his fight to the next congress. But that congress will not assemble for several months, and when it does the congregated political agents of Wall Street may well laugh at this labor official who recently announced the allegiance of the A. F. of L. to the sterile "nonpartisan" policy of the departed Gompers. The wage cutters will have a strangle grip on this congress, that Green threatens to appeal to.

Again, the textile barons have shown themselves able to combat successfully the labor organizations that have been set up in the textile industry, especially the reactionary United Textile Workers' Union of the A. F. of L., that stands solid in its allegiance to "church and state," respectable to the core.

The rapid development and centralization of the textile industry has far outstripped the ancient methods of organization employed to unite textile labor industrially.

• • • •

Green's bark might be turned into a stinging bite if this organizational problem had been solved and if the American Federation of Labor had espoused and successfully carried forward a struggle for independent political action and sent to congress representatives with a working class outlook.

Green's appeal to "the government" and "the people," therefore, falls on deaf ears. "Schedule K," protecting the profiteers of New England against foreign competition thru a high protective tariff, attests the influence of textile capital over congress. To be sure the politicians at Washington tried to cover up their completely subserviency by claiming that a high protective tariff insured the textile workers good wages. But there have been repeated wage cuts since "Schedule K" went into effect. The workers of New England's mills have learned that high wages do not follow in the wake of a high tariff, as the republican party of the textile multi-millionaire, Butler, and his political lackey, Cal Coolidge, have tried to make the workers believe. Instead Green bitterly declares that, "no other industry in the United States has made such a record for wage reductions and strikes as that of the textile industry."

In order to put over "Schedule K" the textile czars confessed to the meager wages paid their slaves. For instance, there was the story of the woman operator running 25 machines knitting 150 dozen pairs of socks daily; receiving two cents per dozen pairs. This was claimed to be the lowest price per pair for finished socks paid operators anywhere thruout the world. Thus the item of labor in the finished products of the textile mills is very low. One-fourth of the hosiery and knit goods produced in the United States go forth over the world to compete successfully with the goods produced by underpaid labor of other countries.

Since this "Schedule K" went into effect, protecting the profits of the exploiters there have been many wage reductions; chief among them, however, being the recent reductions of 10 per cent imposed upon the workers "in the face of the fact that stock dividends ranging from 50 to 2,000 per cent had been voted by certain of the textile corporations."

• • • •

It will not profit the workers that President Green proclaims that this reduction is "economically and morally wrong." Green is an adept in the use of phrases. But phrases are empty where there is no power to back them up. Profits are not wrung from textile labor on the basis of sentimentality.

• • • •

New England textile labor will make its class power felt when it organizes for independent political action in a labor party; when the workers' organizations in the industry are amalgamated and solidified. That is a task that the Workers (Communist) Party exerts every possible effort to aid textile labor achieve. That is the way that labor can turn an ineffective bark into a much-dreaded bite.

wall. Mrs. King immediately got in touch with her husband at union headquarters and told him the story.

After hearing about the shooting King recollectetd a suspicious incident that occurred on the morning of last Tuesday. While he was standing in front fo the Cuneo plant on the 22nd street side he saw Seymour "Stuss" Singer and Sam Freeman looking out thru the window of the Cuneo plant and Singer was pointing out King to Freeman and nodding his head. This man Singer was a pal of the notorious member of an east side gangster in New York that polished off the gambler Rosenthal, for which four of them and Police Lieutenant Becker went to the chair in Sing Sing.

Cuneo Driving Thugs.

The pressmen are of the opinion that the Berry crowd are being driven by the Cuneo company and forced to resort to violence in order to break the lockout.

James King thanked his stars that the shooting did not take place a little earlier, else he might have found his wife and child dead on his return home. His wife had barely left the dining room when the bullet came thru the window.

The Cuneo Printing company is offering unheard of wages to some of its bestemployes who are locked out in an effort to break up their solidarity. Special letters and telegrams have been sent to them asking for conference with the management. All those offers have been turned down.

JOINT BOARD LIES ABOUT SHOP STRIKES

Joint Action Committee States Facts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 19.—The announcement of the Joint Board regarding the settlement of three of the largest shops on strike, was denied by the Joint Committee of Action and branded as just another trick of the Joint Board to try to deceive the workers.

The Joint Board stated that the workers in the Best Cloak Company, 114 West 18th street, the H. Fredericks Co., 205 West 39th street and Wittenberg & Shimberg Co., 1372 Broadway, had deserted the Joint Committee of Action and turned to the support of the Joint Board.

A Solid Front.

Contrary to the Joint Board statement, the shop of the Best Cloak company was settled by the Joint Committee of Action in spite of continued interference from the Joint Board. Several weeks ago the Joint Board's business agent had ordered a meeting of this shop, and when the chairman refused to call the meeting the boss was told to discharge him.

Immediately all 25 workers in the shop, cutters included, stopped work and for four weeks they remained out on strike. During that time some of them (not all) received strike benefits and this is the money which is termed a "bribe" by the Joint Board.

This strike was finally settled by the Joint Action Committee, and all the workers, with their chairmen, have gone back to the shop. All the efforts of the Joint Board to make further trouble there, especially to turn the cutters against the other workers, have been unsuccessful.

Strike Against Discrimination.

In the H. Fredericks Co., and Wittenberg & Shimberg, the situation is as it has been for the past eight weeks. The Wittenberg & Shimberg Co. were ordered by the Joint Board to discharge I. Steinser soon after he was suspended as a member of Local 2 Executive Committee.

This shop is a small one which sends most of its work to small Italian contracting shops in Brooklyn. The Joint Board threatened to cut off these sub-contractors if the firm refused to obey its rulings, and altho they were unwilling, they were forced to let Steinsor go.

The Joint Committee of Action then declared this shop on strike and began picketing it regularly. A strike was also declared on the H. Fredericks Co. when H. Hochstein was sent down from his job for exactly the same reasons, and picketing has been conducted at this shop also. These shops are still on strike and the picketing is still going on.

Sigman Terror Drives Worker to Collapse.

An instance of the Joint Board's terrorist tactics is revealed in the case of M. Herlich of 1463 Minford Place, who worked as a cutter in one of the other shops on strike because of the discharge of workers who sympathized with the Joint Committee of Action.

After Merlich had left his job with the other workers in his shop and stayed out for two weeks, gangsters came to his home at 1 o'clock in the morning and threatened that if he did not go back to his job they would beat him up and kill him. In fear of this life, Herlich went back to work and after a day and a half, the strain of the whole situation brot on a mental breakdown and he is now in a hospital.

TOMSKY, RUSSIAN UNION HEAD, TELLS VISITING DELEGATIONS OF STRUGGLE FOR WORLD LABOR UNITY

(By International Press Correspondence)

MOSCOW, July 23, (By Mail).—Today a solemn session of the enlarged Plenum of the Moscow trade union council took place in the Moscow trade union house together with the representatives of the shop councils and the whole German and Swedish workers' delegations.

Comrade A. Tomsky, chairman of the Russian trade union unity committee, made a speech upon the attitude of the Soviet unions to the question of international trade union unity. He pointed out how much the situation of the working class in one country affected the situation of the working class in another, a fact which is clearly to be seen in the situation of the working class in England in consequence of the conditions of labor in Germany.

"The opponents and sabotageurs of trade union unity ask why it is that just the Russian workers worry themselves so much about unity, and what it has got to do with them. To this we must reply, that the Russian workers have never regarded their revolution as a purely national matter, but as the first stage of the world revolution, and that they have never said that they could without the support of the European workers.

"The Russian worker knows and feels that when revolutionaries are hanged in Bulgaria, they are workers, that if the working class suffers defeat in France and Germany, then this defeat is also a defeat for the Russian working class, that the murdered in China are also workers.

"If one asks what unity has to do with us, then, first of all, one is not internationalist, and secondly, no socialist, and one has learned nothing from the history of the revolutionary working class movement.

"Finally one asks what the Soviet unions, which exist under different circumstances and allegedly only of Communists, have to offer the European working class. If one examines the matter seriously and realizes that in the class struggle one class is doomed to destruction and the other is assured of victory, that the trade union movement and the struggle for unity is really a struggle and not correspondence and negotiations, one must also realize that in this struggle of the European working class, the Russian working class, which can count six and a half millions of organized workers and which has for eight years administered one-sixth of the earth without the bourgeoisie and the aristocracy, represents an important support.

Reviews Negotiations with Amsterdam

Tomsky enumerated all the stages of the correspondence of the Soviet Unions with Amsterdam. The Amsterdamers declare that they recognize the magnitude of the task, but evade every practical step, for instance, a conference for the carrying out of the task. When one demands that the preliminary condition for the acceptance of the Soviet unions in Amsterdam is the acceptance of the statutes of the International Federation of Trade Unions, one seems to forget that the unity question is not merely a Russian question.

"Not all the working class organizations in Europe and none of the workers' organizations in Asia are affiliated to Amsterdam. The Soviet Unions have never understood the question of unity in any other way than the unity of the workers of all countries. The sabotage of the Amsterdamers forced us to seek other ways. A way was found in London, and the joint declaration in London was a smashing proof for the fact that workers of different opinions can find a common language.

"The Amsterdamers declare that our struggle for unity is nothing but an agitational maneuver and an attempt to disrupt the Amsterdam trade union international.

"If two organizations come together then it can happen that both are disrupted or neither. Why does Amsterdam fear that it will be disrupted and not the Soviet unions for the latter in any case represent a minority? We, however, do not fear disruption, influence and disrupt us as much as you want. The actual fact is that the Amsterdamers wish to prevent the establishment of close relations between the Russian unions and the European workers.

"They fear that in such a case the European workers would see that the Russian workers are really not bandits at all, but actually very decent fellows with only one weak side and that, that they hate capitalism and wish to do away with it altogether. The struggle for unity is a maneuver, it is true, but it is a maneuver of the working class against capitalism. If a workers' international congress were to decide that both internationals should be dissolved, we guarantee that we would carry out the decision of such a congress implicitly.

"Finally we are accused of attacking the Amsterdam leaders. Let the Amsterdamers attack Tomsky, Dogadov, Michailov and the others as much as they like, but not the Soviet unions, not the Russian working class! Let the Amsterdamers pluck up sufficient courage to recognize their deficiencies as openly as we recognize ours.

"Again and again we have said to the Amsterdamers, let us sit together around a table, and if we quarrel, then let the working class judge for itself. We think the the German, Belgian, French and Swedish workers who have visited us have received the impression that they have dealt with workers who have not been spoiled by eight years of state power, who have remained honest proletarians who wish to march together with their comrades abroad.

"We beg you for one thing: tell your brothers abroad the truth, the workers will believe you, despite the coming bouregois campaign of calumny against you. We hope and believe that your visit to our workers' country will help forward the cause of unity."

The chairman of the German delegation, Freiberger, declared:

"It is true that the German working class, under the influence of the hypnotism of the bouregois press, retains a certain skepticism towards the Soviet government, but it feels, thanks to its proletarian instinct, that a great work is being accomplished over the border in Russia. We German workers here have convinced ourselves of this, and also of the fact that the bourgeois press is carrying on a deliberate and conscious criminal campaign of calumny against the Soviet republics. We have seen that capitalism can and must be overthrown. If this is possible in one country, then it is also possible in the others. The German proletariat stands in solidarity with your struggle, it will go the way of the class struggle, there is no other way."

A social-democratic member of the Swedish delegation, Sten, declared that the Russian working class movement must be amalgamated with the international trade union movement. The Swedish trade unions consider the formation of the Anglo-Russian unity committee to be correct and useful, and they will demand the acceptance of the Soviet unions into the International.

The chairman of the Swedish delegation which leaves Moscow today, thereupon delivered a unanimously adopted declaration of the Swedish delegation which says the following:

"The Russian workers have not only expropriated the expropriators, but they have shown the unlimited possibility of administrating their own country in the interests of the working class. Since the final victory over the counter-revolution, the work of economic reconstruction has proceeded at a swift pace forwards, which is to be seen above all in the improvement in the conditions of the workers, the rising wages, the quick betterment of the cultural situation, etc. We are convinced that despite the tremendous difficulties which arise from the encirclement of your country by the capitalist powers, you will attain your socialist aims.

"It is the duty of every honest worker to follow carefully every attempt of the bouregoisie to prevent the development of the Soviet republics, and to bring such attempts to naught with every means at the disposal of the working class. The Swedish delegation will fulfill its duties in this direction and will tell the truth of the situation to the Swedish working class.

"The attitude of the international working class must not only be expressed in the slogan, "Hands of Soviet Russia!" but it must also be expressed in the most active support for the Russian working class. The delegation further declares that the activity of the Russian unions for the workers is of incalculable value. The trade unions carry on their work with the broadest democratic basis, they are extremely popular and posses the greatest confidence of the workers, and authority and influence in all that concerns the life of the workers in the Soviet Union. The workers abroad must strive to achieve just such an influential position for their unions. The Swedish delegation considers it its duty, not only to tell the truth about Soviet Russia to the Swedish working class, but also to adopt the attitude of the English and Russian unions with regard to national and international trade union unity.

The city offered to buy 15,000 acres of land, but the deal did not look good to the exploited and otherwise wronged ranchers.

Gun-Men on the Move.

The trouble between the ranchers along the aqueduct and the Los Angeles Board of Water and Power Commissioners over water rights is of long standing, as pointed out in a previous article. Some dynamitting was done a year ago.

In the evening of July 31, a heavy guard was sent by train to patrol the Howice dam. At 1:30 a. m. Aug. 1 another contingent of plainclothes men and other armed thugs was rushed to the valley by automobiles. W. B. Matthews, chief counsel for the water board, made the request for armed men, while H. D. Woodward, chief investigator for the water board, and Detective Captain Al Slaton provided the drafted ex-service men with arms and ammunition. The fact that this stuff was bought shortly after midnight, Aug. 1, makes it look like real warfare. Or is it a move to intimidate the poor farmers by the plunderbund of this city?

Twisting the Truth.

"Governor Richardson was requested by the ranchers to send State troops into th district when Sheriff Collins declard the situation was beyond control."—The L. A. Times.

"The general feeling among the ranchers is," said Sheriff Collins of Inyo county, "that this is being done deliberately by the city to antagonize the ranchers."—The L. A. Record.

The Record is right. The farmers do not want thugs to shoot them down. But the city officials are blood-thirsty enough to do it.

Jealousy Benefits Farmers.

California's "Hanging Governor", Richardson, does not want to pardon the political prisoners of the State. Nor does he care for other workers or farmers. But he refused to grant the rquest of Los Angeles officials for State troops. Why? Because Mr. Cryer, the "Labor Mayor" of Los Angeles, may be a competitor for the governor's chair. So it would be a disadvantage to the present governor to help him to untangle a complicated situation.

HOBART, Tasmania — (FP) — The Tasmanian Labor government has restored to the teachers all decreases in their wages imposed by the old anti-Labor government. All school teachers are in the School Teachers union to which the government has grantted preference of employment. Reductions in the wages of other government workers have also been set aside. Taxation on the workers has been lightened; relief work for the unemployment has been provided; compensation granted for occupational diseases, and dental and medical clinics established in all schools in the state. The government also gives preference to union police.

Soviet Trade in Turkey.

MOSCOW—Ukrainian trade with Turkey is reported to be steadily increasing, Ukrainian ploughs and hay being strongly in demand.

JOHN L. LEWIS ADMITS HE AIDED GOVERNMENT AGAINST COMMUNIST WORKERS; BRAGS OF BEING FINK

By ALEX REID
(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

John L. Lewis in an interview printed in an Ohio paper a few days ago once again showed that he was working hand in glove with the coal owners to destroy the militants in the ranks of the United Mine Workers of America. Again he raises the red scare to influence the weak-minded against the progressive miners and again he fails in his unholy scheme. In an interview to Drew Pearson, a reporter for a capitalist paper, he is reported to make the following statements.

"The United Mine Workers once co-operated with the state department in making an investigation of Communist propaganda."

It is of interest to the rank and file workers to know that the miners did nothing of the kind, but that John L. Lewis, without the consent of the miners, did use an enormous amount of money belonging to the miners in peddling capitalist propaganda on behalf of the enemy of the workers' and farmers' government of Russia. This money was used by Lewis in opposition to the wishes of the rank and file of the progressive miners, for the purpose of buying recognition for himself from the republican party on the one hand, and the destruction of the menacing power of outraged labor on the other.

He states that "the bolsheviks are trying to upset the union."

The workers in America know that the union will not be broken, but it will be pulled thru its present crisis, not because of John L. Lewis, but in spite of him.

No labor faker in the history of the American labor movement stands out as clearly as Lewis as an enemy of the working class and no traitor has received such universal condemnation from the intelligent workers as he. From coast to coast he is regarded as the symbol of all that is dishonest and traitorous in the labor world, and actually hated by the forward looking masses in the miners' organization.

His betrayals of the miners are legion—in Nova Scotia, Alberta, Kansas, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and the never-to-be-forgotten surrender to Judge Anderson when victory was within the grasp of the miners of America.

He refers sneeringly to the Nova Scotia miners' request to be permitted to affiliate with the Red International of Labor Unions.

He does not mention anything about the conditions of the Nova Scotia miners at that time. They were on strike and starving and John L. Lewis had no money to aid them in their brilliant fight, a fight that brot to them the admiration of the workers of the world.

From far-off Russia the workers responded to an appeal to help save the miners with a donation of $5,000, when the yellow traitor from Indianapolis was kowtowing and dining with the coal mine operators in the fancy hotels of Canada. If he had an inch of decency or manhood in his canary colored makeup, he would have been ashamed to even refer to the Nova Scotia case.

He refers to the British miners as "minimum wage lovers."

He is either absolutely ignorant of the British miners, or deliberately insults them, or both. No labor man in America or anywhere else, far less a labor leader, but knows that a statement of that kind is a canard and only worthy of the vulture that utters it. The late performance of the British miners in the threatened strike which practically meant the nationalization of the coal mines, and incidentally a plan which Lewis has repudiated for the American miners—a plan that is acknowledged to be the only solution of the mining industry in America, as well as in Britain, gives the lie direct to the treasury vampire.

Lewis further states in the interview that our living conditions are good.

Every miner in America is practically starving. Lewis makes this statement at a time when the miners are fighting starvation in the bituminous field, men who have practically had no work for the last two years, and when the hard coal miners are facing a strike for a living wage. No time could be chosen by Wall Street more appropriate than the present to make a statement of that kind, but surely the miners are entitled to something different than that from their royally salaried parasite.

Lewis further stated that the British miners don't desire to work, because they can get a wage practically as large as the ones who do work, as unemployment doles.

If Lewis wanted to state the facts in the case he would have stated that the miners are continuously fighting for work and better living conditions in Great Britain. The unemployment doles are not sufficient to keep a man in as much food as that necessary to properly feed a canary, and yet the "labor leader" goes out of his way to heap insults on the heads of the British miners.

We are well aware of the reason why John L. Lewis heaps abuse on the heads of the British toilers. It is only a short time ago that Lewis visited Britain and the miners, knowing of his reputation of treason to the American miners, refused to applaud his empty remarks.

One rank-and-filer, after Lewis spoke, asked if "that guy" was a "representative of Wall Street or the American government," and when told he was supposed to be a labor leader the miners could not restrain their mirth. They did not forget to show Lewis that his treatment of the American miners was not appreciated in Britain, and his absence was more welcome than his presence, hence his lies now about the British miners.

Nuns in Public Schools.

OWENSBORO, Ky., Aug. 19.—Ursuline nuns who have been teaching in public schools here for five years now demand the right to wear their religious garb while teaching. For three month this has been discussed by the Daviss County board of education. The matter has been submitted to the state superintendent of education and the attorney general for an opinion.

YOUTH BRANCH TO CARE FOR CROUCH AND TRUMBULL

N. Y. First to Initiate Idea of Group Care

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A group of Russian young workers in New York City are the first to initiate the practice of special group care of particular class war prisoners. The young workers have asked the International Labor Defense to establish connections for them with Crouch and Trumbull, Communist soldiers sentenced to military prison by courts martial in Hawai and pledged themselves to look after the prisoners' needs and comfort until they are released.

The group has organized a branch of International Labor Defense and at their first meeting passed a resolution that reads in part, "We hereby pledge our material and moral support to Comrades Crouch and Trumbull who are being persecuted by the American imperialists solely for their Communist ideas and principles. We hereby protest against the "justice" meted out by Wall Street which is trying to combat and destroy by terrorist means every sign of protest and rebellion in the ranks of the workers. We call upon every class conscious worker to join us in our protest and demand the immediate release of Comrades Crouch and Trumbull.

"We ask the International Labor Defense to establish connections with the two comrades for us and we, on our part, will help them until they are able to join our ranks once more."

In a letter of thanks for their offer, James P. Cannon, secretary of International Labor Defense, replied to the young workers: "This action of yours has great significance since it demonstrates the close bonds of solidarity between our organization of working class youth in New York City with the brave and noble young soldiers who have been victimised by the military authorities because they spoke out for the same principles in the army which you are espousing among the exploited workers in the shops."

Sept. 13 Defense Day.

The proposal of the young people comes at a time when International Labor Defense is making preparation for an extensive campaign thruout the whole labor movement to arouse new interest in labor's prisoners and bring them aid and comfort. Sunday, Sept. 13 has been set aside as "Labor Defense Day." On this day local conferences of workers' organizations will be held in all the large centers of the country to establish permanent local organizations of the I. L. D. These conferences will be followed by mass meetings at which prominent labor speakers will appear.

As an important part of this nation-wide campaign for renewed interest in class war prisoners, International Labor Defense will ask workers' organizations to take over the special care of one or a group of America's scores of class war prisoners.

supposed "scientific" expedition was bogus, that their credentials were forged, and that in reality, they plotted to kill Soviet leaders, and to cause trouble between the Soviet and German governments.

Wolscht a Strikebreaker.

The accused Kindermann, a mixture of unashamed insolence and base cowardice, attempted unceasingly to sabotage the proceedings and to bluff the court by affected naivete and phantastic statements when the facts were presented that had been established by the examination. Already on the fourth day of the proceedings it was clear that the scientific expedition was purely a cover for terroristic intents, the same applies to the relations to the Communist movement in Germany.

Despite the continual sabotage on the part of Kindermann and Wolscht, the court took no measures against the accused. The German social democrats who howl so loudly about the "terror" in Russia, should compare the methods of the Supreme Revolutionary Court of the Soviet Union with those of the Supreme State Court in Leipzig. If the Communists in Leipzig were to take up the attitude which the fascists adopted in Moscow, then the proceedings would probably been carried on without them.

In the seventh session the hearing of Wolscht took place. The latter who involved himself in endless contradictions, did his utmost to sabotage the proceedings by giving deliberately confusing and evasive answers. In the beginning of the hearing Wolscht speaks of the student organization "Hilfsdienst" (Aid Service) of which he was a member during the war years. To the question of the Prosecutor, whether this organization was a strike-breaking organization, the accused refused to give a definite answer.

He explained that the "Hilfsdienst" supplied labor power "where it did not otherwise exist." The accused worked for six months as a member of the "Hilfsdienst" in a factory for the utilization of oak leaves for bakeries. To the question of the Prosecutor, had he at this time received a full allowance from his father, Wolscht answered in the affirmative.

To the question of the Prosecutor, for what purpose had he worked as a volunteer in the large agricultural undertaking of Falkenstein and Friedeberg near Neumark, the accused answered: "For reasons of study." But when the Prosecutor pointed to the contradiction with his philisophical university studies, the accused said: "To earn money during the holidays" by which he once again contradicted his statement with regard to the volunteer work.

Belonged to Monarchist Groups.

Wolscht persistently evaded the questions of the Prosecutor as to the character of his work on the estates. cal work, then that he was learning practical agricultural questions, finally he admitted that he had only worked as an overseer. He declared that when he travelled from Berlin to his home town, Boppert, at Christmas, 1925, as a student of the high school, he feared the reprisals of the occupation authorities and therefore he made a request at his district police station to enter "carpenter" in his credentials instead of student.

Further, Wolscht spoke in detail of the student corporation "Neomarchia" of which he was a member in 1922 and 1923. He spoke also of the other German student corporations. Some of the statements of Wolscht on the customs of the corporations, in particular upon the drinking bouts and social affairs, which the Prosecutor illustrated by photographs in which the accused recognized himself, produced peals of laughter. According to the old German custom Wolscht explained, very much beer was drunk. To a question upon the political tendencies of the corporation, the accused answered, that most of the connections had a nationalist and Aryan character.

Whilst he declared at first that his corporation, the "Neomarchia", had never had a definite political color, a few minutes later he admitted that towards the end of the summer term 1923, a definite monarchist and anti-Semitic spirit controlled the "Neomarchia" which in consequence of the various political shades led to a split. When the accused was questioned upon his political opinion at that time, one contradictory answer followed upon the other. At first Wolscht declared that he had no political convictions at all, but merely economic political views, as before his entry into political life he wished to study national economy.

Knew Nothing of Communism.

Peculiarly enough, the questions of the Prosecutor relating to the attitude of the accused towards the occupation of the Ruhr, caused him the greatest embarrassment. At first he declared that he had adopted a negative attitude and that he had not intereted himself in it. To the definite question of the Prosecutor had he been in favor of the withdrawal of the troops of occupation from the Ruhr district, the accused said that he would not affirm that.

The Prosecutor explained that in the Soviet Union people were generally in favor of the right of self-determination for all peoples in the choice of the state form, and that they were further against the robbery of foreign districts. Wolscht declared that he had not had the opportunity of fighting against the occupation of the Ruhr and that he cannot now say what attitude he would have adopted had he had such an opportunity. (The accused was obviously in the greatest possible embarrassment.) To the question, what political party does he know, Wolscht declared that he only knows the Deutesh Volkische Party (extreme German Nationalist) by name.

In consequence of material need, he had not been able to occupy himself with party politics. He withdrew the statement which he made in the preliminary examination to the ffect that he had been a member of the Communist Party of Germany since March, 1923. He refused to give any explanation for his change of attitude and stressed further that he had never been a member of the C. P. G.

Suddenly he declared: "I have, however, sympathized with the Communists, particularly after I had the opportunity during the inflation period to move in working class circles and to see the depth of misery of the working class when I recog[illegible] [illegible]minality towards the people of the stock exchange speculators."

He had no acquaintance with socialist and Communist literature. The Prosecutor compared this declaration of the accused that he had absolutely no political opinions with the statements in the preliminary examination according to which he had come to Communism thru his acquaintance with Communist literature. Wolscht explained that he had only meant this in a scientific sense. To the question of the Prosecutor, had he ever voted for the Communists, the accused replied in the affirmative, namely in the election for the student parliament in the Berlin university.

The accused declared that he had voted for the Communists as he was opposed to the reactionary measures of Rector Rother who had prohibited needy students from working apart from their university studies. To the question of the Prosecutor, had he once received a certain Fuenther, the accused replied in the negative, whereupon the Prosecutor pointed out that in the preliminary examination he had replied to a question, had the Geunther envolved in the Rathenau murder, ever been to him, with "perhaps".

Entered C. P. G. As Spy.

To the question, had he been in connection with a certain Frau Alice Bauer in Berlin, Kindermann replied in the affirmative and admitted the authenticity of a letter to her "young students, no braggarts, who would take part in the reconstruction of Germany". The embarrassed Kindermann explained this by saying that the 55 year old lady liked young people around her, and supplied them with dinners.

Having regard to the departure of Kindermann to Siberia, the old lady wished to look around for a successor. She liked young people, said Kindermann, and had sound German opinions (laughter). Wolscht declared that he had made the acquaintance of Kindermann thru his friend of many years' standing, Fink. For the purpose of simplifying the journey to Russia it was agreed with Kindermann that the entry into the Communist Party of Germany was necessary.

To the question of the Prosecutor, had he represented himself to be a Communist, Wolschts returned the most contradictory answers. At first he negatived the question definitely, but after the prosecutor had reminded him that he had continually represented himself as a member of the Coblenz district group of the C. P. G., he explained that he saw himself in the position to represent himself as a Communist, particularly from the economic point of view. Hereupon the various fraudulent plans for the journey were read, which contradict one another in the most obvious fashion, but which are all signed by all three accused.

Communists Expose Swindle.

The declaration of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Germany was read:

1. In the summer of 1924 (July-August) on the occasion of a forthnight's stay with his parents in Durlach (Baden), Dr. Karl Kindermann came with his father, Hermann, to a leading official of our district group there. He requested admission into the party. The reason given was that Dr. Karl Kindermann wished to make a political carrier and for this purpose he intended to undertake a journey to Russia for study. His entering into the C. P. G. took place in August, 1924. Everything that Karl Kindermann says about his party membership before this time is swindle. The Central Committee of the C. P. G. definitely declares that Karl Kindermann was unknown both in Durlack and in Berlin and that he did not make his presence felt in any way to the benefit of the party. Further, all the attempt of Herman Kindermann in favor of his son's defense after his arrest, have been made only with the assistance of the at that time district group leader, Vallentin Michler, who stood in the relation of employe to Herman Kindermann and stands in that relation today.

The other officials of the district group were arbitrarily ignored. All letters of this district group leader in Durlach were composed together with Hermann Kindermann and sent off without the knowledge of the other officials. The district leadership in Baden upon the basis of these facts has expelled Michlar from the party.

2. Maxim Dittmar joined the C. P. G. in August, 1924, in order to undertake a "journey of study" to Russia. Officially he was a member of the Berlin organisation of the C. P. G. (first organizational districts, since August, 1924, he has, however, never been active in a Communist sense. Our investigations have, in fact, resulted in establishing the contrary: (1) Dittmar was employed by the brass works in Villingen and played a leading role there in the district group of the Young German Order. (2) Dittmar worked closely together with the chief of the workers mentioned, son in law of Admiral Scheer, for the Organizational Consul.

3. Wolscht is quite unknown to the Party and has never been a member of it.

POLISH VICTIMS TORTURED ANEW BY TERRORISTS

Peasant Given Death for Protesting

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., August 19.—The Polish government is inflicting new cruelties on the class war prisoners, simultaneously with the resumption of the conferences of the joint commission to discuss conflicts on the Soviet-Polish border.

Two hundred prisoners of the Lutsky prison have gone on a hunger strike because of severe beatings administered to political prisoners and the subsequent death of one of them. The political prisoners had been on a hunger strike for three days, when the Polish white terror guards again beat them and chained them in dungeons.

In Bialystock, 120 paraders carrying Red flags and mottoes against the white terror government were arrested. One peasant was sentenced to death.

Metal Polishers Want Help.

Trade union shoppers in St. Louis can greatly assist the Chicago Metal Polishers' Union if they will bear in mind that the Super Maid aluminum products are unfair, says business agent John Werlik. The Advance Aluminum & Foundry Co., which makes the Super Maid kitchen utensils and other goods, refuses to reinstate four union men who were fired when they told company managers in reply to a question that they preferred a union shop. Super Maid products are said to have their largest market in St. Louis.

SOVIET TRADE WILL INCREASE, SAYS BANKER

Conferred on Sale of Cotton in Moscow

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., August 19.—Reeve Schley, vice-president of the Chase National Bank of New York, has left for Warsaw after two weeks of business conferences in the Soviet Union. Schley was in Moscow discussing the financing of Soviet purchases of raw cotton in the United States with George Tchitcherin, Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, and M. Frunkin, acting commissar of foreign trade.

He was accompanied by Lamar Fleming, cotton dealer of Houston, Texas, and Alex Gumberg of New York, treasurer and general manager of the All-Russian textile syndicate.

Schley said of his visit:

"I am tremendously impressed with the possibilities of the country and also the activity I have seen working. This assures economic improvement. Russian business men are greatly interested in American industry and especially in cotton and agricultural machinery.

"I had a cordial reception in all the establishments I visited and received all the information I asked for. I believe that new and stable business relations between the United States and Russia are possible and that anybody who comes here to inspect the field will be so convinced."

18,000 MELONS BRING FARMERS SEVEN DOLLARS

Hear Story of the Chinese Struggle

FALLON, Nevada, August 19.—The California Tin-Lizzie Rattlers rattled into town on schedule and held a successful "Hands-off-China" meeting. After the address on China a number of Workers Monthlies were sold, and much interest manifested in the Communist position towards the struggle of the Chinese workers and peasants for freedom from foreign exploitation.

There are excellent prospects for the organization soon of a good Communist group here. The town is the center of a government reclamation project. The settlers are largely oldtime radicals. A good example of the economic conditions which have forced these farmers to give ear to the Communist program is the following:

Last year one of the farmers shipped 900 crates of the finest melons to the Chicago Market and for the net results of the Seasons' labor spent by himself and his family in cultivation, they received the magnificent sum of $7.00. As there were 20 melons to the crate, these 18,000 melons thus returned the farmer an average of one twenty-fifth of a cent each. This year, the farmer planted no melons.

The farmers here seem to realize that the Communist position regarding an alliance of the working farmers and the industrial workers for the overthrow of the capitalist system is the only way out for them.

SOCIALIST BOSS WITH COMMUNIST WORKERS—T. N. T.

Petty Bourgeois to Core Is Abe Suall

(From a Worker Correspondent.)

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 19—"Who in 'ell gave you permission to quit anyway? Just for that I won't pay you!"

For a year Sam Watsky had been working for Abe Suall, as a salesman and general utility man in his store at 93 Orchard street, this city. Salary, $12. He started with $12 until he advanced to all of $16 per week. Hours? All hours, with the eleven hours from 9:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m., during the slow season and no definite hours during the holidays or Saturdays and no extra pay for overtime and Sundays.

One of Sam's duties was bowing his head and taking "hell" silently from boss Abe and his family such as the wife and father-in-law when ever anything went wrong in the business. The less Sam was at fault the more violent boss Abe would grow until a common scold was a cooing dove by comparison.

The thing that most provoked the wrath of his petty bourgeoisie socialist soul was the fact of Sam's being a member of the Young Workers' League. And never did he miss a chance to expose the young rebel before salesmen and fellow tradesmen. Of late he grew particularly obnoxious in his practice, as the struggle was sharpening between the needle trades unions and the "Forward" and International machine.

The DAILY WORKER became taboo in the store. Sam mustn't bring "that Communist paper" into a socialist store. Things become unbearable. Sam refused to be the butt of boss Abe's persecutions any longer and he just quit. With the result that the boss refuses to pay him his salary for the last week's labor.

The above described is typical of conditions prevailing in most petty business. There the bosses are themselves often members of the S. P. and ruthlessly exploit and abuse their one or two employes. These workers are completely at the mercy of their bosses, since there is no organisation, nor an attempt at any among these lowly paid wage slaves.

If you want to see the Communist movement grow—get a sub for the DAILY WORKER.

Political Activities.—Although the Russian Trade Unions as organizations are now no longer part of the Soviet Government, yet it would be a great mistake to suppose that their position in Russia is no more important and influential than elsewhere.

In Russia the workers are the ultimate owners and rulers of industry, and though they have given the conduct of it to business managements, yet they retain the control. Representatives of the unions sit, not only on all the Councils that control industry, but on all the Councils of the Soviet Government. For example, on the Presidium of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee, which is one of the chief organs of the Government, there are five Trade Union representatives out of 13 members. There is one such representative on the Council of People's Commissaries, and on the Lesser Council of People's Commissaries, which deals with the drafting of legislation, there is another. There is also one on the very important Council of Labor and Defense and another on the principal committee of the Foreign Trade Commissariat. On the State Planning Commission (Gosplan), there are three and others in the Special Sections. There is also a Trade Union representative on the Presidium of the Supreme Economic Council, the Industrial Planning Commission, the Building Planning Commission, the Electrification Commission, the Fuel Commission, the Concessions Committee, etc. In fact, the Trade Unions are entrusted with carrying out one of the safeguards against any undue surrender of the right of the workers to rule. This safeguard is the setting of a worker to keep an eye from the inside on the way that any enterprise or establishment, public or private, is being carried on. The object of this is, not only to train the worker in technicalities, but also to check any use of the enterprise against the new ruling class. Thus a Trade Union representative will in future be attached to every Foreign Mission, and another is assigned to every bank.

When it is pointed out that a man taken out of a factory cannot be any possible use in discovering or discomfiting the operations of a financier, the answer is somewhat as follows: We do not put an expert into the bank because, in the first place, we haven't enough. In the second place, if we did, one of two things would happen, either the expert would be bought up, or he would run the bank. The worker won't interfere with the banker who never worries about him. But if he is capable of catching on at all, which we soon find out, he will, if there is anything wrong, in the end catch out the banker in some small point, and call in an expert.

(c) Social Activities.—The object of the Soviet system, and of the Trade Unions as a social organ within it, is to secure the fullest possible liberty and the fullest possible life to the individual worker, and to equip him by education and environment for the full enjoyment of his new advantages.

It is noticeable, and indeed natural, that the Soviet system attains its objects in this respect most completely when it works through the Trade Union organization and least where the Trade Unions are weakest, as in the villages.

To the 5,500,000 members of the Russian Trade Unions and their families, the Soviet system has brought a new life and a new liberty. Thus a Sovietist worker is not only free to follow any trade he may select, but he is better able than anywhere else to train himself for rising in his own job from one category to another, right up to the class of highly-paid specialists. Should he have been pitchforked by circumstances into a trade for which he has no taste, he has no difficulty in getting training for another. In either case as member of a ruling class he can get training in the technicalities of Government and become a public man, subject to being returned to his trade if found not good enough.

The Delegation interviewed many workers who, by taking advantage of these opportunities, had risen in the space of three years from a low category of worker to one far higher. For example, a factory sweeper who had become a scene painter, and a foundry laborer who was planning model dwellings and garden cities and had won first prize in open competition. Again, in Leningrad and many provincial capitals visited there were local workers' theatres, of which both management and actors were factory hands on special leave from their trades. The best of them would become permanently professional actors. The same process is at work in other professions; while the precaution above-mentioned of detailing workers to supervise industrial, commercial, and financial enterprises gives almost endless opportunities for workers to enter public employment or make themselves experts. For these opportunities they are prepared in the Trade Union Schools and "Rabfacs"; and this process of constantly providing new blood to give fresh life to the State and society is supervised and supported by the Trade Unions.

Communists claim that the possibilities of a larger life thus opened to the worker prevent the discontent and demoralization otherwise caused by the drudgery of factory life; that the slave of the industrial machine, bound to its wheels by family ties, has been changed into a worker either happy in his own trade or with good hopes of rising out of it; and that in either case his production is better both in quality and quantity.

The Delegation certainly found no discontent among the workers and employes, but plenty of it among those who had been unwilling or unable to fit into the new methods.

Workers' Clubs

(a) Activities.—The Workers' Clubs in the factories are the chief organization through which the Trade Unions carry out their educational and social work.

These clubs were one of the first results of the Revolution and their work has gradually been organized by the unions along definite lines. One of the most important functions is teaching the worker and peasant to read and write, this being the first step towards any training of his civic conscience or his class consciousness. That done he can be further equipped either for enjoying his life, his trade, or for being employed on more important work. The clubs are also very influential in the campaigns of Communism for cleanliness and clean living. In fact, the clubs play the same part for the adult worker as the schools do for the children.

Lectures and discussions in the clubs deal with the political, industrial, economic and social life of the worker. During March, 1923, the last month for which statistics were obtainable, 4,624 lectures were given throughout Soviet Russia and attended by 861,120 people; during that month, 5,962 plays were arranged and 1,921 concerts and social evenings which included mass choirs and physical culture displays, at which the total attendance reached over 3,000,000 workers and their families. Since that date, nearly two years ago, the number of clubs has more than doubled; in 1924, they had already reached the figure of 2,400 with a membership of over 1,000,000.

The club privileges are one of the main inducements for Trade Union membership. Thus a certain number of free tickets to State theatres and picture houses are allotted to these clubs each week. In Moscow and Leningrad alone, these free tickets amount to from 200,000 to 300,000 a month. Moreover, during 1923, 2,575 excursions into the country to visit places of interest and museums were made by 240,375 members of the Moscow Trade Union Club alone.

All clubs are run, staffed and decorated by the members themselves. Club activities are arranged by the committee who elect sub-committees for each circle, as it is called. For instance, there are dramatic, musical, art, literary, sport, chess and study circles, each having its own committees and arranging competitions with other clubs.

Swedish drill is a special feature of all clubs. In Moscow alone there are now 39,000 physical culture circles and it is reckoned that there are over 100,000 such circles in the whole organization. These circles include in their program all matters dealing with body culture and hygiene.

There are special refreshment rooms, rest and reading rooms, in most clubs. All clubs have a good library. Portable libraries issued from the large centers are in constant circulation to smaller factories and villages which have no club. In 1923, it was reckoned that these Trade Union libraries already possessed over 3,000,000 volumes.

(b) Finance.—These clubs are supported by:—

(1) Membership fees and contributions. (The fee for membership varies from 10 kopecks to 50 kopecks a month according to the income or category of the member.)

(2) Ten per cent. of the total membership fees of the Trade Union to which the club belongs.

(3) One per cent. of the total sum paid in wages by the factory or group of factories to which the club is attached.

(4) Three-fourths per cent. of the turnover total of the factory or district co-operatives.

(5) State subsidy, if required, through the A. R. C. T. U. from the Commissariat of Education.

(c) Membership.—Trade Union clubs are divided into two categories—Central or regional clubs and factory clubs. The central or regional clubs are to be found generally in the towns. Any worker in the district may join by paying a subscription, irrespective of the Trade Union to which he belongs. The factory clubs are for the use of the workers of that particular factory or Trade Union and any member of the union may use the club, though only subscribers have a vote and other privileges.

(d) Red Corners.—In small factories where the funds do not allow of a separate club the workers may join a neighboring club, but in such cases there is always a "Lenin" or "Red Corner." These "Lenin Corners" are found in almost every factory or its club and usually consist of a small room decorated in red, where pictures of Lenin and books of his numerous writings are displayed. These rooms are used as reading rooms, for quiet study and, where no club exists, for purposes of elementary education and political propaganda. In 1924, there were 2,000 such "Red Corners" established in villages and workshops which had no clubs.

(e) Industrial Exhibitions.—In order to promote technical industrial education, exhibitions of manufactures and machinery, with explanations of power, plant and finance are being arranged in such large works as are suitably equipped. Thirty such exhibitions are already running and it is hoped to organize another 112 this year. Thus a worker in a small or out-of-date workshop may learn how his work will be done under up-to-date conditions and with the best machinery.

(f) Work among Women and Youths.—Special arrangements are made for women and youths, and, in cases where no State school is yet available, children. The education of these women and youths of both sexes begins with questions of health hygiene and cleanliness in the home, and is continued by various stages to general and political questions. Both women and men are encouraged to look upon illiteracy as a sign of inferiority.

(g) Young Pioneers.—Girls and boys over the age of 12 and up to 17 years are organized in what are called Young Pioneer detachments. This movement, based on that of the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, seems in every way admirable. It has no militarist element but aims at creating a civic conscience and class consciousness on Collectivist lines. The children brought up under it might be considered by us precocious; but they appear to be extremely happy, are well cared for, are careful of their persons and proud of their corps traditions. Their moral tone is high, and their influence among other school children is all for the good. This "Young Pioneer" movement is considered by the Communist Party to be of the greatest political importance. It was organized at the end of 1922 when 4,000 children were enrolled; by the end of 1923, over 200,000 had enlisted. On outgrowing the corps, both youths and girls can become Young Communists, and then Communist candidates, and eventually, if found worthy, full-blown Communists.

(h) Trade Union Press.—The Trade Union Press is of considerable importance, and its newspapers have a considerable influence among the workers. The whole organization is run by the workers themselves, although it stands apart from the State Press. It is, however, bound by the same rules and regulations, and is under the authority of the Ministry of Education. It deals mostly with industrial and local problems.

Daily and weekly newspapers and journals are issued by the larger Provincial Trade Union Councils and by the Central Executive Committee. In all, there are 69 such newspapers, with an aggregate daily circulation of 1,267,000. Apart from these there are 33 monthly journals and 34 periodicals issued by the Central Executive from time to time.

The Trade Unions have lately established their own book-publishing departments in various centers. Books on the Trade Union movement are published in Russian and in the languages of the Republics. One hundred and forty-two books of a total of over 1,000,000 copies have thus been published.

Journalists for the Trade Union Press are drawn from the clubs on their contributions to the "Wall Papers," mentioned in the first section of the report. These "Wall Papers" now number over 4,000.

(i) Higher Educational Facilities and Art Classes.—By means of special classes and lectures, the minor Trade Union officials are trained for more responsible posts. There is a four months' course of evening classes and also a permanent course of two years to prepare students for the higher Trade Union courses at the Sverdlov State University.

The Education Department of the Trade Unions has lately acquired at the cost of 83,000 roubles many objects of art, such as pictures, statues, etc., for their Club Art Schools, which prepare students for higher courses at the Universities or elsewhere. During 1923, 175,751 pupils were drafted into the higher courses at various universities, technical colleges and institutions.

The percentage of industrial workers in these Trade Union clubs and their schools is 64; agricultural workers 28, and apprentices, 8.

In order to spread this movement among the agricultural workers these clubs have now organized what are termed patronage committees. The club then becomes the patron of a certain district or village.

Excursions are organized to visit the peasants; newspapers and books are sent to them and, where possible, a village club organized, of which the members correspond with and visit the parent club when possible.

By the beginning of 1924, 2,500 of these Trade Union clubs had been established in 62 out of 100 Provinces in the Union, of which 525 were central or regional clubs. The total membership was over 1,000,000.

General Conclusion

The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system. Being largely freed from their main function elsewhere of protecting the workers against exploitation by the wealthy, and of preventing the public service of the workers from being prejudiced for private profit, the Trade Unions have been able to engage in educating the workers as citizens and rulers.

CHAPTER II

Labor Regulation

Conscription.—Compulsory labor was introduced in the constitution of 1918, and was at first only partly enforced in practice. But the flight of the town workers to the villages from food scarcity in the towns and from recruiting for the "war fronts," caused a general mobilization of labor in a decree of Jan. 29, 1920. Thereafter labor was for a short time conscripted. The Commissariat of Labor distributed it without any more regard to individual capacity or wishes of the worker than if he were a soldier. Indeed, sections of the Red Army were used for production. These measures were caused by the crying need of food, fuel and fighting men, but the results were very bad. The work of the Labor Army was largely wasted and their strength exhausted in useless enterprises. Great distress and many deaths were caused by bad organization. Indeed, the absurdities and abuses of the experiment which have been exposed in Russian official publications were one of the main causes of the conflict with the peasantry and the introduction of the New Economic Policy a year later in March, 1921.

The New Economic Policy soon effected a complete change in the conditions of labor. At the height of Communism in 1920 the worker was practically a conscript in an industrial army. He received his rations irrespective of his services. He was given his job without respect to his own wishes or capabilities. He was not allowed to do anything else, and he did in consequence as little as he could. Labor was a matter partly of conscience, partly of coercion. Now it is again as elsewhere a commodity of which the value is ruled by supply and demand and regulated by social legislation.

STRIKE 35 SHOPS OF FLOWER AND FEATHER BOSSES

Terribly Exploited Workers Rebel

NEW YORK CITY, August 19—One thousand flower and feather workers of New York City are on strike in 35 shops for the recognition of their union and for certain improvements of conditions in th eindustry. The demands of the workers are: (1) Recognition of the union. (2) 44 hour week. (3) 25 per cent increase in wages. (4) Time and a half for overtime. (5) Equal division of work during slack seasons.

The flower and feather trade is notorious for the intensive exploitation of its workers. At present the working week runs as high as 58 hours in some shops. Many concerns employ home workers, including women and children at starvation wages. In this connection it is worthy of note that one of the leading opponents of the child labor amendment in this state was the president of the millinery manufacturers' association.

Of the 8,000 workers in the trade, the greatest part are women working for an average wage of $18 or $20 per week. The trade is highly seasonal and does not cover more than seven or eight months a year. The hazards of the industry are also very high owing to the danger from lead poisoning and the general unsanitary conditions in the shops.

A number of unsuccessful attempts to unionize that industry have been made in the past. The failure of these attempts is one of the reasons for the deplorable conditions prevailing in the flower and feather industry. But this time the workers are determined to secure recognition of their organization and wage a courageous fight for better conditions. The workers are still waiting for a response from the American Federation of Labor in reply to their appeal for assistance against the millinery bosses.

The Growth of the Left Wing in the Trade Unions and Our Problems Within It

By B. BORISOFF.

The article printed below was first presented to the DAILY WORKER some time in April, 1925.

The article is true to the line of the Comintern. It deals with the problem of broadening the basis of the left wing movement in the trade unions, of unifying ideologically and organizationally the struggles of the advanced workers in the trade unions against their reactionary bureaucracy. This is a key to the successful application of the United Front tactics. The article proposes a method of approach to the solution of the problem—the preparation of local conferences and finally of a national conference of the left wing.

This problem must be clarified. It deserves a thoro discussion and not suppression. Today (August 14, 1925) we read in the DAILY WORKER in the Letter from the Comintern and Profintern to our Workers (Communist) Party on the Trade Union Work:

"The party must strive to convert the League (the Trade Union Educational League—B) into an extensive left block organization, lining up all the revolutionary and progressive elements in the labor unions against the reactionary bureaucracy."

How to do it is the question which the party must strive to solve.—Borisoff.

The left wing of the trade union movement has manifested rapid and considerable growth during the past six months. To prove this it is sufficient to recall that over 60,000 unions voted for Vosey—the Communist candidate—for the office of the president of the United Mine Workers of America; that the progressive slate in the elections of the machinists' union apparently received a majority of the votes; that in Seattle, Chicago, and other places, where expulsions of Communists from trade unions took place the rank and file members of the unions gave their most energetic support to the expelled, compelling, in some instances, the trade union bureaucracy to retreat.

We are faced ,therefore, with a revolt of the rank and file of some of the largest unions against their bureaucracy, and everywhere the Communists furnish the ideologic leadership of this movement.

What causes this mass insurgency against the trade union bureaucracy? It is explained by the newly organized attack of the capitalists against the workers: by their attempt to break the trade unions, to cut the wages and to lengthen the hours of labor of the workers. It is explained by the fact that the trade union bureaucracy not only fails to offer any resistance against this attack, but, on the contrary, forms an alliance with the exploiters against the workers, formulates plans for class collaboration, consents to the intensification of exploitation, and to the lowering of the working conditions.

This betrayal of the interests of the workers by the trade union bureaucracy is committed so openly and shamelessly that only the most backward workers fail to perceive it. Such are the objective conditions causing the growth of the left wing movement in the trade unions at the present time, and these conditions will be still more accentuated in the near future.

The American bourgeoisie, striving to reduce the American worker to the level of the cheap labor of Europe and of the colonies, will inevitably intensify its attack. As the class struggle will sharpen the betrayal of the trade union bureaucracy will become apparent to even a greater number of workers. A further growth of the left wing movement is therefore to be expected.

The growth of this movement, the strengthening of Communist influence in the trade unions places before the Workers Party new and important problems. First of all in respect of organization. Up till now the left wing movement was not actually united on a national scale. It was developing within the frames of separate trade, industry, city or district. But even within these comparatively narrow frames, the organization is weak and loose.

It does not embrace any considerable numbers of advanced workers, but only the Communists and their closest sympathizers. The left wing movement has, however, outgrown this stage; it has become a mass movement and furnishes a basis not only for the strengthening of the local trade and industrial organizations of the left wing and for the rallying around the slogans of the Workers Party of the wide masses of advanced workers, but also for the organizational crystallization of the movement ON A NATIONAL SCALE. A means of accomplishing this is the calling of a NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF THE LEFT WING of the American trade union movement, similar to the conferences of the European movements.

The Conference of the Left Wing will also be a step towards the attainment of the ideological unity of the left wing movement of the trade unions, without which there can be no organizational unity.

The left wing movement is permeated as yet by a craft ideology. The miners, the metal workers, the building trades workers, and others, while fighting separately against the betrayal of their respective trade union bureaucracy, do not understand yet the community of interests of all the advanced workers in various industries in such a struggle. They do not understand yet sufficiently the role of the entire trade union bureaucracy, its role as the "labor lieutenants" of the capitalist class who help to perpetuate its domination. There is but a weak and vague understanding of the necessity to struggle for the possession of political power as the only means for the complete liberation of the working class.

The struggle of the left wing is yet almost purely a trade-union struggle. While the programs of the various sections of the movement may contain political slogans. These are but of secondary importance to the workers. This is shown by the fact that while the trade union slogans and programs of the Workers Party find support of the broad masses of organized workers, the distinctly political campaigns of the party do not meet with such a broad support. Such a condition is natural for the present stage of political consciousness of the American workers. The Workers Party must, however, strive to overcome it.

The organizational and ideological unification of the left wing will stimulate the growth of political consciousness among the workers and will strengthen the political leadership of the party in their ranks.

The National Conference of the Left Wing will formulate a program of action, slogans of struggle a United Front program for the labor movement of America.

With the organizational and ideological unification of the left wing the United Front campaign of the Workers Party will for the first time have a firm basis.

The preparation of the National Conference of the Left Wing of the trade union movement signifies the intensification of our work locally, our getting in contact with broader masses of advanced workers and the performance of a great work of their class education. Local conferences will have to be prepared and called. This will result in the creation of real local centers of the left wing movement, the rallying of wider masses of workers around them.

The National Conference of the Left Wing of the trade union movement will be a milestone in the development of the American labor movement. It will be the test of the influence of the Workers Party, without making which it is difficult to advance. It will facilitate the drawing into the party of the most revolutionary elements of the labor movement.

To delay the agitation for such a conference would be an error. The ever growing offensive of the capitalist class demands the unification of all the live forces of the labor movement.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

They Never Came Out Again.

When I lived in a little mining town, one day the miners went out on strike. They demanded repairs be made in the mines to protect their lives. In this mine the workers were in constant fear that the walls would crash in and they would be killed. Every day when the men went into the mines they carried with them the thot that they might be drowned by the rushing water.

Their leader delivered their message to the manager who said he would telegraph the boss who lived in New York. The boss answered that the mines were alright and if the men did not like it they could go—he would get others to take their place.

They went back again into the mines many feet below the ground. But not to toil long for the inevitable happened. The shaft broke, water came rushing in from both sides. Only two men from that whole mine ever came out again.

The widows and orphaned children! Imagine how they felt as they stood in front of that mine and heard that their father will never come out again!

And why? Just because the workers tolerate a government that lets one greedy hog endanger the lives of so many poor workers. Just because the workers tolerate a system that makes it possible for one man to get rich from the hard toil of others.

But, Juniors, that shall not go on always. We will rise against this boss rule and rid ourselves of it forever. We, the children of the working class of America, will not rest until we change this government and replace it with a workers' and farmers' government just as the workers and peasants have done in Soviet Russia.

Long live the Workers' and Peasants' Government of the U. S. S. R.!

Long live the Communist International!

BUILDERS AT WORK

Little Things for Big Accomplishments

GET THE HABIT!

This letter from a worker who knows the value of developing propagandists may give you an idea or two. Read it:

Dear Comrades:

The other day you ran a notice of a worker in a Ford factory who told how he got subs for the DAILY WORKER and then asked them to buy a pamphlet.

This comrade has the right idea. A few thousand more propagandists like these and Communism would be a much bigger force in this country.

I have developed a habit of carrying a little book or two with me at all times. This habit made me discover that more often than not I could sell a pamphlet for a dime when the worker could not afford a sub to the DAILY WORKER.

I found that the Little Red Library books are just the thing a propagandist needs. They sell without any trouble at all and all I ask is for the sake of Communism rush some more new numbers. Only be careful that the new ones are as good as the first four.

Yours for a bigger army of propagandists,

JACK LINKOWSKI.

We print this comrade's letter to show what workers are doing for Communism. These are simple things—but they are the kind of things that are sure to build the Communist movement. And the most promising sight is the increasing number of letters (and orders for books and pamphlets) that show a growing army of real Comunist Builders.

If you have also some ideas on propaganda—if you also bring the Communist message to other workers thru the medium of the DAILY WORKER and books and pamphlets—tell the DAILY WORKER about it. Write a letter to this column about the way you do it.

Advance Notice!

For the attention of this Builder and others who have found the Little Red Library such a great little propaganda medium we are glad to announce that within the next ten days to two weeks number five of the Little Red Library will appear. Again there will be something new in this number—something never before issued by the movement. It will be a collection of working class poetry—real working class verse—and real inspiration in the struggle. POEMS FOR WORKERS—An Antology—edited by Manuel Gomez will be ready soon. You can order now!

"Empress of Russia" Passengers Tell Hard Luck Story of China

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 19.—In spite of fourteen Canadian Pacific railway police and instructions given the crew, a Communist visited the C. P. R. liner Empress of Russia and gathered a little news.

The vessel left Hong Kong with a skeleton crew and took on a Japanese crew at Kobe. They did not call at Shanghai wharves as usual, but laid in the offing and waited for the mail to be brot off in junks—so the harbor strike was apparently tight as a drum.

Warships to the number of 27 were lying in the Yangtze river, including American, British, Japanese, French and Italian.

There were only about 70 passengers on the liner and very little cargo, principally picked up at Japanese ports. One influential passenger on being approached and questioned on the situation of foreigners in China said: "Bad, bad, bad, bad, for among other trials they have to do their own domestic work and take their own babies out for airing."

WHY?

"Because, under capitalism, there are two great classes, the working class and the capitalist class. The capitalist class takes profit from the labor of the industrial wage workers and poor farmers of over half the values such labor produces. This robbery is legalized by capitalist law, explained as natural and 'right' by capitalist press and preachers and enforced by strikebreaking police and soldiers under the capitalist dictatorship.

"Their profits pile ever higher into the hands of a few big monopolies like the Morgan banks. It is so large it cannot all be invested, at the highest returns, in this country. But if it lies idle it brings in no profit at all. So the capitalists invest in China and other foreign lands."

The above from leaflet: "Hands Off China! Stand by Soviet Russia!" published by the national office, Workers Party. Order a supply for free distribution at once. Let us tell the American workers and poor farmers what is taking place in China, etc. Price: $2.00 per 1000. Send order for same to, Workers Party, National Office, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

COSTA RICA LABOR JOINS FIGHT ON IMPERIALISM

Affiliates with Anti-Imperial Body

The Federation of Labor of Costa Rica and the Sugar Cane Workers Union of Costa Rica, an independent organization, have affiliated with the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, the secretary of the league, Manuel Gomez, announced today.

Both organizations will send delegates to the anti-imperialist convention which is tentatively scheduled to meet early next year. The affiliation of the Costa Rican organizations is hailed as significant of the aroused interest of the Latin-American toilers in the question of imperialism.

The idea of the league is spreading thruout Latin America, according to Gomez. The action of the Calles government in refusing the league permission to meet in Mexico City has only served to further advertise the league and its purposes

In addition to the two Costa Rican organizations which have joined up with the league, Gomez announced that the Cuban workers who recently affiliated have now organized a regular section of the league with a dues-paying membership. The Cuban section has been holding large mass meetings thruout the country and has been carrying the league message to the workers in the trade unions An active part of the Cuban section of the league is the student groups which have lent their publication, Juventud, as the unofficial organ of the league. The Cuban activities are under the direction of Julio Antonio Mella, who is acting as secretary of the Cuban section.

The American Council for the Liberation of Santo Domingo, made up of Santo Domingoans in the United States, is also actively interested in the work of the league, altho it is not affiliated with it yet.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(FP)—In big headlines across the top of its front page, the daily newspaper "La Informacion," published at Santiago, Dominican Republic, reports that American marines were prominent in the "Haitian" invasion of the Dominican towns of Commendador and Carrizal, and that American naval airplanes flew in advance of the invading column.

No motive is given by the Dominicans for the invasion of their territory from the Haitian side of the border. The expedition, moving from the hills, seized the two towns and a large district of cultivated country between them, without warning. Word went out that a border dispute had arisen.

However, since the American seisure of both countries in 1915-1916, they have had a common grievance. American military possession of the Dominican Republic ended some months ago.

Dominicans in Washigton believe that the American sugar companies operating in their country may be back of the invasion. Time after time, when small farmers who owned valuable lands near the big sugar plantations have refused to sell out at a low price, they have been driven off by "bandits," who afterward confessed to having been employed by the sugar company managers to commit the crime.

While American forces held the country, great numbers of these native farmers fled from their homes, which were then burned or pulled down, and their lands seized and planted by the companies. Once the actual owners had fled, under threats or attack, they were forced to become casual laborers. The marines looked upon them as "bandits."

The invasion from Haiti is thot to be a warning that the sugar companies are still able to take what they want.

Leave Workers Stranded.

LAQUIN, Pa., Aug. 19.—(FP)—The population of Laquin are wondering where to go since the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Co. has closed its sawmill and announced completion of its lumbering operations in this district. Railroad tracks are being ripped up by the company and the mill is being razed.

Steck Makes Gains.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Registering heavy gains in Lynn and Lee counties, Daniel F. Steck, democrat, has a lead of 4,160 votes over Senator Smith W. Brookhart, in the recount of uncontested ballots in 46 Iowa counties, the senate elections committee announced today.

The total vote was: Steck, 188,686; Brookhart, 184,526. In Lynn county Steck led Brookhart by 2 to 1.

The Zeigler Raid

Twenty-five Zeigler miners, members of the United Mine Workers of America, are either arrested as this article is being written or about to be arrested on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the riot which took place at a recent meeting of the local union when the sub-district officials attempted to force the miners surrender to the operators in the dispute over check weighmen.

Lon Fox, the sub-district president, deposed the officers of the local at the behest of the coal company officials, because they insisted on the men's right to have their coal properly weighed on the scales. The state law calls for exact weighing and the weighman is held responsible. The company was rushing the coal over the scales so fast that the weighman could not perform his duty, so he quit. The miners refused to hoist any more coal until they were guaranteed that the boss would not rob them at the top in addition to robbing them at the bottom.

Fox, who is Farrington's tool, came in backed up by a posse of armed kluxers and ordered the union officials deposed. Over ninety per cent of the union is with the old officers who have been tested and proved true. At the end of the meeting a disturbance took place during which a miner was shot by a member of the ku klux klan. The assassin is under arrest.

Now comes the raid on the active members of the union. According to our present information, those for whom warrants have been issued are supporters of Henry Corbishly, president of the local and the other progressive officials who have been deposed by Farrington's tool, Lon Fox.

The main reason for the arrests is: The miners have refused to return to work until the deposed officials of the local are reinstated. Only members of the K. K. K. who are in alliance with Farrington have signified their willingness to dig coal. Farrington with the aid of Len Small's officials, hopes to break the strike by putting the active members in jail. He also hopes in this way to get rid of the progressive leadership which has been a thorn in his side for a long time.

If the authorities were anxious to punish those who were responsible for the riot, they would arrest Lon Fox and his K. K. K. supporters. The miners thruout southern Illinois are rallying to the support of their Zeigler comrades. Farrington and his henchmen will have another defeat chalked up against them before this incident is disposed of.

Craft Disunity

The workers of the whole world were given a splendid example of the efficacy of industrial solidarity in the recent action of the British trade unions when the miners won a victory over the operators and the government combined. They won because the entire labor movement was behind them. It is true that it required many bitter defeats to drive the lesson home to the British workers. But it has finally sunk in and is there to stay.

When will the American wrokers take this lesson to heart? The lockout of the pressmen and feeders in the Cuneo printing plant is a case in point. While the pressmen and feeders are on the streets, other sections of the allied printing trades are working in the shops. Union teamsters are hauling material to the plant and hauling away the finished product. This is not unionism.

Aside from the scabbery of George L. Berry, the international president of the union, the usual practices of reactionary trade union leaders are scabbing in principle. It is not often, of course, that international officers hire strikebreakers to scab on their own members. But there is no reason why any union man should handle scab goods or assist in any way in getting it to its final destination.

Why should typographical workers, binders, compositors or any other category of workers in the printing trades, stay at work in Cuneo's while the pressmen and feeders are locked out? Why should the electricians and machinists stay at work? The only reason is that trade unionism is sick and feeble. Craft division is taking the guts out of it. There is no cure for this disease except industrial unionism thru amalgamation.

The American trade union movement has a big task ahead of it. It faces a powerful enemy in its capitalist class, the strongest in the world. It is handicapped by an antiquated system of labor organization, that has long ago outlived its usefulness. Before the workers can hope to successfully cope with the exploiting classes it must scrap its outworn trade union machinery and transform the craft unions into industrial unions.

The Empire Is Cracking

Premier Borden of Canada in a speech at the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Mass., declared that each unit of the British empire or what is euphoniously called the "British Commonwealth of Nations," should develop its department of external relations. This means that Canada is about to send an ambassador to Washington to represent the dominion in matters affecting Canada and the United States, and not leave such matters under the jurisdiction of Great Britain as is now the case.

Premier Borden is smooth enough to represent this development as being dictated by the altruistic desire to help the British empire. The rulers of the emprie are not so sanguine.

What is taking place before our eyes is the disintegration of the mightiest empire in history. Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Canada find the leading strings of the "motherland" anything but comfortable. They are shifting for themselves.

On the other hand the Britsih colonies largely peopled by subject races are in the throes of revolt. India and Egypt are only held down by force of arms.

In addition to those troubles abroad, Britain is straddled with a tremendous army of unemployed, numbering over 1,500,000 and a working class movement that is gradually being forced to a point of revolution, thru the failure of capitalism to provide it with the means of living.

Are There Opportunists in the Workers Party?

By P. Green

The Workers Party is going thru an extraordinarily interesting and significant and important period of its existence.

The old factional crisis is clearly nearing its end. The remains of factionalism are still very strong. In connection with the convention we have seen a sharpening of the factional fight, but there is no doubt but that this is the last flare-up of the dying fire. The fact that all the political resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Parity Commission, that there is an agreement in many organizational matters that had divided the factions, proves that in general the old factional crisis is approaching complete liquidation.

But the old crisis has not yet fully disappeared when we see a new and more serious crisis ripening. This time it is a question of a struggle of the Bolshevik wing of the party (or more properly speaking, the wing which is sincerely and earnestly moving toward Bolshevization) and the opportunistic wing which is going to make a very bitter resistance against the reorganization of the party. The old factional walls are broken down, but there are new factional walls being built up between the Bolshevist and the non-Bolshevist or anti-Bolshevist sections of the party.

Nevertheless we hear some comrades say, "There is no opportunism in our party." Comrade Lore himself has declared that he does not know what Loreism is. Comrade Poyntz, (see her resolution introduced in the recent New York membership meeting of our party) is decidedly against Loreism. Comrade Jampolsky and others (see their resolutions introduced at the same meeting) are also against Loreism. The Finnish branch in Superior has proclaimed a crusade against Loreism. Comrade Askeli is going side by side with the Finnish branch in Superior. If all these comrades are opposed to Loreism, the question arises: Where are the Loreites against whom they are going to fight? If we are to believe all these comrades the result is that there is no Loreism in the party.

But we have good grounds for not believing them. More than that, we are completely able to prove that precisely they are Loreites.

No Loreite has ever declared that he is an opportunist. The usual trick of all opportunists is to deny the existance of opportunism. Opportunism is but a malignant invention of slanderers, fabricated only to silence free criticism. Thus speak the opportunists of all countries. Examine the history of the French, German and Russian parties and you will find there hundreds of examples of this tactic on the part of opportunists.

Clumsy Opportunism.

But the opportunists are not content with this trick—they are going much further. They declare that precisely they are the most genuine representatives of Marxism and Leninism, that they are in full agreement with the C. I., that they are merely in disagreement with their own party. In some parties such a substitution of opportunism for Leninism is made very skillfully (Trotsky in the Russian Communist Party); in other parties not so skillfully (Brandler and Radek in the German Party; Smeral and Neurath in the Czecho-Slovakian Party; Simon Markovich in the South Slavic Party) and in the Workers Party this substitution is made in a ridiculously clumsy fashion.

In any event, it marks a great step forward for the Workers Party that the opportunists find it necessary to assume a Leninist disguise to keep their place within the party.

But before entering into an analysis of the substitution of opportunism for Leninism in the Workers Party, it is necessary to formulate an answer to the question: What is opportunism? Such a question has been asked and answered by the Finnish branch in Superior. This is what they write:

"The essential distinctive feature of opportunism is blind patriotism toward an organization, the setting of the organization even above the leading principles, currying favor with heterogeneously colored elements and the avoidance of self-criticism."

This definition is incorrect. More than that, it is dragged in by the hair for polemic purposes. This is not a definition of opportunism but a collection of illusions and hints, a concealed polemic (which is the worst and most cowardly kind of a polemic), a polemic against whom directed we do not know—against the majority or against the minority or against both together.

"Blind patriotism toward an organization." The whole question is only: With respect to which organization? Blind patriotism toward a good Communist organization is no opportunism. But patriotism toward an opportunistic organization is undoubtedly opportunism.

The Russian Party.

Try to adapt the formula of the Superior Finnish comrades, for instance, to the Russian Party. There is no other Communist Party which has such a great quantity of "heterogeneously colored" elements. It is enough to note that the Russian Communist Party has a great number of peasant Communists, some tens of thousands of worker and peasant Communists who are working at military work in the Red army. There is no such situation in other parties. Do the Superior Finnish comrades believe that the party, or its C. E. C., must not "curry favor" with all these "heterogeneously colored elements?" Would it have been possible to realize the unity of the workers and peasants if the party had had some other policy with regard to the peasants?

It follows from the formula of the Superior Finnish comrades that the policy of the Russian Communist Party is an opportunist policy. After such a conclusion it is not remarkable that the comrades of the Superior Finnish branch twice call themselves in their statement "the most mature party members."

Let us go on with the question of "self-criticism." The comrades of the Superior Finnish branch affirm that opportunists avoid self-criticism. Quite the contrary. Nobody talks so much about freedom of criticism as the opportunists. We have only to remember the starting point of the initiator of opportunism in the German Party, Bernstein. He began with the demand for freedom of criticism. This demand was in fact a demand for freedom for an opportunistic criticism of Marxism. The whole question is only a question of what criticism we are talking about, whether we are talking of an opportunistic criticism or a Communist criticism. A party or a section of a party whch carries on an opportunistic criticism and resists a Communist criticism is an opportunistic party. Vice versa, a party which carries a struggle against opportunistic criticism and criticises itself from the point of view of Marxism and Leninism is a Bolshevik, a truly Communist Party. Self-criticism is necessary for every Bolshevik party. Thus it is only a question of what kind of criticism is necessary for the party, opportunistic or Communist criticism.

We see then that the definition of opportunism given by the Superior Finnish comrades is good-for-nothing.

Social Democratic Baggage.

Opportunism within the Communist Parties in the present period is a tendency to substitute social-democracy for Communism. The overwhelming majority of the present Communist Parties were organized from the left wing of the old social-democratic parties, and included in their ranks tens of thousands of former social-democrats. These comrades brought with them a great deal of social-democratic ideological baggage, and could not within a couple of years completely regenerate themselves into genuine Bolsheviks. These remnants of social-democratic viewpoints are the basis for the opportunistic tendencies with the Communist Parties. Trotsky in Russia, Brandler in Germany, Smeral and Neurath in Czecho-Slovakia, Rosmer in France, Simon Markovich in the South Slavic, Lore in the United States, etc., these are the representatives of modern opportunism within the Communist Parties.

A misunderstanding of the basic idea of Leninism, the union of workers and peasants in the proletarian revolution, social-democratic perversion of the tactics of the united front, a tendency to reorganize the Communist Parties on a menshevist social-democratic basis (Trotsky in Russia), or to resist the reorganization of the party on a Bolshevist basis in the parties which are even now organized on the old social-democratic basis—such are the general features of opportunism in the Communist Parties. In different countries the opportunists take different stands on different questions. That is natural. But the main tendency, the tendency which unites them all, is the substitution of opportunism for Leninism.

Let us see how the comrades from Superior make this substitution of opportunism for Leninism.

"According to our understanding Communism is a mass movement"—they write. They mean to say that Communism can triumph only as a mass movement of the workers. But they express it with an incorrect formulation, because in almost all countries Communist movements exist. But nowhere with the exception of Russia, do they have a mass character.

Obvious Confusion.

Immediately after these words the comrades continue, "The membership is justified in continually criticising its own movement and to build it according to its own ideas."

This is obvious confusion. The comrades began with "a mass movement of the workers" and immediately jumped to the masses of the party. (The membership.)

"The membership is not only justified, but it is its duty to determine who shall be its officials, is also justified in criticising them and even to throw its officials aside when it becomes necessary. And sometimes this becomes absolutely necessary. The will of the masses is the highest law."

It is obvious that here they are talking about the party masses.

"The masses must have the right to act as their common interests demand." (The emphasis is mine.)

The last words represent a new jump from the party masses to the mass of the workers. If they are talking of the mass of the workers, of the working class as a whole, then the words "their common interests" have a quite definite meaning; the common class interests of the mass of the workers in contradiction to the class interests of the capitalists. But what meaning can these words have applied to the party masses? Do the comrades mean to say that the rank and file of the party have some common interests in opposition to the interests of the officials and that the relations between them are like the relations between the working class and the capitalist class? If they mean that, that is absurd. And this has nothing to do either with Marxism or with Leninism. If they do not mean this, then their whole train of reasoning is senseless confusion.

We have not selected all these passages at random. The point is that these quotations lead to the following conclusions:

"This is the clearest of Leninism."

This is a specimen of the grossest and clumsiest substitution of the purest menshevism for Leninism. Lenin is represented by the comrades of Superior as the most stupid and feeble-minded of petty bourgeois democrats, who is to use an expression of Marx, most respectfully engaged in contemplating the backside of the proletariat. That is a slander against Lenin. He never expressed such monstrous opportunistic humbug. The Bolshevist principle of party organization ever was and remains today democratic centralism. And the Superior comrades say the "clearest of Leninism" is this genuine menshevist democracy.

Opportunists Are Worried.

The Superior comrades themselves seem to feel that all is not well. And therefore they hasten immediately after this conclusion to add:

"This does not in any manner conflict with the principles of Communism, nor with the centralization of Communism."

The comrades of Superior have given themselves away. It turns out with them that "the clearest of Leninism" does not "in any manner conflict with the principles of Communism." If it is necessary to prove that "The clearest of Leninism" does not in any manner conflict with the principles of Communism, this means that "the clearest of Leninism" of the Superior comrades is not Leninism at all, but something quite different.

How do these comrades picture Communist centralization?

"In decisive situations when it is a question of life or death, strict centralization and discipline are necessary. But we are not at this time in any decisive situaton here, only an artificially created, little scrap within the party."

It is not necessary to prove that such a concept of centralization has nothing in common with Leninism. Democratic centralism is the basic principle of Bolshevik organization for the entire epoch of the proletarian revolution for all Communist Parties, for the entire Communist International. The proportion between the democracy and the centralization can alter according to the circumstances. Democracy can be permitted in more or less degree, in certain circumstances (an illegal organization, a period of armed uprising or a civil war) it is limited to its minimum. But not only in the period of the preparaton of the proletarian revolution, but also a long time after the seizure of power by the proletariat, a completely developed democracy cannot be realized. The party remains in all periods a centralized party with strong inner discipline, with mobilization of the membership, that is to say, that the party is to a certain degree like an army. Whoever has not understood these fundamentals of Communist organization is destined to wander into the swamp of menshevism. Let us analyze further the considerations of the Superior comrades on the question of the masses.

"The masses," they write, "may and do make mistakes. But they themselves can correct them; but individuals cannot correct their mistakes in that manner in behalf of the masses and individuals make mistakes more readily than the masses."

Contradiction to Leninism.

It is a lucky thing that the comrades from Superior did not add that this reflection is the "clearest of Leninism" or "one of the corner stones of Leninism." Because this reflection represents a direct contradiction to what Lenin said about the elemental character of mass movements and of the consciousness of the vanguard. Those who wish to study this question can find it in the pamphlet "What's to be done" and in the articles that were written in connection with the events of January, 1905. But the Superior comrades regard themselves "as the most mature party members" and the greatest experts on Leninism. And therefore, it is very natural that they present these 100 per cent menshevistic viewpoints as "the clearest of Leninism."

Lenin shows in the above-mentioned writings that the masses left to themselves, without the bringing in of Communist consciousness by the Communist Party, can rise only to the point of trade unionism, and that the Communists do not have to support every spontaneous mass action. The comrades of Supreior may perhaps understand something of this profound Leninist expression if they take into account that the American Federation of Labor (a pure trade union organization) has about three million members and there are more than twenty million unorganized proletarians, and that the Workers Party (only 25,000 members) stands before the task of bringing a Communist consciousness into these tens of millions.

Moreover, one cannot overlook the fact that the Superior comrades continue to defend their right to call themselves socialists. They say that Soviet Russia is called the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Why should we not also call ourselves socialists?

The Ruling Party.

That is an excellent specimen of the substitution of opportunism for Leninism.

Do the comrades of Superior know that there is a party in Soviet Russia that rules that country and realizes the proletarian dictatorship? Do they know that this party is called the Russian Communist (not socialist party?) Do they not know that the Russian Communist Party got this name in 1917 before the November revolution, that the principal motive of the change of name from socialist democratic to Communist was that the old social-democratic parties had decomposed from workers' parties to petty bourgeois parties? Do the comrades know that among the Russian counter-revolutionary parties — there are two such parties (the Russian social-democratic Workers' Party, menshevik, and the social-revolutionary party) which bear the name socialist and are carrying on counter-revolutionary work against Socialist Russia? Will the Superior comrades understand that the Russian Communist Party carries on genuine socialist work in organizing a socialist regime in Russia (the first step of Communism) and all socialist parties of the entire world only mask themselves with the word socialism to carry on anti-socialist work?

It is further necessary to analyze a point in the article of Askeli which is a typical specimen of the substitution of menshevism for Leninism ("Are Finns social-democrats?")

"Our federation," writes Askeli, "was against the LaFollette and that kind of a farmer-labor policy and of the maneuvers of that sort. We considered them as futile short cuts which in the final analysis are mensheviki tactics pure and simple, more simple than pure."

So, according to the opinion of Comrade Askeli, the farmer-labor policy is a menshevik policy. Note that the question is not that of a farmer-labor party, but of the farmer-labor policy. The farmer-labor policy is declared menshevik tactics. And if you ask Comrade Askeli what was Lenin's opinion of the farmer-labor policy, he will answer you, of course, that that is "the clearest of Leninism." Comrade Askeli will not hear of the fact that from 1904 on, Lenin had tirelessly advocated the necessity of the union of the workers and peasants in a proletarian revolution. Comrade Askeli will not hear of the fact that principal difference between menshevism and Bolshevism is that the menshevists never understood the role of the peasants in the revolution and have always had a negative attitude to the peasants. He will not hear of the fact that less than a year ago the whole discussion with Trotsky centered about this question, and that Trotsky had conserved his menshevist viewpoint on the peasants. Comrade Askeli does not see the fact of this union in the Soviet Republics. He looks upon the principal basis of Leninism as menshevism and vice versa the principal thesis of menshevism, he calls Leninism. How much farther can one go in the perversion of Leninism, in its substitution by opportunism?

Workers and Peasants.

There can be a difference of opinion as to the form in which this union between workers and peasants is to be realized (the farmer-labor party, a union of a labor party with the organization of the small farmers, united farmer-labor councils, etc.) This question will be discussed at various times and variously decided in the different countries. But the foundation of Leninist strategy in the proletarian revolution always remains unalterably the union of workers and peasants.

We have already seen that all the groups mentioned as opportunistic in the beginning of the article (and the list is far from complete) declare their full readiness to carry on a struggle against Loreism. In particular the comrades of Superior declare:

"We must decisively and unmercifully condemn opportunism and Loreism and shall fight against them pitilessly and tirelessly."

This declaration is the best illustration of Lenin's statement that in politics one must believe not words, but deeds and that he who in politics believes in words is a thoro-going idiot.

The comrades of Superior carry on a "tireless and pitiless fight against Loreism" by propagating in the party Loreite ideas under the flag of Leninism. Askeli does the same. Poyntz and Jampolsky are also against Loreism in words but express Loreism in their daily practice. They all promise to carry on a fight against Loreism, but in fact they carry on a bitter fight against the C. E. C. and its component parts. And they carry on this fight with Loreite opportunistic weapons. Whatever their words are, the fact is that they are carrying on the fight against the C. E. C. and no fight against Loreites. There is being organized here a united opportunistic front against the sections of the party which are realizing the politics of the C. I. Precisely from this side comes the greatest danger to the party and precisely against this great danger must be united all the Bolshevist forces of the party which till now have been divided into factions. Without a decisive destruction of Loreism the party cannot become a Bolshevik party. And if the factions cannot unite their strength against Loreism and destroy it there is danger of the party being conquered by Loreism.

Let the real followers of Leninism in our party consider this question!

SOVIET HOLDS BIG SMITSKHA CELEBRATION

Marks Anniversary of Soviet Union

By CARL BRANNIN.

MOSCOW — (FP) — The United States is not the only country which celebrates. In Russia the day was remembered as the second anniversary of the constitution of the Soviet Union. It was also International Cooperation day, and in the many cooperative stores posters were displayed and propaganda meetings held. Kalinin, president of the Soviet Union, and other leaders addressed a mass meeting.

Sunday the 5th witnessed a monster Smitskha or fraternization of workers, soldiers and peasants at the October Field near the summer camp of the Moscow Red army corps. Frunze, the head of the army, declared that at the present time no capitalist governments could organize an army to attack Russia because their own internal affairs were too precarious. "This," said he, "is our hope and strength. We do not intend to attack anyone but we must continue ready to repel invaders."

Following this, groups of worker artists on six stages gave clever "living newspaper" productions emphasizing cooperation. On another stage soldiers presented a mass play dealing with the events of the revolution down to the present.

At times there was participation by the audience and a wide passage was arranged for the players to pass through the crowd. Pictures of leaders in the revolution and framed slogans were ingeniously maneuvered on wires above the stage. One of the slogans read, The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is the Banner of Insurrection of the Toilers of the World.'

PART[illegible] way in a remote cor[illegible] dnesday's Chicago Trib[illegible] ittle news item that had [illegible] Missouri mule in it. A[illegible] he story, the French go[illegible] nded over to the Soviet [illegible] the Russian ships that w[illegible] French port, pending certa[illegible] egotiations that were taking place between Paris and Moscow. Evidently the negotiations ended in agreement.

THE fleet includes dreadnaughts, battle cruisers, destroyers and submarines, a valuable acquisition to the Red navy in the Black Sea. Roumania will see red and Britain will find her prospects blacker than ever. It appears that Russia and France have come to terms over the delicate question of indebtedness, and from what we read of, the terms are very favorable to the Russian workers and peasants under the circumstances. Russia agrees to pay the small French bond holders what they lent Russia under the old regime, but the payments will be made in paper francs and not in gold. Those who know the present condition of the franc will get the point.

UNDER the terms of the agreement, granting that the reports are correct, France agrees to extend large credits to the Soviet government in return for a contract to help in the reconstruction of Russian industries. Britain is looking at this phenomenon with a jaundiced eye. Franco-Russian companies will be formed to exploit mines, forests, factories, and oil fields in Russia. The agreement explains recent tight rope walking stunts on the part of Briand, French premier.

WHEN Britain began organizing an anti-Soviet bloc, France appeared to be receptive. Briand replied to Chamberlain's invitation to come in and share in the fun, with an acceptance in principle, practically complimenting the British on their altruistic work in behalf of civilization, but hinting that France had not yet arrived at the state of human perfection which would permit her to participate in such hazardous sport. It seems that Chamberlain went ahead as if France were willing, like Barkis in Dickens' novel.

IN the meantime, France had a commission in Moscow which was negotiating over the old debts and other matters. Only last week Briand flew over to Britain and climbed up the backstairs at Downing street to have a very, very secret conversation with the British foreign secretary. So serious was the situation that the wily Frenchman insisted that nothing must be discussed except matters on which there is mutual agreement. During the discussion, if discussion it may be called, Briand flashed the tentative agreement between France and Russia on Chamberlain, and politely inquired how was the security pact getting along?

BRIAND was awfully glad to see England trying to protect civilization from Bolshevism. Really, France is doing the same thing in Morocco, only in Morocco civilization is being saved from the inferior culture of Abd-el-Krim. Briand asked Chamberlain for a match and snickered as much as to say, "You know what I mean and I know what you mean. We are a pair of damn liars and none of us believes the other." The newspapers said that Chamberlain and Briand were in perfect harmony. They were, simply because they discussed nothing.

STOP WORK TO VOTE UPON A BIG WALKOUT

Garment Workers to Answer Sigman Gang

This issue of the DAILY WORKER went to press too early to obtain news of the stoppage demonstration of the cloak and dressmakers of New York City, called by the Joint Action Committee of Locals 2, 9 and 22 for late Thursday afternoon as spoken of in the following dispatch on the eve of the demonstration:

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 20.—The stoppage today is the culmination of a fight between the three locals and the officials of the union which has been going on for over two months. It is called as a protest against the interference of the employers in this internal union quarrel, to warn them not to take advantage of the present situation to lower the standards in the shops and also to reiterate the demands of the three locals for reinstatement of their expelled officers, for the resignation of President Sigman, and for a reorganization of the New York Joint Board of the union.

With banners and brass bands the workers are to march from their shops to ten meeting halls on lower Manhattan, and there vote as to whether a general stoppage shall be called in the industry to enforce the demands of these locals which comprise 60 per cent of the union members in New York City.

To Call Sigman-Boss Combine's Bluff.

"This will be the greatest demonstration held in this city for years," says Louis Hyman, chairman of the Joint Committee of Action, "and we expect it to show, once and for all, that the majority of the workers are behind our three locals in their fight for a reorganized, democratic union. The Joint Board has held out against us by asserting constantly that we are but a handful of troublemakers in the union.

"But this stoppage will prove that the mass of the membership is in this battle and intends to force the officials of the union to listen to them. They are refusing to be terrorized by gangsters or by threats of employers. They intend to win this fight for a union cleared of its corrupt political machine, and run by the workers themselves."

No Legal Bar to Left Wing Picketing.

An important decision was rendered in Jefferson Market court by Magistrate Richard McKiniry in the case of two members of the three suspended locals who had been arrested for picketing.

This was a case to test the right of these workers to picket peacefully and they were arrested in front of 164 West 25th street, on a technical charge of disorderly conduct. The officer testified that the two picketers were creating no disturbance and that they were not blocking traffic.

Magistrate McKiniry ruled that no matter what faction or what union a person belongs to, or whether he belongs to no union at all, he may go on strike, and it is perfectly lawful for him to picket peacefully and he is not subject to arrest. This ruling will make it impossible for the Joint Board to continue its provocative tactics in front of shops where the Joint Committee of Action has declared a strike. These strikes have been called in shops where workers were discharged by order of the Joint Board for their sympathy with Locals 2, 9 and 22.

Crouch and Trumbull Are Imprisoned at Alcatraz

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 20.—Paul Crouch and Walter Trumbull, victims of U. S. army court martial from the Schofield Barracks in the Hawaiian Islands, have arrived here by army transport on August 14. Their case is being legally cared for by the International Labor Defense, which has engaged Attorney Austin Lewis to work for their release.

The two soldiers, who have declared their adhesion to the Communist movement, for which declaration they were made the victims of military persecution and illegal verdicts of a military court are now imprisoned in the infamous military prison on Alcatraz Island in San Francisco Bay—a prison noted for its harsh and brutal treatment of all soldiers who fall into the clutches of courts martial.

I. L. D. Continues the Fight.

The International Labor Defense, which has already contributed materially to the legal defense of the prisoners when efforts were made by the labor movement of Hawaii to save them from persecution, has taken up the case on the mainland and is vigorously pressing the case in the ninth U. S. district court at San Francisco.

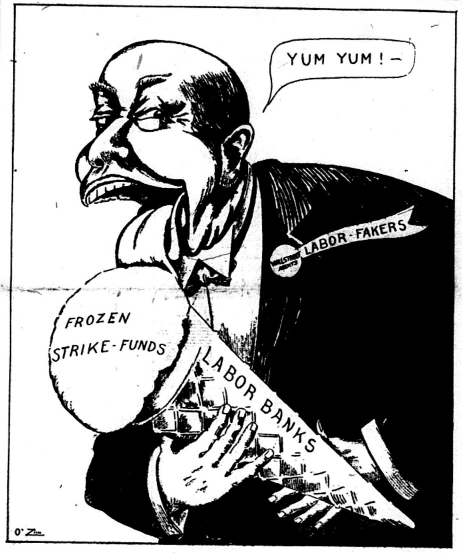
The first move in the case made by the Intrenational Labor Defense is already taken with the engagement of the noted labor attorney, Austin Lewis, to fight the legal battle for the release of Crouch and Trumbull from Alcatraz prison.

Noted Lawyer for I. W. W. Engaged.

Austin Lewis, who was the attorney for Richard Ford and Herman Suhr, victims of the Wheatland hop pickers' strike 12 years ago, as well as the defender of a great many more recent cases of the I. W. W. victims of California reaction, is proceeding with the necessary documentation to enter the courts in San Francisco with a demand for release of Crouch and Trumbull as being illegally imprisoned.

Before their living burial behind the silent walls of their island prison began, the two Communist soldiers sent final farewell greetings to the revolutionary workers of all the world, thanked the International Labor Defense and all other friends who had aided them and emphatically re-asserted their pledge that when their term is over they will emerge with their convictions only strengthened by prison, to work for the proletarian revolution.

DELIGHTFUL—BUT HOW ABOUT THE WORKERS



AMALGAMATED OFFICIAL TAKEN TO WAUKEGAN, JAILED IN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE FRAME-UP, BAIL $8,000

Sidney Rissman, assistant manager of the joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was arrested at his home yesterday, and taken to Waukegan on a warrant charging "conspiracy," and later released on $8,000 bond.

Rissman's arrest was instigated by the Waukegan chamber of commerce, which is attempting to frame-up the Amalgamated for a raid on a tailor shop here last week and thus aid the International Tailoring company break the strike of the company's employes in Chicago.

Rissman was taken from his Chicago home by a deputy sheriff, and lodged in jail here on the "conspiracy" charge, after being arraigned before justice of the peace H. C. Coulson. His bond was placed at $10,000.

Hearing on August 29.

The Amalgamated's Waukegan lawyers brot Rissman before circuit Judge C. C. Edwards on a writ of habeas corpus, and attempted to obtain a reduction in the bonds. Edwards set the bail at $8,000.00 and set the case for hearing August 29.

That the chamber of commerce, working in alliance with the charmber of commerce in Chicago, which has aided the International company, is back of the arrest is evidenced by statements made by Frank Fowler, secretary of the chamber of commerce at the Waukegan council meeting August 17.

Fowler pointed out that the chamber of commerce had offered a reward of a thousand dollars for anyone fastened with the acid throwing—and the chamber of commerce prefers to frame-up union men.

Fowler, a former Chicago alderman, closely connected with the Chicago manufacturers, said in the council meeting that J. V. Balz, a city commissioner and ex-officio chief of police, was "the greatest exponent of inefficiency I have ever known", because he did not bring in union men and charge them with the acid throwing.

The warrant for Rissman's arrest was signed by States Attorney A. Smith.

Strikers in Court Today.

The sixteen members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers charged with "conspiracy" will appear before Judge John Lyle at the Maxwell St. police court this morning for hearing. William A. Cunnea, lawyer for the Amalgamated, will ask for a change of venue, because Judge Lyle has already stated he believes some of the union men guilty of slugging.

Most of the union members, who were arrested following a raid on the Amalgamated headquarters conducted by Mike Grady, slugging cop, on a search warrant signed by Ray Reeder, secretary of the International Tailoring Company, are striking employes of the firm.

Not only the raids and arrests conducted by the Amalgamated, but the arrest yesterday of Rissman, are declared by Amalgamated members to be attempts of the garment bosses to break the strike.

Three pickets were arrested yesterday. They were Florence Nathan, Mary Shymeheck and Hymen Frank. All were released on bail. The three strikers were merely walking the picket line when arrested.

Financial Aid Pledged.

At the meeting of shop chairmen of the Amalgamated held in the Labor Lyceum, Ogden and Kedzie avenues, all present pledged as much financial aid to the strikers as is necessary to bring the conflict to a successful conclusion.

'MAJAH' BERRY AS LOOTER OF UNION FUNDS

Chicago Press Get on His Crooked Trail

This is the seventh of a series of articles exposing the crooked career of George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union. The members of the international union are now determined to get rid of Berry and Berryism.

For a long time there was a general feeling among the most active members of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union that there was something wrong with the financial management of the international union. The editorial in the Rogersville Review convinced the membership that Berry was playing for big stakes and that he was using the funds of the union to further his own political and business ambitions.

After August 31, 1918, financial reports ceased to come from headquarters altho the laws of the union demand that reports of the secretary-treasurer must be sent out every three months.

The international union had an income of $400,000 per annum, had loaned large sums of money from the pension fund in "real estate investments" but had not taken up the mortgage held on the home by the Hawkins county bank for eight years, which amounted to only $20,000, a very small sum compared to what was loaned out on real estate investments. According to Orr's reports all other funds were taken out of the pension fund.

A Second Henry Ford.

It should not be forgotten that when Berry ran for the democratic nomination for vice-president of the United States, his publicity stuff enumerated the number of industrial enterprises he launched. Every one of those enterprises was financed by money taken from the pension fund and war emergency fund. This money was subscribed by the members of the union, and here was the "majah" posing as a secnod edition of Henry Ford, and climbing up the ladder of his ambition built from the money wrung from the sweat and blood of the members of the intrenational union. Is it any wonder that the members of the international union revolted? And it is because they protested against this kind of conduct that men like Barney Nolan, Jim

WORKERS PARTY OPENS FOURTH CONVENTION AT CHICAGO TODAY

The fourth convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America will open at 2 p. m. this afternoon, at Imperial Hall, 2409 North Halsted St.

Delegates from the various districts were arriving Wednesday and Thursday in preparation for the convention which is to unite all Communist elements in the party against the non-Communist right wing, which the Communist International has pointed out as the enemy of the unity and Bolshevization of the party.

There are 54 delegates to be seated, and the delegates supporting the Central Executive Committee are in overwhelming majority of the convention, the minority faction having won only one district convention completely, that of Pitsburgh, with all other districts except Boston being carried by the Central Executive Committee, many of them, as Chicago, not even electing a single delegate supporting the opposition to the C. E. C.

The decision of the Communist International upon the points at dispute, however was given recently, in which the errors it stated had been found on both sides have been corrected and a new program given of Bolshevization, reorganization and unity of the Communist elements in both groups to fight the right wing danger which menaces the unity of the party.

Unity upon the basis of the resolutions, adopted unanimously by the Parity Commission, is expected to be the keynote of the present convention. The first two conventions of the party were held in New York, the

THREATS AND LIES FAIL TO FREE GERMAN FASCIST TERRORISTS WHO CONFESSED ANTI-SOVIET DESIGNS

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—The three German fascists, Kindermann, Dittmar and Wolscht, who were sentenced to death by a Soviet court, failed to gain their freedom by hysterically lieing just before the court passed sentence. Only Dittmar, who declared his visit had changed his opinions of the Soviet Union stood by his confessions to the last.

Kindermann, by trying to explain his confession "psychologically", enmeshed himself in numerous contradictions. Wolscht was defiant, and declared the German fascists would have revenge.

The German legationsrat, Hilger, appeared in court. He came to the trial from the embassy, to attempt to save the fascists who admitted planning attempts on the life of Trotsky and Stalin, and other anti-Soviet terroristic plots.

IMPERIALISTS REFUSE AUTONOMY TO CHINA, EVEN ON ITS TARIFF

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKIO, August 20.—It was learned officially here today that the imperialist powers have decided to refuse China's request that the question of customs autonomy be included in the agenda of the Peking customs conference scheduled to open October 26.

It has been agreed by the eight powers signatory to the Washington traety, it was learned, that the conference agenda shall embrace only the matters stipulated by the Washington treaty.

After the conclusion of the customs conference, the powers will hear China's requests for consideration of extraneous subjects and decide then what action is to be taken on such requests.

A note conveying this decision to China is being prepared

ARMED ZEIGLER MINERS DEFEND HOMES AGAINST TERRORIZATION BY KLAN AND FARRINGTON GANG

ZEIGLER, Ill., August 20.—With the whips of hunger, union blacklist of the Farrington machine, the menace of prison and even armed force, the dark forces combined in the coal operator Farrington-faker-ku-klux-klan conspiracy are trying to crush the revolt of the Zeigler miners who struck more than ten days ago against the illegal removal of Henry Corbishley and other local union officers by the traitorous officials, Fox and Cobb of Sub-District 9, of the Illinois District 12 of the U. M. W. of A.

Last night, Zeigler flew to arms after keeping all night vigil yesterday, when word came that the hated K. K. K. were about to stage a raid of terrorization to frighten the miners back to work in behalf of Farrington and the coal operators.

All available firearms were pressed into service and dozens of miners were deputized by the anti-klan mayor, Murphy Smith. The long string of flats, the buildings where scores of miners' families live, were veritable barracks, with miners standing as sentries all night.

Nor is this all play and practice, for the miners' vigilance had its result in the fact that the K. K. K. altho it sent scout auto cars into Zeigler, got cold feet when these scouts reported that the Zeigler miners were prepared to defend their families and their homes.

Refuse to be Terrorized.

The K. K. K. had gathered from four southern counties, keagles, kowards and all, to make a raid to terrorize the Zeigler miners and frighten them back to work. But they got

'MAJAH' BERRY AS LOOTER OF UNION FUNDS

Bagley and David Simons in New York and the pressmen's union in Chicago were crucified by this capitalist stoolpigeon and fake patriot.

Another Grafting Scheme.

About this time, Berry sent out his call for the "war emergency fund" assessment. Many of the local unions feeling that Berry would loot it as he had looted the pension fund, voted against it. The "majah" made use of all the patriotic bunk that the capitalists were using to make the workers believe they were fighting for something noble instead fo the filthy dollars of the House of Morgan. Berry waved the American flag before the eyes of the membership. But the members of Pressmen's Union No. 3 were not fooled.

In August, 1919, William J. Geary and John J. Collins, school and home trustees, appeared before the executive committee of the Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 of which they were members and stated that they were not satisfied with the financial reports sent out by Secretary-Treasurer Orr. Geary and Collins informed the executive board of No. 3 that no meetings of the international executive board were held for one year and that they wanted an investigation into the financial affairs of the internatoinal union. The members then gave Collins and Geary and the executive board of No. 3 power to take up the matter of a complete investigation of the financial affairs of the international union.

When this information reached the "majah" he got the political shivers. Diplomatic illness is a most convenient malady when a person wants to evade some unpleasant duty. So when Trustee Collins was to install the home trustees and the officers of the international union for the ensuing two years Berry got conveniently stricken with illness. Secretary-Treasurer Orr was in Cincinnati at the time. President Berry was in Chicago two days before the installation of the officers, altho this fact was unknown at the time to either trustees and the board of directors, Berry jumped to Cincinnati. Berry was invited to Chicago but he claimed the expense was too much. This from a man who burned up more than $150,000 in breaking the pressmen's strike in New York in 1919.

All the officers and trustees with the exception of Berry and Orr were installed in Chicago. The "majah" instructed Trustee Collins to come to Cincinnati to install Berry and Orr. Berry was not concerned with the expense. What he was worried about was a joint meeting of the trustees and the board of directors.

On the advice of the executive board of Pressmen's Union No. 3, Trustees Geary and Collins went to Cincinnati for the double purpose of installing the two fakers and also to put certain questions to them.

When they arrived in Cincinnati the "majah" was sick in bed. He was so sick that he could not ever crawl out from the sheets to get installed. Callins had to "annoit" him in bed.

Collins and Geary put several leading questions to Berry and Orr concerning the financial condition of the home properties. Berry said that they could go to the home and investigate if they wished, an impossible proceeding, or else they could return to Chicago and propound questions for submission to him, embodying what the pressmen wanted to know about the affairs of the international union.

Framed the Questions.

The trustes returned to Chicago and after consulting with the officers of Local No. 3, fourteen questions relating to the financial affairs of the international union were addressed to Berry. The letter containing the questions was signed by Wm. L. Haas, president and John J. Knapp, secretary-treasurer.

Despite this investigation by Pressmen's Local No. 3, Berry claimed that "not one written line of protest or claim of irregularity or dishonesty have ever been submitted to the officers of the International Union." And in addition to the investigation, Berry had received a letter from the officers of Pressmen's Union No. 3, demanding an explanation of the "unaccounted for balance of $20,285.41" in the pension fund. Berry left for France to work for the House of Morgan shortly after the investigation into his money transactions were initiated.

Called First Conference.

In February, 1919, the Philadelphia Pressmen's Union sent out a call for a conference to talk over matters concerning the affairs of the union. Locals from Chicago, New York and St. Louis attended. There were no plans formulated at that conference but in April of the same year a conference was held in Chicago at which 23 unions were represented, coming from all parts of the country.

At this conference the delegates learned how Berry juggled the referendum on the war emergency assessment. The Chicago pressmen explained that they had taken legal action to prevent Berry from forcing them to pay the assessment.

It developed that the Clinchfield Mercantile company, the Clinchfield Hydro-Electric company and the Clinchfield Land and Lumber company were the personal properties of "Majah" George L. Berry and were incorporated under their names in the state of Tennessee.

The next article of this series will continue the expose of Berry's juggling of the funds of the International Union.

The officers of the Hebrew Butchers Local Union 596 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America are engaged in negotiating an agrement to replace the old agreement which expires on Sept. 1.

The demands of the Hebrew butchers are a raise of $5 per week for apprentices, from $35 to $40, and for first hand butchers from $46 to $50 per week. The men now work seven days a week, and they demand that they be allowed Sunday off, as they are inhumanly driven at present with a working week of 70 hours.

No understanding has been reached at present, but the men are determined that these demands shall be granted even if they have to strike for them, should the bosses continue their refusal.

The negotiating committee for the union consists of the president, business agent, secretary and other local union officials.

rope. But a great change has taken place. Soviet Russia is getting strong while France is getting weak. Britain has now taken France's place as the leading foe of the workers' republic. But Britain will be sorry she assumed the responsibility. Japan in Asia and France in Europe have now come to terms, with the Soviet power. This will be taken by the socialists to mean that the Soviet government has surrendered to the capitalists. It is the other way around.

BOTH powers, Japan and France fought Russia until they both learned they were biting granite. Soviet Russia is gradually building up her industries. Even without foreign credits this can be done slowly. With foreign credits it can be done more rapidly. The workers and peasants retain political power and the masses are being constantly educated along Communist lines. In the capitalist countries the revolutinary movement countries the revolutionary movement of Soviet Russia are being built with the aid of foreign credits those very powers who are granting the credits see the workers in their own countries every day increasing their power and preparing to become the ruling class. It is an interesting study.

REPORT PROVES BOAT DISASTER DUE TO NEGLECT

Profit Greed Imperiled Lives of 700

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—Forty dead, others still hovering in agony between life and death and many of the 60 injured doomed to be blinded and disfigured for life—this is the terrible toll recorded thus far in the excursion steamer Mackinac boiler explosion disaster.

The cause of the disaster is laid entirely to capitalist greed. The state investigators' report states they found the boiler old, deteriorated by wear and thinned down in many places and not in a condition to be used. Many repairs in the boiler prove that it was completely worn out.

The steamer, built in Wisconsin in 1909, is reported to have suffered from boiler trouble all summer and even this trip was delayed because a patch had to be welded on the boiler. In this condition the boat was used and the lives of 700 excursionists were imperiled with the resulting disaster.

As young people were dancing to the strains of a jazz orchestra, there was a concussion followed by a cloud of steam. Stifled by the steam and with their flesh cooked, men, women and children rushed blindly about the decks, some of them leaping overboard.

The bursting of a pipe in the bottom of the boat caused the disaster.

local President Crambert of Franklin Union No. 4.

This morning about 7:15 o'clock, when Miss Mabel Clark, who lives on the second floor of the same address, was going to work, she found two one-pound sticks of dynamite, heavily covered with friction tape, in the hall entrance door. A long piece of fuse was lighted. With remarkable presence of mind she stamped out the fuse and threw the dynamite into the adjoining lot.

When Brandt was notified he went to pick up the dynamite and by that time several children between the ages of four and ten were playing with the bomb. Brandt took the dynamite into the house.

In the meantime Officer McCarthy from the Irving Park station called at the house and took the dynamite to the station.

The apartment is filled with women and children, and but for the presence of mind of Miss Clark it is more than likely that several lives would be lost.

The bombing is attributed to the activity of Jimmy Brandt in fighting against Berry and his cohorts and also the scab printing companies in Chicago that fear a new leadership in the union.

During the last election in the union Brandt carried on a vigorous campaign against Berry and President Crambert of Franklin Union No. 4. A slugging committee was organized to beat up the progressives, including Brandt, but the sluggers got the worst of it.

Further developments in the shooting up of the home of James King, 2622 North Austin avenue, are:

A woman who lives in a neighboring house witnessed the shooting which took place about 11:30 Tuesday night. This woman saw a red-faced individual who was sitting beside the chauffeur in an automobile get up on the porch of King's home and look thru the window. He then came down on the sidewalk and fired three shots thru the window.

The police from Craigin avenue station are now investigating the shooting. Mrs. King is in a very nervous state over the incident, as she is afraid the gunmen may return at any time.

There is a good-sized hole in the dining room door of King's home, where the bullet went thru.

The lockout at the Cuneo printing plant is still on, with the men who walked out confident that they can defeat Berry and the printing bosses.

The Keogh Printing Company, which locked out the pressmen, feeders and compositors three weeks ago, settled with the unions.

Max Mason, professor of mathematical physics of the University of Wisconsin, will be the next president of the University of Chicago, beginning with the fall term, Oct. 1st. The University of Chicago has been without a president since the death of President Ernest De Witt Burton last May.

Lawson Fought Chicago's Workers with His Daily News for Fifty Years

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, "Vic" Lawson, anti-labor publisher of the Chicago Daily News, lies dead in his stone castle on the North Shore "Gold Coast" while thousands of jobless trooped as ever to the "slave market," in Wells and Madison streets, to buy his sheet and study the want ads.

"Vic" Lawson passes, much like Eastman, of the Daily Journal, who died recently, both hailed as "personal editors," but the papers they owned and controlled never missed an edition, continuing publication as if nothing had happened to their proprietors.

• • • •

"Vic" Lawson hardly ever appeared openly in his paper fighting labor, like General Otis, the notorious "open shop" editor and owner of the Los Angeles Times, who personally conducted the labor-crushing campaigns inaugurated by his paper. But the Daily News was and will continue one of the most bitter anti-labor sheets in the land.

Lawson was not an editor. He was more a business manager. Every conceivable means was exploited to win circulation, which means the much sought after "State Street" advertising, with its millions of dollars in annual income.

Lawson got his Daily News started nearly half a century ago, during the hard fought railroad strike of 1877, when his sheet poured out a flood of special editions upholding the railroad barons as they conducted their ruthless warfare against railroad labor; 10 massacred at the 16th Street tracks in Chicago, 20 murdered in Pittsburgh, with the state militia under arms thruout the entire east and the middle west.

Since that bloody summer of 1877, down thru the nearly half century that has passed, "Vic" Lawson's Daily News has been in the vanguard of the capitalist attack against the workers. It has always held close to John M. Glenn's Illinois Manufacturers' Association, that led in the fight to smash the Illinois Mine Workers' Union during the troubles growing out of the mine owners' efforts to establish "open shop" conditions at Herrin, in Williamson county.

The Daily News has been the Chicago mouthpiece of the attack against the Communists. The last drive consisted of the billboarding over the entire city and vicinity of huge advertisements announcing the "Spolansky Anti-Red Articles," that were later prominently featured.

• • • •

In spite of its deliberate and carefully planned anti-labor policy, the Daily News for a time boasted of the greatest afternoon circulation of any capitalist daily. The workers bought it and imbibed its poison.

After more than a quarter century of struggle, however, Hearst's American has finally overtaken it. Hearst came to Chicago as "a friend of labor." He got circulation. Then he became respectably anti-labor and was richly rewarded with paying advertising patronage. But the workers still duped continue to buy and read this Hearst organ.

• • • •

None will now sing the praises of "Vic" Lawson louder than this same Hearst sheet. It will be joy over a crippled competitor. But that does not concern workers interested in the rise to power of their class.

If labor correctly studies the life and deeds of "Vic" Lawson, it will draw the lesson that labor must fight its own battles, if it would win.

Chicago labor has its own daily paper, the DAILY WORKER. Chicago labor turned its patronage from Lawson's Daily News to Hearst's American, only to find itself betrayed, because both are capitalist dailies, fighting on the side of the exploiters. Chicago labor must turn again, turn to its own paper, the DAILY WORKER, build its circulation up into the hundreds of thousands, and make it a power able to fight successfully against the robber class.

BRITISH LION'S TAIL TWISTED BY CANTONESE

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The order of the South China government excluding British and Japanese vessels from Chinese ports continued today to perplex the foreign office.

The situation was serious enuf to call back Foreign Minister Chamberlain from his summer holiday. He returned to Downing street today.

While the foreign office openly attributes the Canton government's discriminatory shipping regulations to Bolshevistic influence, the situation has perplexing aspects due to the fact that Great Britain has not recognized the Canton regime. The foreign office can therefore deal officially only with the Peking government, and the latter is powerless to assert any effective authority over the Cantonese politicians.

SILLINSKY IS CANDIDATE FOR A. F. OF L. MEET

Gives J. T. U. of A. Left Wing Program

CLEVELAND, Ohio, August 20. — Max J. Sillinsky, left wing candidate for delegate to the coming American Federation of Labor convention from the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America, has issued a statement to the membership, outlining his program.

Sillinsky declares that the government is controlled by the employers, and that labor must not only fight the "open shop" but must act politically as a class in its own party, independent of the capitalist class. Sillinsky ran against the reactionary machine candidate Thomas Sweeney for secretary-treasurer of the union in the last union elections, and received a large vote.

Sillinsky's letter to the union members follows:

Cleveland, O., Aug. 6, 1925.

Brothers:—

I have accepted the nomination for delegate to the coming American Federation of Labor convention with a thoro understanding of the duties of a delegate to that body. Always fighting for principles, in committee and on the convention floor, I have consistently defended the interests of our organization in all jurisdictional disputes and in all matters of general principles.

The recent decision of the Ohio state supreme court against the Street Carmen's Union of Cleveland, and injunctions issued against unions in times of strikes, are reminders of what the workers are now coming to accept without argument—that the government is in control of the employing class, and that it is using its political power to increase profits and keep down the workers.

History offers abundant proof that what little has been gained by labor from a capitalist government has come from the exercise of labor's political power. There has developed in the United States the world's most powerful financial oligarchy, whose purpose it is to destroy the unions. The "American plan" is the policy of this oligarchy which is dominating our government from city councils to Washington. To oppose the "American plan" and the open shop campaign is to fight not only the control of industry by the financial interests, but their political power as well.

Labor must adopt at once the policy of voting as a class for its own candidates. Labor should abandon forever its non-partisan policy of supporting the old party politician who before election shouts the loudest in favor of labor. Parties which represent business interests, not only those of Wall Street, but also of the smaller fry, who are no less anxious than the big interests to grind out of labor every possible penny—such parties must be repudiated by labor.

In the struggle against capitalism, final victory is certain if the workers will close up their ranks and march forward with determined spirit and fighting policies under amalgamation with other needle trades unions and the banner of the class struggle to the free society of the future.

Such are my views on the matters referred to above, and I trust the membership will support me with their votes and honor me as one of their delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Fraternally yours,
MAX J. SILLINSKY.

AMERICAN AUTOS LEAD IN 22-DAY RACE IN RUSSIA

Many Nations Entered in Fight for Orders

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., Aug. 18—American entries led in the trans-Russian automobile race from Leningrad to Tiflis and back to Moscow, which began today and is expected to last 22 days. The participants in the race made their getaway at 8 o'clock this morning.

From the winners among the 44 foreign makes entered the Soviet government intends to select models for purchase. Conditions under which the race is being staged make it a trying test. The route, originally intended to cover only the distance from Moscow to Tiflis, is now extended to include the 3,000 mile stretch from Leningrad to Tiflis and back to Moscow.

A Grueling Test.

From Leningrad the racers go first to Dover, thence to Moscow, to Kharkov, to Rostov, to Piatigorsk, to Vladikavkas, to Tiflis, and back to Moscow.

During this trip the cars will be subjected to extremes of temperature, from the comparative cool of Leningrad in latitude of 60 degrees, on a level with the north coast of Ireland, to the blistering heat of the Caucasus in summer, on latitude 40 degrees corresponding to the latitude of central Spain.

Nearly all of the way the roads are plain dirt, intended only for horse-drawn vehicles, and in the southern part of the route there are sections which offer difficulties even for wagons.

World Powers Represented.

Driving will be in daytime only. All cars will stop at night. The race committee announces that the average distance covered will be 300 miles a day, but it is not likely that this speed can be maintained.

With American entries outnumbering all others, the manufacturers of other countries represented in the race range in order; Italy, France, Germany and Austria. There are entered 80 passenger cars, 50 trucks and 20 motorcycles.

Boosting the Air Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.— Establishment by the federal governmnet of an aeronautical corporation similar to the Inland Waterways corporation, was urged today by Colonel William Mitchell, of the army air service, as a means of placing aviation on a sound basis in the United States.

SERVANT WHOSE JOB WAS TO CARE FOR DRUG CRAZED TIN PLATE KING SUES ESTATE, BOSS SHOT AT HIM

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

The corruption of the multimillionaire upper class, comes to light occasionally in such suits as that filed against the estate of Daniel G. Reid, by James Savage his personal attendant from 1919 to 1924. Savage asserts he was engaged at $100 a week, to render personal service of an "extremely difficult and delicate nature occasioned by the mental condition of Reid due to excessive use of alcoholic liquors and stimulants."

Savage's job apparently was to handle the financier when crazed by the craving for booze and dope. That it was no schoolboy job is evident from Savage's statement that Reid not only threatened to shoot him but actually shot at him when thwarted in his attempt to get narcotics.

Was Tin Trust Manipulator.

Savage is suing for certain additional compensation he claims was promised him when he threatened to leave because the job was almost unendurable.

Reid was the capitalist who accumulated $50,000,000 by manipulating the tin plate trust later absorbed into U. S. Steel and by looting the Rock Island railroad.

My lady's handbag contained $1,775 in spending money including $7.75 in quarters and dimes, probably for tips to members of the "servant class." This bit of information is perhaps the most significant item on the suicide of Mrs. Peyton Van Rensselaer, member of one of this country's most aristocratic families. Many items cross the news desks of American papers telling of workers who commit suicide because unable to get a chance to earn a living. Sometimes the crazed worker kills members of his family too. But here is a woman committing suicide whose handbag contained spending money equal to the entire year's income of a skilled worker in American industry.

The lady also had pinned to her clothing jewelry containing 29 diamonds and 20 sapphires. Yet she died from despondency.

Morgan Buys Diamonds.

The jewels from the coffers of the royal houses of yesterday are slowly finding their way to the caskets of the new potentates of the American investment empire. This is revealed again by an anecdote on J. P. Morgan's entry into the world diamond trade. W. G. Sibley, editorial writer of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, commenting on Morgan's new diamond syndicate, tells of a luncheon at which Morgan took from his pocket a ruby ring stating that it was the finest ruby in the world. Originally it had been part of the collection of the deposed sultan of Turkey, Abdul Hamid. Morgan had been after it for eight years.

INLAND STEEL COMPANY IMPOSING 10-HOUR DAY ON STEEL MILL LABOR

Shortage of steel is given as the excuse for a new schedule of working hours in the sheet bar and thirty-six-inch bloomer mills at plant No. 1 of the Inland Steel Company, Indiana Harbor. Effective yesterday, two ten-hour shifts, instead of three eight-hour shifts, will be worked. Extra shifts will work, alternately with the men in both departments.

MacMILLAN EXPEDITION PLANS TO GIVE UP QUEST FOR NORTH POLE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Unable to overcome the enormous difficulties presented by unseasonable weather, ice and fog, the MacMillan arctic expedition today abandoned its primary purpose—the aerial exploration of the vast, unchartered polar areas—and after some further exploration in Greenland and Baffin Island, will return to the United States.

The decision to abandon the ambitious project was reached this morning following receipt of a radio message from MacMillan, stating that he and the other members of the expedition now agree that establishment of an advanced base on Cape Hubbard and exploring the polar seas from that point is not feasible for this year in the time left before the Bowdoin and Peary would have to leave Etah ahead of the ice barrier.

Unexpected summer snow storms, continuous fog and unprecedented weather conditions which prevent flying were given as the reason.

Commander MacMillan has been advised by the National Geographic Society to follow his judgment in the matter and to proceed to the other exploration as soon as he deems wise, leaving the polar sea work for a subsequent effort.

BELGIAN DEBT SETTLEMENT TO STIR BRITAIN

Imperialist Rivalry Under the Surface

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 19—Trouble is ahead for all concerned in the monumental and unpayable war debts European nations owe to America, as a result of the settlement of the debt with "poor little Belgium."

Belgium won more leniency from the American debt commission than any other nation has so far, and this is bound to set the rest of the debtor nations into a clamor for similar treatment. The Belgians got a separation between the money loaned them before the armistice and that loaned afterward.

Rubbing It Into England.

On the first, Belgium is to pay no interest at all, and is given 62 years to pay the principal of $171,000,000. On the after the war loans, Belgium is asked to pay only three and a half per cent interest. This is lower than the interest charged Great Britain when she funded her debt to America, and not a word was said about forgiving England the interest on money she borrowed prior to the armistice.

American imperialism is driving England into asking for new terms in order to have a bargaining point to force England to stop gouging American business with the British cast iron rubber monoply, which is causing financial pain to American auto manufacturers especially.

While American treasury officials are sending out their alibi to forestall complaints from other nations over the favors shown Belgium, this is not expected to stop the loud yowls of either Italy, France or England, altho England has already funded her debt and agreed on interest rates, etc. Italy and France have done much talking but no action.

The American government's excuse to dodge similar consideration for other debtor nations is seen in the following statement:

Woody Did It.

"While no legal obligation rests upon the United States in this matter of foregoing interest on the pre-armistice debt, there does exist a weighty moral obligation as a result of asurances given by Woodrow Wilson at the Versailles peace conference, which entirely differentiates this sum from all other debts due to the United States from foreign countries."

CIGARMAKERS CONVENTION KILLS PLAN TO ELECT OFFICERS; PERKINS USES ENERGY TO SELL INSURANCE

BOSTON, August 20.—Organizers for the Cigar Makers' International Union will continue to be named by the general president of the union, subject to confirmation by the executive board, instead of districts electing their own organizers as proposed by delegate Manuel Roman of Chicago. President George Perkins spoke against the change. Roll call vote was refused and the amendment was defeated by a general vote of delegates to the 25th convention.

New members will not be subject to assessments for six instead of four months, according to convention decision. The weekly dues payment system was sustained over a proposed monthly payment plan, which, it was argued, would reduce the bookkeeping. Vice-president Van Horn read an exhaustive report on life insurance for trade unionists compiled by the American Federation of Labor Insurance committee composed of George Perkins and Matthew Woll.

The executive board submitted a resolution that the convention subscribe to 500 shares at $20 each to aid the incorporation of this plan. Local unions are to be advised of this and also asked to subscribe.

Delegate Foley of Local 520, was requested by President Perkins to set forth the New Haven strippers' situation in a letter so that the matter might be taken up with Secretary Frank Morrison of the A. F. of L. Foley claims that the New Haven local strippers are still paying per capita tax to the A. F. of L. altho Samuel Gompers had promised that the federation would accept no more taxes if strippers entered the International Union.

A collection of over $100 was taken up at one of the convention sessions and given Mary Kelleher for the striking threat workers of Willimantic, Conn., in whose behalf she had spoken.

British Communists Ask Labor Party and Congress to Speak Up

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The British Communist Party has forwarded to the National Labor Party and the general council of the Trade Union Congress lettters appealing for the issuance of a manifesto to the army and navy to the effect that the organized forces of capitalism were prepared to use the army and navy to hold the workers under control or shoot them down if they showed resistance.

Steck Increases His Lead.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Daniel F. Steck, democrat, today increased his lead over senate Smith W. Brookhart in the contested Iowa senatorial election.

In the same counties, 5,336 votes were challenged, of which 4,068 were for Brookhart, and 1,266 for Steck.

CHIEF SPY OF POLISH TERROR MEETS HIS FATE

Killed by Communist, Labor Movement Glad

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 20. — The king of the agents provocateurs of the Polish government, Cechnowski, is dead. Cechnowski, who can be compared only to Azeff in the Russian revolutionary movement, was killed by a young Communist, Botwin.

Cechnowski, who was chief of the government's spy organization, was a prominent member of the social-democratic party of Poland and Lithuania. This party became the Communist Party, and Cechnowski was a member of the district committee in Warsaw. He is responsible for hundreds of arrests of the best comrades in the party, including many members of the central executive committee.

Caused Deaths of Workers.

The spy became exposed in the Baginski and Wecsorkiewics trial. It was his false testimony on which the court condemned them to death. They were to be exchanged by the Soviet government, but were murdered on the way.

On July 17 three comrades, Gibner, Rutkowski and Kniewski, were engaged in a battle with this beast when the Warsaw polire interfered. Fifteen of the police were killed or wounded and after these three comrades were wounded they were arrested. The bloody Polish government is preparing the gallows for them.

But Cechnowski got what was coming to him. From Warsaw he went to Lemberg for the trial of the young Communist, Botwin, who killed him.

Labor Rejoices.

The whole labor movement in Poland rejoices in the death of this rat who has for so long preyed upon the workers. The police arrested Comrade Botwin, but they did not get a single word from him. They tortured him, but the only answer they received was, "I did my Communist duty."

Mass arrests are now going on in Lemberg. The reactionary press is demanding a mass terror against the Communists.

Laborer Is Buried Alive.

Threats and Lies Fail to Free German Fascist Terrorists

of the form and the tactics for the defense. He requested to be released from his duties as defending counsel. The court granted the request.

The speech of the defending counsel, Ozep, on behalf of Ditmar then followed. Ozep declared that the passivity of the defense during the proceedings was to be explained by the fact that the interests of Ditmar were in opposition to those of the other defendants. The actual terrorist intent of the expedition was beyond all doubt. The origin of the program of the expedition came with as little doubt from the organization consul.

The defending counsel then discussed the statements of Kindermann upon the alleged hypnotism. It was just the German legal authorities which had recently discussed the application of hypnotism for the ascertainment of legal truth. The attacks of the German press were all the more absurd as it was proved without any possibility of objection that hypnotism had not been used in the present process.

The question was, did the death sentence demanded represent the real nature of the accusations. A further question was, could the objective psychological methods be applied to a crime. The human personality was the result of circumstances. Economic suroundings formed character. Such a theoretical introduction was intended as a measure of the objective guilt of the accused. What conditioned the terrorist intent? This could be seen from the indictment. In his book, "Four Years of Political Murder," Gumbel had charactterized the situation in Germany. In Germany political murder had become a daily occurrence almost a profession.

This in the last resort was the explanation for the terrorist expedition. Therefore the whole weight of the responsibility could not be laid upon the shoulders of the accused. Recently many confessions had been made, therefore there was a general mistrust against confessions. The confession of Ditmar, however, had a value in the process, was completely frank and would seem to indicate a turning point in the life of the accused. If such honesty were established, then the question was, is Ditmar a fascist, or one in whom the possibility of such a turning point should not be denied?

Hope for Ditmar.

Ditmar had acted decently during the trial. He had admitted having been a fascist. He had not betrayed his comrades. This had been proved by the declaration of the prosecutor that the statements of Ditmar followed the confession of Kindermann. The accusation of treachery returned to Kindermann. Ditmar had given reasons for his change of mind. Could it be believed that from the Ehrhardt ideology of yesterday a way out were possible?

The defending counsel believed that the experiences of the last few months had made a great impression upon the accused. The truthfulness of his change of mind should and could not be denied. Ditmar was fully aware of his complete isolation. He could expect no assistance from the Esthonian government. There could be no doubt that the paragraph 61 applied to the case, but not the paragraph 64 referring to terrorist intent. It was doubtful if the activity of Ditmar in the preparation of the terrorist acts was covered by this paragraph.

If the conviction existed that Ditmar, in consequence of the things seen by him in Russia, had freed himself from the suggestion of terrorism, then perhaps in his case the principle that not only the carrying out of terrorist acts, but also the intent to carry out terrorist acts should be punished, did not apply. Trotsky had declared that the terror is powerless against a rising class. This class had the right to exercise generosity and indulgence.

Workers Angry At German Legation.

Whilst the accused Wolscht gave up his earlier attitude and appeared completely broken down, Kindermann maintained, tho fear showed in his eyes, in his declarations, his insolence and provocation tho with faltering voice.

In the course of the session, the Legationsrat Hilger appeared in the court. This tactlessness called forth general indignation, all the more as public opinion is by no means convinced that there is no connection between Hilger and the accused.

Horrors! G. P. U. Passed Cigarets.

The fifteenth session opened with the speech of Kindermann in his own defense. He repeated and summarized his former statements. He declared in his well known megalomania that his arrest called forth world-wide interest. The examining judge had only supplied the material of proof in order to avoid punishment from his superiors. Kindermann declared further that his arrest had caused incalculable damage to his German fatherland. He complained of his treatment by the G. P. U. He declared that each prisoner was given 25 cigarets per day and that this must inevitably lead to consumption.

He recounted real Nick Carter stories about alleged horrors in the G. P. U. He had not seen them it was true, but they had been told to him by fellow prisoners, he alleged. The acquaintance with Baumann had made him a fascist nationalist. On the 27th of January he had celebrated the birthday of the kaiser. The letter to the Berlin University had been signed by him under a mysterious pressure, however, not under hypnotism. The pen wrote against his will (laughter).

Also the letter to the Comintern was written under the orders of Baumann, but in the hope of being soon released. Kindermann declared that Baumann's hypnotism of him in the making of the protocal had taken place by Baumann placing his hand upon his, Kindermann's shoulder (laughter). An Hungarian lieutenant of the hussars had met Kindermann in prison, so the latter alleged, the lieutenant wanted to shoot Bela Kun. During the course of the proceedings it had been ascertained that such a person only existed in the imagination of Kindermann.

Kindermann declared that he had applied a retrosuggestive process to himself, so that he was able to remember what took place under the hypnotism (laughter). The chairman interrupted the defendant in his speech and pointed out to him that he was introducing a whole row of new facts about which he had said nothing during the course of the process. Kinderman continued in the form of a cheap novel to retail his impressions of the mysterious pressure to which he allegedly had been subjected, and said that in those days he had suffered from high fever. It is a fact that Kindermann was examined by the doctors at that time who diagnosed delirium. Kindermann declared that the Hungarian hussar lieutenant had suddenly appeared to him and when he, Kindermann, turned round, the Hungarian as suddenly disappeared (laughter).

Kindermann declared further that he had promised on his own initiative to the examining judge that if he were released he would keep silent upon the happenings in the G. P. U. Apart from this, Kindermann declared that he was in possession of a secret about questions concerning Germany which he would have to take into the grave with him (laughter). The whole speech for the defense carefully evaded all the concrete results of the process and concentrated mainly upon fantastic fairy tales about the G. P. U. The whole attitude of Kindermann showed clearly that he had chosen the form of his speech in order to be able to make sensational revelations about the G. P. U. after the style of Popoff after his exchange with Germany, upon which he apparently reckons.

Finally Kindermann demanded that his affair be settled thru diplomatic channels. He further demanded the re-opening of the proceedings and demanded the death sentence, not for himself, but for the examining judge. (Storms of laughter).

The chairman declared that the question of a re-opening of the proceedings should have been dealt with before the speeches for the defense. The court considered in any case a reopening of the proceedings was impossible.

Threatens Soviet Union.

Thereupon Wolscht made a declaration in a challenging manner in which he rejected the possibility of defending himself. He was a representative of the German students whose organizations had been slandered in this court and he did not feel himself called up to defend the honor of these organizations here. This would soon be done by other people and in another place (stirring in the body of the court). He would hardly be able to influence the court as apparently the opinions of the Isvestia and the Pravda were decisive for the Russian public.

The closing speech of the public prosecutor, Krylenko, then followed in which he pointed out that the defense had not been able to produce counter-arguments. Kindermann limited himself to the attempt to justify baseless and invented statements by statements still more indefensible. Kindermann had based his defense upon fairy tales of hypnotic influence which had been destroyed by Kindermann's own further statements.

The declaration of Wolscht showed the real countenance and provocative nature of the accused clearly. What was the relation between the friendship of Kindermann and Baumann, who sang the Ehrhardt hymn and other nationalist songs together, an hypnotism? The only certainly proved thing was the friendship between the two. The protocol remains a fact. Kindermann himself was compelled to admit that neither the examining judge nor Baumann could possibly have known the facts recorded in the protocol. It is characteristic that Kindermann refrained from inviting the mysterious Hungarian as a witness, for he did not believe in the existence of this Hungarian himself.

Kindermann's defense was simply the attitude of a man who did not know what to do but to lie wholeheartedly. Kindermann believed that he had found the correct way when he lied in accordance with the phantasies of the reactionary press and hoped to have the greatest success the more cynically and insolently he lied. When Kindermann declares that all three are innocent so is this absolutely logical from his point of view, for it is his task to make his fantastic statements worthy of belief and those of Ditmar unworthy.

Accepts Fascists' Challenge.

And the political circules which stand behind Kindermann do the same, not because they are so much concerned with the lives of the accused, but with the compromising statements of Ditmar. Wolscht's declaration that he will not avail himself of the possibility of defense is only unusual in the first moment, it becomes perfectly understandable in connection with that part of his declaration in which he threatens in a challenging manner that other people in another place will answer the accusations. We understand this declaration and keep it in mind. The threats of Wolscht light up strongly the real political significance and the real nature of the accused.

We have taken off the gloves and we accept the challenge of the German fascists. The prosecutor recalled his words of the previous day in which he had said that the Kindermann group was only the first group of fascism in Russia and that others would follow. The fascists are welcome, we possess sufficient devoted comrades, and have command of sufficient resources to prevent the realization of their plans in time. With regard to Ditmar, the prosecutor saw no possibility of ligthening the punishment.

After the close of the prosecutor's speech, the counsel for the defense of Ditmar, Ozep, requested belief for the honesty of Ditmar and declared that the turn in the ideology of Ditmar must be accepted as a satisfaction by the social revolution which was able to bring a determined fascisht of aristocratic origin to a recognition of the social truth.

Then followed a declaration of Wolscht to the effect that if the prosecutor chose to see a fascist in him, it was all the same to him.

The chairman then gave the accused the last word.

Terrorist Thanks German Embassy.

Kindermann declared shortly that his statements had been incorrect, and that the judgment should not be based upon him, otherwise the cause of justice would suffer. Wolscht expressed his thanks to the German embassy, the German press, in particular the Berliner Tageblatt for their many and various efforts upon his behalf and declared that the chief thing for him was to hold his national ideas and his Germanism high.

Then followed Ditmar who declared that he had made his statements neither from revenge nor from egotism, but from the conviction that he must speak the truth. "I understand very well, declared Ditmar, "that it does not suit the German press that a Baltic aristocrat should speak the truth, but they should leave me and my honorable name in peace. I stress once again that up to the confession of Kindermann, and despite the fact that at that time I had already changed my political convictions, despite the fact that I had found myself to be deceived in the nationalist idea, I persisted in the refusal to make any statements whatsoever to the examining judge, and only when the confession of Kindermann had been made did I consider that I had a freedom of action.

Blames Social-Democrats.

"With regard to the Berlin Vorwaerts, the organ of the social democrats who sold their fatherland to the entente for thirty pieces of silver, which asks how it was possible that I received permission to enter the Soviet Union, I must explain that I received this permission thanks to my Communist membership book and thanks to my Esthonian pass in which was contained the name Ditmarin and in which nothing was mentioned about my origin. The whole Kindermann expedition and my participation in it is a provocation on the part of the social democratic Berlin police presidium.

"Apart from the exhibits in this process lying before us, there are two others (pointing to Kindermann and Wolscht). Certain circles of bourgeois society have used us for their aims and they are responsible for our lives. I would go more peacefully to my death, the unavoidability of which is clear to me without the declaration of the prosecutor, if I were convinced that the German youth would learn something from this process, if it would refuse to allow itself to be misused for crimes against the Soviet republic.

"I came to Russia with the conceptions which are current abroad upon the state of affairs here. I expected to see desolation, and the collapse of economy and of cultural life, and I met exactly the opposite. This led to a change in my whole ideology. My relations with the non-party intellectuals in Moscow who work hand in hand with the Soivet government was decisive for me in this connection.

"In the factories and offices I saw that the work was not performed merely for wages, but also from a feeling of duty. I was convinced that I would meet the 'red monster,' and this feeling pressed the revolver into my hand, instead of that I met the work of reconstruction and honesty of purpose. I am far from a friend of the G. P. U., but I regard it to be my duty to recognize the form of treatment, the cleanliness and the food in the prisons of the G. P. U.

"Such is to be wished for in the prisons in all the countries of Europe. I stand now behind the Soviet power, I recognize its policy to be the best way to develop national characteristics, in particular those of the previously suppressed nationalities. I do not beg for mercy, I shall await the execution of the death sentence peacefully. I will die as I have lived."

The court then withdrew for the purpose of deliberation.

R. R. UNIONS SUPPORT BOB JR. IN WISC.

Think He'll Save Taxes for Their Bosses!

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 20.—The Wisconsin railroad brotherhood endorsed the candidacy of Robert M. La Follette Jr. to succeed his father in the United States senate at a meeting here and will be active in support of La Follette's campaign, according to an announcement yesterday.

The announcement came from R. F. Green, Lacrosse Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers; J. K. Murphy, Spooner; L. M. Maloney, Stevens Point Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and P. F. Zeimtec, Madison Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. A campaign organization has been formed with the men named chairman, vice chairman, treasurer, and secretary, respectively.

In a statement the officers of the railroad committee declared that La Follette Jr. was the best fitted to carry on the work of his father.

Worried for the Poor Railroads!

The statement reviews the record of Senator I. L. Lenroot and declares that if there has been a tax reduction by the federal government, railroads haven't noticed it. "Brothers, the eyes of the nation will be on Wisconsin during the coming campaign. They are looking for us to continue to lead the way. We must not disappoint them. The progressive movement must go forward," the statement declares.

LENIN LABORED FOR FREEDOM OF WORKING WOMEN

Krupskaya Tells of His Activities

By N. KRUPSKAYA.

MOSCOW—(By Mail) — Vladimir Ilyitch's mind was always occupied with the working and peasant women, trying to find ways and means of awakening their consciousness and of drawing them into the movement and into the various organizations.

Whilst still in Siberia he advised me to write a pamphlet on working women. I wrote the pamphlet and he helped me with his advice, and when subsequently, he went abroad to publish there the illegal paper Iskra he took care that this pamphlet was also published. Whenever there was an opportunity to do something which would help to awaken the consciousness of working and peasant women Vladimir Ilyitch invariably lent a helping hand. Those who carried on work among women; myself and Comrade Ines who gave up her life to the work among working and peasant women, Comrade Stahl and others always went to Vladimir Ilyitch for advice, and we never went in vain.

All his speeches and articles bear testimony to how much he was concerned with the liberation of working and peasant women, with making them class conscious and drawing them into constructive work.

There is another thing I would like to tell you: There was a congress of Moslem working and peasant women, and you know that in the East they are even more backward and oppressed than with us. Vladimir Ilyitch talked to these women, and then he discussed the matter with me. He said: "Now that the lowest, the most oppressed of the oppressed have risen, everything is alright, there can be no more turning back."

Comrades begin to lead a conscious life, study, reconstruct life in such a way that everyone may live comfortably. Rally to the Red banner of Communism.

Peking Government Invites Powers to Oct. 26 Conference

PEKING, Aug. 20.—Invitations to imperialist powers to attend a Chinese customs conference, beginning Oct. 26, were forwarded by the Peking government recently. Altho called in conformity with the Washington conference agreements, which contemplated merely an advance on the present flat tariff rate, China is expected to ask the powers to discuss the question of tariff autonomy on the grounds of a widespread demand for it from all classes in China.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work; sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system."

Free Contract.—The first modification was transforming the conscription of the peasants' labor into a corvee; and this tax in labor became within a year a tax in money. At the same time the restoration of private employers and the reorganization of State enterprises on a business basis made compulsory labor impossible and free agreement inevitable. A decree of November 3rd, 1921, therefore, abolished extra compulsory labor in all State enterprises. But compulsion in principle was maintained largely from fear of a general flight from Government into private employment; and it was applied by the Commissariat of Labor so as to favor Government enterprises in their first competition with the private employer. The Trade Unions, however, were determined to secure complete freedom of contract and the Fifth Congress, September, 1922; finally ratified it. The Labor Code of November, 1922, restricted compulsory labor to "occasions of general crisis"—thus preserving it in principle while abolishing it in practice.

Thereafter, employment has been based on free contract subject to regulations of the usual character and the collective or local agreement, if any. This "voluntary agreement" (v. par. 9 of Code) is to be effected through Employment Exchanges. But so many exceptions are scheduled, that there is practically nothing to prevent a direct engagement; which must, however, be registered. The employer has, subject to the agreement, the right of discharge in the event of:—

- (a) Complete or partial closing down;
- (b) Completion of the work or of the period of engagement.
- (c) Absence from work or obvious incapacity. But at least a fortnight's notice of discharge is required, and the employe may appeal to the local Department of Labor.

Restoration of Wages

The demobilization of War Communism under the New Economic Policy brought a gradual return to money wages. The restoration of an economic system based on money and free trade in food, made wage-rations no longer necessary. But as the industries could not support their employes, a whole series of systems for subsidizing their wage funds were tried in rapid succession. These systems, costly as they were in a time of depreciating currency, served to tide over the difficult transition of demobilizing the worker and making him again dependent on what he himself earned.

The Fourth All-Russian Congress of Trade Unions in May, 1921, recommended that wages should again be based on collective agreements.

Collective Agreements

The conclusion of collective agreements began in about April, 1922, and grew so rapidly that the State had difficulty in fitting them into its socialist system. It was, however, decided by the Fifth Congress of Trade Unions against the opinion of the Supreme Economic Council of People's Commissaries that these agremeents should not be compulsory, as that would amount to a return to State regulation of wages. Thus the attempt of the Voronej Trade Union organizations to force an agreement on private enterprises was stopped by Moscow. Agreements are defined as "free agreements between Trade Unions and employers for defining the contents of subsequent individual contracts of engagement."

A model agreement of 49 clauses has been drawn up by the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions and this, combined with the Labor Code, and other legislation, has reduced agreements in size from the 200 to 300 clauses they ran to at first. It has also reduced the number of disputes. The agreement can be general or local. The central authorities favored general agreements because they meant higher wages. After a controversy, it was resolved that general agreements before conclusion should be submitted to local criticism, and should in no case exclude local agreement. Only the Trade Union has power to conclude them on behalf of the workers, and the Joint Conciliation Committees have now no such power. There have been complaints that agreements are too often made without any reference to the workers. They are applicable to all employes, whether unionists or not; which is opposed in principle to French and German legislation, and not always observed in Russian practice. Thus of 300 collective agreements in the Ukraine only 161 were so applicable—and 59 were specifically restricted to unionists. Other agreements which provided priority of employment for unionists, or their substitution for non-unionists, or attributed administrative functions to the Joint Conciliation Committee have been disallowed by the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions as an interference with the management not in the general interests of the workers or the industry. The Council has also stopped attempts of the local authorities, as in Yaroslav and Nijny-Novgorod, to assert their right to ratify and revise agreements.

The Trade Unions have worked hard for the conclusion of collective agreements and on an average, about 82 per cent. of union members now work under such agreements—in the case of transport workers, as many as 98 per cent. Even farm workers are now being brought under them. Agreements must be registered with the Commissariat of Labor, which can refuse to register provisions contrary to the Labor Code and other legislation; though it is still in dispute whether unregistered provisions can be enforced. The duration of an agreement is fixed by the Commissariat of Labor and the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions.

Breach of Agreements

Under the Labor Code, the Trade Unions are not pecuniarily responsible for breaches of agreement. But under regulations of the Commissariat of Labor, employing enterprises are so liable; and it is to be noted that the economic basis of these agreements is somewhat different from that of similar agreements elsewhere. In capitalist countries they are the result of a conflict between the economic power at the moment of Capital on one side and Labor on the other. In Russia they are an agreement between the Trade Union and the State as to how much of the profits can be distributed as a dividend to the worker owner and how much must go to reserve and re-equipment, etc.

Disputes

Under "War Communism" and Labor Conscription, there could be no disputes either as to the rates of wages or conditions of work. The Trade Unions' functions in this respect became, theoretically, merely disciplinary; though their informal conciliation committees did as a matter of fact, settle disputes by negotiation. But as everything came to be done under agreements, something had to be done about disageements. The Trade Union could no longer be both party and judge. So in January, 1922, Conciliation Committees representing equally employers and employed were set up to deal only with disputes within the factory. This was followed in July by Conciliation Chambers and Arbitration Courts. There has been and still is much conflict and confusion between the powers of these Courts and those of the Conciliation Committees of the Trade Union and their superior organs the Committees of the Commissariat of Labor. The Trade Unions fought hard for their right to settle disputes in defiance of resolutions of the Fifth Trade Union Congress (September, 1922), and the Labor Code (November, 1922). But the Government none the less finally abolished the disputes committees of the Commissariat of Labor and set up Labor Courts for disputes on individual agreements. Nevertheless the unions still encroach on the Courts. The report to the Sixth Congress plaintively reproaches the unions—especially the tanners and chemists for such proceedings. Indeed, even apart from such encroachments the work of the unions in settling disputes by negotiation seems to be increasing. Thus 75 per cent. of the industrial disputes in 1923 were settled amicably by the unions; the remainder going to the Courts or Conciliation Chambers.

The new Labor Code divides disputes into legal and industrial—that is, into individual disputes arising from contracts and general disputes arising from collective greements. Individual disputes in private enterprises go before the Labor Courts. In these disputes during 1923 central awards were given cent. they were in the workers' favor. Local awards decided against 15 per cent. of the workers involved, compromised for 40 per cent. and favored wholly 45 per cent. Disputes diminished in 1923 and again in 1924. Disputes were caused in proportion of 56.2 per cent by differences in negotiations or revision of collective agreements. Interpretation and application of the agreements caused 16.6 per cent. While 25.2 per cent., involving only 4.9 per cent. of the workers, were caused by differences outside the agreements. Three-quarters of those disputes were concerned with rates of wages and regulation of payment.

Strikes

The right to strike under an industrial system based on private capital is a constant protection against the exploitation of the worker by the wealthy. The right to strike is maintained against only 15 per cent of the 1,500,000 workers involved; in the case of 70 per cent. they were compromises, and in 15 per in Russia. But since all industry is either conducted or closely controlled by the community the strike has changed its function. The worker enjoys all profits from the industry after proper provision for re-equipment, reserves, etc. He no longer strikes to protect himself or the community from exploitation by private interests, but only as a protest against administrative mismanagement or mal-practice, such as delay in wage payments, etc.

(a) In State Enterprises.—The official and Trade Union attitude to strikes is that under a Soviet system strikes should not be a normal procedure in State enterprises. They should only be sanctioned in clear cases of abuse of authority and should aim at its correction. Consequently there were during 1923 only 11 strikes involving 1,026 workers in Government enterprises—and these small ones. Strikes diminished in 1923, as compared with 1922, by 12 per cent. in number, by 14 per cent. in workers involved and by 30 per cent. in average duration. These strikes were mainly due to delays in wage payments. Strikes seem with growing frequency to break out against the policy of the unions.

(b) In Private Factories. — The policy with regard to strikes in private establishments, as laid down by the Fifth Congress of Trade Unions, was that they were not to be too constantly resorted to, and the unions seem on the whole to have been moderate. When there has been a strike it has generally been on a dispute arising about an arbitral award. Such strikes in private enterprises increased in 1923 to 135 involving 5,200 workers, from 99 involving 4,800 in 1922. Their duration also increased by 40 per cent. They were in proportion of 64 per cent. not about wages but about conditions of work, and they were settled in proportion of 76 per cent. wholly and of 11 per cent. partly in favor of the workers.

(c) Labor Exchanges.—The return to free contract made it necessary to convert the Sections for Distribution of Labor into Employment Exchanges of the usual type. And in 1922 the unions got the management of the Exchanges reorganized as Joint Committees representing the Commissariat of Labor, the Trade Unions, and the economic authorities. The Chairman of the Joint Committee is appointed by the local Labor Department, and there are three members representing respectively the Provincial Economic Council, Agricultural Department, and Transport Department, and three nominees of the Provincial Inter-Trade Union Council. The decisions of the Committee can be repealed by the local Labor Department subject to appeal to Moscow. When unemployment in any industry reaches a certain figure, special technical sections are set up by the unions for dealing with it. These technical sections working with their union often succeed in ousting the Employment Exchange.

Unemployed over 16 years, whether with other means of support or no, must be registered; those seeking a change of employment may be. Skliled workers must give proof of their capacity. An employe seeking work is consulted when assigned to a job, and only at times of acute unemployment is he given other work than his own. He must report for registration monthly, and failure to do so entails removal from the register, with loss of relief or relegation to the bottom of the list. Theoretically, all engagements were to be made through the Exchange, but from the beginning the right of the employer to reject the worker offered him was recognized.

The Exchanges proved, however, to be incapable of dealing with the rapid increase of unemployment that followed the demobilization of labor. By 1922 unemployment was serious, and its average duration two to four months. By 1923 this had extended to eight months. The registers were as much as half-filled with applicants for work in which they were not qualified; who had registered for the sake of getting the benefits belonging to workers. The real workers failed to get placed. The practice grew up of direct engagement subject to formal ratification by the Exchange, which also gave rise to many abuses. Illegal exchanges also sprang up. By the spring of 1923 there was a strong movement for making engagements through the Exchange voluntary; and by the regulations of August 13th, 1923, direct engagement is recognized and need only be registered. Meantime, the work of the Exchanges is still disorganized by the difficulty of reconciling the right, in principle, of the employed to work with the right, in practice, of the employer to refuse it.

Unemployment

Unemployment began in the autumn of 1922, with the demobilization of the overgrown officialdom of War Communism, and grew with the dismissal from the industrial payroll of a whole population of what were practically State pensioners. To these have been added the victims of the "axe" in educational and other economies; these representing in 1922 nearly 70 per cent. of the total. As these unemployed were for the most part non-proletarian, their plight did not at first cause undue disquiet; and as elsewhere, these unfortunates seem by now to have been somehow absorbed. But their numbers went to swell the registers of the Employment Exchanges, from which in the course of the following year repeated efforts were made to get rid of them as unemployables. Some success in this probably partly accounts for the recent decrease in figures of unemployment of brain workers. The increase in unemployment of unskilled workers can partly be accounted for by their return to the towns now that War Communism and food scarcity are safely over. Even so, only 54 per cent of the workers in industrial employ before the war have been re-employed as yet; the remainder being unemployed or having returned to the land.

The total unemployment figures for 84 towns and 219 counties was on December 1st, 1923, 1,042,000, and on April 1st, 1924, 1,369,000.

The percentage of Trade Unionists unemployed rose from 8.6 per cent on October 1st, 1923, to 11.7 per cent on January 1st, 1924—a seasonal increase. It was as high as 24 per cent among teachers. This is partly accounted for by the middle class, especially women, having flooded the teaching profession, to obtain rations under War Communism, partly by economies in education. The proportion of Trade Unionists is 41 per cent; which is also the proportion of the total taken by the unemployed of Moscow and Leningrad.

The percentage of total unemployment taken by women is very high—no less than 40 per cent. The percentage of women employed to the total employment has fallen from over half in 1922 to nearly a quarter in 1924. In view of its results in increasing prostitution, special steps are being taken to restore women to employment.

Unemployment Remedies

The way of dealing with the evils of unemployment is very like our own. The same sort of program of public works (including general electrification) hampered in the same way by the necessity of economy. The 1924 appropriation amounted to 1,700,000 roubles and 1,500,000 worker-days employment were given.

Public works for relief of unemployment were put in hand, but these enterprises were on no very large scale, and had no very great effect. About 5 per cent to 7 per cent of the unemployed were thus relieved.

AUTOMOBILE BARONS GET BIG PROFIT

Take from 26 to 266 Per Cent Velvet

By LELAND OLDS.
Federated Press.

A profit of $7,292,443 turned over to the millionaire owners of the Nash Motors Co. in the first half of 1925 calls attention to the fact that the Fords are not the only employers to find a bonanza in the scientific speeding up of auto workers. Financial papers figure this as a return of $24.79 a share. But analysis of Nash financial history shows that the owners are taking at least 266 per cent return on their investment.

For an original investment of $100 the owners received one share each of preferred and common stock. Then in 1922 the company used some of its excess profits to buy back the preferred stock at $110. The original investors thus got their holdings in common stock for $10 less than nothing. The company then proceeded to give three shares of 7 per cent preferred stock and 5 shares of common stock for each original share of common. Thus an original investment of $100, later more than repaid, was transformed into 3 shares of preferred each entitled to $3.50 half year's dividends and 5 shares of common with half year's profits of $24.79 a share.

The owners now have an investment with market value over $2,500 for each share of common stock originally received as a purchasers bonus to preferred stock.

General Motors, the big Morgan-Dupont auto combine, reports a 6 month profit of $46,460,274. This exceeds the profits of the entire year of 1924. It means $42,460,274 for the common stockholders or about $9 a share on the no-par stock. As this stock has a book value of $50 a share the half year's profit is at an annual rate of [illegible] per cent.

General Motors has accumulated $108,889,000 in undivided profits. It holds in its treasury $139,375,062 in cash and securities, a gain of more than $100,000,000 since last year.

Record-breaking profits are reported by Dodge Brothers, the auto concern recently purchased by Dillon, Read and Co., leading Wall Street financiers. In 6 months it produced $16,487,891 for its owners. This means about $9,480,000 for the holders of common stock which was all issued as a bonus to the owners.

Dillon, Read and their associates kept 1,150,000 shares of this common stock. Consequently their 6 month profit will be over $5,400,000. Added to the $14,000,000 in cash which they lifted from the treasury before reorganizing the company and the profit from selling to the public at $159,250,000 property for which they paid $146,000,000 this ought to make the half year fairly satisfactory.

Studebaker Corporation with a half year's profit of $10,122,048 also belongs in the group. This profit means a gain of 33 per cent over last year. It represents a profit of $5.24 a share or 13 per cent on common stock worth about $40. This is at an annual rate of 26 per cent.

Taken together these four automobile companies had combined profits of more than $80,000,000 for the 6-month period.

Railway Clerks Want Reward for Bandits Applied to Bankers

CINCINNATI—(FP) — Commenting on the offer of Chicago bankers of a $2,500 reward to their employes or police if they kill bank bandits (only $1,000 if the bandit is arrested and convicted), The Railway Clerk, official organ of its brotherhood, says:

"How much greater would be the opportunity of annexing one of these $2,500 prizes if clerks and cops were paid for the killing of bank presidents or other inside operators in the act of getting away with the funds.

"In 1924 more than $7,000,000 was stolen from banks in the United States by bank officials and employes—inside workers. In the same period less than $2,000,000 was tolen in cash and securities from the United States banks by outside robbers.

"To give the employes a fair chance to make a little extra change, and for the protection of depositors, the reward ought to be paid for each officer bagged."

(We doubt that The Railway Clerk had Vice.-Pres. Dawes in mind.—Ed.)

Praise From the Enemy Is No Praise

Daniel O'Connel, famous Irish nationalist leader made a statement which became historic, when he said that whenever the British government paid him a compliment, he went home and examined his conscience. This is a good thing for the working class to bear in mind. When their leaders are praised by the capitalists or the agents of capitalism, it indicates that there is something the matter with the leaders.

The New York Times in a recent issue showered undiluted praise on Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America for establishing the so-called impartial machinery in the men's clothing industry in New York and also the establishment of a minimum standard of production, with the union, bound to enforce the terms of the agreement.

The editorial, without having any intention of being funny dilates on the alleged peace which Hillman's class collaboration policy brot about in the New York men's clothing industry. Perhaps the editorial writer did not read the story of the strike at the International Tailoring Company plant or of the vicious injunction against picketing handed down by Judge Churchill, a "friend of labor" who was endorsed by the New York Trades and Labor Council. No, the Times was not intent on providing the workers with something to giggle over. It was simply putting out propaganda for company unionism, towards which the policy of Hillman will inevitably lead the Amalgamated.

Hillman's beautiful dream, of substituting co-operation with the boss for the class struggle did not bring peace. It happens that the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers who slave in the shops have no guarantee of $7,500 a year strike or no strike, employment or unemployment, like their president, Mr. Hillman. This is where Hillman's class collaboration plan gets pricked by a needle. The tailors must strike or squeeze their belts a litle tighter. Then the courts come out with their injunctions. Or when the courts fail to do this the police arrest union officials and active union members and frame them up as they did in Chicago. Hillman is undoubtedly head over heels in love with class collaboration, but the rank and file are not smitten. Hence the police raids and the injunctions.

The Times editorial carried the following chunk of dynamite which is called to the attention of the members of the Amalgamated Clithing Workers: "The employers have asked for authority to penalize workers by deductions in their pay when they fall below the established standards of production. It is understood that the union has consented to the employers' proposal in return for their pledge to grant the union's demand and that a final agreement will be reached on that basis when the details are hammered out." This is a nice kettle of fish! If the Times version is correct, Hillman agrees to stand behind the tailor and see that he maintains a certain standard of production or else submit to having his pay envelope looted. Thus the Amalgamated instead of being a union to help its members in the constant struggle against the employers, would become a weapon in the hands of the employers playing the same role as the slave drivers of the South in the days prior to the civil war.

The Socialist Party of France

The congress of the socialist party of France voted to refuse further support to the Painleve government. The ostensible reason for this action is Painleve's failure to make public the peace terms offered by the French government to Abd-El-Krim. The real reason is two fold.

First: The socialists were not able to exact satisfactory terms from the Painleve government.

Secondly: The campaign carried on by the Communists against the Moroccan war which the socialists supported was rapidly alienating the remnants of its proletarian following from the socialist party. Hence the gesture of political purity.

The hypocrisy of this gesture is apparent. The French military leaders expect to win the Moroccan campaign by October. If they don't win by then, they admit the stiuation is hopeless. Parliament does not meet until the middle of October. Therefore the socialist resolution of approval does not affect the government's policy in Morocco.

If the French campaign against the Riffs is successful, Painleve will probably retain power despite the socialist defection. If it is a failure the aid of the socialists could not save him.

When parliament was in session, only the Communists opposed the Riff war. They were arrested and imprisoned for their attitude. The socialists agreed that France must defend her prestige in Morocco. They only disagreed with Painleve over the manner in which the war should be conducted.

Thus the socialists have given further evidence of their hypocrisy and their betrayal of the workers, while making a bluff at differentiating themselves from the capitalist parties. This camouflage will not forever fool the masses.

Wales in the Argentine

His royal highness, the prince of Wales is in the Argentine, on his father's business, so to speak. That is, he is serving as royal drummer for the imperial bagmen who sell the products of Britain in South America, in competition with the United States and other countries.

The prince is trying to undo the harm done by "Black" Jack" Pershing on a previous visit. Pershing was doing for Wall Street what the prince was doing for Threadneedle Street. It is another proof of the deadly competition between the two imperialist powers.

His royal highness is scheduled to open the national livestock show today. This will give him a good opportunity to sling the bull. That the prince is not traveling merely to sample various brands of hootch or test the respective terpsichorean merits of the daughters of many lands, is shown by the following paragraph in a news item from Buenos Aires:

"The prince finds British capital strongly intrenched and leading all other foreign investments. Investors hope that the present entertainment of the prince will have a beneficial influence on Argentine politicians who have a tendency to penalize British and other foreign capital at every opportunity." That's that. The pussy is out of the bag

What Is the Issue?

By Max Bedacht

THE American proletariat is as yet comparatively far removed from class consciousness: It does not yet exist as an independent factor. It does not yet function as a class. Thus to all intents and purposes the American proletariat is not yet formed as a class.

In this situation it becomes the task of the Communists to hasten the birth of the proletariat as a class.

In analyzing the political and economic situation in the United States our party must find the best means, the most adequate slogans and campaigns for the accomplishment of this task.

With a convention contemplated, it became the task of the leadership of our organization to analyze the political and economic situation in the country, to give our party the direction for its future work. It is in these analyses where eventual differences of concept existing in the party become apparent. Different evaluations of existing factors naturally lead to different conclusions and to different policies.

THE minority of the Central Executive Committee, in analyzing the situation came to the conclusion:

First, that the awakening of the American proletariat ot political consciousness is the most important immediate task of our party, and

Second, that a labor party slogan and campaign is the best means to accomplish it under existing conditions.

The majority of our Central Executive Cmmittee, on the other hand, came to different conclusions. It denied both of the contentions of the minority. It claimed:

First, that the American working class is sufficiently class conscious to accept Communist leadership,

Second, that the American working class is too backward to accept a labor party, and

Third, that a labor party campaign and slogan would not hasten the acceptance of Communist leadership by the American proletariat, but on the contrary, would retard it.

This different evaluation of the situation and the resulting difference in proposed orientation for our party became the issue before our party. This, and nothing else. The theses of both sides proved that; every article published in the discussion confirms it.

Since the decision of the Comintern there has been a consistent effort on the part of the majority of the C. E. C. to twist the issue. This tactic of our C. E. C. majority is only a manifestation of the lack of Bolshevik qualities of our party. In a Bolshevik party either the leadership would have a sufficient feeling of political responsibility to prevent it from beclouding the most important political issue before the party, because its duty is to clarify it—or a Bolshevik party would have a sufficiently clear membership to sweep from position of leadership any comrade who would dare, for the sake of retaining his position, to becloud issues instead of clarifying them.

THE majority of the Central Executive Committee is trying to make the party believe that the issue was not whether a labor party but what kind of a labor party. A cool consideration of the circumstances under which the controversy developed, will prove the falseness of that claim. The question of what kind of a labor party would naturally develop first of all in a situation where the party is confronted with a crystallization of a labor party. No such condition existed in November, 1924. The sole question which agitated the Central Executive Committee and the party was the question of whether or not it was advisable under existing circumstances to propogate among the American workers the formation of a labor party. The answer of the majority was no while the minority answered yes. The ever repeated argument of the majority that there is no sentiment for a labor party proves at once two things: first, that the argument was whether or not a labor party, and, second, that the majority did not understand the first postulate of the minority: that the awakening of the American proletariat to political consciousness is the most important task of our party.

The Communist International has made its decision. The question might be asked here: why is it necessary to dig down into the past when our future course is clearly prescribed by the decision of the Comintern. Our answer is that while the future course is clearly prescribed our party needs a pilot, a leadership which can navigate the waters of the American class struggle according to the prescribed course to the benefit of the American proletariat. It is not sufficient for the leadership to declare their general acceptance of the orders, but such leadership must also show the qualifications to carry them out. In judging the qualifications past performances become important considerations for the present.

AFTER we had established the exact nature of the issue we may consider the present attitude of the majority of the C. E. C. toward it. I have before me the minutes of the American commission of the Comintern. In its sixth session held April 25th, I find Comrade Foster speaking thus: "I want to state that in general the resolution is acceptable to the majority. However, there are some points there we feel should be amended. For example, on page six, the American text, the last sentence reads as follows: 'They feel that the slogan of a labor party is the general conclusion of all their everyday demands and then the slogan will possess irresistible force.'

"We propose," continues Comrade Foster, "that this sentence be struck out altogether as this sentence will tend to overstress entirely the role of the labor party. We tihnk that IT IS ACCEPTABLE and that the propagation of a labor party is not going to work out in that respect."

Here we have a pilot accepting orders and at the same time showing unmistakable signs that he firstly does not consider the order a good one that he considers essential parts of the order as unacceptable, and secondly that he does not understand the order at all. When Comrade Foster says that this sentence "tends to overstress entirely the role of the labor party" he proves that he does not yet understand why the propagation of a labor party is an important revolutionary issue in America. If Comrade Foster and the majority considers this an overstressing of the role of the labor party then he cannot consider the labor party an acceptable policy, because only on account of the labor party's role as a unifying slogan, driving home to the workers the political significance of the class struggle, is the labor party policy an important policy of the American Communist Party. If the labor party propaganda "is not going to work out in that respect" then the C. I. decision is wrong; then the minority is wrong and the majority is right. But since the majority, thru Comrade Foster's mouth, accepted the decision of the Comintern as correct it must also accept the premise upon which the decision was made, namely, that the labor party slogan tends to accomplish the task of awakening the proletarian masses in America to political consciousness.

The Comintern did not make its decision acceptable to the majority. It refused to concede to Comrade Foster's demands.

SINCE our majority refuses to accept the premises of the Comintern its protestations of acceptance of the C. I. decision are meaningless. Especially meaningless do these protestations become when they are made as a bid for leadership. Leadership does not only presuppose the acceptance of orders but demands also an understanding of the orders and a thoro agreement with them. Our majority has proven beyond doubt that it has neither the understanding nor is it in agreement with the labor party policy.

The majority is conscious of this shortcoming and therefore adopted the policy of switching the discussion from the real issue. This tactic is neither Bolshevik nor is it conducive to the development of Bolshevism in our party. Instead of driving home to the members an understanding of the general political orientation of our party it deliberately blocks such understanding and elevates the raising of fake issues to a political principle. If our party was ever confronted with the dangers of any "fake" it is the danger of fake issues raised by a leadership which was caught in the act of misdirecting the party.

AVALANCHE OF FANCY LYING BY ANTHRACITE OPERATORS PROVEN TO BE ANTI-UNION PROPAGANDA

By ALEX REID
(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)
(ARTICLE I—On Anthracite.)

A super-human attempt is being made at this time to misinform the miners and other workers thruout the country of the actual conditions existing in the Anthracite. Volumes of misleading figures are being sent thruout the country in an attempt to influence the workers against the miners in that part of the mining industry. Thousands of dollars of blood money wrung out of the miners' lives are being spent in this unholy campaign by the coal operators.

Some very important capitalist papers are quoting figures to show that the anthracite miners' wages vary from $1,200 to $6,500 per year. Truly, a very wide range of figures, but a standing reward will be paid any person who can show that the miners in the anthracite average $1,000 per year. The following table taken from the 1922 official report of the United States Coal Commission will show the hollowness of the capitalists' fake figures.

Eleven Classes.

Eleven classes of inside labor earn wages from $890 to $1,400 per year, and since that report was published, 10 per cent increase has been given the miners making the range jump to $990 to $1,500. It must be remembered that the above figures are gross earnings and no mention is made about the deductions that are taken off them.

The coal commission figures follow:

Bratticemen and carpenters	$1,425
Drivers	1,290
Doortenders and patchers, boys	890
Engineers	1,400
Headmen and footmen	1,335
Company laborers	1,345
Company miners	1,525
Pumpmen	1,430
Car runners	1,300
Timbermen	1,780
Tracklayers	1,430

It will be readily noticed that when the miners pay rent, doctor, insurance, lights, explosives, keep up their tools, etc., etc., there is very little left to feed a family.

The miners in the anthracite do not average $25 per week the year round. Most of the miners are burdened with large families. Considering the high cost of living anyone can easily see the condition of the hard coal slaves. The coal commission also reports that forty-nine per cent of the miners earned around one hundred dollars per month.

Found Miners' Families Ill-fed.

Further on in their report, they state that they investigated five hundred and fifty-five miners' homes, where earnings were low, and they found that the food consumed did not confrom in variety to the standards set by experts as essential for healthful living.

Why was the coal commission's report buried by the coal operators, and why has the fake leaders of the miners refused to carry on a campaign to have it published and broadcasted?

The commission clearly pointed out that living conditions at the mines were terrible, and recommended that the following improvements be installed at once: Living conditions to be improved, by water being brot into the houses; that bath houses should be provided, together with sanitary arrangements, and adequate sewerage facilities.

Even the Capitalist Government Disproves Lies.

The commission's report regarding wages was based on full time worked thruout the year. The work of the miners in the anthracite is of such a nature that no miner can stand up to it six days per week, and the result is his earnings are proportionately cut down.

In fact, the commission, referring to this situation, states that the miners, with a few exceptions, earn from $600 to $1,300 against a cost of living estimated at $2,000, and a careful reading of their report leads one to some very, very definite conclusions as to the steps to be taken to solve the coal problem.

Another instalment of the anthracite will be published in tomorrow's DAILY WORKER.

Armed Miners of Zeigler Defend Homes Against Terrorists

cold feet, and this morning only a few men tried to get into the mine.

There are 18 men arrested so far upon the warrants issued charging "conspiracy to murder." Among these are Henry Corbishley, deposed president of the Zeigler miners' local and a foe of the Farrington-klan machine. Others include Corbishley's two brothers and Matt Crjnoevich, a militant leader of the progressive miners' of this camp. The bail is set at $200 each, and Corbishley and his brother miners are now released. Other warrants are yet not served.

Set Hearing for Aug. 26.

The preliminary hearing is set for August 26. Attorney H. E. Morgan is retained for the defense. The spirit of the miners is running high against the labor fakers and the klan who have thus combined to intimidate and persecute them.

Warrants Sworn Out by Labor Faker.

Farrington has declared in the public press that he will drive the miners of Zeigler back to work, and the attempted armed terror of the ku klux klan is evidently his first effort. The warrants against the union miners were sworn out by one of the officials of the U. M. W. of A.—D. B. Cobb, vice-president of Sub-District 9.

Cobb and Lon Fox, the sub-district president, are the original cause of the present trouble, as it was their successful stealing of the election last year which set every honest miner in the sub-district against them, but won to their side the bootleggers, K. K. K. and the secret forces of the mine operators.

Miners Organize to Fight Back.

The miners all over the state are organizing a demand for a special district convention, to clean house of all such vermin officials and to protect the union against election thieves and official disrupters such as Cobb, who has sworn out warrants against members of his union. Resolutions are pouring into the sub-district office from the locals condemning this treachery to the cause of labor and demanding re-instatement of local officers.

GENERAL STRIKE NEEDED TO SAVE THE W. VA, MINERS

Railroaders Must Stop Hauling Scab Coal

By AN OLD COAL MINER.
(Worker Correspondent.)

SHINNSTON, W. Va., Aug. 20.—From what I see around here in West Virginia it looks like the coal miners' strike will be lost unless John L. Lewis calls a general strike on Sept. 1st. I personally know that if the hard coal fields are settled Lewis will not call the general strike.

Should Call General Strike.

I will say this much: Again us poor miners are waiting for the first of September only. If it's a general strike it is O. K., and if not all of us are returning to work. We have struck better than six months. I do hope that Lewis calls a general strike.

Must Stop Hauling Scab Coal.

I was talking to a railroader the other day, and the question of a railroad strike was brot up. He told me that the laws of the United States forbid them from affiliating with the A. F. of L., as the coal miner did, and that they could not pull a strike as we did, and that they had to look out for the people in the large cities.

He said that if they came out on strike for one week, that thousands of little children would starve. I think it would be better for a few to starve now than for the whole United States to starve the rest of their lives. And they would not have to strike to help us out. All they would have to do would be stop hauling scab coal.

Governor to Name Ladd's Successor, Leaguers Shut Out

BISMARCK, N. D., Aug. 20.—A new United States senator, to fill the place made vacant by E. F. Ladd, deceased, is to be chosen for North Dakota. Governor Sorlie, Nonpartisan leaguer, says he will appoint a "progressive" for the post.

It has been the custom in the past for the nonpartisan league organization in North Dakota to name all candidates for state and national office and delegates of the league met here some time ago for the purpose of indorsing a man for the United States senate.

It appeared, however, that Sorlie was determined to do this job himself, and altho some of the leaguers were against this procedure, the governor's control of jobs was sufficient to whip the majority of the delegates into line.

Women Back Channel Swim.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—A second attempt to swim the English channel by Gertrude Ederle, American girl swimmer, will be backed financially by the Women's Swimming Association of New York, officials of the organization announced today.

Electricity to Battle Age.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Now that the world has laughed away the alleged "rejuvenation" claims for monkey glands, an English inventor has come forward with the claim that he is able to rejuvenate the old and put off the old-age feeling in the middle-aged by the medium of electricity

GEORGIAN GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY EXPEDITION REACHES TOP OF PEAK

TIFLIS, Aug. 20.—Five girls, and the tea they made, were given credit today for the successful ascent of Mount El Bruz, Europe's highest mountain, by a party of nineteen members of the Georgian Geographic Society.

Mount El Bruz is 18,526 feet above sea level at the pinnacle, which gives it an elevation 3,000 feet greater than Mont Blanc.

During the frequent stops in the ascent, the five girls made pots of tea and served the weary climbers.

TURN FIRE HOSE ON 34 JAILED I. W. W. MEMBERS

Arrested for Boycott of N. D. Counties

FARGO, N. D., Aug. 20.—The Fargo fire department was called out last night to quell a protest of 34 I. W. W. confined in the Cass county jail. The sheriff boasted that "we practically drowned them." The men are to be called before the justice of the peace on charges of "malicious mischief."

The I. W. W. were put in jail because they actively agitated for a boycott on Fargo and Cass county, complaining that 16 harvest hands were unjustly arrested on Aug. 3rd. Northwest authorities generally have become notorious for their disregard of the rights of the harvest workers.

Phonograph Work Revives.

PHILADELPHIA, August 20.—(FP)—Victor Talking Machine Co. is taking on workers at the rate of 100 a day, bringing its force to 4,500, because of increased production of phonographs equipped with radio receiving sets.

British Missionaries Safe.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Eight British missionaries belonging to the Church Missionary Society who were captured by bandits in China are safe and are being kindly treated, according to advices received here today.

BUILDING LABOR WINS STRIKES IN NEW HAEVN

Some Contractors Give In, Others Weaken

NEW HAVEN, Conn., August 20.—(FP)—Twenty or more contractors signed up with striking building laborers when all other workers except bricklayers walked out in sympathy. About 200 hodcarriers and laborers are affected by the agreements which give them their wage increases to 75 and 85 cents an hour. The five biggest contractors, who employ over 400 laborers, are refusing to grant workers' demands despite the sympathetic strike.

Union bricklayers are out on the office building job contracted by Leonard Construction Co., headed by former Senator Harry A. Leonard, because the company employs non-union men on another job. Bricklayers are prevented by their agreement with employers from participating in sympathetic strikes.

The general strike committee is hopeful that because of Leonard's breach of contract all union bricklayers will walk off their jobs. Leonard is the leader of the builders' association fight against building trades unions in New Haven.

Soviet Planes Going to Canton.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 20.—Two Soviet airplanes, en route to Canton on a flight from Moscow, arrived today at Kaifeng, according to reports received here.

Close Convent in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 20.—The convent of Guadalajara has been closed by police order and thirteen Spanish nuns ordered expelled under the terms of a law prohibiting foreign teachers in Mexican schools.

Calles Trying to Put It Over.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 20.—To facilitate settlement of the controversy raging over the agrarian laws, President Calles has announced plans to give the leaders of the agrarian commission diplomatic appointments abroad and to replace them with commissioners more in sympathy with the proposed reforms.

DO YOUR PART FOR THE PRISONERS

THE jails of the world are filled with political prisoners. In India, China, Japan, Germany, Italy, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary and the United States thousands of workers have fallen victims to the capitalist courts and are dragging out weary months and years in filthy jails from which they will emerge, if death does not first overtake them, ill and broken.

Workers are persecuted and jailed wherever capitalism flourishes. From Tom Mooney in a California jail to political prisoners in India, jailed, tortured and beaten, there is no difference in the motive of the bosses or the crime of the prisoners. It is the attempt on the part of courageous workers to free their own class at the risk of death and the revenge of the bourgeois class against those who would wrest from them their power and this revenge in its frenzy knows no bounds. And it is useless to hope for mercy. Our hope lies only in ourselves. A strong defense must be built up with which to fight; and funds must be raised for the wives and children of class war prisoners; for legal defense and counsel and for affording some material comfort for the victims themselves, who, in black holes of the jails that capitalism has provided for the workers, wait and hope for a message from the outside.

The International Labor Defense has been organized for the great purpose of defending and caring for those who fall in the first trenches of the war between bosses and workers. Its scope is international and its aim is to defend class war prisoners everywhere, no matter what their political affiliations. In this great work help is needed. Each one must do his bit. This means you and your fellow workers.

Help to make the outing at Pleasant Bay park, New York, Aug. 23rd, a success.

ZEIGLER MINERS HOLD BACK SCABS; PREPARING TO FIGHT CONSPIRACY TO RAILROAD MEN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ZEIGLER, Ill., August 21.—Provocateurs attempted to start trouble at the Bell and Zoller Mine No. 1 here this morning when a picket line of hundreds of union miners who have refused to work formed to send back local weaklings and what ever other miners might be brought in to take their places.

Scores of women turned out with the strikers and some of them threw rotten eggs at those attempting to enter the pit for work. A rock was thrown and a small riot developed in which pickhandles and coal figured much to the disaster of those trying to enter the mine.

The miners have been careful not to allow any of their number to carry guns on the picket line. A contingent of police and deputies who have been stationed at the mine for the last ten mornings since the beginning of the strike are in open sympathy with the men who refuse to work. A number of the officers have warned the men against the use of firearms but said they had no objection to pickhandles if the scabs started trouble.

Only a Few Scabs.

Of the thirteen hundred men involved there are no more than two dozen who have shown any desire to return to work until the miners' demands are granted. Most of these are miners who have been duped into joining the ku klux klan and constitute the only support in the miners' local of the sub-district officials who are responsible for the walk out.

Trouble Over Checkweighman.

The trouble started almost two weeks ago when the union checkweighman protested that the company was running the coal over the scales so fast in Mine No. 1 that he couldn't record correct weights.

He reported to Henry Corbishley, president of Local 992 which controls Mine No. 1 and Corbishley notified the men that their coal was not being weighed. The men walked out of the mine thirteen hundred strong.

Officials Side with Company.

The sub-district officials were called in to settle the dispute. Instead of forcing the company to correct the trouble at the scales, Vice-president D. B. Cobb of Sub-District 9 of the U. M. W. of A. notified the president and the pit committee that they were deposed. The sub-district officers then called a special meeting of the union. The men demanded that Cobb reopen the case and reinstate the deposed officers. Cobb flatly refused.

Refuse to Elect New Officers.

Cobb and Len Fox, president of the sub-district, then called upon the men to elect new officers. This they refused to do. Cobb then arose and announced the appointment of a president and a pit committee known by the men to be klansmen. The meeting adjourned.

Progressive Miner Murdered.

Before the miners left the hall, a man by the name of Wilson hit J. B. Farthing, a miner sixty years old. Farthing's son fought his way thru the crowd to his father's side and a fight started. A klansman named Hargis killed one of the leaders of the local union, Mike Saravich, as the latter walked from the hall.

When the melee started Cobb, the vice-president, pulled a black jack from his pocket. This was grabbed away from him and he was hit a number of times.

Cobb Swears Warrants.

Two days later, Cobb swore out a warrant for twenty six active members of the union whose names were given to him by one of his spies in the local. Eighteen of the men were arrested and charged with conspiracy to murder Cobb. In less than

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE worst feature of the surrender of the British government to the threat of a general strike, said James Ramsay MacDonald, socialist, is the prestige it gave to the Communists. Better that the miners lose than that the Communists' program should be justified. Lest an injustice may be done to Mac, here is exactly what he said: "The government has simply handed over the appearance, at any rate of victory, to the very forces, that sane, well-considered thoroly well-examined socialism feels to be probably its greatest enemy.

"IF the government had fought their policy out, one would have respected it. It just suddenly doubled up. The consequence has been to increase the power and the prestige of those who do not believe in political action." What a shame that the British trade union movement preferred to accept the industrial program of the Communists rather than suffer shipwreck?

IN times of crisis the workers are not finicky. They are more inclined to grasp at whatever promises to bring them succor than in normal times, when they are easily influenced by propaganda that appeals to their prejudices. Wherever the workers are engaged in battle with the employers the Communists are always there on the side of the workers, regardless of how they may disagree with them on political issues.

STANLEY BALDWIN bought peace in the recent industrial crisis by subsidizing the coal operators. He may now have to subsidize the railroad owners. The rail workers have rejected a proposal for a reduction in wages. The owners claim they have no money. If the rail workers decide to strike they will have five or six million workers behind them as the miners had. What is Baldwin to do?

J. H. THOMAS, labor party leader does not like the idea of subsidizing either the workers or the capitalists. He is grievously offended because the government was forced by the threat of a strike to purchase peace. He also regrets that the owners were forced to withdraw their notices of a reduction in wages. How patient the workers of Britain must be—when they tolerate fakers like Thomas and MacDonald? But we have our Green, Berry, etc.

GARMENT WORKERS OF NEW YORK STOP WORK BY THOUSANDS IN A GIGANTIC PROTEST AT SIGMAN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, August 21.—Never in the history of New York labor has such a tremendous demonstration been held of such a determined mass of workers as the throng of thirty thousand estimated workers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union which poured out of the garment shops of Manhattan island yesterday at three o'clock to back up in a veritable army of labor their chosen leaders of the left wing locals, 2, 9 and 22.

Altho forbidden by the hostile police to make use of the bands which were to accompany the workers from the points of mobilization at the shops and to lead the march to the meeting halls, it was an inspiring sight to see the workers pour down from the great buildings at an hour in which they usually continue their slavery.

Pour Down From Shops.

At three o'clock the elevators from the upper floors of the garment market district buildings began vomiting throngs of workers, who showed their remarkable comprehension of labor discipline by dressing ranks in marching formation with speed and preci-

THOMPSON AND WATT ISSUE AN ANSWER TO FARRINGTON ATTACK IN HIS SHEET "ILLINOIS MINER"

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

The following is self explanatory and shows Frank Farrington, the president of the Illinois miners, in his true light, as the most contemptible faker in the history of the Illinois miners' union. The miners' treasury in Illinois, long recognized to be the strongest in the miners' union, is being sucked dry by the Farrington vampires and today is about bled to death. Freeman Thompson and John Watt, the illegally deposed progressives of District 12, have issued a circular placing the facts of some of Frank's dirty work before the membership for their consideration. It runs as follows:

To the Officers and Members of all Local Unions United Mine Workers of America, in District 12;

"As to the Expenditures of Union Funds:"

When we saw the above heading that appeared on an article written by Frank Farrington in his paper the Illinois Miner, so called, we thot that we were going to learn something about the expenditure of funds in District No. 12, in an itemized form showing in detail all about the mining properties bought and the other hundreds of thousands of dollars that have been squandered by Frank Farrington and his machinery.

We thot that we were going to have explained to us about the split that President Lewis complained of that was transacted between former director of Mines and Minerals Medill, and Fishwick and Farrington. We thot we were going to be informed about the Hamilton and Lester damage claims, we thot we were going to learn all about the $1,518.00 telegrams while traveling and also of the $900 train fare bills and the $700 hotel bills in three months time.

Lots of Things.

We also thot we would get an explanation of why Farrington and Fishwick went on a Peabody bosse's note for a certain amount of money. We thot an itemized statement of the legal department would be given which would account for individuals of the Red Maher type who do practically nothing but loaf around the Windsor Hotel and put in expense bills for three months totaling around $1,200 or at the rate of $13.00 per day every day for the three months period of 90 days, besides their daily salary of $9.60 per day.

We thot we would learn what was the "special field work" that "Bill Hogan" and others of his ilk do around election time and we thot that some of the money that had been squandered was going to be put back into the treasury and divided to the out of work coal miners in this state.

But our dreams and thots received a rude awakening after we had read further than the camouflage head line that appeared in Frank's paper, and

FILIPINO FOSTERS FUTILE HOPES THAT CONGRESS WILL RELENT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Pedro Guevara, one of the two resident commissioners in congress from the Philippines, formerly a trade union agitator, is back from a five-months visit in the islands. He says the Filipino workers are more than ever determined on winning their independence. He was instructed to do everything in his power to bring congress to fulfill its pledge, made in the Jones act in 1916, to relinquish American occupation and control.

BROTHER-IN-LAW OF CROWE RUNS SCAB PRINTERY

States Attorney's Police Used as Guards

Police from State's Attorney Crowe's office searched pressmen and feeders in the vicinity of the Cuneo Printing Company plant and even threatened to shoot.

Most of the police employed to protect the Berry finks working at Cuneo's are from the state's attorney's office. It was stated at union headquarters yesterday that Cuneo is a brother-in-law of State's Attorney Crowe and that Crowe is using the funds to help his relative out of a tight fix.

One of Berry's strikebreaking recruiting sergeants is Tom Polston, former vice president of Pressmen's Printing Union No. 3. While he was an anti-Berry man he relished telling the story of Berry's scabbing in St. Louis. The story is told in another column.

Threaten to Shoot.

About 10 o'clock Thursday night, as a group of the locked-out Cuneo employes were standing near the plant conversing with each other, a big automobile drew up. Two uniformed policemen and several plainclothes dicks jumped out and pulling their guns lined the workers up against the wall and searched them.

One of the dicks carried a sawed-off shotgun and brandished it before the pressmen, who were threatened with "real strongarm tactics" if they did not keep away from the plant.

Several loads of scabs were hauled to the plant in Premier cabs, which is a union concern, but it appears that the officials of the union do not take their unionism any more seriously than does "Majah" Berry. Neither does the advertising matter put out by the Premier company bear the union label. Premier company carry the union label.

BRITISH IMPERIALISM AUTHORIZES VICE ADMIRAL SINCLAIR TO TAKE 'FREEDOM OF ACTION' AT CANTON

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, August 21.—The authorization by the British government to Vice Admiral Sinclair to take "freedom of action" in resisting the shipping regulations ordered by the South China Canton republic means, according to political interpretation, war upon the Canton government by Great Britain, and a possible dragging in of all China into a revolutionary war against imperialist nations who may ally themselves with England.

That the shipping regulations ordered by the Canton government will be, if successful, a death blow to British shipping and trade and completely paralyze the great British port of Hong Kong.

These regulations are that steamers of any nationality except British and Japanese will be allowed the use of any Chinese port (controlled by Canton), provided, however, that such steamers will not call at the British port of Hong Kong. Also, all steamers entering the port are subject to inspection by pickets of the Anti-Imperialist Union to prevent arms shipments to reactionary counter-revolutionary elements.

Hit British Trade.

The Canton government proposes to American traders that all shipments of American goods for Canton should be first landed at Shanghai and trans-shipped by Soviet Russian or Chinese steamers to Canton, as striking workers are refusing to handle gods passing thru Hong Kong or transported in British ships.

Great Britain is thus threatened with a vital loss of trade, and she has every imperialist reason to be worried over the situation. But with the Shanghai settlement yesterday made between the Chinese and the Japanese, whereby the boycott of Japanese goods is ended by the granting of practically all the demands of the strikers by Japan, puts Britain into a position of isolation and she may not be able to gain any support from other imperialist rivals in a war upon China or even the Canton government's part of China.

Real diplomacy will move slowly in these circumstances, and it is to be remembered that China, while not a strong military centralized power, has 1,700,000 soldiers under arms in the various provinces under the almost independent governors, and that a war of intervention would take at the least estimate on the part of imperialist military experts, and army of 300,000.

If the United States could, as the imperialist powers figure, be induced to join in a war of intervention, it would be asked to furnish 100,000 men and to keep them there for two or thre years. And this would cost some $2,000,000,000 or more. And in the end the situation would be the same—or worse—for the imperialists as when they started.

Intervention Fails to Scare Anybody.

Some Chinese believe that intervention would be a good thing, to

CAL'S ECONOMY BUNK EXPOSED, EXPENSES RISE

Government Spends 37 Million More in 1925

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Despite the heralded Coolidge drive for economy, the cost of operating the American government during July—the first month of the new fiscal year—showed a sharp increase over the same period of 1924, the treasury department reported.

The total cost of government last month, the treasury announced, was $245,592,753, an increase of $37,597,000 over federal expenditures in July, 1924.

In the face of the president's orders for strict economy, a majority of the government departments showed higher costs of operation in July than in the same month of 1924.

The treasury itself used $5,500,000 more in July than a year ago in refunding internal revenue receipts, while an increase of $5,700,000 was noted in civil service retirement payments. The veterans' bureau also showed an increase of $2,000,000 in monthly operating costs, while the state, treasury and agriculture departments all showed $1,000,000 increases.

'THE UNION BE DAMNED', SAID 'MAJAH' BERRY

George Scabbed in St. Louis in 1902

The story of the efforts of Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 to call a halt to Berry's looting of the treasury was started in yesterday's issue, but I must digress a little to give another instance of the "Majah's" crooked and scabby career, and curiously enuf this story first saw the light thru the initiative of Tom Polston, now one of the wheel horses pulling the Berry band wagon.

Berry's record as a scab herder is well known. It is not generally known however, that Berry scabbed in St. Louis in the year 1902. The following statement by Alfred Dale, signed by a notary public, is offered in evidence:

"I was employed by the Donnelly Printing Company as a pressman on or about May, 1902.

"Acting under the instructions of Pressmen's Union No. 6 I notified Mr. Donnell that it would be necessary for him to have a pressman in charge of the pressroom and according to the number of presses he had, an additional pressman.

"This Mr. Donnell refused to do and I notified him that I could not continue to work under these conditions as I had been instructed by Pressmen's Union that unless he complied with the laws of the Pressmen's Union I would have to cease work. He said: 'Go ahead and get out.'

"I then had a talk with Mr. Berry, trying to explain things to him, and told him that I would see that No. 6 would try and get him a card as soon as possible if he would come out with the pressmen and feeders.

"He said to me, 'The union be damned, they can go to hell.' He said he was going to stay with Mr. Donnell. I said, 'Mr. Berry, don't talk that way; you are a young man; it won't do you any good.' He said, 'To hell with you.' I said, 'All right,' and I left.

"Alfred Dale."

The above statement was subscribed and sworn to before Florence Palliod Hearsum, a notary public, on the 12th of August, 1902.

Some Father!

This is only one of the colorful incidents in the career of George L. Berry, president of an international union and claiming the right to speak in the name of organized labor and consign radicals, progressives and Communists to perdition. This trade union fink had the colossal gall at the last convention of the union, if convention it may be called, to have a motion passed ordering that his picture be painted and that it be hung in the Pressmen's Home in Tennessee with the inscription of "George L. Berry—Father of the Home."

Berry has pursued every honest member of the union who has dared to stand up against his rotten grafting rule with unparalleled malignity. One of those is John G. Warrington of St. Louis. But the rank and file in St. Louis support Warrington against Berry.

Another Berry Tool.

A specimen of the type that Berry uses to do his dirty work in the union is Charles Fleck, now in a stewardship in Detroit. That Fleck's unsavory record in the International union is well known to Berry can be seen from the following letter which was sent to Berry in the year 1912 by John J. Crimmins, secretary-treasurer of No. 23. On January 4, 1918, Berry forwarded a copy of the letter to Julius Rosenheim of Chicago, with the suggestion that the information contained therein should not be given out unless it was absolutely necessary to do so in the interest of the conservation of the union. The letter follows:

Fleck's Record.

(Copy)

New York, April 10, 1912.

Mr. George L. Berry,
Pres., I. P. P. & A. U.,
Rogersville, Tenn.

Dear Sir and Brother:

Your letter dated April 4th relative to Chas. Fleck was received on the morning of the 8th.

You ask for the details of his case. I will give you his record as we have it in our files. When No. 23 withdrew its members from the firm of Isaac Blanchard for the 8-hour day, the committee in charge placed Mr. Fleck on the strike list, and he received strike benefits from October 14th to November 29th, 1907, a period of nine weeks at $8 per week, while he had no card and never made any effort to get one.

When the funds of No. 23 were depleted, the Union ordered all men on strike list, not members of the Union, to be dropped from the list. Mr. Fleck with numerous others were notified it would be impossible to pay them any more strike benefits.

The next we heard from Mr. Fleck was on December 2nd, 1907, three days later, when I was served with law papers where he has started suit for wages, that his lawyer calls the strike benefits.

Our lawyers, Steckler Brothers, defended this action for us, and we were successful in having the case dismissed.

We next found Mr. Fleck working at Starkey Press, where our men were out for the 8-hour day. Again he refused to assist until he was placed on the strike list, which request the committee in charge of strike again was compelled to comply with. He again drew strike benefits from Jan. 11, 1908, to June 27, 1908—26 weeks. He finally became a member of No. 23 on July 3rd, 1908, and he failed to pay his dues, becoming a suspended member until March 15th, 1909, when he paid his dues, but not the one day pay, which he still owes.

He went to work for the American Bible Society, New York City, a firm that we never had any trouble with until he started to work there. He spoiled some work and the firm made complaints to the Union against him. Former President John E. Donnelly was ordered to investigate the complaint of this firm, and he reported to our Union that charges should be made against Mr. Fleck for his conduct in that office. This firm has always been a fair one and always granted the conditions we asked for.

Mr. Fleck disappeared and the next we heard from him was when Secretary Paterson, of Detroit, No. 40, wrote a letter asking for his standing with No. 23. His lettter was read at a regular meeting of No. 23 and I was instructed to inform Detroit Union No. 40 that No. 23 refused to release Mr. Fleck.

The next we heard from this gentleman he presented a traveling card, issued by Rahway Assistants Union, where he had never worked. He claimed to have been initiated in the Lansing, Mich., Assistants Union, he received a withdrawal card from that Union in order to avoid Section 5, Article II (Certificate of Membership).

The Rahway issues him a traveling card, which he presents to the Executive Board of No. 23 who refused to accept it and notifies him that he must be reinstated by No. 23, which he agrees to do by filling out reinstatement blanks and paying part of his application fee.

Permit me to state that I was not at the meeting of the Executive Board which acted on his case.

We respectfully submit that this man has taken advantage of conditions surrounding the Lansing Assistants Union to force himself in that Union and thereby avoid payment of legitimate debts to Franklin Union No. 23.

Awaiting your decision in this case, with kindest regards, I am,

Yours fraternally,
(Signed) John J. Crimmins,
Secretary-Treasurer.

BERLIN FACTORY NO PLACE FOR ASSASSIN OF ROSA LUXEMBURG

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—Workmen in the Siemens Dynamo works recently noticed among them a new face which somehow seemed familiar. The man called himself August Radolf. But one day an enterprising Communist worker looked up some old newspaper photographs and identified Radolf as Oscar Runge, one of the assassins of Rosa Luxemburg. In a flash the pseudo worker was surrounded by a crowd of angry workmen shouting, "Murderer! Murderer!" and Runge saved himself only by flight. Since that time he has not appeared at the factory.

Grain Gamblers in New Move to Raise the Price of Wheat

CHINESE ORDER BARRING SHIPS ANGERS BALDWIN

"Serious" Says London Foreign Office

LONDON, England, Aug. 21.—The foreign office is greatly perturbed over the order given by the Chinese authorities at Canton that British and Japanese vessels may not enter Chinese ports. "A very serious situation has arisen," a spokesman for the foreign office actated.

The government "will not take action," it was said, until "a full investigation has revealed whether the rules in question were laid down by responsible Chinese authorities or by a semi-European provincial government."

Great Britain has formally communicated with the United States, Japan, and other powers asking their views regarding shipping regulations, it was announced at the foreign office.

solidify the hetrogenous elements, weld the armed forces of the independent provinces into a strong national army and teach Chinese to fight in an effective way against the alien tyrants. So a threat of war by Britain, aside from the fact that she may get no help, but obstruction from other rival powers, is not effective in sending the Chinese of today cringing into the dust, submissive and begging for mercy.

The British empire is felt to be in an historical crisis, and an adventure into lonely intervention in China. A great land with teeming and hostile population to harass the army of occupation at every opportunity, is seen as only increasing the disintegration of British power. Moreover, British labor is turning to the left.

Zeigler, Ill., Coal Miners Prepare to Fight Conspiracy

half an hour all were released on bail of $2,000 each.

Local unions of miners in the county, when they heard of Cobb's action, passed resolutions of protest and sent wires to Frank Farrington, president of District 12 of the U. M. W. of A. asking Farrington if he was going to permit Cobb to proceed with the prosecution of the men. Farington wired that he was going to back Cobb up and push the prosecution of the Zeigler miners.

Election Steals.

Farrington's answer has caused much consternation among the miners round about Ziegler, who know that this action of Cobb's is the last desperate effort of a completely discredited labor bureaucrat to save his office.

The prelude to the whole affair is found in the general elections of Dec. 9 this year when Cobb stole the votes of the sub-district to keep himself in office. It is significant that it is none other but Local 992 of Zeigler that has charges pending against him before the disttcir board.

President Corbishley of 992 received a letter today asking him to come to Springfield next Tuesday to present his case to the board. The miners have proof that Cobb had five thousand bogus ballots printed and in one instance tore the door of a union hall from its hinges to put fake ballots in the box.

Frame-up Feared.

The miners here look on the prosecution of the twenty-six for whom Cobb has sworn warrants as a very serious matter. It is known that Cobb has supporters in Zeigler who are willing to swear to anything before a jury. Cobb is notorious for his dirty trickery and the miners feel sure that he is desperate enuf to plan a frame-up to send all the Zeigler men to the penitentiary.

Progressives Ready to Fight.

Local defense committees are being formed in all the locals of the county and funds are being raised to fight against the frame-up of the progressive miners. Attorneys have been retained to handle the preliminary hearing which sits next Wednesday.

If the case becomes real serious the miners will ask for outside support thruout the whole labor movement in fighting against this dastardly betrayal on the part of their officials.

Holding Out.

In the meantime they are keeping the mine shut down until they are given back their old officials who have been illegally removed and until arrangements are made with the company to make it possible or the check-weighman to record proper weights. If events develope for the next several weeks as they have the last two, it is safe to say that the eyes of the whole nation will be turned on the fight in Zeigler.

FRENCH BREAK NEGOTIATIONS WITH RIFFIANS

PARIS, France, Aug. 21.—Announcement by the French and Spanish emissaries sent to Morocco more than a month ago with Franco-Spanish "peace terms" for Abd-el-Krim were coming home, indicated abandonment of all hope for peace by negotiation with the Riff leader.

The FrancoSpanish offer, however, was known to be unacceptable to Krim from the start, as he insisted on independence for the Riff republic, while the French and Spanish representatives declared Krim must accept a Spanish protectorate.

A French column under Colonel Naugues, the war office reports, has entered the Riff territory in the hills east of Bab Taza. The Riffians are firing on Naugues' 4,000 troops from all sides.

Marshal Petain is en route to Rabat to take over the direction of the French forces in North Africa.

Militant Struggles of Workers Unmask the Capitalist Dictatorship

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the New York Times speculates as to the drift of the industrial war in Great Britain, declaring that if militant labor forces the issue, "the government will not be found wholly impotent." In harmony with its usual confident threat it adds, "And that holds for the United States also."

This organ of the robber class thus offers the armed force of the capitalist dictatorship as the mediator in industrial struggles; declaring the continued suppression and oppression of the working class its solution of present day problems.

• • • •

The Times, like the whole capitalist class in all countries, is very much perturbed over the situation in Great Britain. If the coal miners can force the government to subsidize the coal industry, the railroad workers are beginning to wonder why the same cannot be done in the transportation industry. It is this increasing effectiveness of the general strike that the ruling class fears, forcing it to look about for remedies to save itself.

• • • •

Much hope is placed in "the moderation of the leaders of the Labor Party," meaning J. Ramsay MacDonald, the late premier, among others. It was when the Baldwin government capitulated in part to the coal miners, that MacDonald exclaimed that, "it had yielded to the wildest Bolsheviks." This political careerist, who has gone over completely to the enemy class, does not like to see the workers using their industrial power for political purposes. MacDonald joins hands with Baldwin in this respect. MacDonald also joins hands with those "older and steadier members of the labor unions," to use the words of the Times, who surrender to destructive class-collaboration rather than join in carrying on the constructive fight of the class struggle that leads to the victory of the proletarian dictatorship.

• • • •

The Times has little faith in the ability of the bourgeoisie to organize forces of volunteers as strike breakers to keep the public services moving in case of a strike. "The League of Citizens" may have been successful in the 1911 Liverpool police strike, the volunteer strikebreakers, incipient fascisti, played a part in the Swedish general strike of 1909, but it is confessed that the industrial structure of England, especially its transportation by land and sea, is too intricate to be carried on by any but the skilled and technical workers thoroly acquainted with their tasks. The best hope that the Times gives the British bourgeoisie is for "only partial relief of a beleaguered community."

• • • •

Clear confession from the capitalist class itself that it is helpless to carry on industry without workers. Its problem then is to keep labor enslaved, in order that it may continue plundering it, piling up profits for its parasite class. But this social structure of the robber bandits is shaking in England under the blows of a rising working class. It is in this crisis that the shams of "democracy" are sloughed off and the naked fist of the Fascist dictatorship makes its appearance. The Times makes this threat of the use of capitalism's armed power, the police, the army, the navy, not only in Great Britain, but also in the United States. It evidently feels that as British capitalism falls, so falls capitalism in the United States of America.

• • • •

In this struggle, however, there is only one thing that the workers and farmers need discover. That is, that they can get along without the bourgeoisie. Once that realization is full grown, labor will establish its own dictatorship to exterminate these bourgeois vermin, who try to convince the world that they are destined to rule always.

The Times is trying to sound a call to arms to the forces of anti-labor in the hour of the decay of capitalism. But that call grows increasingly feeble everywhere.

New York Garment Workers Quit

sion for the most part, raising banners above the ranks declaring their demands for the resignation of Sigman and his gang from the union, the proportional representation of locals on the joint board, refusal to accept the traitorous sellout of the Sigman gang's arbitration award of the governor's commission, a union freed from corrupt and gangster rule, and their adhesion to the Joint Action Committee which had called the stoppage.

More Halls Needed.

Fifteen halls, five more than contemplated at the time the order for stoppage was issued by the Joint Action Committee of Locals 2, 9 and 22, were fillde. And in Union Square the thousands of cloak and dressmakers which filled the great space to overflowing attracted such public attention that it cannot be seen how even the yellow liars of the Jewish Daily Forward could ignore the fact that Sigman is dead and that the Joint Action Committee is supported by the membership of the I. L. G. W. U.

Bryant Hall at 725-6th avenue, was the meeting place for which the workers on 37, 38 39 and 40th streets and intersecting avenues headed. The Stuyvesant Casino, 142-2nd avenue, was the meeting place of all workers in the district from 35th to 36th streets. From 30th to 34th, the workers marched to Cooper Union. From 27th, 28th and 29th streets they went to Webster Hall. From 25th to 26th streets they marched to Manhattan Lyceum. From 23rd to 24th to Arlington Hall; from 21st to 22nd street to Hennington Hall; from 18th, 19th and 20th to Lenox Assembly; from 15th, 16th and 17th streets to Mansion Hall; and from 14th street downtown to Clinton Hall. And when these overflowed, more halls had to be hastily arranged to contain the spirited and enthusiastic demonstrators.

Bosses Try to Dodge.

Some bosses, among the biggest ones, fearful of being punished by the manufacturers' association if they did not discharge, in accordance with the agreement with the traitor Sigman's Joint Board, all workers who obeyed the order for stoppage—dodged the other alternative of a strike if they should do so, by declaring a holiday.

But these workers were bound to obey labor discipline, and altho they laid off all day—nevertheless, they returned to the shop en masse at 3 o'clock to leave as directed from that point.

Sigman and his united front with the bosses have been answered.

SMASHING VICTORY OF LEFT WING I. L. G. W. OVER SIGMAN-BOSS COMBINE

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—By agreement with the I. L. G W. joint board, employers in forty shops discharged chairmen or individual workers this morning. Whole shops in most cases struck with discharged workers. Already 15 shops settled and joint committee expects to adjust most of others by Monday. Any shop refusing to reinstate workers will be declared on strike.

"Little difficulty is anticipated after Thursday's wonderful stoppage of forty thousand," says the Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22.

KLAN DECLARES WAR ON SCIENCE AND FOREIGNERS

Added Proof Bryan Was a Leading Kluxer

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 21.—New evidence that William Jennings Bryan was a member of the ku klux klan, and proof that Bryan carried on the fight against evolution with the organized backing of the klan came to light here today.

The ku klux klan is holding a national gathering at Buckeye Lake, Ohio, next week, and one of the main purposes is announced as, "Seizing the torch of fundamentalism from the failing hand of Bryan and carry it aloft in national conflict."

The conference will instruct klansmen in state legislatures and in congress to introduce anti-evolution laws which would bar the teaching of uncensored science from the public schools.

The klan conference, will also sponsor legislation erecting an absolute barrier to immigration. "Foreigners must be kept out of the country", said one klansman, thus reflecting the present two per cent law is ineffective."

Police Keep Up Their Reign of Terror in the Garment Strike

The police kept up their terrorization of strikers yesterday. John McCarthy, one of the pickets, was walking down Madison street toward the loop when police from the Des Plaines street station pounced on him and threw him in jail. McCarthy was peaceably walking along the street when arrested. He was charged with "disorderly conduct."

Another striker, Jack Pavlak, was arrested while walking the picket line.

Rissman Tells of Arrest.

Sidney Rissman, assistant manager of the Chicago Joint Board of the Amalgamated, one of the union members appearing before Judg Lyle yesterday, told the details of his arrest by Waukegan authorities. Rissman was taken from his home and was not told where he was being taken or why he was under arrest.

Rissman was not permitted to telephone the union headquarters or inform anyone that he was under arrest. Luckily, however, he met acquaintances at the railroad station, and his release on bond was secured.

New York Injunction Posted.

The International Tailoring Company, with the busy season only two weeks away, showed to what lengths they are prepared to go when they childishly posted the New York injunction, granted by Supreme Court Justice Churchill against the strikers in the New York plant, on the Chicago building. The plant at 847 West Jackson boulevard was smeared with copies of both the New York and the Chicago injunctions yesterday.

The posting of the New York injunction, which forbids all forms of picketing, on the factory here, shows that the International bosses are far from satisfied with the Chicago writ granted by Judge Pam, which permits "peaceful picketing," and are anxious to have all picketing outlawed here.

Churchill's injunction prohibits the New York strikers from "congregating in the streets within ten blocks of the plant, from interfering in any manner with those entering or leaving the employers' place of business or seeking to induce any employe from leaving his employment."

Mackinac Boiler's Patches Kept Dark to Safeguard Profits

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 21.—Who pronounced the former great lakes freighter seaworthy and why the patching of the Mackinac's boiler a short time before the sailing from Pawtucket was kept a secret were among the questions asked by the federal investigation committee sitting here. Just as if sacrificing human lives for profits were not an every day procedure under capitalism.

And while the federal probe is being staged, at the hospital in Newport many victims are still hovering between life and death. The death toll in the disaster at this writing is forty-two.

The state investigation is scheduled to open on Monday and over 300 witnesses have been summoned.

Eastern Illinois Crops Suffer.

DANVILLE, Ill., Aug. 21.—A survey of the growing crops today after the brief but terrific rain storm of Wednesday afternoon, followed during the night by heavy falls of rain, shows that the corn has suffered immeasurably and will be a heavy loss thruout eastern Illinois. Most of it was beaten flat to the ground and is now too heavy with ears to raise itself. A great deal of late fruit was also damaged.

FRANCE REFUSED LOANS BEFORE SETTLING DEBT

Belgium Was Forced in Line by Same Method

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 21.—The J. P. Morgan company and other American bankers have reached an agreement with the Coolidge government that no private loans will be made to European countries until an agreement on settlement of war debts is reached, it is learned here.

The government has served notice on Italy, which is trying to negotiate a new $300,000,000 loan in Wall Street, and France, which is also seeking a loan, that no loans can be obtained.

The Belgian government was forced to pay $727,830,000 debts to the United States government under similar pressure. Before agreeing to settle, the Belgian government sought a loan in New York, and London, and was refused in both markets.

Belgium demanded that her debts be transferred to Germany, as the Versailles treaty provided, but the American debt commissioners refused this plea. Finally a bargain was struck whereby Belgium gave up claims for additional German reparations and the United States agreed to charge no interest on $171,780,000 of the total debt.

The debt burden will fall heavily upon the Belgian workers in the form of taxes, it is admitted by treasury officials here. The workers of Belgium Congo, 88 times larger than Belgium itself, and one of the most profitable colonies in the world, will be the worst sufferers.

Word has reached here that finance minister Caillaux will depart for London Saturday, to settle France's debts to England, and will come to Washington in the fall to negotiate with the government. Caillaux stated before leaving that the "great powers of the west are menaced from many sides" and a debt settlement is imperative. France's debt to the United States is $4,201,000,000.

France will endeavor to bargain with Coolidge on the basis that France is less able to pay than other countries. Italy, which is expected to send a debt commission here in the fall, is also making the same claim.

Caillaux declared he is hopeful that the United States will accept German reparations indirectly as payment of the French debt, thus shifting the burden from the French to the German workers.

The agreement with Belgium must now be ratified by the Belgian parliament and the United States congress. According to the schedule, if payments are made promptly, the debt will be dissolved in 1987.

RADIUM FOUND TO STOP PYORRHEA

Chemist Announces Magic, Marvelous Element as Remarkably Effective in Treating "White Plague of Mouth."

After 25 years of study and experiment, RADIUM has recently been announced by an eminent chemist as an effective Remedy for the dread PYORRHEA—the name of the condition of bleeding, receding, pus-charging gums, loose teeth—and for "trench mouth" and other oral infections.

Studying the marvelous results that RADIUM gave in Cancer, led to the PYORRHEA Experiments. As a result of this study, terrific, powerful Radium—worth two million dollars an ounce, a few grains of which contains energy sufficient to drive a battleship a thousand miles—has been put in a form, safe, yet effective, at a price ordinary people can afford.

This new Solution of RADIUM, combined with other well proven, antiseptic, germicidal and healing agents, has been named "PYRADIUM." For the past five years, during which time it has been drastically tested by layman and doctor, it has done wonders in relieving sore, inflamed, bleeding and even pus-ladened gums. As a result of this test, PYRADIUM is now being used and prescribed by many dentists.

To spread the benefits of this latest scientific discovery so widely that it may be available for everyone, both as a preventive and as a treatment of diseased gum condition, a company has recently been organized and PYRADIUM has been placed on sale in several hundred drug stores throughout the nation. The manufacturers of PYRADIUM have so much faith in the merits and effectiveness of this RADAIUM Formula for Pyorrhea that they are marketing it under an absolute guarantee, contracting to cheerfully refund cost price when the purchaser is dissatisfied with results.

PYRADIUM is a safe, non-poisonous, harmless treatment, used simply as a mouth wash. Genuine RADIUM is present in sufficient quantities to destroy germs, and stimulate cell growth, yet not strong enough to injure healthy cells or tissues. This accomplishment was the chemist's triumph. After conditions of gums have sufficiently improved to permit, Pyradium users are required to visit the dentist to have pus pockets irrigated, tartar removed from teeth, and other mechanical defects corrected. This service by the dentist is absolutely necessary in any treatment of PYORRHEA to effect permanent relief.

Statistics show four out of five people above thirty, and many as young as twenty, have diseased gums, indicating the prevalancy of PYORRHEA, and need for the RADIUM Formula. Former Pyorrhea victims in testimonials pay flattering tribute to merits of PYRADIUM. The Radium Laboratories are sending a free booklet on Pyorrhea, Radium and Pyradium to all asking for it.

Pyradium, which sells for $2.50 for a four-ounce bottle, enough for 3 weeks' treatment, can be secured at nearly any good drug store, or, if the druggist does not yet have it, by sending direct to laboratories, RADIUM REMEDIES COMPANY, Sexton Building, Minneapolis, [illegible]

MARTIAL LAW STOPS PRAYERS OF STRIKING MINERS THAT NO ROCK MAY FALL ON OKLAHOMA SCABS

By ERNEST R. CHAMBERLAIN.

HENRYETTA, Okla.—(FP)—State troops are in action and martial law is threatened in the coal fields of Oklahoma as a result of the prayers and hymn singing of the striking miners of Henryetta and Schulter.

The winning over of 80 strikebreakers to the union by the expedient of praying for their salvation at the entry of the mines has been so disastrous that the mine operators have induced sheriff John Russell of Okmulgee county to issue a procalamation ordering the cessation of all prayer meetings and religious procedure by the picketing miners and their wives and children.

Disregarding the sheriff's orders two union miners persisted in praying and singing and were forced to continue their payer meeting in the Okmulgee county jail. No charges were filed and the county attorney is up a stump as to what sort of a misdemeanor this singing of hymns at a pit mouth constitutes.

National guardsmen are on duty, but they can't keep comfortable due to the patriotic frenzy of the religious picketers who insist on singing the Star Spangled Banner at regular intervals compelling the troops to snap to attention and the young lieutenant to jump to a rigid salute.

Officials of the miners union say the religious revival will be continued all summer, if the operators and nonunion workers refuse to be saved. In five mines that went openshop between 500 and 1,000 union miners immediately went on strike rather than accept the 1917 scale. Each day at 4 p. m. when the strikebreakers quit work they find the road lined by a crowd of union men with their wives and children. Apprehensively the strikebreakers walk down the road between the fixed bayonets of the militia.

The union pickets carry American flags and their first act is to sing the Star Spangled Banner. The strikers stand with bared heads while the soldiers present arms. As the anthem closes a hymn starts up followed by another and yet another.

Then a striker steps forward and prays for the scabs:

"Lord, let no harm come to these men. Hold up the mountain sides that no rocks may fall upon them. But lord, let thy light shine upon them and show them the blessings of unionism and the sin of depriving union men and their wives and families of their daily bread. O, lord, we pray thee, soften the hearts of the mine owners and guide and protect these soldier boys and let no evil enter their hearts. Let no harm come to their persons, but let the light of understanding and sympathy for the wives and children of striking miners descend into their hearts. And this we ask in the name of Jesus Christ who comforted the slaves of old, Amen."

And then, as the strikebreakers pass by, the strikers call out—not the jibes and jeers that have marked strikes of the past but the call to repentance:

"God save your soul, Jim Pocatelli."

"God bles you, Tom Murphy."

And the soldiers polish their rifles and at the state capitol Gov. Trapp issues proclamation warning the miners against violence. From Fort Sill reinforcements are coming to deal with the "dangerous situation."

There have been only two minor breaches of the peace in the past month at Henryetta.

Religious services, the sheriff states must be conducted by regularly ordained ministers and must not be used for the purpose of "annoying and intimidating the workers in the mines and other peaceably disposed citizens."

With the prayers comes enforced fasting, ominous for the wives and children of the strikers. The district union treasury is depleted. Committees have been to nearby union centers and have obtained a little money and food.

Fundamentalist Oklahoma is shaken. Why should the state jail these people who fast and pray and turn the other cheek? It is all right, they believe, to jail pickets but to jail evangelists is another matter.

In the case of the striking coal miners arrested for praying for the salvation of the strikebreakers the American Civil Liberties union of New York has taken a hand. It has wired Gov. Trapp of Oklahoma urging him to withdraw the militia and notifying him that the miners have been offered its legal and other services in behalf of the miners arrested for taking part in outdoor prayer meetings.

New York Teachers Demand More Pay in Vain, Board Stalls

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—(FP)—New York teachers are not likely to get any pay raise this fall, Chairman Arthur S. Somers of the board of education budget committee made clear at the hearing granted teachers' organizations to plead again for higher wages. The budget has to be in by Sept. 1, Somers says, and no revised schedule could be drawn up in the time left. He did not consider the Ricca schedules urged by teachers' organizations, led by the Teachers Union.

The Ricca schedules passed the legislature, but were vetoed by Governor Smith on the grounds that the city had autonomy in the matter. Mayor Hylan, "people's mayor," was supposed to have a smaller pay increase hidden in his bag of political tricks.

But months have dragged by with teachers fighting continually for better pay and no word from Hylan or the board of education.

Former Warden Is Denied New Trial on Graft Charge

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 21.—Judge Robert T. Ervin, of the United States court, today issued a formal order denying a new trial for Albert E. Sartain, former warden at the federal penitentiary in Atlanta, and Lawrence Riehl, reported personal friend of Sartain, convicted of irregularities and corruption in prison administration.

Judge Ervin denied the plea of a new hearing without argument.

It was stated Sartain and Riehl will use the bill of exceptions in asking the Court of Appeals for a new trial.

Bureau of Russian Section for Parity Decisions and C. E. C.

Unanimous support for the resolutions of the Parity Commission was voted by the bureau of the Russian section last Thursday and the majority of the Central Executive Committee endorsed by a vote of 6 to 1.

The bureau is preparing to begin an intensive campaign for the party reorganization and will, following the national convention of the party, begin immediately the preliminary work.

Down With Tipping; Up With Wages.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Hotel and restaurant workers of New York are being called by the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union to fight the tipping system and demand $50 for a week of 8-hour days. The union controlled Broadway's biggest cabarets until the prohibition enforcement squad put padlocks on the restaurant's doors.

CUNEO COMPANY SCAB WAS SPY DURING THE WAR

Incited Workers to Take Out Guns

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 21.—Sam Fox, the Cuneo scab, played the role of an agent provocateur in the Minneapolis labor movement from 1919 to 1921.

At a session of the Trades and Labor Assembly he took the floor and urged the delegates to "get guns and shoot up the capitalists." This was an attempt to provoke honest workers and thus report them to the spy agency for which Sam Fox worked. The Palmer raids were in full swing at that time.

However, all the honest workers were onto the dirty game that Fox was promoting, as his face bore the full imprint of a spy. Consequently Fox trapped nobody but himself.

The following is a copy of the agreement that was entered into between Franklin Union No. 4 and Pressmen's Union No. 3. It provides for joint action between the two organizations:

AGREEMENT.

This agreement entered into this 15th day of August, 1925, by and between Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, of Chicago, Illinois, and the Franklin Union No. 4, of Chicago, Illinois, for the purpose of bringing about a closer affiliation and a better co-operation between the above named unions and with the firm belief that there should be no more misunderstandings between both these unions, the following propositions are hereby agreed to by both unions.

First: That the Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 or the Franklin Union No. 4 shall not enter into or make any contracts or agreements unless said contracts or agreements are entered into jointly, and ratified by a joint membership meeting. The membership of both unions to be notified by mail of said intended meeting.

Second: In the event of an attack upon either Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 or Franklin Union No. 4 by any employer or from any other source, it is hereby agreed that the union attacked shall immediately call upon the second party to this agreement to call upon the presidents and business agents of both unions to visit the parties involved with a view of settling the controversy. Should it be impossible for the joint committee to amicably settle the difference they will report back to a joint meeting of the executive boards of Pressmen's Union No. 3 and the Franklin Union No. 4.

Third: In the event that the joint executive board of Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 and the Franklin Union No. 4 are unable to have the existing difficulty settled to the satisfaction of the agrieved union or unions they shall have power to immediately call upon their members working in the affected office or offices to cease working until the grievances have been adjusted satisfactory to both Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 and the Franklin Union No. 4.

Fourth: It shall be the duty on the part of pressmen or feeders employed in any office where no shop chairman of either union party to this agreement is employed to demand to see standing of said members for the purpose of at all times safeguarding their respective interest thereby keeping all members of both unions constantly in good standing.

Franklin Union No. 4.
Chicago Printing Pressmen's
Union No. 3.

The solidarity and success of the two unions depends on the spirit in which this agreement is carried out. It is expected that the above agreement is only a step in the direction of complete amalgamation, and that it will give an impetus to the amalgamation movement in the entire printing trade.

BUILDERS AT WORK

THE LITTLE REDS ARE ROUGH

THEY ADVOCATE CONSCRIPTION!

The little Johnny Reds are insistent on constructive propaganda work. They have a real conception of this essential Communist activity, and so deep grained it is, that they advocate the most severe measures to develop the work. Read this letter to see how big is the building of the little Reds:

Mohegan Colony,
Peekskill, N. Y.

Dear Comrades:—

Enclosed, you will find our remittance to cover the second week of sales of the DAILY WORKER.

In my last letter I asked for a bundle of the "Young Worker". I should like you also to send me ten copies of the "Workers Monthly" for September.

Kindly act speedily on this request.

These Dailies are being sold and delivered by a Junior Group in the colony. I believe it would be possible for you to sell many more copies by conscripting the help of the Junior Groups elsewhere.

Fraternally Yours,
B. B. Rubenstein.

This problem of severe measures to draft Juniors for this work we leave for the Juniors themselves to decide. But the fact that these little comrades know the value of this basic propaganda work speaks volumes for the success and increase of the future army of Builders of the Communist movement. May they continue to grow—in size and in numbers!

TEACHERS WANT RESTORATION OF THEIR COUNCILS

Board of Education to Act on Petition

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 21.—Judge Robised teachers of Chicago, numbering about 7,000, are watching the board of education's rules committee, which has a petition from the Chicago High School Teachers councils to re-establish the councils on school time. John A. English, organizer for Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, is head of the committee.

The councils which the petition wants restored were held for 45 minutes five times during the school year. They were established in 1913 by the former superintendent for the assembling of all the teachers in a school to discuss its problems. These councils, however, were forbidden in 1924 to meet in school time by Superintendent William McAndrew, on the ground that the three and three-quarters hours a year consumed too much school time.

The Chicago High School Teachers Council is an organization which represents union and non-union teachers. Its work to maintain the councils is supported by the Federation of Women High School Teachers, affiliated with the Chicago and Illinois Federations of Labor. The decision on high school councils will doubtless affect the elementary school councils. The Chicago Teachers Federation is therefore also interested. The American Federation of Teachers, which favors "recognition of bona fide teachers' councils, not company unions," is also awaiting the decision.

LOONEY GAS VICTIM, VIOLENTLY INSANE, ATTACKS HIS NURSE

HAMMONTON, N. J., Aug. 21.—Harry Baker, one of the Bayway Standard Oil workers who became insane thru his employment in the manufacture of tetra-ethyl lead gasoline, has been returned to the insane hospital after less than a week's freedom.

Baker appeared well and normal for several days but suddenly became violently insane again and attacked one of his nurses with a piece of pipe. Six of the 35 men poisoned at the Bayway plant died, several of them in the straitjacket, as a result of the lead poisoning.

Young Bob and the Socialists

This world is surely an awful place to live in. Read the Milwaukee Leader and weep over the ingratitude of man. During the last elections the poor socialists buired themselves in political anonymity and sang the praises of Robert Marion LaFollette as one who had finally arrived among them.

Victor Berger said that "Bob" was always a socialist, and Morris Hilquit, amended Victor's endorsement, by saying that whatever Bob was lacking in formerly was now supplied. LaFollette was carrying the red flag chirped Debs.

But old Bob died and so did his mushroom party. "B. & O" Bill Johnston is now working the pulmotor on it, without success. In his spare time he is trying to smash the Machinists' union.

Out in the great state of Wisconsin, there is competition over who should inherit the late "fightin' Bob's" shoes. Young Bob is willing to wear the slippers. So is John Work, socialist and editorial writer for the Milwaukee Leader.

The socialists thot they would fall into the LaFollette political estate, but they were disappointed. Young Bob, like a real chip off of the old block, declares that he is his father's son, and can interpret his father's bible any way he sees fit. The socialists say that they only are privileged to wear the "fisherman's" ring and that the late Bob's guardian angel deposited they keys of the kingdom, with bluff Saint Berger.

There is weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth in the socialist camp. For what did we prostitute ourselves they say? We handed over our virtue to the LaFollette machine, and not only did we not get it back, but young Bob is now toting it at the top of his flag pole as if it were his own.

Young Bob is in alliance with Governor Blaine. He is running in the republican primaries for the nomination. If he wins there is every reason to believe that Coolidge will find a way to lure him back into the G. O. P. fold and the LaFollette illusion will have petered out as far as the LaFollette family is concerned.

The Unholy Alliance

Frank Farrington and the coal operators have seized on the recent disturbance in Zeigler to crush the militant leadership of the local union of the U. M. W. of A. For a long time, with the aid of the ku klux klan, Farrington has been trying to get rid of Henry Corbishley and the other officials who have stood like rocks of granite against every attempt of the company and their tool, Farrington to betray them.

If Corbishley and his comrades had agreed to go along with the Farrington machine they would be taken care of. The fakers always prefer to purchase competent men than to fight them. But Corbishley and his associates were not the purchasable kind. Therefore Farrington decided that they must be gotten out of the way.

Several times during the past few years, the K. K. K. attempted to shoot the progressive leaders of the local union out of the town. They failed. Ninety per cent of the miners were behind their lawful leaders. The klan would never dare raise their heads in Ziegler but for the support of Farrington and his tools in the sub-district office.

Driven to desperation the coal operators and Farrington with the aid of the klan cutthroats decided that now or never was the time to dispose of Corbishley and the militant leaders of the Zeigler miners. What happened does not need repetition. Suffice it to say that several leaders of the Zeigler miners are held on bonds for conspiracy and assault with intent to murder. Tho the only fatality resulting from the fight, was a progressive miner who was killed by a member of the ku klux klan.

The Zeigler miners have a hard fight in front of them. They are confronted by a powerful combination, that will spare no efforts to destroy them. The miners thruout the country, should rally to the support of their comrades in Zeigler. So should the workers in every industry. The fakers in all unions are making a united front with the employers. The rank and file should unite against both.

Farrington's Power Plan

An engineer's report published a few days ago approves the so-called giant power plan sponsored by Frank Farington, president of District 12 of the United Mine workers of America. Farrington claims the plan is a solution of the troubles of all those engaged in the coal industry in Illinois.

The plan proposes:

First: the organization of a semi-public corporation in which Farrington, the operators and the "consumers" would be represented. Who is to pick the "consumer" we are not informed. Farrington and the operators?

Second: To establish thru this corporation one or more giant power plants on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers for the manufacture of electricity thru burning Illinois coal.

Third: to form an integral net-work of major and minor power lines to make electricity available to every hamlet and farm house in the state.

Fourth: To treat coal at the giant power station in order to save and to sell the valuable by-products now wasted.

Farrington is getting paid to look after the interests of the miners and not after the interests of the operators and the vague element called the public. Superpower is alright, but like every other improvement in the industrial machinery under capitalism, it benefits the employers and not the workers. In Soviet Russia, superpower operates for the benefit of labor. Every economy it produces means taking so much of the burden of toil off the backs of the workers. But under capitalism, whatever saving is made by its introduction goes into the pockets of the capitalists and more workers are thrown on the streets.

The super power we are most interested in is the power that will enable the workers to consign the Farringtons and their paymasters the capitalists, to the historical dung heap. When they do that we will be more interested in super-electrical power.

The socialist party of France has withdrawn its support from the Painleve ministry. What's the matter? Were the cash terms not satisfactory?

WORKERS PARTY CALLS A.C.W. TO UNITED FRONT

Injunctions Fought by Labor Party Action

NEW YORK, August 21—The Workers (Comunist) Party of New York district, number two, has issued a statement showing that the injunction prohibiting the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union from picketing was issued by a judge who is supported by many New York trade union officials.

The statement calls upon the Amalgamated members to work for independent political action of labor, and demands a united labor ticket in the coming municipal campaign. It also exposes the fake campaign put on by the socialists under the name of "labor fusion ticket."

The statement follows:

The decision of Supreme Court Justice Churchill, granting the application of the International Tailoring company for an injunction forbidding picketing against the officers and members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, strikes a stunning political blow against the clothing workers and more important still against the entire labor movement.

Supported by Labor Fakers.

Tom Churchill, as he is familiarly known, is a glaring example of the handshaking, Gompersite, "friend of labor," type of Tammany Hall politician. The fact that he has been supported by the Central Trades and Labor Council has not deterred him from handing down one of the most sweeping and vicious decisions in the history of the local labor movement.

The Central Trades and Labor Council and the other local unions of the city cannot safely overlook this ominous assault upon the rights of labor by a trusted henchman of Tammany Hall. The policy of non-partisan political action used by the labor bureaucrats as an excuse for the support of Tammany Hall has proven to be a means of support of the sworn enemies of the labor movement, of whom injunction Judge Churchill is but one example.

This suicidal policy must be immediately repudiated. The answer of the trade unionists of the city to the attack of the Tammany Hall hireling of the capitalist class, Justice Churchill, must be the demand put forward by the Workers Party, the demand for a united labor ticket in the coming election campaign.

This demand for a united labor ticket must be advocated everywhere in every local union of the city by all workers to see and understand that the workers must have their own ticket in the field in the coming campaign and make a real effort to do away with the enemies of labor in the courts and in the city and state government.

Must Work For Labor Party.

But the decision of Justice Churchill will be of more far-reaching significance to the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers itself. Those who are directly affected by the decision in their fight against the International Tailoring company.

These workers, for the most part, understand the nature of the capitalist courts and have for years been staunch advocates of independent political action on the part of labor. This year, however, the movement toward a labor party in this city has received a decided setback owing to the action of the socialist party, with the open support of many prominent figures in the Amalgamated.

In the face of the critical situation confronting labor in this city, they have decided to divide labor's forces by setting up a "labor fusion ticket." which is nothing more or less than the ticket of the socialist party.

This socialist ticket has come out on a platform which dodges the question of court interference in labor disputes and makes no demand for the abolition of injunctions against labor.

It is the duty therefore of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers while using their mass economic power to destroy the injunction thru a vigorous policy of mass violation to demand in every local union that their organization come out emphatically for a united labor ticket in the coming election campaign, bases upon a clear cut program which shall include a straightforward demand for the immediate abolition of the use of the injunctions in labor disputes and the election of workers' candidates in the coming election campaign.

Fascists Break Up Meeting of Italian Workers at Newark

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 21.—(FP)—When a band of Italian fascisti from New York invaded a meeting of 250 Italian workers in Newark gathered to hear former Deputy Vincenzo Vacirca of the Italian parliament, the result was a fight ending with two men seriously injured by stabbing and 25 others slightly wounded.

Count Ignatius Eduardo di Revil, reputed head of the fascisti in America, led the invasion. Vacirca was forced to flee to Switzerland from fascist Italy and is now touring the United States lecturing.

'NITGEDAYGET', LENINIST YOUTH CAMP OF N. Y.

Days Are Given to Play and Training

By MARTHA STONE,
Member of the City Executive Committee, Junior Section of N. Y., and Secretary of the Leninist Youth Camp, Group 2.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—For the first time in America a Communist children's camp has been established—the Leninist Youth Camp at Camp Nitgedayget. It is a camp for working class children. It is necessary that the children of the working class be brought up under proper surroundings that they should not grow up in ignorance but that they shall become class conscious fighters and leaders in building up a working class movement and finally in establishing a working class government.

For these reasons our camp has been established. It is a great aid to us in organizing the working class children. We are given mental and physical training there so that when we grow up we should be strong and trained fighters for the oppressed masses and that we should be able to carry on as we ought to the struggle of the workers children rights here today.

Every year hundreds of children are sent away to the boy and girl scout camps. There they are given patriotic training so that when these ignorant children grow up they will make good soldiers and fight for the interests of the capitalists.

On the other hand, we have the Leninist Youth Camp. We, too, have exercises and drills but with one view in mind—to produce fighters for the working class and the working class children and not to protect and fight for a leisure class.

The two foundations of the camp are discipline and co-operation. We have Communist discipline that must be carried out at the camp. The discipline is not made for the good of a few comrades but for the welfare of the camp as a whole. In order to have a successful camp we must co-operate with each other. It is often necessary that one individual should sacrifice something for the good of the camp. If we co-operate and carry out discipline, the camp runs smoothly and everything is fine.

Some of our activities are council meetings, swimming, games and discussions. Every day council (Soviet) meetings are held to discuss the plans for the day which must be carried out. We also have discussions each day on topics that will give us a deeper and a clearer understanding of the class struggle existing today.

By our songs, cheers, and entertainments we have interested parents and children and in this way we have added new members to our lists. The days pass so swiftly at the camp because we are occupied all day in working and playing together with our comrades that when the time comes to leave the camp a pall of sorrow is thrown over the once merry faces of the Juniors. How we dread to leave the camp where we have enjoyed working and playing with our comrades.

During the vacation at the camp each comrade has been drawn into activity and a real fighting Communist spirit awakened in each individual. When we return to the city we begin to take our Junior work more seriously and become more active because of the deep influence the camp has had upon each comrade.

Forward all together shoulder to shoulder towards a Leninist Youth Camp!

Crops in England and Wales Decrease.

Production of cereal crops in England and Wales is slightly below that of last year, according to a cablegram received by the United States department of agriculture from its agricultural commissioner at London. This is the first European country to report decreased wheat production this season as compared with last year.

The wheat crop of England and Wales for this season is estimated at 48,000,000 bushels against 50,000,000 bushels last year; barley 43,225,000 bushels against 44,142,000 bushels; oats 87,766,000 against 102,629,000 bushels.

NEGROES RALLY TO SUPPORT OF LABOR CONGRESS

Green Told to Keep His Hands Off

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 21.—That the Negro workers are rallying to the support of the American Negro Labor Congress, which holds its convention in Chicago in October, is again demonstrated by an editorial in the Cleveland Herald.

This Negro paper advises William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who attacked the Congress, to first see to it that the labor unions abolish discrimination against Negroes before passing out gratuitous advice.

The editorial, printed in the Aug. 15th issue, is given below:

Gratuitous Advice.

Our ever solicitous friend, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, takes time from his pressing duties to advise Negroes to boycott the coming American Negro Labor Congress. He informs the Negro laborer that the congress is being propagated by Moscow gold, and that its purpose is to "mislead the Colored man into believing all their grievances will be remedied by overturning the government of the United States and establishing a Soviet republic." Mr. Green further declares that the congress "will not be held to benefit the Negro but to instill into the lives of that race the most pernicious doctrine—race hatred."

Since gratuitous advice is being passed around we rise to offer the following to the heir to the late Samuel Gompers' throne: It is not any effort on the part of alleged Communist emissaries from the Russian capital that instills race hatred into the Negro. Rather it is such American practices as the Federation of Labor approves: discrimination against black workers. When the American Negro joins a revolutionary host to overthrow the government of the United States it will not be because he has been prompted to it by alien influence but because he has been driven to it by American lynchings, disfranchisement and oppression.

News, died last Thursday. Lawson was a reactionary and his sheet outside of its foreign page, which is fairly good, is the dreariest typographical monstrosity that ever came off a press. Lawson was very wealthy, and like many rich people, salved his conscience and fed his vanity by bequeathing part of the loot he took out of his employes, to charitable purposes. The paper that Lawson owned will continue to run, as if nothing had happened. This shows how small a part capitalists play today in the enterprises out of which they draw their dollars.

DR. JOHN ROACH STRATON, fire-eating baptist, has challenged Clarence Darrow to debate on the subject of evolution. Straton believes in the virgin birth theory, simply because his god would be in a hell of a fix for an excuse to call Jesus of Nazareth his son, on any other grounds than a supernatural one. What the ruling class accomplished in making a monkey out of Jesus was to rob the oppressed of a darned good rebel. That's just what Jesus was if he was anything.

DEFAULTING bank officials get away with something like one thousand times more loot every year than do the professional bank robbers, according to statistics. Yet, we do not hear of any auxiliary police being organized to get the drop on the bankers. The bankers are offering rewards for bank robbers dead or alive. The suggestion is made that underpaid clerks could raise their living standards considerably by taking an occasional pot shot at their own bank heads.

CHICAGO is noted for its crime record. More police are demanded to stem the flood of murders that has been swelling steadily in recent years. But if one is to judge by the number of policemen engaged in making war on the unions lately, it would appear that Chicago has police to spare. A few evenings ago a police sergeant with a squad of men appeared at a union meeting, with a gun in one hand and a tear bomb in the other. He mounted the platform and threatened to hurl the bomb into the middle of the packed hall, if there was a move made.

THERE was no excitement. The police searched the members for arms but no weapons were found. Three of the officials were arrested and held in heavy bail. This is typical of the way the police act towards the workers. Officials and members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers are now held in hundreds of thousands of dollars' bail, on framed up charges or for picketing peacefully and within their legal rights. Yet there are people who say this is not a class government.

Thompson and Watt Answer Farrington

instead of their being any information that the rank and file was interested in, a certain statement issued by the Springfield Miners' Educational League had gotten under Frank's thick hide and he was more than groaning over the thots of the miners gaining any kind of information other than he and the editor of the Illinois Miner were ready to give them.

Afraid of Debate.

O yes, it is illegal to get any kind of information covering Frank's actions except that he wants to give you, and he doesn't like the idea of Thompson, Parry or Watt running over the state "Tearing at the vitals of your union." But he can't get up enuf nerve or courage to meet these individuals anywhere in the state to back up the claims that they are making.

O, no, not Frank, about as close as he will meet Thompson, Parry or Watt is in the closely guarded columns of the Illinois Miner, and then he reserves this sheet all to himself. Why is it, rank and file, that Frank Farington will not meet these men and explain to you in their presence, how they are "tearing at the vitals of your union?"

Remember this is the same scoundrel, this man Frank Farrington, who a very short time ago accused John L. Lewis of doing the very same thing. We don't dare say such things about Lewis now. Oh no. Frank has just a little while to stay in the United Mine Workers so he is laying off of John L. Lewis for the present.

Farrington in his demetra states that:

First: "If they (Thompson and Watt) and their families are to be cared for why not include all of the others who are in an even more desperate plight than they?

Our answer: What is Frank Farrington doing for the families that are even in a more desperate plight than Thompson and Watt? Nothing whatever, but Thompson and Watt wherever they go are telling the miners that they must at once demand an equal division of work and shorter day and week, and that if they do not do so the union is blown up. Frank used to feel the same way about the 6 hour day but in the last International convention he turned a right about face and now speaks of the 6 hour day as a nice ideal and a nice issue to grandstand on, in fact this is how the proceedings of that convention quote him in part:

> President Fasington: (page 761) "The shorter work day is nice as an ideal . . ., it gives a man a splendid opportunity to grandstand, but we are dealing with a condition gentlemen, and not with an ideal."

But just for a moment let us see what Frank's former position was in regards to the 6 hour day. On February 21st, 1919, Farrington issued a letter which in part reads;

> "I am cinvinced we will get no substantial relief until a six-hour day five days per week for all the mine workers of the country with no double shift work on coal allowed except as necessity may require, and development for increased tonnage should not be regarded as being a necessity. We must wage an aggressive, uncompromising, organized fight to attain that end. Nothing short of that will bring the needed relief. To achieve this reform is vital and paramount and the full strength of our union should be used to attain this end. Other things are secondary, nothing less will do."

Was Farrington grandstanding when he wrote that letter? Let us see by the convention records:

Delegate Thompson, District No. 12. (Freeman Thompson page 765) "I would like to ask Delegate Farington a question. Did I understand you, President Farrington, to say that you sent out a curcular letter some eight years ago bearing on the subject-matter of a six hour day for the coal miner?"

Delegate Farrington: "Yes, your understanding is correct. I would not be positive as to the exact number of years ago, but I did send out such a circular."

Question by Delegate Thompson: "Were you then grandstanding at that time?" Farrington did not answer.

Some Questions.

So, rank and file, we ask you "what is Frank Farrington doing for you or your families?" What has become of the Old Age Pension that Farrington and machine so successfully ditched? What has become of the district funds? What has become of the shorter work day? Why are your standards and conditions being lowered now by Frank Farrington and his machinery? Why this $8.04 rate even in tonnage mines?

Why the infamous Johnston City proposal that meant a reduction in wages to the mine workers of this state, in fact the proposal offered by the coal company which was forwarded to that local union for their consideration along with a letter from Frank Farrington stating that something must be done "to reduce the cost of production and to enable the operators to meet the competition of the nonunion fields."

Boss and Good Looking Wives.

Why is it that the yellow dogs are all right to be singed, why is it that only thru a "pull" you are able to get a job and in some instances a "good looking wife" has its effect on the boss, what is Frank Farrington doing about these and other horrible conditions that Thompson, Parry and Watt are exposing?

And cannot you see that Farrington must by all means try to stop these men when they come before you with a remedy out of this mess that Frank Farrington is a party to, and cannot you see that he cannot come before the membership and confront either Thompson, Parry or Watt?

In fact, Watt just recently toured the South part of the state alone, and not one of the machine dared stick his head up in any of these meetings. Rank and file, there is a reason, so therefore they are forced to try every means to prevent you from hearing all sides to the controversies.

They only want you to have their side and men are receiving money that you should be having, to work quietly among you, never in the open, to try to deceive you, but Thompson, Parry and Watt will be on the job exposing Frank Farrington and his treason to the membership.

Where is an Election Report?

If Frank Farrington is such a strong man for constitutionality, why has he not used the power of his office to demand that the International union send out to all local unions a tabulated election report by local unions of the results of the last International election? We believe that Frank Farrington dare not cross John L. Lewis' path again regardless of any violation of law.

Frank Farrington says secondly: that "you are therefore instructed not to use any moneys of the United Mine Workers of America for the purpose outlined in the circular herein referred to. Remember, rank and file, no appeal has ever been made to local unions for finances."

Don't be deceived, an appeal is being sent to individuals asking individual aid and not from local unions, no moneys from local unions will be accepted. We want interested men in the unions to finance this movement and, surely, Frank Farrington cannot prevent you from donating to any cause you may see fit.

If he can then really he is more powerful than any czar that ever lived, and when he wrote this article he knew that no requests had been made from local unions for aid, it is only a scare to try to keep individuals from donating so that Thompson, Parry and Watt will be forced to stay in Springfield and thus be prevented from exposing him and his machinery. We want no funds of any character that Frank Farrington claims belongs to him. He forgets that he takes filthy luchre at times, remember that money he got from Frank L. Smith?

It Makes a Bit of Difference.

Frank says thirdly: "If you do you will be gilty of rallying to the support of a dual movement and financing men while they go over the state trying to disrupt your union." Do you remember when Frank Farrington was fighting John L. Lewis how he and others sent $750 to Michael Halapy?

You also wrote to Mr. Halapy in part as follows:

> "Surely to god there are enough mine workers in the Pittsburgh district who would be willing to contribute enough money to purify their organization," "by all means I think your circular should be prepared by your committee and be issued from Pittsburgh, and it should not only be sent into Illinois but into every district in our organization."

That's what we are attempting to do in Illinois now, Frank, and when we learn of what happened in various sub-districts as far south as Harrisburg, it is about time that the district machinery in Illinois was purified.

About Dualism.

Do you remember how Thomas Myerscough was brought before the Illinois delegates at a meeting held in Indianapolis and read statement after statement of crooked elections and how at that same meeting the starting of Illinois Miner took place, presumably to fight the International officers, was that dual, Frank? Remember the statement you made at Muskogee, Oklahoma, that if John L. Lewis was the United Mine Workers' Union, that you was out to destroy him, or words to that effect?

Now, Frank Farrington, we are doing everything possible to wake the rank and file up to all the treacherous things you have done and are doing, and we feel that your article in the Illinois Miner, so-called, will bring in more funds and will give us the necessary advertisement that we need, in fact we have received several nice donations already and many of the rank and file feel that whatever you are against, that it is to their interest to be for, so we thank you from the bottom of our hearts for this slip of yours.

As for other matters stated in your false statements they will be taken care of in a little while and it is gratifying for us to report to the rank and file that in a very short time things will take a decided change for the rank and file, and we call on you to be prepared for some coming movements that will break down the barriers that you are now surrounded with.

Thompson and Watt are scheduling a new route of meetings, write to them for dates for your city.

China's Fight for Freedom

By L. M. KARAKHAN.

NOTE—The following is a translation of the speech delivered by Soviet Ambassador to China, L. M. Karakhan at the entertainment given by Mr. Mochisuki at the Hotel de Peking at Peking, China.

May I be permitted first of all to thank Mr. Mochizuki for the honor of his kind invitation to a banquet, where I see such a brilliant gathering of distinguished representatives of so many various circles of Peking. It was with profound interest that I listened to our host's admirable address, one that is the more valuable and interesting as the speaker is an eminent representative and a most influential member of the leading government party in Japan.

In his speech Mr. Mochizuki touched upon a number of all-important problems connected with China, problems that move us all, and consequently I willingly respond to his invitation to me that I say a few words, and I will try as briefly as possible, without taking advantage of your patience, in the same frank and outspoken way to express my views on the present situation in China. I shall do this in the best hope that, in such a distinguished company, my word will not be taken as evil propaganda.

I think Mr. Mochizuki was quite right when, in his searching analysis of the present events in China, he wished to briefly review facts having occurred during the last decade, and it was quite to the point when our esteemed host recalled the world war, the Versailles conference and the seven demands brot up at that conference by the Chinese delegation, then the fourteen points as proclaimed by Mr. Wilson and, lastly, the policy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in China and the treaty concluded between the Union and China in 1924.

Soviets' Policy of Equality.

The facts which he enumerated Mr. Mochizuki looks upon as the cause of the national liberative movement which is growing and spreading before our eyes in China. And I with Mr. Mochizuki believe that the causes of the actual events in China are deeply rooted in those great changes in the conscience and in tho relations between peoples which have been brot about by the events of the last decade.

Indeed, what is it that we have witnessed? We had the world war, a war which was trumpetted as aiming at ensuring to the peoples their national freedom and self-determination and equality in international relationship; then the Versailles conference, where these principles were not taken into consideration, while the proposition of the Chinese delegation which would have placed China on an equal footing with other powers was rejected without so much as having even been given consideration; then again, the Paris conference was, with an interval; followed by the Washington conference, which obviously failed to give satisfaction to China's national aspirations, while even the rather insignificant resolutions of that conference could not be carried out; the fourteen points of Mr. Wilson, which for a moment shone over China like a ray of hope that vanished all too soon; then at last, the establishment of the Soviet government, which thru a prolonged struggle conquered its right to an existence worthy of it, the Soviet government with its policy of equality with regard to China just as in regard to other countries, and the renunciation of unequal treaties by the Soviet republics.

Disillusionment of Chinese.

All those facts, which every Chinese interested in the fate of his own country well knows, could not but make a deep impression on the Chinese people, making it think seriously over its sad condition and try to see if it could and must seek ways to establish relations with all the world on a footing of perfect equality.

There may have been some who believed that the silence which immediately followed the close of the war and the non-materialization of Wilson's beautiful principles meant that the Chinese people were reconciled with its position; this, however, was a mistaken idea; the Chinese people were merely waiting and hoping for the fulfillment of promises it had received. Then, as time went on, China felt deeply disappointed, seeing the wreck of all her hopes and desire to obtain the right that is hers to take the place of an equal among equals.

It is this disillusionment that plays, no small part in the acute crisis the feelings of the Chinese people are going thru today.

Soviets Influential in China.

There is quite a natural interest attached to the question of our influence on the national revolutionary movement in China. There is no denying it, and I do believe that the policy of the Soviet government is and will continue to be a not unimportant factor in the history of this country. Our influence, however, consists not in that propaganda which is so frequently and yet so groundlessly spoken of, but in the simple, tho more efficient and stronger fact, which was so ably and correctly pointed out to by Mr. Mochizuki. It consists in our policy of equality and justice to China in words and in deeds, a policy which we have realized and have been realizing both thru our treaty and thru every step in our relations with this country.

Now, since China has thus been able to establish equal relations with a great power, this certanly encourages, moves and prompts the Chinese people to wish that China's relations with all be established on the same principles as with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. But, then, this influence of the U. S. S. R. on the national liberative struggle of the Chinese people is within the scope of the inevitable historical laws; it is not the result of artificially warmed up feelings. And if our fault is our good policy, I take pride in confessing to our being guilty.

Must Abolish Unequal Treaties.

In his speech today, Mr. Mochizuki has recommended to China to act slowly; first he advises China to set her house in order. I regret to say that I cannot agree with the idea, which nowadays is quite a current one, namely: first, set your house in order, and then your national aspirations will be satisfied.

To set one's house in order is, of course, a good thing and a necessary thing, but how is one to do it if one is not the master or, rather, not the full and only master of one's own house? If China be left to herself, I am sure the Chinese people will establish the necessary order at home, an order which may eventually not be to the liking of all of us, but it will no doubt be such a kind of order as will be to the liking of the Chinese people themselves.

And this, as I believe everyone will agree with me, is the main point. Therein lies the essential defect of a widespread estimation of the present situation. First, the order, and then the question of unequal treaties. But there cannot be the order such as is desired as long as there exist the unequal treaties. Nor is any lasting and serious improvement in the situation possible until and unless some issue be found from that vicious circle.

China Must Struggle.

Together with Mr. Mochizuki, I am glad to recall the glorious and heroic struggle thru which went France, Italy, America. On their victorious banners, when the birth of those nations and states was dawning there shone the same beautiful words for which China is fighting today: Liberty, fraternity, equality! Take, for instance, the case of Italy or America; theirs was not an easy struggle, it was one that for years and decades claimed the greatest sacrifices and demanded the straining of all the forces.

Before the Chinese people, too, there lies a difficult path of struggle, unless all its lost rights and privileges be returned to it willingly, on our model. I am far from the slightest intention of instigating anyone; my idea is drawn from the examples history gives us of the formation of the great nations of the world and is based on an analysis of the moving historical forces as they are developing here in China. In no other way can one escape from that vicious circle of which I spoke than either thru a protracted struggle for the rights lost or by their free surrender.

"Don't Throw Cold Water."

Mr. Mochizuki further said today to his Chinese friends: Stop those acts of violence, let, there be no violence! Well, of course, there must be no acts of violence, but it seems to me that it is reasonable to make this appeal to both sides which are presently at issue.

To conclude my speech, I may venture to draw an example from the medical life. When an alien body, an infection, gets into a live organism, the temperature of that organism rises; this is due only to the reaction of all the sound forces of the organism, its self-defense against infection.

In itself, a rise of temperature, being but the result of infection, may in many cases play a useful part. And the physician who would center all his attention on the high temperature, forgetting all about the causes, would be but a poor physician indeed. By mistaking the effect for the cause he might occasion the patient's death. To fight down the fever alone, while neglecting the infection, is to invite a new paroxysm of infection with still higher temperature.

Fever naturally exhausts the organism and is a source of anxiety to those concerned. Nevertheless, it would be irrational to seek to bring down the temperature by covering the patient with ice, for, without destroying the infection, we might kill the organism. In other words, one cannot cure a sickness unless one is quite clear as to its causes. The events in China are most complex; still, this should not make us mix up the causes and effects or forget that we won't help matters by pouring cold water on an inflamed organism.

Chinese Will Win in Liberation.

I do not know what the issue will be out of the present situation in China and I feel certain that there is no one who does know it at the actual moment. But I do hope and I am convinced that the aspirations of the Chinese people for national liberation and equality in relationship with all the world are on their way to infallible realization.

Whatever the way, whether it be by following the example of Italy, America or the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, or again, any new ways to be found by the Chinese people themselves—I am confident that the day is not far off when China will establish really good and friendly relations with all the countries of the world on a basis of true equality and justice. This is my warmest wish.

An Un-Leninist Analysis of Imperialism

By Bertram D. Wolfe

(Critique of Gomez's Article, "Labor and Empire," in the July Workers Monthly.)

THE article, "Labor and Empire," written by Manuel Gomez in the Anti-Imperialist (July, 1925) Number of the WORKERS MONTHLY, purports to contain a theoretical analysis of the historic background of imperialism, its economics and its political implications for the working class of the imperialist nations, and for the exploited or subject peoples. The article in question is replete with errors of un-Marxian and un-Leninist nature; in fact, all of its basic theoretical propositions are partly or wholly incorrect.

This is all the graver because the magazine in which it appears is a Communist (and hence Marxist-Leninist) organ; because its author is the secretary of the American section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League and, as such, his words carry more weight and responsibility than would those of an individual of lesser official importance or activity; and finally, because it is the only article that seeks to make a general analysis of the theoretical basis of imperialism in the anti-imperialist number of a would-be Marxist-Leninist organ and therefore its errors cannot be left uncorrected. Nor would a mere "correct" analysis in the August issue, without reference to the article of Gomez, be adequate, as that would leave undisturbed the errors already absorbed in the minds of many readers. Moreover, that is not the way that a Comunist organ corrects the errors committed in one of its articles.

So much by way of explanation. Now to an analysis of the more important errors, not in the order of their importance, but rather in the order of their statement in the article.

"Historic Background of Imperialism."

Under this heading the article begins with the remarkable statement: "American workers might have already thrown off the whole system of wage slavery if it were not for the appearance of imperialism." Such speculations are un-Marxist and futile. Marx showed that capitalism leads thru accumulation to concentration and centralization of capital. This leads inevitably to monopoly capitalism, which is the primary economic basis of imperialism. Thus Comrade Gomez's "if" partakes of scholastic medieval speculation and not of Marxism. Moreover, there is no justification for the conclusion, even allowing the premises. Countries that have not developed monopolistic finance capitalism are "backward countries." On what ground does Comrade Gomez assume that non-imperialist backward countries imply a victory of the proletariat? Moreover, America, more than any other advanced country, still has, or has had until recently, an expanding home market—but to go further would be to lose one's self in the very maze of scholastic speculation that Comrade Gomez's "if" hypothesis implies.

"The Peaceful Period of Capitalism."

This is Leninist phraseology, but Comrade Gomez gets his dates, or rather, his periods, mixed. The "peaceful period of capitalism" in the United States Gomez dates from 1894 to the world war. This, he adds, is an international phenomenon. In another part of the article he even speaks of the "peaceful period of imperialism (!)"

The truth of this "historical" matter is that the peaceful period of capitalism ends precisely where imperialism begins. By the "peaceful" period is meant that period roughly included in the second and third quarters of the nineteenth century when the first wars for capitalist unity were generally at an end (the so-called national wars) and when capitalism was based on the production of consumption commodities as its typical industry, and when liberalism, "free trade and Jeremy Bentham" prevailed in economic practice and political theory in the most advanced countries. The classic land of the peaceful free trade, free competition and non-state-intervention period was England. The classic industry textiles. The climax of this period is roughly from 1840 to 1880.

It was a peaceful period because the "struggle for markets" with textile products as the typical export, does not require spheres of influence, colonies, the intervention of states and armies, etc., but merely quantity production, cheapness and good salesmanship. To sell red flannel underwear to equatorial savages, it is not necessary to own the country, to bribe its government, to subsidize a revolution or to pry a colony loose from its mother country by war. A German firm can sell red flannel underwear to naked savages in Madagascar (French colony) if it sends missionaries to convince them of the iniquity of going naked, sends cheaper, brighter-colored underwear and good patient salesmen willing to learn the language and the peculiarities of the natives. As long as free competition continues and "light" or consumption industries such as textiles continue to be the basic ones, there is no great need of colonies, spheres of influence, etc.

"Colonies," says the imperialistically-minded Disraeli in 1852, "are just millstones around our necks." From 1840 to 1860 and even later bourgeois politicians of the liberal school were in the saddle and opposed any colonial aggressiveness on the part of England itself, the characteristic colonizing country.

But the last quarter of the nineteenth century is characterized by the change from "light" to "heavy" basic industries—that is to say, from textiles to metallurgy. Also monopoly begins and finally the export of capital itself.

The export of metal products implies the export of capital. It also implies colonies, spheres of influence, control of the governments of backward nations, subsidized revolutions and colonial wars.

A typical form of exported "metal product" is a railway. A railway cannot be sold to an equatorial savage by a salesman and a missionary. It can only be "sold" to a backward country thru political influence or control of that country's government. A railroad, to begin with, runs at a financial loss on the basis of its net returns, above all in a country backward industrially. To make it profitable, the government of the backward country must (1) grant a concession of the right of way (2) an exclusive monopoly to that right of way, eliminating parallel lines as a possibility; and (3) subsidize the venture with land or money grants or grants of natural resources. Finally, it is superfluous to point out that the exporting of the "metal product" called a railway implies the export (investment) of capital as well.

Thus begins the scramble for concessions and spheres of influence, for colonies and protectorates, for governments "friendly to foreigners" and governments friendly exclusively to American or British or German or French capital, and all the other sources of imperialist wars and onslaughts of imperialist nations on backward ones and on each other.

This, the warlike period of capitalism, is the imperialist period, and begins with the beginning of monopoly capitalism, and export of capital. In other words, the warlike period of capitalism, in the Leninist sense, begins when Gomez says the peaceful period of capitalism begins. Any one who fails to take into account this fundamental difference between the textiles and metallurgy, between the export of underwear and the export of metals and dollars, cannot grasp the first essentials of imperialism and the imperialist epoch.

Moreover, it is a contamination with bourgeois pacifist "Hague conference" illusions on the one hand, and with the psychology instilled by imperialist apologists on the other, to believe that the period preceding 1914 (roughly from 1890 to 1914) was a peaceful period. The Hague conferences were only the plaster on the ulcer. The armament race was on, the world-war was brooding. It almost broke out in 1905 and again in 1911.

And the so-called "minor" wars, as imperialist apologists would call them, do they count for nothing because they were waged against black and yellow men and not between whites? Naturally, the weak nations were attacked first, but robber imperialism is no less warlike because its victories were easier. Germany, in 1885, seized German East Africa, in 1897 German Southwest Africa, New Guinea, Kamerun and Samoa. In 1899, Kaiu-Chau.

France in 1885 ocupied the Congo, in 1895 appropriated Madagascar, in 1904 Morocco (cause of the crisis of 1905 which was of world-war magnitude), in 1913 Syria. America in the same period took Hawaii, while Japan seized Formosa.

If that is not enough evidence of a warlike period for Gomez (and it might be multiplied) how about the Spanish-American war of 1898 for Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines and the control of the Carribean? How about the English-Boer war? The Boxer war of the combined powers against China? The Russo-Japanese war for spheres of influence in Manchuria, Korea and China? The Italo-Turkish war for the possession of Tripoli in 1912? The Algerian Crisis, etc.?

The period of imperialism is the warlike period of capitalism. A failure to grasp this makes the world war a phenomenon without precedent causes, and makes the wars against yellow and brown and black-skinned races no wars at all (or "peaceful" wars). In other words, it is an unconscious reflection of pacifist illusion and imperialist apologetics.

Gomez, in his "historical background" takes the strikes of 1870 to 1894 in the United States as an evidence that up till 1894 there was a warlike period and after 1894 a peaceful period. This, of course, has nothing to do with Leninist analysis of imperialism although Lenin is dragged in and quoted. The strike epidemic in question was due to the world commercial crisis of the period. The relative "class peace" period that followed 1894 (very relative indeed) was caused by the expansion due to monopoly growth and other factors, and was broken by repeated strike crises of great magnitude. But, I repeat, it is not this kind of "peace" to which the Lenin quotation on "peaceful period" refers.

The Gomez confusion in the article goes so far as to say that "It (the peaceful period when strikes lessened in scope, number and intensity), was purchased at the expense of the backward and undeveloped countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America, thru the policy of imperialism." (!) But enough of the "historic background."

"Superprofits."

The second part of the article deals with the economic basis of capitalism, under the heading of "Super-profits." Here the errors are even graver and in much more elementary things. Marxian economics is turned inside out and upside down.

By "super-profits" Gomez means profits in excess of the average rate of profit. He points out that imperialism yields such excess profits or "super-profits."

This is essentially correct, and very important. The understanding of the economics of this profit in excess of the average rate, that is yielded by imperialism, is the understanding of the economics of the exploitation of the oppressed peoples. This makes it all the more unfortunate that Gomez's analysis is incomplete, incorrect and anti-Marxian.

The first source of "super-profit" according to Gomez "results from THE GREATLY INCREASED RATE OF EXPLOITATION AS REFLECTED IN THE COMPOSITION OF THE CAPITAL EMPLOYED, WHICH, IN BACKWARD COUNTRIES, SHOWS A MUCH GREATER PROPORTION OF VARIABLE CAPITAL TO CONSTANT." (Emphasis mine.)

This is, of course, economic nonsense. The rate of exploitation has nothing to do with the composition of capital, altho vulgar economy at times tries to calculate the rate of exploitation on the total capital invested. The rate of exploitation is the proportion of the unpaid labor to the paid labor performed by a worker. The proportion of capital invested as constant or variable capital does not enter into its calculation.

The essence of imperialist exploitation is found in the use of a cheap and docile labor supply, a low living standard among the backward people, inhumanly long hours, inhumanly low wages, dispossessing of the backward peoples from the land, and forced labor. All of these, which form the essence of imperialist exploitation, make it the brutal thing it is and explain the revolt of China, Morocco, etc., from the imperialist yoke, are not mentioned in the four enumerated points. Some of the other points are incorrectly stated, and other important factors are omitted, but this article will be prolonged unduly if I analyze the economic section of Gomez's article any further.

"Workers, Subject Peoples and the Revolution."

Passing over other errors of a minor nature, I jump to the end of the article. The last section is called "Workers, Subject Peoples, and the Revolution." The questions here considered are of a tactical, political nature and therefore vital for the action and "practical conclusions" for a Bolshevik party. Again there is lamentable confusion and even a false tactical position.

Gomez discusses, citing Bukharin (in his battle with Boris—the alliteration is mine) and drawing on Lenin, the corruption that is engendered in the labor movement by imperialism which is able to bribe leaders and even whole sections of the "aristocracy of labor" with some part of the enormous profits, and thus win them to class collaboration and support of imperialism. This is correct, as is the position of Gomez that this corruption must be fought and an effort must be made to win away the "aristocracy" of labor from class collaboration. But the vagueness of the passage and the failure to draw a distinction between corrupted leaders and labor aristocracy leads to this lamentable sentence in which the two are unconsciously merged and illusions fostered on the possibility of winning the corrupted leadership. Here is the sentence:

> "While we fight to win the masses away from the leadership of these corrupted elements, we must endeavor to break the LATTER away from the bosses and draw them more and more into the struggle. It is in unceasing struggle that the hope of the working class lies."

Of course, it is possible that Gomez meant to write "former" in place of "latter," but even if that is so, the cerrection must be made. Moreover, the passage in question sins terribly by omission as well as by what is stated. The masses must be broken away, not only nor directly from the bosses, but precisely from these corrupted leaders. This is a fundamental error in trade union policy—the omission of the necessity of struggle against this corrupted leadership. Lenin advocated it all his life, and precisely because he comprehended that they were bought by a share of imperialist profits and were objectively, to use a Deleonite phrase, quoted by Lenin, "labor lieutenants of the capitalist class." If Gomez actually meant what the words appear to say, the passage is even worse for it implies that the corrupted leaders as a class can be won to fight against the bosses, thus fostering an illusion in them. If we demand that they break with the bosses, it is not with the hope of winning them, but as a means of exposing them and annihilating them utterly.

Follows a return to the economic theory in the sentence: "By the export of capital, the capitalists have unwittingly helped to build up a native industry in the subject countries with its own. . .. bourgeoisie. . ." This is of course, incorrect. The export of capital, neither wittingly nor

A Reply to Wolfe's Uncritical "Critique"

By Manuel Gomez

ACCORDING to Comrade Wolfe, my article on Labor and Empire in the July number of the Workers' Monthly is replete with errors. Inasmuch as there was no polemical discussion under way at the time he might, of course, have come upstairs and talked to me about it, and tried to convince me to correct my point of view in detail in the succeeding number of the magazine; but in that case he might have had no article to write—and besides, he would perhaps say, "This is not the way that a Communist organ (even a would-be Marxist-Leninist one) corrects the errors committed in one of its articles."

Comrade Wolfe rushes to the attack. To those who have not read my article, he seeks to give the impression that I am not only an ignoramus and an eclectic, but also a social-democratic apologist for imperialism, with secret leanings toward Hague conference pacifism. He does not scruple to make use of insinuation, deliberate misquotation, and falsification of facts. For these reckless epithets, my article itself is sufficient refutation, representing as it does an attempt to arouse American workers to the necessity of active alliance with the exploited peoples of the colonies and semi-colonies for the overthrow of American imperialism.

IT is with the doctrinal inadequacies of Comrade Wolfe's criticism that I shall deal here.

At the outset I want to say that I should have been sincerely glad of a better if less pompous and pretentious criticism of my article. The article was, in a sense, pioneer work in a new field; it was, so far as I know, the first attempt to give the Leninist conception of imperialism a wider practical application in the American class struggle by showing the effects of imperialism upon the American working class as well as on the subject peoples. For the first time a detailed explanation of the mechanics of super-profit in the American empire was essayed, together with the mechanics of the relationship between the super-profit reaped by the capitalists and the poisonous "class collaboration" policy in American trade unions. I also pointed out the sinister connection between super-profit and the role of the American socialist party. Many of these things had been dealt with before, some of them in much greater detail, but nowhere had they been brot into direct juxtaposition in an article on imperialism. This I conceive to be one of the most important tasks of our party in the struggle against imperialism. We do not direct our articles on imperialism written in English to the colonial and semi-colonial peoples, but to the American working class. And it is essential not only to make the American workers realize that American imperialism exists, by printing long lists of statistics (altho this also is of vital importance), but to make them realize how imperialism bears they must fight it. I do not claim any basic originality for my article. It is simply an adaption of the theses on national and colonial questions adopted at the second congress of the Communist International. I have drawn freely for material upon widely-known writings of Lenin, Bukharin, Zinoviev, Stalin, and Pavlovitch. Practically all of the information on "class collaboration" is taken from the little pamphlet by Comrade Browder, which is undoubtedly the most authoritative work in its special field. Yet the article was in many respects pioneering. Better articles on the same subject will certainly be written, but in its fundamental propositions the article is correct as it stands.

AND here I encounter Comrade Wolfe, who declares, that all of my basic propositions are incorrect.

What are these propositions? I have set them down plainly in my article, the first six of them tabulated, with numerals precisely as all of them are tabulated here:

(1.) That by intense exploitation of subject peoples under the conditions of imperialism, the capitalist derive a super-profit which becomes the mainspring of imperialist relationships.

(2.) That as a result of this the capitalists are able to continue the system of wage slavery in the home countries of imperialism.

(3.) That imperialism thus becomes a burden not only upon the colonial and semi-colonial peoples, but upon the workers in the developed countries as well, whose conditions moreover becomes worse and worse as the race for super-profit becomes hotter.

(4.) That the American workers are therefore obliged to struggle energetically to retain even their hard-won gains of the past.

(5.) That a section of the working class, including the trade union bureaucracy and the privileged workers, refuses to take part in the struggle and actually betrays it, having been won over to the bourgeoisie thru a share in the super-profits.

(6.) That, sharing directly in the spoils of empire, these corrupted labor elements have a vested interest in imperialist expansion and become conscious or unconscious accomplices in the enslavement of subject peoples.

(7.) That super-profits are also the basis for social-democratic pacifism, whose appeal is made to the aristocracy of labor.

(8.) That, unlike the socialists, the Communists do not base their policies on a privileged group but on the needs of the broad masses, which require unceasing struggle against capitalist exploitation and imperialism.

(9.) That, while the reactionary officialdom of the trade unions (the bureaucracy) are cynical traitors to the working class and must be gotten rid of, some sections of the labor aristocracy as such (the better-paid, highly skilled workers) can and must be won away from collaboration with the bosses to fight for their own ultimate class interests side by side with the rest of the workers.

(10.) That the theory of super-profits is thus a strong weapon in our hands against the labor bureaucracy and the socialists, and against the imperialist policy of the bourgeoisie, an instrument which enables us to establish a connection between the industrial proletariat in this country and the national liberation movements in the countries under the heel of American imperialism.

(11.) That the American workers must take the lead in establishing a fighting alliance with the peoples of America's colonies and semi-colonies.

THESE are the propositions that Comrade Wolfe says are incorrect. He does not prove they are incorrect. He scarcely deals with them at all. Instead, he restates them to suit himself, and then proceeds to give me an elementary school lecture on the A. B. C. of imperialism, the development of monopoly, the transition from the era of the hegemony of the textile industry to the era of the iron and steel industry, the difference between selling railroads and flannel underwear, etc. If my critic did any research work to get this material he might have saved himself the trouble by consulting one of my own articles, entitled, "Lenin and the New Wave of Marxism," which appeared in the March number of the Workers' Monthly, this year. Comrade Wolfe's criticism shows that he does not even perceive what the basic propositions of my article on Labor and Empire are, notwithstanding the fact that they are clearly stated and enumerated. One might read his article thru without having the slightest conception of what I had been writing about. The truth is that he, and the group in our party which he represents, are not deeply interested in the problem of getting the American masses into motion against imperialism but rather in academic generalizations separating theory from action.

THE foregoing paragraphs sum up my article on Labor and Empire and give an idea of the persistent wrong-headedness of Wolfe's attitude toward it. They do not touch upon the specific points that he tries to make. I shall now take these up one by one, answering them not only in my own words, but by quotations from official documents and recognized leaders of the Comintern.

The analysis begins by ridiculing my statement that the American workers might have already thrown off the whole system of wage-slavery if it were not for the appearance of imperialism.

"Such speculations," says Wolfe, "are un-Marxist and futile. Marx showed that capitalism leads thru accumulation to concentration and centralization of capital. This leads inevitably to monopoly capitalism which is the primary economic basis of imperialism. Thus Comrade Gomez's "if" partakes of scholastic medieval speculation and not of Marxism. On what ground does Comrade Gomez assume that non-imperialist background countries imply a victory of the proletariat?"

WOLFE ought to know that I do not assume non-imperialist backward countries imply a victory of the proletariat—altho in the present, imperialist epoch, the overthrow of capitalism in even a "backward" country would be such a victory, and if Wolfe does not understand this his conception has nothing in common with Leninist theory. What I was concerned with was to show how capitalist rule was prolonged thru imperialism, this historical example serving as an introduction to the proposition that imperialism is the backbone of wage slavery today. Whether or not my use of hypothesis was un-Marxian and un-Leninist, I leave for the reader to judge after comparing it with the following sentence from the theses on the national and colonial questions at the second congress of the Comintern, presented by Comrade Lenin himself:

> "But for the extensive colonial possessions acquired for the sale of her surplus products and as a source of raw materials for her ever-growing industries, the capitalistic structure of England would have been crushed under its own weight long ago."

Will Comrade Wolfe have the temerity to say that the "but" in this sentence "partakes of scholastic medieval speculation and not of Marxism?"

MY critic will no doubt reply that the conditions in England were quite different from those in the United States, but that does not alter the question of the allowability of hypothesis. Moreover, Comrade Wolfe does not give my original statement intact. In my article I did not speak of the United States alone, but of England, France and the other capitalistic countries of Europe (in much the same form as the above quotation from Lenin's theses), at the same time drawing in America which as part of a world system could not help but be profoundly influenced by the general development.

Now as to the "peaceful period of capitalism," about which Comrade Wolfe gets very much excited—so much so that he repeatedly misquotes me.

This is the main section of Wolfe's "analysis" and it shows him at his worst. There is in it not a trace of understanding of the development of imperialism in its relation to class war, nor any more than the most superficial conception of Lenin's method of considering it.

BEFORE touching upon my critic's misconceptions, however, I am obliged to clear away some false impressions that he endeavors to create about my article. In the first place, it is untrue that I said or intimated that imperialism is not war-like; such an intimation would be ridiculous, and is the exact opposite of the point of view expressed in my article. Wolfe quotes me as having used the term "peaceful period of imperialism" and he places an exclamation point after the misquotation. No such phrase appears anywhere in my article. What I did say was: "The climax of the struggle to obtan super-profits is thus far different from the period of 'peaceful development' which characterized its earlier stages." A peaceful period in the struggle to obtain super-profits is something quite different from a "peaceful period of imperialism," as the reader will see further on. But where Wolfe has played me most foul is in the important matter of dates; by taking two statements of mine out of their context and placing them in unnatural association, he arrives at the following monstrous distortion:

> "The 'peaceful period of capitalism' in the United States, Gomez dates from 1894 to the world war. This, he adds, is an international phenomenon."

AND this, when I expressly stated that early period of storm and stress of European capitalism culminated around 1871, adding that this development in the United States came "later and in a necessarily modified form." Farther along in the same paragraph I remarked that "the so-called peaceful period of capitalism" (which everywhere followed the period of storm and stress) "was an international phenomenon."

To anyone reading the paragraph without deliberate perverseness of intent, the meaning is quite clear. No one who has seen any of my articles on imperialism—Wolfe least of all—could honestly believe that I date the so-called "peaceful period" of world capitalism from 1894 to the world war.

But I must admit that I cannot agree with Comrade Wolfe's dates. "By the 'peaceful period,'" he says, "is meant that period roughly included in the second and third quarters of the 19th century when the first wars for capitalist national unity were generally at an end (the so-called national wars) . . ."

In the second and third quarters of the 19th century occurred the revolutionary uprisings of 1830-31, 1848-50, 1863 and 1871, and that wars of 1854-55, 1859, 1864, 1866 and 1870. The period between 1848 and 1871 brot into being modern Italy, Hungary, and Germany. Incidentally, the years 1868-71 marked the peak of the activity of the International Workingmen's Association (the First International), which could hardly be said to reflect a peaceful epoch of capitalism.

THE second and third quarters of the 19th century—the middle years of the century, that is—are revolutionary and not "peaceful." They are so characterized by Comrade Bukharin, who points out that a new period did not set in until later. In his report on the Question for a Program for the Communist International, delivered at the fourth congress of the C. I. (November 18, 1922), he says:

> "Following the revolutionary epoch of the middle of last century, an entirely different historic epoch in the development of the capitalist system set in. It was the epoch of the gigantic growth of capitalism. This growth was chiefly based upon the colonial policy of the bourgeoisie and the stupendous development of continental industry which was chiefly stimulated by the exploitation of the colonial peoples. This created a certain community of interests between the continental bourgeoisie and the continental proletariat which was the basis for a great psychological and ideological tendency manifesting itself within the working class and, ergo, within the socialist parties."

Comrade Zinoviev, in his great work on "The War and the Crisis of Socialism," declares that "the year 1871 marks the close of the national wars for western and central Europe" (German edition, page 33) and this happens also to be the date I assigned in my article to the end of the first period of storm and stress.

IF I had more space at my disposal I could show how Wolfe's confu-

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system."

As to the Govrenment's attitude towards the problem, an interesting light is thrown by the last report to the Congress of Trade Unions (page 255): "In the conditions of economic organization established here and in view of the concentration of the fundamental industries in the hands of the Government, public works are not a sound system for dealing with unemployment. Efforts should rather be directed to the extension of industry."

Unemployment caused an outcrop of small informal Co-operative Craft Societies (artel). Many of these enterprises, such as the very common one of a bakers' artel, were broken up by the Trade Unions. Others again, such as those of tailors and tanners, made good. Of the 73 tailor artels started, most were successful, and some have been taken in to the national industrial organizations. On the whole, however, such artels, when managed solely by the unemployed, failed; and only succeeded when advised and assisted by the Labor Exchanges and the unions. About 5 per cent of the unemployed have found relief in this manner.

Owing to the financial failure of the contributory system of social insurance, it has been very difficult to keep the unemployed in benefit, and only 15 per cent. to 20 per cent. are in regular receipt of this relief.

Unemployment has caused some official inclination towards restricting overtime, but this has found no encouragement from the unions, and overtime is anyhow on the decrease. The average day worked in factories divides out at seven to nine hours, but this does not take into acount the six to seven hours to which dangerous trades are restricted, the five hours of those receiving special education, the time off allowed for public duties, the four to six hours of young persons, and the seven hours night shift. The average overtime per month of a worker (other than transport and Don coal) fell from 29.6 hours in 1922 to 25.1 in 1923, and for railway workers from 52 to 22.

That the causes of unemployment in Russia are of a different character from those creating it elsewhere is evident from that fact that the increase of unemployment has been accompanied by an increase of employment. If the total of unemployment is equivalent to a fifth of the industrial population, the total of employed workers is increased by a fifth between August 1st, 1923, and August 1st, 1924. That is to say, the development of industry would have provided employment already for all were it not that a large proportion of the unemployed are unemployable under present conditions and that the improvement in wages and welfare of the town workers has drawn labor from the countryside.

Insurance

One of the first acts of the Revolution was an act for industrial insurance at the cost of the employers, but this was, of course, put an end to by War Communism; for under War Communism workers drew full wages whether the factory worked or not. The whole system was, indeed, based on the State supporting the population, and getting such service as it could in return. Expenditure in public relief and social insurance on a scale such as this soon reached an extravagance that was ruining the State, while the individual was not receiving as much as under the old system. "A noble inspiration, but quite hopeless," is the epitaph pronounced on this policy by a publication of the Commissariat of Social Welfare (Miliutine, 1921).

The New Economic Policy restored social insurance on the usual lines arranged to suit the new needs of time and place. The system at present is:—

(a) Voluntary rural relief committees, with power to raise a rate. (The State does not contribute, though to some extent controls.)
(b) Compulsory contributory insurance for all wage-earners.
(c) State relief for the remainder, together with pensions.

Social Insurance

The system of social insurance will be found in the Labor Code. It covers the usual benefits, including grants, on birth and death, and for "notable service in the Revolution." (For details see Visit to Moscow Insurance Department, page 203.)

The minimum unemployment benefit is one-sixth of the average wage, the normal being one-third, and its maximum period must not be less than six months. Unemployment relief includes the free use of public services, lighting, heating, water, meals at half cost, one month's rent, and no taxes.

It was intended that the scheme should be financed by contributions from enterprises and employers on scales officially assessed, but these contributions were soon, and still are, hopelessly in arrears. In 1922 only about one-third was paid, and this involved a corresponding reduction of benefits. In 1922 the rate of contributions was reduced from 16 per cent. to 14 per cent. of the sum total of wages, and in 1924 80 per cent. of the contributions on this reduced scale were coming in. The benefits were then improved, in some cases up to par. But even now insurance contributions are still on the whole heavily in arrears, the private enterprises paying best, the Co-operative and leased business next, and the State undertakings least; the latter owing in December, 1924, as much as over two millions. So this sick benefit fund and the medical benefit fund have been in difficulties and borrowing from the other funds, and on an average unemployment benefit is still only 60 per cent of the minimum budget, which is itself 50 per cent. below average real wages. Sick benefit has lately been raised to 100 per cent. of wages, but chronic invalids only get half-benefits. Malingering is much complained of. The total number of insured workers was in 1923 5,250,000, and in 1924 over 5,500,000, organized under 870 funds. Fund Committees are elected by conferences of factory delegates.

The Central Insurance Department controls 6,200 beds and numerous sanatoria, which in 1923 took in 30,000 cases. One of the best features of social welfare in Russia is that of the rest houses, or hotels for workers' holidays. Over 85,000 were so accommodated by the Central Committee in 1923, and the provincial committees have their own as well. Collective agreements now in many cases require the employer, as in Germany, to provide such holiday homes. The Trade Unions have their own unemployment insurance, with very varying rates and regulations.

Labor Inspection

The most unusual feature in Russian labor inspection is the staff of inspectors appointed by the Inter-Trade Union Councils, who work in connection with the Communist "nuclei" for the education of the worker. Besides these elected inspectors, there are technical inspectors and sanitary inspectors, appointed as elsewhere, by the Administration. It seems likely that the "elected" inspectors will in time be replaced by officials, as has already been the case with the inspectors for the protection of children at first organized by the Young Communists. But as yet the more important work is done by the Trade Union inspectors.

The number of elected inspectors was so high at one time as to suggest that their functions were political as well as industrial. This impression is strengthened by the large proportion of Communists and of workers, the former as high as 77.8 per cent. in 1919, and the latter 75 per cent. But during 1922 the number has been reduced from 1,150 to 808, and higher qualifications required; while the proportion of Communists fell to 63.3 per cent. and non-partisans rose from 11 per cent. to 34.8 per cent. Of the technical inspectors 70 per cent. have a higher technical education and considerable experience.

The results of this inspection were 6.3 prosecutions per 100 inspections in the last quarter of 1923 in Government factories, 6.5 in Co-operatives, and 42.3 in private. These figures suggest that inspection has concerned itself so far more particularly with private enterprises. During the same period they investigated 171,095 offenses as to overtime and 3,018 as to under age. The demands of the technical inspector as to improvements and so forth were carried out in proportion of 67 per cent. But their reports show that on the technical side the equipment for safeguarding machinery leaves much to be desired. From a sanitary point of view, energetic education of the workers has produced a remarkable improvement.

General Conclusion

The Delegation find that labor regulation in the U. S. S. R. is a practical compromise presenting features that are interesting and instructive. Evils, such as unemployment, strikes, etc., though they exist in Russia, are not there, as elsewhere, essential to the system of employment.

CHAPTER III

Wages

Wages Under Communism

As the nationalization of industry developed, wages came to be regulated by decree at first through the Commissariat of Labor, then under decree of June 8th, 1920, through the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions. At this period, the height of Communism, the Trade Union organization was an Executive Department of the Government. The wage scales were fixed without regard to the value of the labor, and were paid up to 80 per cent. in kind. The money was paid by the industry; food, clothing, and so forth by the government department; housing, fuel, and so forth by the municipal department; and as these could only pay when they had supplies the real rate of wages was never realized. The food ration was regulated for heavy workers, light workers, and non-workers in the proportion of 4 : 3 : 2, though the latter for the most part got nothing. There were also attempts to reward extra exertion with extra rations; but these were discouraged. And supplies being deficient, these wages, or rather rations, were always irregular and generally inadequate. Therefore, like soldiers whose rations are insufficient, the Russian industrial workers deserted and fled from the towns to the villages where food could be got. This again led to conscription of labor in 1920 under rigorous conditions. Its results were entirely unsatisfactory, and it was finally repealed by decree of the Central Executive Committee of March 3rd, 1922.

The Fifth Congress of Trade Unions in September, 1922, recommended that wages be paid in money. This change was forced not only by material but by moral conditions. The Communists could enforce a very high level of discipline and devotion in their own ranks, but they could not bring conscripted labor into line as a body. They could not even stop the non-party and un-political workers from putting money in their pockets by filching immense quantities of goods and by falsifying their ration cards. For example, by 1921, though the urban population amounted only to 12,000,000, 22,000,000 were drawing rations.

But with the New Economic Policy wages, which had become little more than the pay of a rationed labor army, became again the subject of free contract, of Trade Union negotiation, and of Governmental regulation. And with currency stabilization, wages in kind, already steadily in decline, began definitely to disappear. In so far as they still exist, their value is deducted from the money rate at current open-market prices.

The optimistic theory of War Communism that a worker would for an equal living wage give his full energy, experience and efficiency to the public good, was not justified by the experience of the years, 1918-1921. It has now given place to the plan of paying a living wage and getting the best possible production by further awards, such as piecework payment, special rates for specialists and prospects of promotion. This plan is applied even by the Communist International to those employes who, not being members of the Party, cannot be relied on to do their best without pecuniary recognition. It is now proposed to extend the system to employes in State trading and Co-operative concerns so that by paying them a percentage on their sales, their efficiency may be raised to that of the salesmen in private trade. At present in retail trade, the private tradesman, the State and the Co-operative salesman are estimated to compare in efficiency as 118:92:89.

Wages During the Change to Money Payments.—During the time when the currency was daily falling in value, food rations held a large place in wages and money wages were reckoned in "goods" roubles on a system much like that which developed under similar conditions in Germany. At first certain industries calculated wages in terms of the rising cost of their own product; for example, in terms of a "flour rouble," a "leather rouble," etc. But this caused almost as great inequalities and inequities as the previous War Communist practice of allowing payments to workers in the goods they produced. These methods of payment were accordingly converted into general payment in "goods roubles." A minimum budget, representing the daily needs of an average worker was drawn up; the cost of this budget was determined, eventually, as often as four times a month; and the value of the "real" or "goods" rouble was calculated accordingly. The result was a living wage, though a very low one. For the cost was often, as in the Don Basin, fixed much lower than it really was so as to help industry back towards a paying basis.

Money Payments.—In May, 1923, wage rates began to be fixed as a percentage of the total minimum budget. But as soon as there was a stable gold currency (Tchervonetz) this system too began to go; and an order of the Supreme Economic Council, September 13th, 1923, brought in payment of government salaries in gold roubles. It was, however, thought that to pay all workers wages at once in gold roubles would unduly burden industry and unbalance the gold rouble. Such gold payment was, therefore, brought in gradually and first made applicable to transport workers, metal workers, chemical workers, the Don Basin and the Urals. With the exception of the Urals, there was, however, in the winter of 1923-24, a fall of the real value of the gold rouble to 80 per cent. on an average, explained elsewhere (See Currency) which called for additional bonuses. But with the spring, this last crisis, caused by the collapse of the old paper rouble, was over, and it was decided to give up the complicated calculation in goods roubles and get on as quickly as possible with payments in gold roubles, which had by then gained general confidence. There were, however, great difficulties of detail in carrying this out. One was the want for a time of new currency of small denominations; which caused losses to the workers. This was first dealt with by temporary paper issues and then by the new metal silver and copper currency.

The want of working capital in industry still causes delays in payment, but these matter much less now that the currency is stabilized and arrears do not lose their value. They are, however, the main cause of discontent at present. Last autumn arrears were about 10 million g. r., but last winter they were reduced to about 3 million. The delays seem generally to be only a week or so, though there were cases in the Don Basin of September wages not paid until November. Complaints were also made to the last Congress that too large a proportion of the wages was paid in credits for goods in the Co-operatives.

Present and Pre-War Wages Compared.—It is almost impossible to compare wages under War Communism with pre-war wages or with wages at the present time. But since the return to money wages under free contract there has been a steady rise amounting from 150 per cent. to 200 per cent., and a steep rise between October, 1922, and September, 1923, amounting to as much as 70 per cent. The average wage in 1922 in the heavy industries was still in money little more than half the pre-war wage, though this was exceeded in some cases.

The general average of wages seems now to be approaching three-quarters of pre-war rates, being over half pre-war in the heavy and nearly full pre-war in the light industries. In May, 1924, the percentages were: all industries, 68.3 per cent.; food, 116.9 per cent.; paper, 103.5 per cent.; printing, 98 per cent.; leather, 96 per cent.; textile, 85 per cent.; chemical, 82 per cent.; mining, 52.1 per cent.; railways, 41 per cent.; metal workers, 31.9 per cent. In October, 1924, metal workers had been raised to 56 per cent., railway workers to 50 per cent., and textile, to 91 per cent. Wages in Moscow generally are 93 per cent pre-war and in Leningrad 81.6 per cent. But figures can only be depended on in so far as they show a general movement. The A. R. C. T. U. now intends to raise wages in heavy industry and transport so as to reduce inequalities.

Inequalities of Wages.—This difference in the rate of wages between heavy and light industry is due to the much greater difficulty in restoring heavy industry to a business basis. It works exclusively to State order and was therefore more affected by the stress of the change to a business basis. On the other hand, the light industry producing largely goods of prime necessity could at once find its home market. While private business, picking out the most profitable enterprises without regard for the general public interest and with reduced overhead charges for national purposes, could pay the best wages of all. Thus during the early period of the New Economic Policy, wages in private industry were 25 per cent. higher than in nationalized industry.

There are also still considerable differences in wages between localities and between industries. These differences have caused great dissatisfaction and cases arose, as in Yaroslav, where the Provincial Trade Union Council illegally suspended a collective agreement on that account. This difficulty was dealt with by the State giving more orders to heavy industry and more working capital, so enabling it to raise the lowest rates. The total of this assistance given in 1923, reached 700,000,000 gold roubles.

Wage Scales and Categories.—The next difficulty which became serious in the latter part of 1923, was the "Scissors" crisis (See Agriculture). In order to close the "Scissors," wages had to be kept as they were or even be lowered. For these and other reasons a regulation of wages was undertaken by the Government. The wage scales as fixed by the Trade Unions were revised so as to reduce them generally and raise the lowest rates. The new official scale is as follows:—

	Unskilled labor.				Skilled labor.
Categories	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Co-efficients	1.0	1.2	1.5	1.8	2.2	2.5	2.8	3.1	3.5
Experts—	Inferior.					Superior.
Categories	10	11	12	13		14	15	16	17
Co-efficients	4.2	4.6	5.0	5.5		6.2	6.7	7.2	8.0

The general application of this uniform scale is proceeding rapidly. In January, 1924, it was already applicable to 44 per cent. of the industrial workers, and 90 per cent. of the transport workers, or 75 per cent. of the whole.

Since the closing of the "Scissors," there has been a rise of wages as above described.

Wages and Benefits.—When to the rates of money wages are added the advantages represented by contribution from the industry for social insurance, worth from 15 per cent. to 20 per cent. of the wage; for educational institutions, worth 5 per cent.; for Factory Committees, worth 2 per cent.; and for welfare work required by the Labor Code (holidays, working clothes, grants for technical classes, etc.), worth any money up to 25 per cent.; and when to these are again added the advantages in respect of State and Municipal services, in the shape of relief from, or reduction of, rent and rates, and in the form of free tickets, etc., for excursions and entertainments—it seems safe to say that the present pay of the Russian worker is very much better than pre-war.

Productivity of Labor.—The productivity of Russian industry compares not unfavorably with that of Europe generally, where there has been a marked falling off in consequence of the war. Thus as the daily output of a coal miner in England was as low as 55 per cent. in 1921, and only 82 per cent. in 1922, in Russia the figure for a Don Basin coal miner was 77 per cent.

Wages have increased more rapidly than individual output. Between 1920 and 1924, wages increased five times but individual output only doubled. Between October, 1923, and March, 1924, wages increased 15 per cent., but the output only 8 per cent. Wages being now about 68 per cent. pre-war general productivity seems to be not more than about 60 per cent.

The improvement is due to a more intensive activity. In pre-war times the productivity of a British worker as compared with a Russian worker was as 1.55:1.16. The average working day was ten hours, but working days in the year were no more than 252. In 1921, with an eight-hour day, they were 214; in 1922, 254; in 1923, 263, or 88 per cent. of the calendar working days. Allowing for the liberal leave now given by law, and the usual average for sickness, this is fairly satisfactory.

sion as to dates is due to his pedantry in simply affirming to himself that any peaceful period of capitalism would have to fit neatly within the confines of the period of the hegemony of the textile industry. It is true that the rapid growth and dominant position of the textile industry furnished the basis for what Lenin has termed the "so-called 'peaceful development' of capitalism." But how? Not simply, as Wolfe tells us, "because the 'struggle for markets' with textile products as the typical export does not require spheres of influence, colonies, the intervention of states and armies, etc.", but also by the very fact of the expansion of the market itself. Capitalism was "boiling over" within its narrow state confines and the expansion of the market provided an escape valve. It was this that made posible comparative "class peace" in the home countries of capitalism. To conceive of the "peaceful" phase of capitalist history apart from the development of the class struggle, as Wolfe apparently does, is undialectical and un-Leninist. That the leaders of the Communist International do not have any such conception, is shown by the quotation from Bukharin's speech at the fourth congress, given above.

"How are we to combat socialist-Jingoism?" asks Lenin in his pamphlet on "The Collapse of the Second International." "The latter is opportunism which has become ripe, strong, and impudent, during the long, comparatively 'peaceful' era of capitalism." (page 53.)

Was this the second and third quarters of the 19th century? Was it in the revolutionary upheavals of 1830, 1848 and 1871 that opportunism became ripe, strong and impudent? Or was it in the parliamentary epoch which followed?

SUPER-PROFITS played their role in the development of the so-called "peaceful period." It is very important to bring this out here, because Comrade Wolfe's main trouble comes from the fact that he cannot think of super-profits except as an attribute of the later period of world imperialism. To him they belong only to the warlike era of capitalism whereas actually they were one of the bases for the establishment of the "peaceful period."

Bukharin, in his answer to Boris at the fifth congress of the Comintern, quotes Marx as follows:

> "J. B. Say, in his comments on Constanzie's translation of Ricardo, made just one correct observation on foreign trade. Profits can also be made by cheating. One wins what the other loses. Gains and losses within a country cancel each other. But this is not the case between various countries. And even according to Ricardo's own theory—which Say does not notice—three working days of one country can be exchanged for one working day of another. Here the law of values must be essentially modified. Or, as highly skilled, complex labor within a country contains a certain proportion of unskilled simple labor, so the working days of one country can bear a certain proportion to the working days of another country. In such a case the richer country exploits the poorer. . . ."

And Bukharin adds: "The decisive factor is that we clearly see that this doctrine of super-profits of richer countries is an entirely Marxian doctrine."

In the paragraph quoted Marx is dealing with super-profits realized in trade, quite before the epoch of world imperialism—super-profits which can be realised from the sale of flannel underwear as well as from the sale of iron and steel.

IN my article on Labor and Empire I referred to the so-called "peaceful period of capitalism" to show not only that it rested on the extension of markets (in primitive countries, etc.) but also to explain how it damped down the class struggle at home—not just automatically, thru "capitalist stabilization," but thru the purchase of class peace. The possibility of working within the law bred reformism. But how was capitalism able to grant reforms and amelioration of the conditions of the workers? Thru the super-profits, which were partly shared with the upper strata of labor.

I was also interested to show that this did not put an end to the class struggle, but that it merely offered the chance to the opportunists to betray the class struggle and sell out to the capitalists. No article such as mine on Labor and Empire would be complete without a suggestion of how the opportunists and reformists betrayed the working class during the period of the so-called "peaceful" development of capitalism.

When textiles gave way to iron and steel as the dominant industry the problem of capitalism had become not simply one of extension of the market but also of export of capital, acquisition of raw materials, etc. Moreover, monopoly was displacing "free competition" in the home countries of capitalism. The race for colonial possessions was on, full blast. For these reasons, and because of the special attributes of the iron and steel industry which differentiate it from the peacefully expanding textile industry, this later period is characterized by increasingly war-like developments betwene nations and an intensification of the class struggle at home.

BUT it must not be supposed that this change came about all at once, or that it can be explained by the mere fact of export of iron and steel products instead of textiles. It is true that Wolfe mentions also the other factors (such as export of capital, colonies, spheres of influence, etc. —in short, imperialism) which must be considered in connection with the iron and steel industry. But can he maintain that imperialism was full-blown in 1871? Or that, as he says in his criticism, "the war-like period of capitalism in the Leninist sense, begins when Gomez says the peaceful period of capitalism begins?" (Emphasis his.) As a matter of fact, the so-called "peaceful" or "stabilization" period of capitalism continued and was actually further developed by some of the very factors which later became integrated into the system of imperialism (i. e. super-profits from the colonies.) The period lasted practically until the last decade of the 19th century and the beginning of the 20th century.

> "Let us recall what induced a substitution of the present-day imperialist era for the former 'peaceful' era of capitalism," says Lenin in his "Collapse of the Second International." "The facts are that free competition has given way to capitalist monopolies, and that the whole globe has been divided up. It is clear that both these facts and factors have a real world significance. Free trade and peaceful competition were possible and necessary as long as there was nothing to hinder capital from increasing the number of its colonies and from seizing unoccupied lands in Africa and elsewhere. . . the division of the globe compels the rivals to pass from peaceful expansion to an armed struggle for a re-division of colonies and of spheres of influence." (page 29.)

And in his book on "Imperialism, the Final Stage of Capitalism," he says:

> "When the colonies of the European powers comprised one-tenth of the territory of Africa, as was still the case in 1876, then the colonial policy could yet develop non-monopolistically, that is, the development of the colonial policy could, so to speak, proceed along the lines of 'free seizure' of territory. But when nine-tenths of Africa was found to have been already occupied (about 1900), when the world was found to be divided, then inevitably ensued the era of monopolistic possession of colonies, and, what follows therefrom, of a particularly sharpened struggle for the division and re-division of the earth." (pages 126-7; Marxian Educational Society edition.)

REFERRING specifically to the United States, Wolfe objects to my having taken the strikes of 1870 to 1894 "as evidence that up till 1894 there was a war-like period (in the class struggle of this country) and after 1894 a peaceful period." Whereupon he declares innocently that "the strike epidemic in question was due to the world commercial crisis of the period." What is there in this to contradict my statement? Nothing. On the contrary, it merely serves to bear out my contention that the same general factors which had caused European capitalism to "boil over" took effect in the United States, "later and in a necessarily modified form."

My critic goes on to say that the "class peace" that followed 1894 was only relative, which of course, it was —altho it was marked enough for every outstanding writer on American labor history to take note of it. His comment on this is that the relative "class peace" "was caused by the expansion due to monopoly growth and other factors. . ." My only answer is that this is exactly what I have been maintaining.

But, says Wolfe, this "class peace" "is not the kind of 'peace' to which Lenin's quotation on 'peaceful period' refers." Here I must begin to differ with my critic again. Relative "class peace" within a country is naturally not all that is meant by the term, "so-called 'peaceful period' of capitalism"—indeed it may continue to prevail long after the nation in question is embarked on imperialist wars, as I think I have already shown. Nevertheless, the relationship between "class peace" and the so-called "peaceful period" as a whole is of fundamental importance. I refer my critic to the various quotations from Lenin which I have given above.

WOLFE blithely misrepresents me as having said in my article that the "peaceful" period in the United States, when strikes lessened in scope, number and intensity, "was purchased at the expense of the backward and undeveloped countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America, thru the policy of imperialism."

What I did say was:

"In Europe, the social-democratic parties built themselves into mass organizations. The "peaceful period of capitalism" was an international phenomenon, as Lenin has shown us. It was purchased at the expense of the backward and undeveloped countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America, thru the policy of imperialism."

It might be reasonably objected that the word "imperialism" is used somewhat loosely here, but the import of the above sentences is clearly quite different from what Wolfe's misquotation implies. If my critic questions that the so-called "peaceful period" was purchased at the expense of the backward countries, it would be well for him to re-read the following already quoted passage from Bukharin:

> "Following the revolutionary epoch of the middle of last century, an entirely different historic epoch in the development of the capitalist system set in. It was the epoch of the gigantic growth of capitalism. This growth was chiefly based upon the colonial policy of the bourgeoisie, and the stupendous development of continental industry which was chiefly stimulated by the exploitation of the colonial peoples."

TO Comrade Wolfe's superfluous information that the world did not enjoy peace in the years "preceeding 1914" and his insulting assurance that "the Hague conferences were only the plaster on the ulcer," I find it unnecessary to reply except to say that they are in the same class with his nasty insinuation to the effect that I believe the so-called "minor" wars count for nothing because they were waged against black and yellow men and not between whites.

Comrade Wolfe finds fault with my explanation of how super-profits are wrung from the colonies and semi-colonies. I maintained in my article that in the last analysis super-profit may be said to result from: (1) the greatly increased rate of exploitation, (2) the exaggerated extension of monopoly characteristics in dependent countries, (3) the pressure of the imperialist state, (4) robbery of virgin resources. These four points include all the items cited by Wolfe—the low living standard, the inhumanly long hours, inhumanly low wages, dispossessing backward peoples from the land, and forced labor. Moreover, I went into most of these factors in detail.

I admit that I ought not to have said the rate of exploitation is reflected in the composition of capital employed. This is incorrect. The confusion is due to the fact that in one paragraph I speak of the rate of exploitation and in the following paragraph of the rate of profit.

NOW as to the section of my article dealing with the corruption of the bureaucratic trade union officialdom as well as a whole section of the upper strata of skilled workers (the labor aristocracy), thru their share in the super-profits. Wolfe speaks of many "mistakes" in this connection but he does not show a single one. It is untrue that the passage is vague or that I fail to draw a distinction between the union officialdom and the privileged workers making up the labor aristocracy.

I say in my article (page 422 of the Workers' Monthly):

> "It is not only fakers that are corrupted in this way (thru a share in the super-profits), but the entire crust of the trade union movement, the so-called 'labor aristocracy' consisting principally of the most highly skilled workers and workers engaged in privileged trades."

> On page 423 I go on to say: "The whole matter is not as simple as the payment of a bribe—altho in the case of reactionary trade union officials, bribery, "rake-offs" and the awarding of all sorts of contracts are no inconsiderable item. . . ."

> "As for the labor aristocracy," I continue, "its share of the super-profits comes primarily in the form of increased wages—and indeed all other sources of its income (insurance schemes, etc.) really constitute an addition to wages."

I explain that "the selling out of the reactionary officials is in this sense a special problem which the workers will one day deal with as it deserves."

IN the passage quoted by Wolfe—quite out of its context—I am referring to the labor aristocracy and not to the bureaucrats. Anyone who takes the trouble to read the entire paragraph from which this quotation is abstracted will convince himself of this at once.

I stand by the paragraph exactly as it is, and Wolfe's suggestion that I might have meant to say "former" where I said "latter" is sheer nonsense.

Comrade Wolfe's "critique" closes with a final misconception. He sets forth the novel idea that the export of capital does not help to build up a native capitalist class in the backward countries. According to him, it is not the export of capital that creates the native bourgeoisie, but the simple export of commodities. Does not Comrade Wolfe know that the existence of a powerful bourgeois class in the colonial and semi-colonial countries is comparatively recent? This class sprang into prominence with the general industrial development of the colonies and semi-colonies, a development which had been systematically retarded in the period when export was primarily of commodities, but which became an inevitable concomitant of the export of capital.

THE theses of the second congress of the Comintern declare:

> "Owing to the imperialist policy of preventing industrial development in the colonies, a proletarian class, in the strict sense of the word could not come into existence until recently. The ingenious craft industries were destroyed to make room for the products of the centralized industries in the imperialistic countries, consequently a majority of the population was driven to the land to produce food, grains, and raw materials for export to foreign lands."

Obviously there could be no bourgeoisie without a proletariat. The entire system of capitalism in the backward countries was advanced by the export of capital from the imperialist nations. The monopolistic holdings of foreign finance capital could not stand alone, without a host of smaller native industrial and commercial enterprises growing up in their very shadow.

> "The export of capital," says Lenin in his book on Imperialism, "tends to hasten greatly the development of capitalism in the country to which it is exported." (page 66.)

IT cannot be denied that export of capital carries with it the tend-

Work of the Russian Communist Party Among Women

By Comrade Nikolayeva of the Russian Communist Party.

The active elements among the non-party working women were organized in such manner that circles were formed for the working women in the workshops and factories, by women comrades closely connected with the various shops, departments, etc.

Under the rule of the capitalist order, this form of work was the original form of the delegates' meeting. But since it was not possible at that time to hold delegates' elections in the factories, these circles were so organized as to permit the party nuclei to exercise influence over the masses of working women.

Nucleus Recruiting Center.

The circle was conducted under the leadership of the nucleus, it served to maintain communication between the nucleus and the masses of women workers, it was the recruiting center for gathering together more and more working women. The existence of such circles in the factories naturally led to systematic meetings among their organizers, to consistent and systematically conducted work.

Besides this, common meetings of all circles were held from time to time, in order that reports might be heard, a rapproachment made possible between the working women employed in different undertakings, the feeling of solidarity encouraged, and the members of the circles (and with these the broader masses of working women) revolutionized.

The organization of working women correspondents organized by the periodical Rabotnitza (The Working Woman), an organ published by the Central Committee of the Russian C. P., attained a position of great importance in our sphere of activity, not only for our agitation and propaganda but at the same time for the organization of the masses of working women. The working women immediately connected with the factories and with the editorial staff of our newspaper were successful in gathering the masses of non-party working women around our paper; this they attained by publishing notices, articles, and poems sent in by the working women, and by calling upon the women to support their own press organ.

By means of these measures, aided by the trade unions, the educational organizations and the workers' clubs, we were able to so organize and revolutionize the working women under the leadership of the party that the women have taken part in the strikes, and in the revolutionary actions entered into by the working class.

In the time during and after the February revolution, when our party was no longer obliged to work illegally, but was able to go forward to real mass work, the party activity in the women's circles changed in character, and was also enabled to advance more and more to mass work.

The small circles in the separate factories were now replaced by large groups of women workers, connecting the different workshops and departments with the masses of proletarian women. The Central Committee of our party received further aid thru the affiliation of a special commission for conferring on the work to be done among the women. This commission formed at the same time the editorial staff of the periodical Rabotnitza. It organized the work among the women, and ensured its being carried on under the leadership of the party. At the same time this commission was complemented by Communist women workers working in the factories and districts.

Women Workers' Meetings.

Besides the general factory meetings, special women workers' meetings were systematically organized by the groups of active women workers, under the leadership of the nucleus. At first the general mass of working women in the undertakings in question did not attend these meetings, but after a while, hand in hand with the development of our agitation, and with the increased organization of the active elements among the non-party women workers around our party, more and more women participated.

The working women, thus becoming accustomed to the women workers' mass meetings, now began to attend other meetings, bearing a politically fighting character. Thus for instance in July, 1917, when the party was again forced into illegal activity, nightly meetings were arranged in the name of the Rabotnitza, the sole Bolshevist press organ left existing, for the purpose of enlightening the masses on the meaning of the events in July, and on the treacherous role played by the mensheviki.

We sent special groups of working women to the meetings called by the mensheviki, to expose the true nature of the menshevist activity. Here we achieved positive results. We proceeded in the same manner at the meetings convocated by the "League for Women's Rights." At this time there was a mighty increase in the publication of leaflets, posters and other propagandist literature. We devoted special attention to our periodical, and its circulation increased rapidly.

We may claim that the whole of this work was eminently successful. The working women participated in enormous numbers in the street demonstrations in Leningrad on April 21, 1917, and in the June demonstrations. The preparatory work was carried forward not only by the party members but by a large number of non-party working women. Many of these came to the office of the Rabotnitza to ask how they could best prepare for the coming demonstrations.

Influence Soldiers.

Besides this, the working women carried on active agitation among the soldiers sent to Petrograd by the provisional government to suppress the Bolsheviki. The forward march of General Kornilov on Petrograd aroused not only the workmen, but the working women as well.

Then came the Red October, and with it fresh work. But fresh forces came as well, fresh energies, fresh strivings in the struggle and for the establishment of our workers' and peasants' state. Every working woman saw a mighty field of activity opened out before her. Now she had become a citizen possessing equal rights and now she could participate in the building up of the first workers' and peasants' state.

The party made this clear to many thousands of women workers and peasants. Day by day, and month by month, the party pursued its work of awakening fresh strata of the backward masses of working women. The party had frequently passed resolutions, at its congresses, to the effect that the organization of the broad masses of working women is one of the tasks incumbent on the whole party, and the party committees were thus induced to pay special attention to this sphere of work.

Now that the party had extended its influence to certain strata of the non-party working women, it became necessary to convocate conferences, first among the non-party women workers and later among the non-party women workers and peasants. The first of these conferences of non-party women workers took place in Petrograd before the October revolution. About 800 delegates were present, representing 80,000 working women. The conference declared its completely solidarity with the Communist Party of Russia (Bolsheviki) in its struggle for the power of the Soviets.

This conference was followed by a number of similar ones in all the industrial cities and districts of Russia. They proved of enormous organizational significance. The October revolution faced us with the necessity of perfecting these forms of activity, in order to reach the greatest number of working women in every branch of industry, and to organize at the same time the women peasants and other strata of working women.

Work Expands.

The departments already existing for work among the women were now developed into integral parts of the party apparatus, employing paid comrades. Up to this time, in the first and second working periods, none of the comrades carrying on this work were paid, except the comrade responsible for editing the newspaper. The whole of the members of the lower party apparatus performed their work for nothing, as a part of their duty as members of the party. Now, however, a central apparatus was formed and affiliated to the Central Party Committee, and special organs were provided for the lower party organizations. Every factory nucleus, and every Volost nucleus (rural district cell) appointed a special organizer for work among the women workers and peasants, and among the women of the other strata of the population. In every factory and village delegates' meetings of working and peasant women were organized, the delegates being however no longer volunteers, but elected.

Systematic conferences were now held among the women organizers, and the question of training suitable comrades for this work arose. Work among the women could now be carried on in complete harmony with the tasks confronting the party and the Soviet power.

Active in Red Army.

Thus for instance the working and peasant women aided the Red Army during the civil war, took part in the sappers' work, organized ambulance divisions, participated in the defense of towns, and performed every possible description of work. The actual participation of working and peasant women in the building up of the state became a reality. 40,000 peasant women became members of the village Soviets, thousands of working women worked in the city Soviets. Many hundreds of working and peasant women distinguished themselves not only in the civil war, but in every kind of civil service. Even the working women of the East, enslaved and suppressed for centuries, brought forth from their midst a considerable number of energetic women, capable of active participation in the constructive work of the Soviet power.

Millions of working and peasant women are represented by hundreds of thousands of women's delegates. The organized cadres of working and peasant women gathered around the Communist Party grow from year to year. The number of our women party members grows in proportion. The development of the institutions actuating the emancipation of working women, the abolition of illiteracy and the uplift of the cultural and political level of the broad masses of the working and peasant women, are winning millions of these women for the social and political life of our country, and for the constructive work of the Union of Soviet Republics.

In this sphere of work the party is following faithfully in the footsteps of Lenin.

ency to monopolize everything and thus to destroy the native bourgeoisie. The revolt against this is, as Wolfe says, a basis for the national liberation movements in the colonial countries. But side by side with this tendency is the conflicting tendency to build up capitalism in the exploited countries, which has the result that the native bourgeoisie grows with extraordinary rapidity instead of being destroyed. Here we have one of the fundamental contradictions of imperialist capitalism. Wolfe's failure to comprehend it leads him into the absurdly extravagant statements of his paragraph on the export of capitalism.

All in all, my critic's article shows the work of self-conscious student detached from reality, without an appreciation of the dialectic movement of things. For him the problem of imperialism is a matter of half a dozen simple formulas. I did not mark and ticket my article on Labor and Empire with the exact familiar phrases of these formulas, so Comrade Wolfe was inspired to display his knowledge of them. Unfortunately, his knowledge of them is rather uncertain, and appears to have been gleaned by more assiduous reading of Louis Boudin than of Lenin.

unwittingly creates a native bourgeoisie On the contrary, it tends to destroy it. Again Gomez is confusing the export of commodities with the export of capital. Again the economic error implies a grave political one. If the export of capital creates a native bourgeoisie, then such native bourgeoisie should welcome imperialism and its gifts. But the export of capital destroys the native bourgeoisie by competition, by absorption, by monopoly concessions and by use of force—precisely for this reason, the native bourgeoisie fights against imperialism and is a potential ally in the struggle for national liberation which gives the proletariat its allies in the struggle with finance-imperialist capitalism.

Who does not understand the economic fact in question will not understand the political corrolary expressed in the theses on imperialism of the Comintern and will not be able to utilize, as we must and can, the national bourgeois revolutionary movements as partial allies in the struggle against capitalist imperialism, the final stage of capitalism.

Japanese Textile Workers Slow Up As Blacklist Protest

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Textile trade reports from Kobe, Japan, state that woolen textile workers of Nippon Keori Kaisha at Kakogtwa, Harima province, are slowing up production because of the employers' discrimination against strike leaders who were active in the April fight.

The strike was over the attempted introduction of a "profit-sharing" scheme by the management. The strike on the job by slowing up work is continuing because the company refused to take back strike leaders prosecuted in the Himeji court altho the workers were not convicted and despite previous promises of the employers that all workers would be restored their jobs.

The Crisis Britain Postponed

When Comrades Foster and Cannon were in England on their way to the Enlarged Executive meeting of the Communist International, they asked the Communist Party of Britain to assign a representative to supply the DAILY WORKER, with a weekly review of the situation in Britain.

Thomas Bell, editor of the Communist Review, the official monthly of the party, has sent us the first article of this weekly service. This feature will insure our readers that the very critical and interesting situation in Britain will be adequately and authoritatively covered.

LONDON, —By Mail—Special)— The coal crisis which has dominated the political situation here for weeks is postponed. The mine owners have accepted the government proposals for an "exhaustive inquiry" backed up by the substantial inducement of a subsidy. No details are available yet as to the terms of the subsidy, but authorities estimate it at no less than ten million pounds to cover the period of the truce. There is, of course, the usual howl in certain sections of the press anent the "hold-up of the nation" to ransom, and the home secretary has even brot in his King Charles' head, Comrade Zinoviev. The one definite fact, which emerges from the crisis is the united front of the workers' organizations. This display of solidarity upon a new and large scale undoubtedly forced the government and the mine owners to stay their hand.

It is estimated that the loss incurred during the 1921 strike of three months cost £200,000,000. Evidently, a ten million or even twenty million subsidy is considered cheap in the circumstances, for, it should be remembered, this crisis would have involved wider section of the workers than at any time in the history of British labor disputes.

What is interesting for readers of the DAILY WORKER is the shifting of labor's center of political direction. From the beginning the trade unions have retained mastery and control over the situation. Formerly, the parliamentary labor party was successful in lifting the reins out of the trade union leaders' hands. This time we had the uncourageous spectacle of Stephen Walsh (the war minister in the labor cabinet) leading a deputation to Ramsay MacDonald demanding in the event of a strike that the parliamentary labor party would hold up all business in the house of commons. And Ramsay MacDonald didn't read them any lecture in the beneficence of parliamentary or constitutional action, such as he is forever reading to the Communists, but respectfully promised to put the matter before the party.

It is also interesting to note that J. H. Thomas signed the direction to the transport workers not to move any coal.

While the dispute so far has been a distinct triumph for direct action, and labor leaders laughingly speak of taking out membership cards in the Communist Party it would be a mistake to read into events a definite political challenge to the government or capitalism. Neither Herbert Smith or Arthur Cook are prepared to push their victory to its logical conclusion, and call for the abdication of the "Forgers" government. They are not even insistent upon nationalization. They simply stick to the economic demand for a "living wage," with nationalization as a platitude.

But there is certain to be trouble ahead. When Mr. Baldwin told the miners that the wages of all the other workers must come down, it was no slip of the tongue. He means it. The dilemma before British industrialism compels the bourgeoisie to go in for a cut in wages.

The markets in Italy, Belgium, Germany and France, to mention but a few of the more important ones, are practically closed for British coal. In addition to reparation coal the developments of electricity and oil as fuel in Italy dispenses with the former demand for British coal. Germany is using millions of tons of lignite to meet her own demands, while fulfilling her coal and coke obligations under the Versailles treaty. Belgium and France are also funding reparation dumps an offset for British coal.

We can, therefore, only surmise that the retreat of the British mine owners and the government is a method for gaining time. Faced with an unexampled unity in trade unionism, and sections like the engineers and railwaymen also negotiating, it is obvious that an attempt will be made to split the ranks and tie up the sections with separate agreements.

One remarkable feature of events is the emergence of the Communist Party policy on the top. The party has blamed the miners' leaders for not having any positive program to put forward, and allowing the mine owners to choose the ground for the fight. It has demanded the maintenance of the seven hour day, the maintenance of the existing agreement and nationalization of the mines. It urged the miners to go to the general council of the T. V. C. and get it to involve the railwaymen and transport workers in the sympathetic strike. The increased demand for the Workers Weekly in the mining areas is proof to us of the party's increased prestige and influence.

A big strike has taken place in the West Riding of Yorkshire, with Bradford as it center. 130,000 workers have struck work against a threatened reduction in wages. It is curious that England should be going thru a mining and textile crisis at a time when you in America are on the verge of disputes in similar industries. The woolen manufacturers here complain of the invasion of markets, hitherto monopolized by Yorkshire, by Italian, French and Dutch-made men's wear. These latter now sell freely in the London and provincial markets.

As usual the only way out for the bosses is a cut in wages. However, the textile workers are putting up a stiff fight and are encouraged by the results of the miners' solidarity.

The party is active in organizing the workers. Many meetings are being called under auspices of the party and the minority movement. The party has issued a manifesto to the workers to stand firm, and has sent two comrades into the area of the dispute to assist the strikers.

This week-end concludes the Empire Labor Conference called by the parliamentary labor party. This is the first of its kind having delegates from Australia, Africa, British Guiana, Ireland, Canada, India, etc. What the purpose of this conference was is now plain to be seen, since its conclusion. No resolutions or amendments were permitted. Interruptions, such as when the Indian Chaman Lat, challenged MacDonald for his conduct during his ministry were impertinently glossed over and ignored. Some idea of the purpose of the conference may be gleaned from the questionnaire prepared for the delegates on their attitude to the metropolis in the event of war against England or an invasion of colonial territory. It is obvious that Mr. MacDonald is trying to find the weakest link in the chain of empire labor parties in order to formulate his colonial and foreign policy next time in accordance with the wishes of his bourgeois masters. MacDonald has declared for the unity and integrity of the empire (tho not on a basis of equality, for he would still deny India self-government). He still remains the best bulwark against Communism and social revolution.

On Saturday the 24th of July, under direction from colonial committee and London district called together a conference of all local labor organizations in London to discuss the situation in China and Morocco. 164 delegates turned up representing over 100 trade union branches, trades councils, local labor parties, cooperative women's guilds, etc. This conference marks a distinct success for our party in London. The conference sent a delegation to the Empire Labor Conference to demand the declaration of the right of Indian independence and separation from the empire. The delegation was refused admittance and when the letter was brot up Ramsay MacDonald simply moved next business. Still it came as a shock to the labor bureaucrats to think that such a large and representative conference could be openly called by the Communist Party and be attended by twenty to thirty local labor parties

The Labor Party Conference this year promises to be a bit lively. The question of the exclusion of the Communists is again well to the front. It will be remembered that last year our comrades declared from the floor of the conference that notwithstanding the adverse vote on Communist affiliation we would return next year stronger than ever. This is actually happening. Over 76 branches of trade unions, trades councils, local and divisional labor parties are supporting resolutions in support of the Communist party.

Following upon the conference last year a special sub-committee was appointed to inquire into the operation of clause 3, which excluded Communists as delegates. Notwithstanding the volume of evidence to show how unoperable it was, the Executive Committee are going to propose to the next congress to ratify all three clauses and to go further and recommend to trade unions not to appoint Communists when selecting delegates to labor conferences.

You should know that there is a standing order which says that no question upon which a decision has been taken may be raised for three years unless with the consent of the Executive Committee. Nevertheless, C. P. affiliation keeps coming up each year in greater and greater volume. This year one large trade union, the Iron and Steel Trades Confederation, moves to rescind all previous resolutions against the Communist Party.

What Ails The American Worker?

To the DAILY WORKER:— In a statement before the institute of politics of Williamstown, W. J. Castle of the state department enlightened once again the American people why Coolidge objects to the Soviets and is opposed to the recognition of the Soviet government of Russia. He attacked the Soviet as an "inciter of war." Soviet Russia who has just renounced all the territorial rights and claims of the old czarist government, "an inciter of war."

The revolutionary workers of the world have proclaimed that the exploitation of working men, women and children by a clique of selfish, greedy, parasitic individuals is as improper, unjust and out of date, as the old-time slavery and serfdom.

The Russian workers have accordingly abolished the old antiquated capitalist morals in favor of this higher standard of justice, which recognizes only one class, the working class, with no exploiting parasites and to which class all workers are welcome without distinction of race or color.

The Russian workers have fought valiantly and many paid with their lives.

The Workers' Soviet government is the most stable government in the world, at present, barring none. The red army is alert and ready to repel all attacks against the Soviet Union. And the red army has the solid and active backing from all the class conscious workers in every country of the globe.

That much is certain, but at any rate, it is in the interests of humanity as a whole, Soviet Russia as well as the rest of the world that normal relations be established and free trade resumed. Our industry is in a state of depression. Many of our factories are shut down, with the warehouses overstocked because of lack of markets. The Russian market could have absorbed a great part of our output of manufactured articles, agricultural implements, locomotives, steel products and machinery, if we had resumed normal intercourse with Soviet Russia. Even as our trade with Russia is restricted under the abnormal present conditions, it has been reported in the New York Times that the All-Russian Textile Syndicate has purchased this year $36,300,000 worth of cotton alone from the United States. One could imagine then to what enormous extent our exports of all kinds would have grown under free trade and more favorable relations with Soviet Russia.

The official report of the British Trade Union delegation to Soviet Russia, states: That transportation, industry and agriculture are steadily improving and that the finances of the Soviet Union have been placed on a stable basis.

The Franco-Belgian, German and Swedish labor delegations to Soviet Russia are all united in unanimous praise of the heroic struggle of the Russian workers and their unlimited triumph.

The reports of the workers' delegations to the Soviet Union give the lie most emphatically to the Greens, the Lewises and the other fakers of the A. F. of L. But will the rank and file of American labor allow these fakers to fool them forever? Have not the members of the A. F. of L. any self-respect? Can they still swallow the crazen calmnies about the Soviet Union in face of nearly all the European workers' delegations' reports?

It is high time that American labor should send its own delegation to Soviet Russia and learn for themselves the real facts and conditions in the workers' country.

A country of 130,000,000 is being run by the workers themselves. It is worthwhile studying and may come in handy some day.—Charles Golosman.

Corruption In Michigan.

Detroit, Mich.

Editor the DAILY WORKER: No wonder we have Ben Gitlow cases in America. A country where such an organization as the ku klux klan can exist is surely in a bad way. Under such conditions we can expect such decisions handed down by the supreme court. This decision was too rank for even justices Holmes and Brandeis, yet we find it suits traitors like Berger.

A few days ago I was told of a case which illustrates the rottenness of capitalist politics. A man named Fitzgerald was appointed about a year ago by Governor Groesbeck to a position in the state office building at Lansing. His salary is $6,000.00 per annum.

His title is Business Manager of the Highway Department which occupies the fourth floro of the building. He has theoretical duties which he has not the ability or experience to fulfill. But outside of this his important duty is to get rid of the anti-Groesback element. If an opposition party could get into power they would of course do the same.

Fraternally,

Civil Engineer.

NEW YORK ENT BOSSES TRY UNSUCCESS TO DISCHARGE PARADERS, ES GRIP SHOPS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, August 23.—As a result of Thursday's stoppage of 35,000 workers in the cloak and dress industry in this city, about 40 shops discharged individual workers on Friday morning and all the other workers in the shops came out in protest. According to the Joint Committee of Action, the employers, with the approval of the Joint Board, took advantage of this stoppage to discharge some of their higher paid workers and planned to replace them with new and lower paid people.

However, 15 of these shops have already reinstated their workers and it is believed that most of the others will be adjusted by Monday night. In those shops refusing to take back their workers a strike will be declared; but little difficulty is anticipated by the Joint Committee of Action because the stoppage has effectively demonstrated that this group has the power to tie up the entire industry if it should decide to do so.

Hyman Estimates 35,000 Out.

"There can be no further question that we have the vast majority of the membership of our union with us in our fight against the corrupt officials," Louis Hyman, chairman of the Joint Committee of Action, said today. "President Sigman says that 10,900 members answered our call and stopped work. Such a statement is ridiculous. No one can issue any absolute figures for there was no actual count.

"Originally we engaged halls to accommodate 20,000 people. These were filled to capacity, others were hired and also crowded, and many workers never got into any meeting at all. According to the reports we have received today from all sources, we estimate at least 35,000 stopped work.

"For the purpose of minimizing whatever figures we might give out in this connection, President Sigman has for several days been talking of the 70,000 or 80,000 cloak and dressmakers in this city. The truth is there are only about 50,000 affiliated with the New York joint board, and this included the workers in the Bronx, Brooklyn, Brownsville, Jersey and suburbs of New York. Whenever the expenses of the joint board are are apportioned—and they are always apportioned on a per capita basis—the official membership is 50,000.

"President Sigman's further statement that we have 25,000 unemployed in our union today would mean that one-half of the members are out of work. How could this be possible at this time which is considered the peak of the fall season in our industry? Even in slack seasons we never have such a percentage of unemployment as anyone connected with the industry knows well.

"All these misleading figures are issued in an effort to prove that the joint board still has the allegiance of the members of our union; but President Sigman realizes, just as well as we do, that the majority of the workers are strongly supporting the Joint Committee of Action and stand with them in all their demands."

General Strike Move of Building Unions Wins Laborers Raise

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 23—(FP)—The general building trades strike called in sympathy with striking building laborers and hodcarriers has led a total of 28 building trades' employers now to sign agreements calling off the strike. The fight continues against die-hard bosses.

The new agreement gives the laborers and hodcarriers 67½ cents an hour, an advance of 2½ cents, instead of the 75 cents per hour for which they went out. A further readjustment is scheduled for the end of the year, to be determined by conferences. The new scale will pay other building tradesmen as follows: Carpenters, $1 an hour; ironworkers, $1.25; electricians, $1; plumbers and steamfitters, $1.06½; painters and engineers, $1.25; sheet metal workers, $1.06½; slate and tile roofers, $1.25; building laborers, plasterers' helpers, 67½ cents; wood, wire and metal lathers, $6.50 per thousand or a straight hourly rate of $1.25.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

ONE of the happiest men in the state of Illinois is assistant State's Prosecutor William McSwiggen of Cook county. He has secured three hanging verdicts and his victims are waiting for the noose in the county jail. McSwiggen is being congratulated by the most bloodthirsty section of the legal fraternity and by the capitalist press. It is reported that every time one of his assistants gets a hanging verdict, Robert E. Crowe does not sleep for a week with envy.

THE latest unfortunate to face the noose in Chicago is a moron by the name of Costello. He committed an atrocious crime but not any more so than other crimes for which the culprits went scott free. The reason Costello is on his way to the gallows is because he has no money and friends to raise the dough. If he had money, high priced alienists would be willing to testify that he was insane and lawyers would ransack criminal history for loop holes. Yet, we are all equal before the law! Bunk.

FINANCE MINISTER CAILLAUX of France intends to come to the United States to negotiate over the French indebtedness. This is interesting. For one thing, it proves that the capitalists don't take their fulminations against each other very seriously. Caillaux was branded in the columns of every paper in this country as a traitor when Clemenceau then war premier of France, was tooted as a hero. Now, Caillaux has some uses to which Wall Street can put him, so he is welcome. Clemenceau is not even emitting a grunt.

ONE of our readers believes there is a difference between Sidney Hillman, "B. and O. Bill" Johnston and George L. Berry. There is, but it is one of degree. Berry is a burglar, along with being a scab. The other two are more polished. Johnston beat a drum in the Salvation army, and still rolls his eyes to heaven when addressing an audience. Even when he is expelling an opponent or stealing an election he looks as solemn as if he were inviting a sinner to hit the sawdust trail.

SIDNEY HILLMAN has more brains than either Johnston or Berry. He uses a few stereotyped phrases about the class struggle to cover up his company union policy. His former friendship for Soviet Russia still blinds many workers to his present treachery to the working class movement. Hillman and Johnston differ from Berry in much the same way that "Yellow Kid" Weil differs from Tony Kissane or Johnny Torrio, the latter is more crude. All those leaders have turned their backs on the workers. They are turning the unions into auxilliaries of capitalism. Of the two kinds of leaders the Hillmans and Johnstons are the more dangerous.

SEAMEN'S STRIKE SPREADS FROM AUSTRALIAN PORTS TO LONDON

LONDON, Aug. 23.—An unofficial strike among British seamen which is holding up fifty ships in Australian ports is spreading to London where 100 strikers are holding four liners in the docks. No Atlantic liners have been affected thus far.

The striking seamen are protesting against a monthly decrease in wages of $5, effective August 1, which officials of the Seamen's Union are said to have accepted.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE TO AID MINERS

Zeigler Coal Diggers Frame-up Victims

After hearing a report of a special investigator sent to Zeigler, Ill., to eamine the facts surrounding the arrest of eighteen union miners for alleged conspiracy to murder D. B. Cobb sub-district vice-president of the United Mine Workers, International Defense has decided to aid in the defense of the miners, and will launch a national campaign by making it a central feature at the mass meeting and conference to be staged. in. all parts of the country on Labor Defense Day, Sunday, Sept. 13th.

The outstanding events of the Zeigler mine controversy are the refusal of the men to return to work, the murder of a miner, Mike Sarovich, and finally the swearing of twenty-six warrants by Vice-President Cobb, eighteen of which have been served on members of Mine Workers' Local 992, Zeigler.

The immediate cause of the present controversy was a dispute over the weighing of coal that came to a head several weeks ago. The company refused to allow the union checkweighman to have an assistant. The cars were run over the scales so rapidly it was imposible for one man to record the weights. The checkweighman reported to the president of the Local, Henry Corbishley, that he could not weigh the coal. The president notified the men they had no checkweighman. The men came out of the mine.

The sub-district officials were called in to adjust matters. D. B. Cobb, the vice-president, directed the taking of evidence. After more than 100 men had testified out of which only four gave evidence favoring the company, Cobb agreed to enforce the company's demand for the renewal of the president, vice-president, pit committee and checkweighman of Local 992.

This caused much resentment among the miners and they refused to go to work. The sub-district officials called a special meeting of

World Labor Protests Death of Martyrs

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 23.—Poland's white guard government Friday condemned to death Vladislaw Gibner, Henry Kniewski and Henry Rutkovski, members of the Communist Party of Poland.

These workers were following the chief of agents provocateurs, Cechnowski, to trace spies in the ranks of the party under Cechnowski's direction... While they were so engaged they were attacked upon one of the main streets of Warsaw in broad daylight by police and white guards who drew guns and began to fire upon them.

Shots were exchanged and fifteen police and spies were either killed or wounded, while the three Communists were wounded and put under arrest. They then began to torture these wounded men.

Finally they were dragged before the court martial, more dead than alive, and sentenced to death. But Cechnowski in another attack on the Communists in Lemberg was killed by one of them named Botwin.

The Communist parties of Germany and France telegraphed protests to the Grabski white guard government demanding that the lives of Comrades Hibner, Kniewski and Rutkowski be spared from the fangs of the Polish white terror which has gripped Poland in its bloody fangs for many years.

The whole labor movement of Poland, even suppressed as it is under the white terror, Communist and non-Communist alike, have sworn a war to the death against the white guard spies and provacteurs in the ranks of labor, and on the bloody white guard government.

MACHINISTS IN PROTEST AGAINST EXPULSION EDICT

"B. & O. Bill" Wants to Oust Communists

SEWER CLEANERS LOSE STRIKE, MUST WORK FIVE DAYS FOR $30

The Chicago sewer cleaners, organized in the Tunnel and Subway Constructors International Union, are back at work after one week on strike against a layoff of one day in six. BRITAIN MEETS SHIPPING BAN WITH CAUTION

Complete Isolation May Ruin Trade

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Caution continues to be the policy of the foreign office regarding the order issued by the South China government at Canton excluding British ships from Chinese ports.

Downing Street is marking time pending further reports from the British consul general at Canton and replies from the Canton and Peking governments to representations already made protesting against the closing of the ports to British ships.

At Last Impressed.

The revival of the spirit of nationalism in China with its many manifestations of potential strength during the past three months or so has convinced the authorities here that they must deal with China on a somewhat more conciliatory basis than has been the case, especially during the last quarter of a century.

The recognition of the new spirit in China is reflected in the caution urged by the non-jingo press, which emphasizes the importance of cool-headedness in the face of the provoking discrimination against British shipping, which is rapidly running into losses which can only be computed in hundreds of thousands of pounds.

Learning Caution.

The cutting off of British trade at Hongkong, one of the world's greatest transshipment centers, from all contact with Canton thru British ships is described by the Times as "only too distressing," and altho the discriminatory order is attributed solely to "red" influences at Canton the Times editorial stresses the fact that this is another reason why "this challenge must be countered warily."

Officials at the foreign office today were frankly skeptical that any redress would come from Canton as a result of the British protest against the exclusion of English shipping. They are looking for relief on strictly economic grounds. They pretend to believe that commercial discrimination is a double-edged sword and that Cantonese are shortly bound to suffer also.

FOURTH CONVENTION OF WORKERS PARTY MEETS; ELECTS WILLIAM Z. FOSTER TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN

The Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America opened preliminary session Friday evening, August 21, at 7 p. m., seating all delegates, both contested and uncontested, as a provisional body. Altogether these numbered 63, altho representation from the 12 regional districts and the agricultural and unorganized territories, provides for a maximum of 54 accredited delegates.

Chairman Foster then opened the session with a call for the delegates and visitors to rise and sing the "Internationale," which was done with all present joining in this spirited song of the workers of the world.

The whole provisional delegates participated in the election of a committee of five, and provisional officers, chairman and secretary. William Z. Foster received 40 votes. C. E. Ruthenberg received 23 votes for chairman. For secretary, Rudolph Baker received 40 votes, W. W. Weinstone received 23 votes.

Upon a motion to elect a credential committee of five, six nominees were entered, being elected by individual vote. Martin Abern received 39 votes; Alexander Bittelman, 38; Joseph Manley, 38; C. E. Ruthenberg, 25; John J. Ballam, 24; Ben Lifshitz, 23. The first five were elected.

Miner Speaks on Zeigler.

A delegate from the southern Illinois coal mining region was unanimously granted the floor to explain the recent attack made upon the miners of Zeigler, Ill., by the combined forces of the corrupt Farrington machine of the United Mine Workers of America and the ku klux klan, is which Lon Fox and D. B. Cobb, sub-district satraps of Farrington, had illegally deposed the local union officers and tried to drive the miners back to work after they had ceased—at first because there was no checkweighman to watch their interests, and second, in spontaneous protest against the arbitrary removal of their local officers.

During the local union meeting, to which Fox and Cobb had come guarded by armed K. K. K., the klansmen began a fight. One Alex Hargis had fired a shot which mortally wounded Mike Sarovich, a rank and file miner and member of the Workers Party of Zeigler. Comrade Sarovich, whose loyal and active services to the workers will be long remembered, died on Saturday night, Aug. 15. The meeting at which the worker was shot was held on Aug. 11. Lon Fox, sub-district official, had at the meeting tried to use a blackjack upon the members of the union.

Bitter Fight Expected.

Since then, Fox had sworn out warrants for 25 miners, members or officials of the Zeigler local, charging "conspiracy to murder." Bond has been furnished by those arrested and a bitter fight is expected to save these miners from persecution by the united forces of the corrupt union machine of Farrington, the klan and Len Small's state governmental machine.

Upon motion from the floor the meeting rose and stood silent one minute in memory of the dead comrade, Mike Sarovich of Zeigler, Ill. Following this, a collection was taken up in the hall by the International Labor Defense for aid in the defense of the Zeigler miners now arrested. The total cash collected was $129 and in addition the delegates by unanimous vote donated a day's pay each—which will total about $300 more.

Chairman Foster announced that the next session would begin on Saturday at 11 a. m. and the meeting was adjourned.

The last or third convention was held in Chicago in the early days of January, 1924, at which the present Central Executive Committee was elected. The first two conventions of the party were held in New York City,

UNIONS RALLIED TO TIE CAN TO 'MAJAH' BERRY

Government and Bosses Saved His Neck

This is the seventh of a series of articles exposing the crooked career of George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union. This article deals with Berry's looting of the old-age pension fund and the war emergency assessment to start industrial enterprises, alleged to be the property of the international union, but which were really in his own name.

On April 12, 1919, Chicago Printing Pressmen No. 3 secured an injunction restraining "Majah" Berry from collecting the one day's pay and 25-cent assessment. No other local in the country, however, was protected by this order from the burglar's attentions.

At the Chicago conference of local unions many delegates gave the result of their investigation into the activities of Berry and his board of directors and particularly of the financial status of the Pressman's Home.

The investigation showed that the Clinchfield Mercantile Company, the Clinchfield Hydro-Electric Company and the Clinchfield Land Lumber Company were private enterprises, all incorporated under the names of Berry, Orr and their wives in the state of Tennessee.

Conference Decided to Act.

Owing to the debts incurred by Berry and his pals in the name of the international union, debts contracted for the several enterprises which Berry started with union funds, there was a likelihood that a general creditors' bill would be filed against the organization. This prompted the conference to act promptly.

The following resolution, which is an effective reply to the charge that the conference was called for the purpose of disrupting the union was passed unanimously:

"Whereas there has been for some time past a dangerous tendency on the part of the board of directors to the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union to exceed the authority vested in it, in numerous specific instances, and with apparent wilfulness to misinterpret the will of the great majority of the membership of the international union;

"This tendency has been of such important cumulative effect that the constitutional democratic government of the union has been virtually destroyed and the most autocratic and dangerous dictatorship rules instead. Moneys paid into the international union by the membership and dedicated to given purposes are recklessly

NEWSPAPER ROW PRESSMEN EAT UP DAILY WORKER BERRY ESPOSE; HOPE CHICAGO LOCALS WILL WIN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 23.—The DAILY WORKER has at last made its appearance in "Newspaper Row" in this city. For the past two days copies of the DAILY WORKER have been distributed free to the pressmen employed by the Evening Journal and The World. Tonight starts the drive on the other plants.

"Hey there, buddy, give us a bundle and I'll give them to the boys." That is how our comrades who distributed the papers were greeted by the victims of Berry. Pressmen could be seen walking around and letting the rest of the boys have the DAILY WORKER so their fellow workers could see that the "Big Boss" was at last being exposed. The men had pityful stories to tell of how Berry betrayad them during the last strike and expressed their hope for a victory by the pressmen in the plants of Chicago.

The pressmen want all the news that they can get about the strike in Chicago, and about their boss rat, who has sold them out. A news stand where the men can buy the DAILY WORKER will soon be established in newspaper row. The pressmen of New York City want the pressmen of Locals 3 and 4 in Chicago to know that they are for them in the fight for a victory in Chicago for the pressmen they say, means a victory for the pressmen in the whole United States and above all the firing of Berry, the strikebreaker diverted and the purposes of the membership remain frustrated. The situation has become so serious that notwithstanding constantly increasing revenue, the funds apparently available for financing the economic functioning of our international organization are nearly always so insignificant that a thought forward suggests apprehension rather than assurance. To remedy this condition by again increasing the revenue of the international union seems just as impossible in the future as it has been in the past. There can be no remedy except by the faithful application of moneys paid in by the membership for given purposes to those purposes by the board or directors. The past record affords the membership no assurance that the board of directors has any intention of keeping the faith.

Impaired Union's Efficiency.

"To the contrary, their unconstitutional and indefensible acts, which have amounted to so many breaches of trust, have impaired the economic efficiency of the organization and the value of its institutions to such an extent that this conference, representing, as it does, a majority of the membership of the international union, deems it desirable and necessary at this time, in protection of the interests of the membership of the international union, that steps be taken for a thoro investigation of the administration, affairs and properties of the international union.

"Therefore be it resolved, that this conference create a committee of five members for this purpose, and that this committee shall have full power to determine and to carry into execution a plan of action best calculated to protect the interests of the international union, and to employ such legal assistance as may be necessary in the execution of such plan.

Expenses of Work.

"Resolved, that the unions represented in this conference be and are hereby asked to contribute to a fund to defray the expenses of this work, a per capita of fifty cents per month, for a period of five months beginning May 1st, 1919. Any unexpended sum upon completion of the committee's work to be returned to the contributing unions, pro rata per member."

Two other paragraphs referred to unions not participating in the conference. Those unions could join in the work outlined according to the terms of the resolution.

The following names were signed to the above resolution, representing the large cities thruout the country: Frank Pampusch, St. Paul Pressmen; James J. Bagley, New York Feeders; George W. Schemann, Milwaukee Web Pressmen; John G. Warrington, St. Louis Feeders; Charles H. Galion, Philadelphia Pressmen; John J. Huddeck, New York Paper Handlers; William L. Haas, Chicago Pressmen; Charles J. Harvey, Boston Web Pressmen; Frank J. Pyle, Pittsburgh Web Pressmen.

Got Aid of Government.

This conference represented the bulk of the membership and it seems impossible that Berry should hold on in the face of such widespread and well organized opposition. Yet he did. And he did it with the aid of the employers, the government and the industrial crisis that followed the war. It is generally believed among pressmen that the government aided Berry financially in those critical days. Berry is a useful tool of the employers and what else is the government of the United States but an executive committee of the employers, just as responsible to them as the executive committee of a local union is to the membership, and generally more so?

The unions that became a part of the above conference pledged themselves to a 50-cent per capita tax, which money was to be used for the purpose of cleaning up the affairs of the international union and putting the organization on a trade union basis.

The next article in this series will continue the story of the Chicago pressmen's fight to clean up the international union.

JUDGE LYLE IN OPEN ALLIANCE WITH ANTI-UNION GARMENT BOSS IN WAR AGAINST AMALGAMATED

A perfect example of employers' justice was given in the Maxwell Street police court when the International Tailoring company threw off its mask, shoved the slugging cop Mike Grady into the background, and appeared directly as the prosecutors of the sixteen members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers arrested in a raid on their headquarters conducted in the hope of breaking the strike in the tailoring company's plant.

The International Tailoring company was represented by two lawyers, Quillici and Jerkis, who howled for prison for the employes of the International because they dared to go on strike for a decent standard of living. Thru the entire proceedings, Judge Lyle frankly took the side of the garment bosses stating he believed the union men guilty.

Judge Lyle reluctantly granted a change of venue, and it was necessary to go before another judge—Harry Fisher—on a writ of habeas corpus, in order to get Patsy De Rosa, one of the strikers, out of jail on $10,000 bond. Lyle had refused to reduce the prohibitive bail of $100,500 which he had set a week ago.

Lyle Railroads Workers.

"The Amalgamated represents mob rule and violence," said Quillici to the court, "and the International Tailoring Company represents law and order. We are going to fight these people to a finish and we are going to wipe them out."

Judge Lyle showed that he is out to help in the wild attempt to exterminate the union when he said of the striker De Rosa, in commenting on the freeing of De Rosa on bail: "It is unfortunate for the people who were slugged by De Rosa, and whose property was destroyed by the acid thrown by De Rosa, but it is not my fault."

Judge Lyle runs his court on the principle that the framed-up workers are always guilty, and that the employers are always on the side of law and order. Lyle is attempting to become the next state's attorney as a worthy successor to the labor hating Crowe, and believes he will receive recognition if he railroads enuf workers to the penitentiary.

Only Crime Is Striking.

Quillici admitted to the DAILY WORKER that the fight to convict sixteen union members of "conspiracy" and "malicious mischief" is a fight on the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. "It is connected with our fight for an injunction," Quillici said. "These people are conducting a picket line.

"They are slugging, murdering, and keeping our employes from work. We have an injunction, but we are trying to get a better one. We are daily menaced and threatened by organized lawlessness."

Lyle approved of this statement, as he is using his job to protect the profits of the bosses.

Lyle Broke Constitution.

In granting the reduction in bail so that the striker might come out of jail, Judge Fisher said: "This case shows the danger of ignoring established principles of law just to respond to public clamor, or that which purports to be public clamor. Under our constitution the right to give bail is one of our sacred institutions. Were the constitutional guarantee to bail ignored regularly, we would have frequently, as in this case, a striker who has been held in jail for ten days."

The bond reduction was granted after William A. Cunnea, attorney for the strikers, had shown that De Rosa was being persecuted by the International Tailoring Company simply because he went on strike, that he was the victim of a frameup, that he was only 21 years old, and that he had never been under arrest before.

Included among the union members charged with "conspiracy" are Sidney Rissman, Isadore Rothbart, Mike De Novi, Sam Gier, A. De Felicese, Sol Kramer, Ruben Block, L. Anzolone, H. Miller and James Cooper.

Their cases will now go to the chief justice, who will assign another judge.

"WHEN the annual income of the criminal element exceeds that of the national government by $40,000,000, it must be admitted that the situation is a serious one," said a prominent banker in an address before the Illinois Sheriffs' Association. The banker was referring to the illegitimate robbers, not to the respectable gentlemen who take the savings of the workers into their banks and run away with them.

IT is said that one of the causes of William Jenning Bryan's death was overeating. Perhaps and perhaps not. There is a good deal to be said for judicious eating. Every intelligent person should regulate his diet to suit his constitution and his occupation or lack of it. But we are decidedly of the opinion that more deaths are caused thru malnutrition.

THE congress of the labor and socialist international is taking place in Marsailles, France. Here is a list of some of the delegates: Hillquit and Berger from the United States; Scheidemann and Paul Levi from Germnay and Karl Kautsky from Austria. What fine company Paul Levi finds himself in? Levi was expelled from the Communist International when he publicly denounced the Communists during the so-called "March putsch" of Germany in 1921.

THO the Communist International criticised the March action for tactical reasons, it excoriated Levi for his treason to the working class, in the midst of a struggle. That the international was correct in its decision on Levi is proven by the company in which Levi now finds himself. Those super-critics of the Communist International usually find themselves lined up with the worst traitors to the working class movement in the end.

FOURTH W. P. CONVENTION IS IN SESSION

the initial convention being held in December, 1921.

Altho the second session was due to open at 11 a. m. Saturday, it was delayed unavoidably until 7 p. m., at which hour Chairman Foster again called the meeting to order.

Comrade Ruthenberg, reporting for the minority of the credential committee, spoke at length of the various contested districts and made the following proposals:

By agreement the session adjourned at 11 p. m. until 11 a. m. Sunday, when further discussion on credentials was to be in order.

Greetings to Convention.

When the convention again opened session at 1 a. m. Sunday, greetings were read from the following: The Communist Party of Canada, the Jewish Branch of Baltimore, Local Buffalo, the Los Angeles City Central Committee, the Armenian section of Philadelphia, the Seattle membership in meeting, the Northwest Jewish Branch of Philadelphia and the Central Bureau of the Russian section, all stressing the necessity of unity by liquidation of factions and a struggle against the right wing Lore tendency.

The Peasants' International sent greetings and a hope that further vigorous work among the rural masses would be the result of the American party's efforts.

Written Protests.

Communications were read making certain protests and demands. One from Comrade Brahdy of New York demands place on the District Executive. M. Belaisvis protested non-publication of an article. Comrade Georgian protests ruling of noneligibility to party office. The Armenian section branches protest the unremedied situation in the federation and asks correction. These were referred to the appeal committee.

Send Message to Comintern.

Comrade Bittelman proposed the following cablegram to the Communist International, which was passed unanimously:

"The national convention of the Workers Party sends Communist greeting to the leader of the world's proletariat, the Communist International. We take pride in the fact that we are a part of the world's Communist Party led by the tried and proven Leninist leadership of the Communist Party of Russia.

"The convention will make all efforts to liquidate the factional struggle between the majority and minority and to unify all Communist forces in the party for a determined struggle against Loreism and for the Bolshevization of our party.

"We reaffirm and pledge our loyalty to the cause of the working class to the social revolution, to the dictatorship of the proletariat and to the Leninist leadership of the Communist International."

Russian Soviet Rule Is Successfully Ending its Task of Reconstruction

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Walter Duranty, European correspondent of the New York Times, is back in Moscow, and it seems that he is determined to continue the favorable reports that featured his first visit to the Union of Soviet Republics several years ago.

The Times is bitterly anti-Soviet. During the famine year of 1921 it published the worst of the great flood of atrocious fabrications that poured thru the columns of the capitalist press.

But even the Times must be truthful about its stock market quotations and baseball scores. So it must finally concede the correctness of figures telling of the recovery of Soviet industry and agriculture, altho it may make malicious war upon the political program and ambitions of Workers' Rule.

• • • •

It must give great pain to the Times, therefore, to publish the editorial estimate of "Economic Life," a Soviet organ, of the program of the State Planning Commission (called the Gosplan) for the coming fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, which declares:

"IT CAN NOW BE SAID WE HAVE SUCCESSFULLY EMERGED FROM THE RECONSTRUCTION PERIOD."

This means that Soviet Rule has mended all the ravages of the three years' devastation of the world war, and healed the terrible wounds inflicted by the years of civil war and intervention that followed, placing the country on a pre-war basis in agriculture, industry and trade, and ready to go forward to new and greater achievements on its own account in the next period, the period of construction.

The figures reckoned in pre-war roubles, that is, at the pre-war index co-efficient, are as follows:

INDUSTRY—Industrial production is 5,000,000,000 this year, 6,650,000,000 the coming year and 7,000,000,000 in 1913. The coming year is 95 per cent of 1913.

AGRICULTURE—The total agricultural production, including timber, cattle, fish, is 9,150,000,000 this year, 11,436,000,000 next year and 12,826,000,000 in 1913. The coming year is 89 per cent of 1913.

TRADE—Exports to Europe and the Near East only are 270,000,000 this year, 680,000,000 the coming year, 1,305,000,000 in 1913, or just over 50 per cent.

Duranty writes of these figures that the "experiences of the past three years has shown the Gosplan estimates are strictly adhered to." Which is some admission for the N. Y. Times.

• • • •

Duranty also gives some visible expressions of this successful ending of the period of reconstruction, pointing out that, in Moscow for instance, a number of large buildings are being constructed, the city presents an air of greater animation, the people have unquestionably a more cheerful appearance and the general average of dress has improved, while the children playing everywhere are plumb and healthy, showing that the days of hunger are but a memory of the bitter days of the blockade.

• • • •

Duranty quotes the familiar saying of Lenin, "Give us four years to teach the children and our work will stand," and then gives his own observations and conclusions:

"It is striking to see the increase in the proportion of red-capped and red-ribboned girls—members of the Communist youth organization—among the juvenile population. The organization has 1,300,000 members and refused admittance to fully 1,000,000 more. The junior organization, 'Young Pioneers,' has increased in similar proportion. Soviet Rule has had eight years and it looks as if it had got the children fast enough."

• • • •

Which should be a warning to capitalist rule thruout the world and an inspiration to oppressed labor everywhere.

Solidarity Betwen Separate Shoe Unions Indicates Unity Move

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—That solidarity is in the hearts of the shoe workers was verified when the workers of the Premier Shoe Co. members of the American Union took the following collection in the various departments of their shop to help the B. W. S. strikers of the Shoe Workers Protective Union; Lasters, $37.00; Finishers, Cleaners and Packers, $16.00; Heelers, $15.00; Cutters, $5.00 and Fitters, $17.00.

These men and women who are now in the sixteenth week of the strike and who have never left the picket line for a day appreciate the comradeship shown and declare that this is one more link in welding the shoeworkers of Greater New York together as part of one national industrial organization.

Local 992, on August 11th. President of the sub-district, Lon Fox, Vice-President Cobb and district board member Darby Babbington came to the meeting.

The Men Refused.

Fox and Cobb demanded that the miners elect new officers and return to work. The men refused and insisted that the case be reopened. Cobb answered in the negative a question whether or not he would reopen the case if the company were willing. The meeting adjourned with the men determined not to return to work until their old officers were recognised.

A miner by name Asa Wilson, known to be a ku klux klan supporter, struck an old miner, Bert Farthing, sixty-nine years old, presumably for a remark Farthing had made during the meeting. A general fight ensued between the miners supporting the old officers and those associated with the klan and supporting the sub-district officials. During the fray, Cobb pulled a black-jack from his pocket. This was taken from him and is now in the custody of the law in Zeigler. Both Vobb and President Fox received injuries during the melee.

One of the miners Mike Sarevich, who is a strong supporter of the local officers, was about to leave the hall when he was shot down by Alex Hargis, former secretary of the local and known to be a klansman. Sarevich died several days later and Hargis is held for the murder.

$70,000 Bail Raised.

The same night, warrants charging rioting were served on Bert Farthing and his son. The two were immediately released on bail. The miners continued to stay away from the mine save to picket against those who might be brot in to work. On the 18th, warrants were served on 18 leading members of Local 992, among whom were President Henry Corbishly and his two brothers. The warrants were signed by D. B. Cobb and Lon Fox and charged 26 Zeigler miners with entering into a conspiracy to murder D. B. Cobb the night of the meeting on the 11th. More than $70,000 in bail was raised in a short time and all were released.

Ziegler has been a solid phalanx against any encroachments of the operators and has been a rallying center against the ku klux klan, which is quite strong in this district. The miners in Ziegler point out that the only supporters the sub-district officials have in Ziegler are followers of the ku klux klan. In the present trial of the 18 arrested Ziegler miners, they say, it will be a case of a triple alliance between the sub-district officials, the operators and the ku klux klan against the miners.

Important Trial.

Preparations are being made, not only in Ziegler, but in every mining town in the county where sympathy is strong for the defendants, to organize to thwart any attempt at frame-up. Two local attorneys have been retained to represent the men at a preliminary hearing next Wednesday and defense committees are being set up to raise funds to fight the case. It is believed that the sub-district officials are desperate enuf to go the limit in pushing the prosecution and a trial of national importance may easily develop. In the meantime the members of Local 992 are keeping the mine shut down and turning out every morning to see that no miners enter the pit. Several clashes have occurred at the mine, but have been confined to pick-handle fights, since the strikers are careful to see that none of their members carry guns.

James P. Cannon, secretary of International Labor Defense, said: "This is a plain case of persecution of workers who have been loyal in the struggle against the mine operators. Because the persecutors are corrupt union officials makes the case all the more flagrant. The miners of Ziegler merit the support of every honest worker."

AND WE THOUGHT THAT CLASS COLLABORATION WOULD GIVE US WORK!

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The Baltimore & Ohio railroad announces that 7,600 shopmen employed in the heavy repair shops of the B. & O. system take a temporary lay off August 25 to 29 by an agreement between railroad officials and representatives of the shop-crafts unions.

MOSCOW—(FP)—The state grain trust of the Soviet Union, now celebrating its third anniversary, announces that it is now handling 40 per cent of all grain in the Russian market. It buys grain direct from the peasants.

LAWRENCE, Mass.—(FP)—Striking workers of International Woolen Mills at Methuen are reported returning to work under the announced 10 per cent wage reduction.

THE T.U.E.L.

Represents the Left Wing of the Labor Movement. Its Purpose is to Strengthen the Labor Unions by Amalgamation of Existing Unions, Organization of the Unorganized, and by Replacing Reactionary and Class Collaboration Policies with a Unified Program for the Transformation of the Unions Into Organs of Revolutionary Class Struggle for the Overthrowal of Capitalism and the Establishment of a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

WORKERS OF WHOLE WORLD ARE DEMANDING TRADE UNION UNITY AND ONE GREAT INTERNATIONAL

That the organized workers in all countries, and not only in Europe, are deeply interested in the movement for trade union unity is witnessed by the resolutions and other expressions of opinion which we reproduce. From a vast industrial center like Berlin to a mining village in the Asturias, from the far north of Sweden to a little market town on the hillslopes of Andalusia, from Poland to Portugal, from Belgium to Brazil, from Leningrad to Montevideo, the unity of the trade union movement is the outstanding vital issue in the world of labor.

Belgium.

The Brussels branch of the Belgian Teachers' Union has unanimously resolved that:

In view of the events in China and Morocco, we condemn with all our might the actions of the capitalist powers in the colonies. . . We warn the working class fo the danger of a world upheaval. . . We beg all working class organizations to work for the reestablishment of trade union unity, and with this in view, to support the efforts of the Anglo-Russian council.

The last sentence was passed against four contrary votes.

Brazil.

In an article entitled, "Trade Union Unity," the new labor paper, A Classe Operaria, writes:

The struggle for unity gains more and more the confidence of active trade unionists throughout the world. As in Europe and America, the question of trade union unity is, in Brazil, also the most important question.

We must break with the old routine and open up a wider horizon to our trade union organization, national linked with international.

France.

A joint mass meeting at Lille has resolved to support the campaign of the C. G. T. U. for untiy in France, and has added:

Considering the praiseworthy efforts of the British trade unions which have resulted in an agreement with the Russian unions on the question of international unity, the meeting declares its approval of this action of the British trade unionists, and asks the C. G. T. trade unionists of France to adopt the same attitude as the British in the question of international unity.

Similar resolutions have been passed by the Drome branch of the Teachers' Union, and by numerous meetings in Alsace, at Roubaix, Tourcoing, Boulogne, and in the departments of the Marne, Loir-et-Cher, Allier, Rhone, etc. Further references to the recent developments of the unity campaign in France will be found on another page.

Germany.

The Berlin branch of the Metal Workers' Union, the largest of all the trade union branches in that city, have unanimously passed at a general meeting the following resolution for the German T. U. C. (to be held in August):

The international capitalist offensive directed against the working class of all countries, and the fact that the capitalists are utilizing all the political and economic means at their disposal in order to lengthen the working day, to cut wages, and to reduce or abolish altogether the meager social rights the worker still enjoys, urgently demand the formation of a united battlefront of all workers in the trade unions and a united trade union organization, nationally as well as internationally.

The trade union congress therefore instructs the national executive of the German Trade Union Federation to propose to the International Federation of Trade Unions that all trade union organizations of the world, regardless of whether they are at present affiliated to any trade union international or not, be united into a single trade union international. The executives of the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam), and of the Red International of Labor Unions (Moscow), shall in joint conference decide upon the manner and composition of a world congress to be convened for that purpose.

At this general meeting 80 per cent of the members present were social democrats. Vorwarts (28-6-25), the social democratic central organ, comments that:

The I. F. T. U. has already invited the trade unions of all countries, and particularly the Russian unions, to affiliate. The latter have not only so far refused the invitation, but they have tried to destroy the I. F. T. U. and its affiliated organiaztions under the mask of the united front. It is a pity that the general meeting of the Berlin metal workers was unaware of these facts.

Norway.

A national conferences of trades councils has passed a resolution of which the following are extracts:

The conference entirely supports the endeavors of the British and Russian trade unions and of the R. I. L. U. for summoning of an international trade union unity congress. . . The conference appeals to all organized workers to support these endeavors for a united trade union international.

Poland.

The plenary meeting of the Building Workers' Federation and the last Warsaw district conference of the Chemical Workers' Union have adopted resolutions in favor of international trade union unity.

Portugal.

The official organ of the Portuguese Railwaymen's Union, O Sul e Sueste, writes that:

The principle which should, above all, be followed and defended by all trade unionists, whatever their opinions may be, is that of trade union unity, national and international.

Russia.

The sixth Leningrad Provincial Congress of Trade Unions, representing 514,000 working men and women, has telegraphed to our general council, and stating:

We express our profound satisfaction at your formation together with the All-Russian Trade Union Council of an Anglo-Russian council which has taken as its aim the uniting of the trade union forces of the whole world.

We know from our own revolutionary experience, as well as from the experience of the international working class movement, that the capitalists, whose interest lies in the division of the working class, will not hesitate to use any means to destroy the united front which is forming between the British and the Russian workers. But we are striving all the more, in common with you, to overcome these obstacles, and, with you, to build a powerful world organization which will unite the workers of all countries in one trade union international.

Spain.

The One Big Union of Mineworkers of the Asturias writes to us from Mieres la Villa:

We are pleased to inform you that we are in complete agreement with your campaign, in which we also join.

We have received a similar communication from the "Esperanza" Society of Agricultural Workers at Torredonjimeno (Andalusia).

Sweden.

The Goteborg Metalworkers' Union, which with its 7,000 members is the biggest local union in the Swedish Metalworkers' Federation, has at its last general meeting unanimously adopted a resolution supporting the efforts of the British and Russian trade unions for international unity. The Luela trades council has similarly requested the Swedish T. U. C., the efforts of the British and Russian unions.

Uruguay.

At Montevideo (the capital of Uruguay) the journal of the printing trades, El Obrero Grafico, declares:

The questions of trade union unity is not simply a European question. It should also be discussed in other countries. To deny that the Uruguayan workers have any interest in this question would mean working against unity.

R. R. EXPRESSMEN SECEDE FROM R. R. AND S. S. UNION

Reactionary Craftism Takes Backward Step

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, August 23.—Secession of a body of railway expressmen, under the leadership of James J. Forrester, from the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes, is announced by President Fitzgerald of that organization in the current issue of Labor, and is confirmed at the office of President Green of the American Federation of Labor. Green has wired Fitzgerald, in answer to an inquiry: "A. F. of L. will give no recognition to an outlaw organization nor will it grant a charter to any seceding group."

Forrester, who was general president during the war, and resigned in order to become a labor member of the Railroad Labor Board, has been "summarily dismissed from the brotherhood," according to word from Cincinnati headquarters, after having been deprived of his office of national legislative representative in Washington.

He is charged with having held a conference in Chicago, early this month, with Grover C. Milam, Richardson of Omaha, Walters of Washington, D. C., Heath of Buffalo, Beall and Fletcher of Chattanooga, Geiger of Philadelphia and Gunderson of Chicago, at which they chose Forrester as president and Milan as vice-president of a new organization, to be known as the American Federation of Express Workers.

From the Forrester side of the case comes this statement: That when Forrester was asked by Secretary Morrison of the A. F. of L., during clerks, express employes, etc., he undertook the job with the understanding that the expressmen, who had twice had independent existence under the A. F. of L., should in due time be allowed to "go it alone" again. That the express division in the brotherhood, ever since that time, had caucused to choose a vice-president in the brotherhood. That before the recent convention they chose Malim; that in spite of his overwhelming majority in the caucus, Malim was defeated by the larger vote of the clerks in the general convention, dictated by President Fitzgerald. That Fitzgerald was not fairly elected president, but won his place by gross illegality. That the express division now is showing an overwhelming majority in favor of leaving the brotherhood.

Intrigue—Not Issues, In Forefront.

Morrison flatly denies that any discussion of a future charter or independence for the expressmen was ever discussed with Forrester during the war period.

Forrester claims that 15,000 men have thus far voted to join his new organization. A. F. of L. officials point to the long list of secession movements that have collapsed, and warns the expressmen that it will give them no recognition. Fitzgerald charges the secession to "personal ambition" on the part of a few "blind and ambitious leaders," who are chagrined because they failed to defeat him in the convention.

Needed Instruction to Keep Scab Cabs from Labor Sheet

LOS ANGELES, Calif., August 24.—The central labor council has adopted a resolution to instruct the board of directors of the Citizen, the official organ of the C. L. C., to discontinue the advertisement of the Yellow Scab company.

This action was taken upon the motion of Brothers Bevan and Cotavos, delegates of the Truck Drivers and Taxi Drivers, respectively.

BARBERS' UNION IN HOT PROTEST AT EXPULSIONS

Condemn Crime Against Chicago Progressives

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 23.—At a meeting of Local 913 the membership went on record against the policy of expulsion of the general president and the general executive board of the Journeymen Barbers' Union of members who have other political opinions than these officials.

It seems that General Organizer Horline got wind of the intention on the part of the progressives to acquaint the membership of Local 913 with the Chicago expulsions; so he came reinforced with a Sunday school teacher who is also a lawyer and president of the Syracuse local of the journeymen barbers.

Progressive Takes the Offensive.

The progressives understood that these two gentlemen came to waste the little time left for good and welfare, to tire the members with long speeches until everybody would have gone home and the meeting would close automatically. Therefore as soon as the report of the organizer was over Brother Midella got up and mentioned that seven brothers from the Chicago local had been expelled for their ideas. The good impression of this statement upon the barbers was irresistible. No one would have dared to deny the floor to our brother when freedom of speech was at stake.

Brother Midella went on and explained why the Chicago progressives were suspended and fined by the officials of the International. He closed with the declaration that no one has the right to usurp the power of office and trample upon the will of the rank and file. He then read a resolution and moved for its adoption. A large number of seconds were heard.

Faker Couldn't Answer.

Horline got the floor. He tried to shield his bosses under the cloak of legality. He was asked a question: "If in the history of the International, the general president and executive board had ever reversed a decision in favor of a rank and filer and against the officials of a local union?" This he could not answer.

Several other members got the floor, after which the motion for the adoption of the resolution was put to a vote. A thunderous "yes" greeted the victims of the Chicago reaction with only one voting against.

Real Aid.

At the close of the meeting a collection was taken up at the door for the Progressive Barber which netted $30.

Resolution Adopted by Local No. 913, Journeymen's International Union.

"WHEREAS, the general president and general executive board of the Journeymen Bargers' International Union has suspended and fined seven active and loyal members of the Chicago Local No. 548 $50 each, upon charges preferred by some officials of that local union; and

"WHEREAS, these seven brothers had been found not guilty of those charges by the membership of Local No. 548 upon which the officials appealed to the general president of the International; and Demands Reinstatement.

"RESOLVED, that Local No. 913 demands the general president and general president and general executive board in fining and suspending these seven brothers of the Chicago Local No. 548; and be it further

An amendment to the resolution was made and incorporated in it to the ffect that Local No. 913 is against all suppression of free speech since it is historically proven that suppression is a cog in the wheel of progress.

Two Firemen Killed, 90 Passengers Injured in Canyon Train Wreck

SALIDA, Colo., Aug. 23.—Two firemen, J. W. Taughtenbaum and C. E. Phelan, were killed and ninety passengers injured, fifteen of them seriously, in a crash between two "Panoramic Special" trains on the Denver and Rio Grande Western, which happened in the canyon of the Arkansas at Granite, a little mountain town near here.

Great confusion reigned at the scene of the disaster and a complete check-up of the injured was impossible.

Both trains were reported filled with tourists and many of the seriously injured were believed to be eastern summer tourists returning home from vacation on the coast.

I. T. U. CONVENTION VICTORY FOR REACTIONARY LYNCH MACHINE DUE TO PROGRESSIVE SPLIT IN 1924

The 1925 convention of the International Typographical Union, held at Kalamazoo, Michigan, beginning August 10, was one of the most reactionary in years.

Old Jim Lynch, who staged a come-back last year, due to a split among the progressives, after an absence of seven or eight years, was in complete control. The little progress won by years of effort was wiped out almost without resistance, so frightened and awed were the delegates.

Three Days to Wake Up.

It was not until the third day that the progressives rallied themselves to fight, and registered a high vote of 102 against 280 for the Lynch administration. From that, they sunk so low that they could not muster 25 votes to get a roll call and so quit fighting on the fourth and fifth days.

In the first few hours of the convention, before the timid and confused progressives could get their wits together, the amalgamation resolution was struck out without a single voice being raised in objection—altho there were several amalgamationists seated as delegates.

Same Old Stuff.

Many other progressive propositions were killed in short order and many reactionary measures passed without protest. Some were not, as customary, put in print, but were droned off by the reading clerk and passed without consideration.

The progressives were particularly weak in fighting material this year. The last two years that the progressives were in control of the union, they felt so sure of themselves that they began a head hunting campaign against the real militant left wing element, thinking they no longer needed them to hold the union against the reactionaries. Thus the progressive party deliberately castrated itself and now it is paying the penalty for its war on the left wing radicals.

Better Tote Fair from Now On.

Now they are all shouting for harmony of all anti-administration forces. The T. U. E. L. members and militant left wing elements are certainly in favor of a united front against the reactionaries, but that united front must not be a one-sided affair and must be based upon the following guarantees of no more foolishness and treachery:

1. A joint slate of candidates with an agreed proportion of real left wingers who stand on the full program of the amalgamation committee of the printing industry.
2. A public program of principles which mean something.
3. A campaign made on the latter rather than on mere personalities.

One of the significant things about the convention was, that regardless of the cowardly nature of the opposition, the red baiters failed to register any popular sentiment.

Wise Gets Little Clap.

Joe Wise, the "Wise Mr. Wise," notorious peddler of "red hysterics" requested the floor. When it was given, he began a long harangue against Wm. Z. Foster, Communism and all things revolutionary. The delegates began to get so tired, however, of such capitalist class propaganda, that they actually became discourteous—a rare thing among the printers—and when he sat down, he sat down to the applause of less than a half dozen persons out of the hundreds attending.

KAUFMANISM IN CHICAGO LOCAL FURRIERS' UNION STILL STRONG BUT RULES ONLY BY ARITHMETIC

(By Worker Correspondent.)

The election in Local 45 of the Furriers' Union, which was held Friday, August 14, is another proof of Kaufmanism control.

In no union in the American labor movement is gangsterism such a big factor as in the Furriers' Union. The officialdom of the Furriers outbids every other officialdom in the extent of using violence to gain and hold control of the organization.

On Last Legs.

The International officers are on their last legs today in New York City, where the bulk of membership is found. The New York members having successfully overthrown Kaufman's slugger rule and graft.

Toronto, Canada, followed suit. Chicago today is very much along the way to support of the New York Joint Board which is dead against the Kaufman gang. This last election proved it beyong any doubt.

Counted Out.

The progressive candidate, Israelson, with all obstacles in his way—bosses acting as campaign managers for Kaufman's "seventh vice-president" Milsttein, bosses even voting for him at the meeting—despite all this Israelson polled 158 votes to Milstein's 202.

Those of us present could not have been more than 275 people, including bosses and gangsters. Where Milstein's tellers got so many votes is no great mystery, as only one teller out of the four was permitted to count for Israelson. That itself is enough.

D. Schachtman, secretary of the New York joint board was in Chicago a few days prior to the election. He is a former business agent and active member of Local 45. Milstein made every effort to have Schachtman leave town. He went so far as to send a personal courier—with a warning—that unless Schachtman left town before Friday, he might never be able to be present at another meeting of the Furriers' Union.

Called the Bluff.

But Schachtman accepted the challenge and called the bluff. He and B. Gold, manager of the New York joint board appeared at the meeting and received an enthusiastic reception.

At this meeting the local executive board, brought up a recommendation that the Chicago local invite Kaufman and the New York joint board to discuss the present controversy, and it was unanimously accepted by the local, as the Chicago furriers are eager to see Kaufman getting the same blow here as he got in New York and Toronto.

Kaufman Shy.

It is very doubtful if Kaufman will accept the challenge, in spite of his boast that Chicago is supporting him 100 per cent.

Out of about 700 furriers in Chicago, only about 400 are organized. No effort on the part of the Kaufman international or local administration headed and controlled by Milstein has been made to organize the other 300 workers. Disorganization exists among our own membership. The most active members are discriminated against in shops by bosses and in the union by Milstein.

A Beginning.

Shops which are supposed to work under the union agreement are sending their work out to non-union shops without any protest by our union. The present policy of our union is to do nothing—except to yield to every demand of the manufacturers. But this will not go on much longer.

Our brothers are waking up to the fact that the only way to build up a strong, unified union in Chicago is by throwing off Kaufmanism and to follow the lead of the New York brothers. The first step in already taken, at the recent meeting, when a majority of our brothers voted against Milstein and for Israelson.

FRISCO CENTRAL LABOR COUNCIL OVERLY NERVOUS

Assumes Right to Censure Other Bodies

By R. BELLIT.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., August 23.—central labor council of Los Angeles received a letter from the central labor council of San Francisco, asking who was the originator of the resolutions adopted in behalf of the two privates, Crouch and Trumbull.

In reply, the newly elected secretary, Brother Buzzel should have answered "What business do you have to find out? Are you in the service of labor or capital? Are you gentlemen of San Francisco labor council serving militarism or the militant class struggle?"

Instead of that, Brother Buzzel answered that he looked over the records and found no resolution of that nature ever introduced at the central labor council of Los Angeles.

Good for you, Brother Buzzel, the country is saved! But alas! Since when has the central labor council of San Francisco become so ridiculously stricken with terror in case the central labor council should have adopted resolutions asking the release of Crouch and Trumbull?

Is it not the duty of every worker to demand the freedom of the two privates whose only crime was preaching Communism?

There are hundreds of thousands of soldiers all over the world that believe that Communism is the hope of the enslaved world. There is an organized army in Russia where Communist principles are supreme.

It is the duty of every central labor council to demand the release of the two Communist soldiers who have constitutional rights to preach whatever doctrine they believe.

3,000 TEXTILE WORKERS STRIKE AGAINST WOOLEN MILL WAGE CUT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Aug. 23.—Three thousand textile workers are now affected by the strike against a 10 per cent wage cut that began Saturday in the weaving rooms of the James & E. H. Wilson Co. and the Pontoosuc Woolen Co. The strike has spread to the W. E. Tillotson Manufacturing Co., the Berkshire Woolen Co. and the N. & C. Russell Manufacturing Co.

Strike committees have been chosen with authority to confer with employers and lay settlement proposals before the workers. This is the first sizable revolt against the 10 per cent cut that swept New England woolen mills in latter July and early August.

WASHINGTON, August 23.—The strike in the Japanese cotton mills at Shanghai which, two months ago, stirred the bitterest unrest in Chinese history, has been settled and 50,000 strikers returned to work yesterday, according to delayed dispatches today to the department of commerce from acting commercial attache, O. Bricklayers Locals Back Strike in N. Y. Against "Open Shop"

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(FP)—The fourteen locals of the Bricklayers Union in New York are supporting the 500 members on strike against George A. Fuller Co. and T. A. Clarke Co., contractors who are employing non-union workers in other cities for nine-hour days. The bricklayers are "ready for action in defense of the union shop and eight-hour day," according to John Gill, chairman of the international union executive committee.

Gill asserts that 40,000 bricklayers, plasterers and masons are ready to quit work to enforce these conditions and that 21,000 brick and stone masons' helpers are with them against open shop and nine-hour day in any city.

The bricklayers' strike is one of many in various cities against certain contractors employing, chiefly in Florida, other than union bricklayers. The bricklayers' and plasterers' unions are involved in a jurisdictional dispute over respective territories.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS EXPLOITS THE WORKERS OF SUBJECT COUNTRIES, WAGES GO DOWN, LIVING COST RISES

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Women workers in Austrian industries are paid as low as 5.7c. per hour while the highest wage for skilled male labor is just over 20c., according to a report on Austrian wage trends issued by the U. S. department of commerce. The report shows how international capital is exploiting the wage earners of a conquered country under the receiver appointed by the league of nations in the interest of the big financiers.

The figures in this report give force to British government data showing the purchasing power of wages in Austria as about one-half British wages and less than one-fourth that in the American North Atlantic states.

In all except the building industry Austrian wages fall considerably short of meeting the increased cost of living since 1914. As a result thousands of worker families have been forced to lower their standard of living. The cost of living is about 31 per cent above prewar but the hourly wages in the chemical industry are up only 19 per cent, wages in the metal trades 27 per cent, and in the leather trades 10 per cent. Since regular working hours have been shortened as much as 10 per cent, actual weekly earnings fall more than 10 per cent short of meeting prewar standards.

Highest Wage Twenty Cents.

Maximum hourly earnings in Austrian industries in May, 1925, were:

Austria Hourly wages	Skilled men	Unskilled men	Unskilled women
Building	20.1c	15.6c	10.5c
Woodworking	13.2	10.0	8.3
Chemical	12.6	10.5	6.9
Soap, etc.	13.4	11.5	8.1
Asphalt	18.4	5.9
Rubber	12.2	9.3	8.7
Paper	13.0	9.8	5.9
Leather	20.0	18.0	11.3
Textile	10.8	8.4
Glass	16.4	11.7
Metal trades	19.4	15.0	10.6

Starvation Pay.

The regular week in all industries is 48 hours. So building trade mechanics get only $9.66 a week while operatives in the textile industry get only $5.18. In between comes the metal trades with $9.32, leather workers with $9.60, workers in the asphalt industry with $9.22 and wood workers with $6.34 a week to mention typical instances.

Unskilled workers range as low as $4.04 and $2.74 a week in the case of women. By American standards these look more like day wages than the maximum weekly pay for a regular working week.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system."

* * * *

The whole power of Government propaganda—and only those who have visited Russia can realize what that means—is now, and for some time has been, turned on to stimulate the worker to increase his production. A Central Institute of Work educates experts in the Taylor system and other scientific schemes for improving the human mechanism in combination with the German science of bio-mechanism. It has now a central staff of 150 instructors all over the country, and organizes an annual conference on its subject. It hopes to float a commercial company for the business promotion of its ideas and inventions. This does not arouse the opposition that it would where industry is still under private capital, as the workers realize that any resulting profits from increased production will come back into their pockets, and that their productivity will not be increased at the expense of their conditions of life.

The consequent improvement reported of late in industrial output has not been put in statistical form, but partial results seem so far satisfactory. For exmaple, at the Krasny Putilovetz Factory and Diesel Factory, individual output now exceeds prewar, while unofficial figures return the monetary value of one worker's output in 1922-23 at 1,078 roubles and 1923-24 at 1,227 roubles, or 14 per cent. more.

General Conclusion

The general conclusion is that, just as cheap labor does not mean cheap production, so Russia is not losing on the whole by giving the workers such real wages in respect of housing, education, and supplementary advantages mentioned in previous chapters, as, in the opinion of the Delegation, are in many respects better than those obtained by labor elsewhere in Europe. The mining industries, however, are not yet reorganized up to the general standard.

CHAPTER IV

Co-operation

Is is hard to do justice in this report to the importance of Co-operation in Russia. But this perhaps matters less, as it is that part of the new régime as to which most is known in England, and as to which less lies are now being told than any other.

Pre-war Co-operatives

Co-operation in Russia before the war, benefited mainly better class workers and peasants. In 1914 there were 10,785 co-operative societies with a membership of 1,400,000, and a turnover of 250,000,000 roubles, of these over 8,000 were credit and consumers' co-operatives. The societies were non-political, but Liberal or Right Socialist in sympathy. The war with its economic pressure doubled the number of societies, raised their membership to 9,000,000 and their turnover to seven milliards.

Co-operatives and Class War

When the first Revolution broke out, the co-operatives and the Trade Unions were divided as to the class war. The majority, including the societies with mixed productive and distributive functions, and the agricultural co-operatives, were against class war. A small minority, representing some of the consumers' co-operatives of the town workers, favored it. In September, 1917, a Special Congress of Co-operatives was called at Petrograd with a view to strengthening the Government against the Bolshevists, and passed resolutions against class war. Even a Congress of Workmen's Co-operatives called in August was captured by the Menshevists.

Co-operatives under War Communism

When the second Revolution brought the policy of class war to power the co-operatives refused to accept defeat, and the more middle-class societies became centers of counter-revolution. The Communists had ,therefore, a good political reason for either converting or coercing Co-operation. But they had an even better practical reason. For, unless they could ration the town population and the Red Army efficiently and economically, they could not survive; and without the help of the co-operatives they could scarcely do this. Their attempt to set up Communist centers of distribution in competition with the co-operatives was a failure. In Russia, as in our own war experience, the organization of distribution proved a more difficult business than the organization of production or of war administration. Moreover, we were able to use the wholesale provision merchant and the local grocer for our purpose. But the Communists were abolishing private property as fast as they could, and the more extreme wished to abolish not only the profiteering middleman and provision merchant, but even the Socialist co-operatives. It was, however, impossible, even for them, to preach a holy war against the principle of Co-operation as they were doing against that of private capitalism. Co-operation had a better and far longer record of social service than had Communism itself. It could not be abolished by decree, and could only be absorbed by degrees. And the question as to how this should be done divided the War Communists between those who wished to keep the voluntary co-operative associations and those who wished to substitute for them new obligatory communal organizations.

Already in a decree of April, 1918, an attack was made on the character and constitution of the co-operatives by decreeing that they must supply non-members in the towns. And in the following August a decree prescribed that the peasants, who unless provided with manufactures refused to sell food, must also be supplied by the co-operatives. This immense task was attempted by the co-operatives, but not to the satisfaction of the Communists, who complained that the societies only supplied the rich farmers, who could give food in exchange, and would not give it to the starving laborers. This curious and characteristic criticism is very illustrative both of the strength and weakness of War Communism. The decree of November 2nd, 1918, went a long step further in requiring that everyone must be a member either of a consumers' commune or of a co-operative. As the former scarcely existed this practically forced everyone into a co-operative.

Co-operation Communalized

Meantime the persistence of certain co-operatives in counter-revolutionary intrigue, and the progress of the country towards Communism, enabled the Government to prepare its final stroke. The co-operative societies were persistently educated by Communist agitators. By December, 1918, a Communist majority was secured on the Congress and Council of the Workers' Co-operatives; and the Supreme Economic Council by decree of November 30th, restricted voting in co-operative affairs to the workers, thus disfranchising the greater number of its middle-class opponents. Thereupon followed the main decree of March 20th, 1919, which professed "to preserve, develop, and complete the co-operative organization" as being "the only available apparatus proved by years of experience." But, as a matter of fact, the decree radically changed the whole principle and the purpose of the co-operatives by converting the societies into "Consumers' Communes." These Consumers' Communes were Governmental organizations for supplying, not subscribers or shareholders, but the public. Co-operation was originally the voluntary association of consumers and producers for their mutual benefit and profit. The principle of the decree was a distribution of the whole country into either municipal or rural communes, in which all the inhabitants were compulsorily enrolled in their capacity as consumers. The original co-operative employes and management were taken on as Government officials and continued managing the societies' business in so far as it could be adapted to the new conditions. In thus making Co-operation act as a Commissariat of Rationing, the Communists were also much influenced by fear of the use that was made of certain of the co-operatives by foreign interventionists during the critical years of the Civil Wars 1919-20-21.

Co-operatives and Intervention

The Entente policy of trying to make use of the co-operatives for restoring trade relations with Russia looked well enough. It appeared to be no more than an attempt to restore commerce with Russia without the disagreeable diplomatic preliminary of a de facto recognition of the Russian Government; but transactions with real Russian co-operatives could only have been realized through and by the Russian Commissariats. Any other procedure looked like an attempt to transfer the economic control of external commerce, and eventually of internal consumption, from the Government authority to organizations many of which had been and still were in opposition to it. For in those regions occupied by reactionary armies the co-operatives had served as intermediaries for supplying those armies.

But there is no good in going into the dark and long-dead intrigues by which in the end British cargoes and British capital found its way into the pockets of reactionary generals. It is, however, satisfactory to record that last year the Russian co-operatives, although they had never received these consignments, which had indeed been used by their enemies then invading them with British Governmental support, nevertheless honored the debt to their British colleagues and repaid a sum of £60,000. When intervention and Civil War stopped the co-operatives could be restored their full liberty, which began the moment the danger was over, and even before the New Economic Policy was introduced.

Co-operation Restored

Already by a decree of September 7th, 1921, the co-operatives were allowed to resume their productive activities without restriction. By other decrees of October 26th and November 27th they were restored their nationalized factories and properties, and were given the right to extend their enterprises without special permission. This privileged position they have thereafter retained.

Under the New Economic Policy the co-operatives rapidly recovered not only their old self-governing and voluntary character, but also they have resumed on business lines a good deal of the work that War Communism had wanted them to do on bureaucratic lines. Thus they are now a half-way house between State and private enterprise, both in production and distribution and both in foreign and internal trade.. In developing retail trade in the countryside they have a business advantage over State enterprise, and they are relieved of the legal disadvantages that handicap private enterprise. They are, as has been stated, admitted to foreign commerce, and they trade wholesale in competition with the State trusts and syndicates; while they also produce, though on no very large scale. But their future function in the Soviet system is to organize retail trade, both distribution and consumption. Private enterprise is tolerated largely because of its keeping the co-operatives up to the mark and on the move.

Co-operatives in Foreign Trade

The co-operative societies generally export and import under permission of the Commissariat for Foreign Trade. But two categories are exempt from this rule: The Centrosoyouz and other co-operative societies, such as Selskosoyouz (Decrees of 1921 and 1923), Ukrainian Co-operative Society (Decree of February 15th, 1924), and the All-Ukrainian Co-operative Wholesale Society, "Vukospilka" (Decree of March 5th, 1924). These may transact export-import operations with foreign co-operatives and with private firms and concerns. They have representatives abroad for the transaction of foreign trade. The second class of co-operatives, such as Vsekompromsoyouz, Vsekoles, have representatives in the trade delegations for their export and import operations, and enjoy the same rights of representation on the trade delegation as the State institutions. They also trade through Centrosoyouz.

Growth of Co-operatives

Since the New Economic Policy the growth of the Co-operative Movement has been steady and as follows, from figures taken from fiscal returns:—

NUMBER AND NATURE OF CO-OPERATIVES

	1922	1923		1924
	Number	Number	Per cent of 1922	Number	Per cent of 1922
Trading Co-operatives	13,402	17,121	128	25,012	185
Industrial Co-operatives	1,799	2,337	130	5,587	311
Total	15,201	19,458	128	30,599	201
Other	.....	1,646	173	1,909	201
Total	15,201	21,104	139	32,508	211

Membership of Co-operatives

The total membership of the co-operatives is growing rapidly. The membership in April, 1924, was as follows:—

Workers' Urban Co-operatives	2,297,000
Peasant Co-operatives	2,599,200
Transport Co-operatives	1,000,000
Military Co-operatives	369,200
Total in U.S.S.R.	6,265,400

The total membership has risen during 1924 to over 8,000,000. The membership of workers' urban co-operatives has risen in the course of 1924 to 2,863,000—that is, from 50.8 per cent. of the total Trade Union membership to 62 per cent., an increase of 12.3 per cent. This percentage varies greatly according to place. In country towns it goes as high as 99.7 per cent. In Leningrad it is only 59 per cent. and in Moscow 50 per cent. For which the reason is obvious in the greater competition of private traders in the towns.

The system of collection by books and stamps is much as elsewhere. At the beginning of the year the average share subscription was 1 rouble 90 kopecks, and at the end 2 roubles 66 kopecks. The average in the textiles was 1.94 roubles; metal workers, 2.74; miners, 2.71. Arrangements have been made with Aznepht and other enterprises to advance 5 roubles on the workers' pay so as to give their co-operatives a working capital; and efforts are being made to raise the share subscription to 5 roubles generally.

Co-operative Finance

Finance appears to be the weakest side of Russian Co-operation—partly owing to such activities as lowering prices during the "scissors" crisis, partly owing to new extensions as yet unremunerative. On the other hand, this has been compensated to them by large credits from the Budget—over 20 million roubles in 1923-24. No provision for them is made, however, in 1924-25, but the 40 million roubles allowed for famine relief will probably be largely administered through the co-operatives. The proportion of the capital of the co-operatives owned and borrowed is as 1 : 2½; and the present profits are not such as to promise any alteration in this proportion as much business has to be done at a loss. But capital increased from 142 million roubles to 170 million roubles in the first six months of 1924 and the total turnover from 400 million to 1,100 million.

The method of distributing credits to societies has been much criticized; and there is said to be much overlapping. But a great effort is being made to bring down overhead expenses by reforms in the working of staffs. Thus Centrosoyouz central staff was reduced from 3,046 on October 1st, 1923, to 2,731 on January 1st, 1924, and to 2,459 on April 1st, 1924, and the turnover per employe has increased from 4.19 roubles in January to 7.9 roubles in March. Overhead expenses are now said to be not much higher than in Europe. Which economics have much helped in liquidating the very heavy liabilities that caused a financial crisis in 1923, during which many small societies succumbed.

The Centrosoyouz

About six months ago, following the decrees of December 30th, 1923, on the reorganization of the consumers' co-operatives on the basis of voluntary membership, the Centrosoyouz simplified its provincial organization. Only central, territorial State, and district co-operative unions, as well as large workers' co-operatives are now eligible for membership.

John Hays Hammond Throws Hint

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 23—John Hays Hammond, former chairman of the federal coal commission, told the New England governors' coal conference today that "there may possibly be a suspension in the anthracite fields for a little while, but I have a suspicion that something will happen at the eleventh hour so that even that will be avoided."

Hammond told the governors that the anthracite operators have become alarmed over the possibility of losing their market for anthracite because of the growing tendency to use soft coal for household use, adding that the union leaders are coming to realize this. This statement about "union leaders realizing" obstacles, together with his hint at "something will happen at the eleventh hour," indicates that Hammond has information that Lewis will surrender as he did before.

Cannery Workers in Mt. Vernon Treated Worse Than Coolies

(By Worker Correspondent.)

MT. VERNON, Wash., Aug. 23.—The discharge of workers who presented demands for an increase in piecework rates was followed by a strike of more than 100 women and girl pieceworkers in the cannery company here. The strike was won that same day with the demands granted and those discharged reinstated.

Under the new rates a ten-hour shift will net an average of $2.25 daily as against the old rates, which formerly brot $1.25 for the same amount of work.

Another cause of dissatisfaction among the workers is the extremely long hours of work during the summer season. Shifts from 9 o'clock in the morning until midnight and after have been frequent. The laws in this state do not protect women workers in the fruit and vegetable canning industry. Nothing has been done to relieve this [illegible]

PRAYER PICKETS FACE WRATH OF OKLA. GOVERNOR

Law Machinery Fights Granting of Writs

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug. 23.—The entire legal resources of Oklahoma will be put into the fight against the striking miners of Okmulgee country who are charged with violating a sheriff's order prohibiting "religious" meetings near the struck Henryetta mine.

Four miners were arrested when they refused to obey the order of the sheriff prohibiting the "religious" meetings. The men asked that habeas corpus writs be issued granting them their freedom on the grounds that the sheriff had exceeded his authority in his zeal to serve the mine owners.

The county prosecutor fought the issuance of the writs. Now Governor Trapp announces that he will place the entire machinery of the attorney general's office at the disposal of the county attorney in fighting the writs.

The whole trouble started when a court issued an injunction prohibiting picketing and the miners began to gather in the public roadway and kneel in prayer asking God to stop the scabs and "bring light to their hearts." This the court held was a violation of its injunction and the sheriff prohibited meetings of any sort, including "religious" meetings. The miners paid no attention to the proclamation of the sheriff and the arrest of the four miners followed. Attorneys for the four men then tried to secure writs for their release. Argument on the issuance of the writs has not been finished yet.

Coolidge Attorneys Dismiss the Appeal on Teapot Decision

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The government dismissed its appeal from the decision of Chief Justice McCoy, of the District of Columbia supreme court, quashing the first conspiracy indictments against ex-secretary of interior, Albert B. Fall, Harry F. Sinclair, Edward L. Doheny, and Edward L. Doheny, Jr.

Notice of dismissal was filed with the court of appeals by Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, special government oil counsel.

No reason was given by Pomerene and Roberts for the dismissal action, which applies only to the first conspiracy indictments. Fall, Sinclair and the Dohenys, after the original indictments had been quashed by the court on technical grounds, later were reindicted.

The re-indictments, and indictments of Fall and the two Dohenys for bribery, are still pending in the courts. Trial on these is expected late this fall or winter.

All indictments were the outgrowth of the senate's investigation into the leasing by Fall of the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills naval oil reserves.

TWENTY COUNTRIES TO CELEBRATE 200th ANNIVERSARY OF RUSSIAN ACADEMY; ENLARGED UNDER SOVIET

NEW YORK, August 20.—Leading American universities and scientific institutions have been invited to send representatives to the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the Russian Academy of Science, which will be held in Moscow from September 5 to September 15. One of the purposes of the celebration is to revive and strengthen the contacts between Russian scientists and those of other countries interrupted by war and revolution.

Invitations have been sent to scientists and universities in every important country in the world. About 100 scientists, representing a score of countries, will attend. Among the Americans who are reported to have accepted are Dr. H. H. Donaldson of the University of Pennsylvania, and Prof. Frank A. Golder of Leland Stanford University. Dr. Judah L. Magnes, formerly of New York, has been invited to represent the University of Jerusalem.

Was Dominated by Czar.

The celebration of the Russian Academy's 200th birthday marks also the great scientific revival which has been going on in Soviet Russia since 1920. The academy was originally founded by Peter the Great, in 1725. It was the Russian expression of the general scientific development of the 18th century, particularly in physics and mathematics. The German philosopher and mathematician Leibnitz drew up the Russian Academy's program.

Other German scientists organized various departments of research. In its early days the academy's greatest contribution was in geography. It explored and charted Russia's immense stretches of territory. During the 19th century the academy's work won the esteem of West European scientists, who invited the Russian Academy to join the International Association of Academies.

Until the revolution the Russian Academy was dominated by the czar and the nobility. It suffered from the general lack of system characteristic of czarist Russia. Attempts to systematize the academy's work were begun in 1912, but were interrupted by the war.

The chaos which attended the Russian civil wars wrought great hardships on the scientists. They were exposed to cold and famine. They had no means for carrying on research, publishing books and magazines or taking care of institutions. The laboratories were deserted for lack of fuel.

However, the defeat of the counter-revolution and the raising of the allied blockade enabled the Soviet government to come to the assistance of the scientists. Early in 1921 a deputation from the academy visited Lenin and laid the situation before him. Subsequently the Soviet government appropriated money for the restoration and extension of scientific work.

Under the Soviet Government.

The academy has since then restored libraries, collections, and museums disturbed or neglected during the civil war. The academy's library, which before the war contained 3,000,000 volumes, has been increased to 4,500,000 volumes. The collections of the zoological, ethnographic, mineralogical and Asiatic museums have been increased to such an extent that the Soviet government has had to enlarge their headquarters, making special appropriations for equipment and repairs.

With this assistance the Russian Academy of Science has been able to convert the old physics laboratory into the Physico-Mathematical Institute, with special work shops for making precise instruments. Most of the museums have been doubled or trebled in size. The seismographic station at Pulkovo, which burned down in 1920, has been replaced by a new one. The chief Russian seismographic stations have been restored and contact established with seismographic stations thruout the world.

A Year's Work—1924.

The great strides made by the Russian Academy since the revolution and the improvement of general economic conditions is indicated in its report for 1924. During that year the academy held 64 meetings at which 112 papers were read discussing 85 important questions. Four hundred additional papers were read at meetings of different sections of the academy.

In addition, the academy published 55 scientific books, copies of which were sent abroad; and 78 expeditions were sent to the Urals, Siberia, Mongolia, Central Asia, North and South Russia, etc.

The physiological laboratory carried on research on the occipital lobes of the higher animals. Other departments prepared a catalogue on the life culture, social structure, and religions of India; and studied the biochemical properties of human blood. Important work was also done by the Asiatic Museum which prepared for publication 340 volumes of Dao-Jean and other Chinese works.

The academy also stimulated an interest in applied science. Researches and experiments have been carried on in the separation of metals by nitrogin under high temperature and pressure; Crimean lakesal has been analyzed; and a new system of making seismographs has been invented.

The academy worked in close cooperation with economic organizations and with the government. It has prepared maps and other material for the government and is working with the State Planning Commission with a view to study Russian natural resources. Other government commissions with which the academy cooperates are conducting studies in race problems, tropical countries, the polar regions, literature, dictionaries, and bibliographies.

Some Leading Academicians.

Important are also Prof. Steklov's studies in the basic problems of mathematical physics; Prof. Numerov's astronomical studies; Prof. Joffe's studies on the atomic structure of matter; and Prof. Pavlov's studies in biology, psychiatrics and pathology.

The academy has already re-established many of its contacts with scientists of other countries. Charles D. Walcott of the Smithonian Institute of Washington, D. C.; Fridjof Nansen of Norway; A. I. Thompson of England; and scientists of various other countries are honorary members of the academy. Among the academy's corresponding members are Dr. Alexis Garrel of New York and Prof. A. A. Michelson of the University of Chicago; Louis Bauer of Washington, D. C.; Madame Curie, and Albert Einstein. Scientists of twenty countries have accepted the invitations to attend the celebration on September 15.

There are 41 members of the Russian Academy of Science. Among them are A. P. Karpinsky, geologist, president of the academy; V. A. Steklov, mathematician, vice-president of the academy; S. F. Oldenburg, orientalist, secretary; I. P. Borodin, botanist; A. P. Pavlov, paleontologist; A. F. Joffe, physicist; and Y. V. Uspensky, mathematician.

TOIL, BLISTERS AND ILLS RULE AT WAR CAMPS

"Vacation" Proves to Be Unbearable Grind

FORT HANCOCK, N. J., Aug. 23.—The golden dreams of a month's vacation, with consequent health-building and enjoyment is rapidly fading out of scores of young workers who were inveigled into the C. M. T. C. camp here. What awaited them and what they are now undergoing is plenty of hard work and drell which commences before six o'clock in the morning and officially closed at six p. m., but really continues later into the night.

The men are required to tramp around the parade and drill grounds a good many times a day, clothed in a straight jacket that is called a uniform, to carry a bayonet and rifle weighting ten pounds, also a pair of shoes which alone weight nearly four pounds. The result of this, which may sound funny to our readers, is bunions, blisters and corns. The evil of sore feet being a common malady here makes it necessary to maintain a regular form of inspection of feet.

Many Fall Ill.

Not only are the drills hard and tiresome, but the food given here has resulted in constipating the men. Those of whom found no relief in C. C. pills, were sent home together with those who were suffering from severer cases of sore feet, or other ills.

Complaints grow continually day after day, larger and larger, until drill time the squads are skeletonized, that is, the rear ranks instead of containing four men as they are supposed to, hold only two, and at other times it is necessary to amalgamate two squads into one, in order to make a showing on the parade grounds.

This is the truth about the grand and glorious time promised to the young workers. The month's vacation consists of hard drill, and parades twelve hours a day, after which there is side work to do, such as cleaning rifles, getting the tents in order, etc. The vacation seekers are under the commands of all kinds of petty officials—from mere croporals who are embryonic officers to the higher ups such as majors and captains, every minute of the day.

Athletic games in which the workers participate a little more than an hour each day are dictated to them and they have no choice or will.

Government authorities are aware of the fact that the sentiment here is opposed to re-enlisting for the next year's camp.

It is on reenlistments that they can be moulded into useful tools for J. P. Morgan & Co., therefore, the government has already commenced to spread propaganda for re-enlistments both printed and verbal.

There is evidence to doubt the success of propaganda for re-enlistments. Most of them are sick of the monotony and rigid discipline and are certainly anxious for the month to pass quickly. In fact, most of them have learned that training to be a soldier for capitalism is far from being a vacation, but is hard labor. Young proletarians should take a lesson from these facts, and not permit themselves to be lured into sweat camps and understand that it is nothing and can be nothing for them but a change from one kind of hard labor into another.

They should instead organize and in this way present a demand for yearly paid vacations.

If you want to see the Communist movement grow—get a sub for the DAILY WORKER.

CONNECTICUT "OPEN SHOPPERS" PUT ADS IN PAPER BOASTING OF LOW PAY

By ESTHER LOWELL
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, August 20.—Connecticut manufacturers and contractors are boasting of their open shop work! A full page ad appears in the Hartford Courant headed "Firms Operated on the Open Shop Plan." In addition the paper runs a news story, "Detroit Prospers Under Open Shop," by General Manager Chester M. Cuyler of the Detoit Employers' Association.

Connecticut is one of the most important manufacturing states of the Union. According to the World Almanac: "Proportioned to population, no state has greater industrial strength or wider range of manufactures." Everything from pins and needles to the most elaborate machines is made in the state, one of the smallest territorially. Hartford is the insurance capital of the United States.

Boy Scout Axe Non-Union.

The "open shop" ad is a warning to organized labor that Underwood and Royal typewriters are made in non-union factories and so is the Underwood computing machine. International Silver advertises its seven open-shop factories which make sterling silver and silver plate. Colt firearms belong in the open-shop group. Cheney silks, made by one of the biggest silk manufacturing concerns in the country, advertise open shop. The Collins Co. makes the official boy scout axe in non-union factories.

Other open-shop advertisers are: Atlantic Screw Works; Liner-Atwill Co., sheet metal works; Veeder Mfg. Co., meter makers; Blake Foundry; Taylor & Fenn Co., machinists and founders; Bristol steel fishing rods; Capitol Foundry; Sigourney Tool Co.; McIntyre Machine Works; Abbott Ball Co., steel ball bearings; Jewell Belting Co.; Skayef Ball Bearing Co.; Hartford Faience Co.; Whitney Mfg. Co., chains and sprockets for power transmission; Hanson-Whitney Machine Co.; New Departure Mfg. Co., bicycles, coaster brakes, etc.; W. W. & C. F. Tucker, Inc., oil hole covers and machinery products; Hartford Special Machinery Co.; Sterling Blower Co., blower systems; Whitlock Coil Pipe Co.; Spencer Turbine Co.; Henry & Wright Mfg. Co., drilling machines; Terry Steam Turbine Co.; P. Garvan, Inc., paper and paper stock; E. J. Anderson, pattern and model making; Root automatic counters; Wiley-Bickford-Sweet Co., felt shoes and slippers; Hartford Box Co., paper boxes.

"Open Shop" Contractors.

While a strike of building trades workers is going on in New Haven to help building laborers and hodcarriers increase their wages, open-shop contractors announce themselves. Non-union printers, one of them claiming open-shop operation since 1836, advertise. Graphic Arts Co. offers to do open-shop photo-engraving. Hartford Electric Light Co. and Hartford City Gas Co. show themselves on the non-union side. Heublein Hotel and Hotel Bond Barber Shop are open-shop. Frasse Steel Works, Wallace Barnes flat and wire springs factory, Chas. W. House & Sons, woven felts, Riverside Trust Co., boast of open-shop operation.

Brick workers have been organizing in Connecticut and are on strike for union recognition and improved conditions in various towns. The thread workers of Willimantic, Conn., have been out 26 weegs on strike against wage cuts at the American Thread Co. (a British concern) mill. The state has only two labor papers listed: Labor Standard at New Britain and Connecticut Labor News at New Haven.

MONTGOMERY AND WARD PLANT WORKS WOMEN TEN HOURS PER DAY

BALTIMORE, August 23.—That the plant maintained by Montgomery Ward & Co., mail order merchants of Chicago, in southwest Baltimore, employs women who are forced to work more than 10 hours a day, in violation of state law, was charged in resolutions offered by a Typographical union delegate in the Baltimore Federation of Labor. The business agent of the federation, Henry Broening, was ordered to investigate.

PRODUCTION AT PRE-WAR LEVEL IN SOVIET UNION

WASHINGTON, August 23—(FP)—Industrial production in the Soviet Union during the fiscal year 1925-26, beginning October 1, will reach 98 per cent of the 1913 total, which was $3,600,000,000, according to estimates which the Russian Information Bureau in Washington has received from the state planning commission.

This commission expects agricultural production from the 1925 crops to reach 92 per cent of the 1913 production. This, in spite of the fact that the Soviet Union has only 75 per cent as many people as Russia had in 1913, before her best-developed territory in the west was taken from her to form parts of Roumania, Poland, and the new Baltic states.

Industrial production in 1921-22 was only 17 per cent of the 1913 figures; in 1922-23 it was 37 per cent, in 1923-24 it was 46 per cent, and in 1924-25 it was 72 per cent. In June, this year, industrial production was 2.6 above May, and 70 per cent above June, 1924. In the ten principal industries the working force for the coming year will be 20 per cent greater than this year.

Motormen Being Displaced.

WASHINGTON, August 23—(FP)—Motormen on city streetcars will soon have to change their trade for that of bus driver, if the trend of traffic shown by the last report of the three companies carrying passengers on the streets of Washington is a fair index of development. During the first half of 1925 the motor buses of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. carried 2,642,546 passengers, or 21.82 per cent more than in the same period of 1924.

On the other hand, the two street railway companies handled respectively 43,686,857 and 50,535,557 passengers, which meant a loss of 1.4 per cent and 0.54 per cent in traffic, respectively. From 1923 to 1924 both streetcar companies lost over five per cent of their patrons.

FARMERS BROKE, CAL LETS LOOSE PROSPERITY GAS

Crops Poor, "Movies" for Empty Stomachs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(FP)—Confidence on the part of the chiefs of the Coolidge administration that the western and southern farmers have swallowed his "prosperity" bunk is melting away. Reports from Missouri, Oregon, Colorado, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Indiana—all have much the same theme. Farmers find themselves unable to pay their debts and maintain their equipment and give their families a decent living. Farmers are discontented.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine has released to the press, on two successive days, two statements designed to cheer most of the farmers up. The first is an account of a moving picture called "Poor Mrs. Jones," which he has prepared and sent out, to prove that the lot of the farmer's wife is not nearly so hard as that of her town sister. The second statement announces that crop yields this year are poor. The inference he wishes to draw is that prices will be good.

Al's Propaganda.

Mrs. Jones, according to the story told in this Jardine-made reel, gets tired of merely managing her home, keeping the farm accounts, tending the garden, caring for the chickens, etc., and says so. Her husband refuses to sell the farm until she shall have had a rest, visiting her married sister in the city.

In the crowded flat she learns that city folks don't get fresh food, and the traffic jams, bargain counter rushes and the hazards to children are terrible. In one week she is cured of her discontent with the farm, realizes that she is really "rich" Mrs. Jones, and goes home to live happily at the old line of work.

Crops Are Poor.

Yet the next statement begins with the grim warning: "Low yields per acre are to be expected this year for principal crops of the United States, the department of agriculture has announced. The published figures show that a yield of all crops combined will be 4.5 per cent under last year's crops and 6.4 per cent below the ten-year average, as indicated by present conditions."

Thus, cotton is expected to fall below its ten-year average by 9 per cent; hay, 16.2 per cent; corn, 0.9 per cent; oats, 3.2 per cent; potatoes, 2.5 per cent; tobacco, 6.1 per cent; sugar beets, 9.3 per cent; barley, 1.75 per cent. Spring wheat will run slightly above its ten-year average.

Taken as a whole, the chief American crops, in spite of increased acreage, will yield a total production of about 3 per cent below last year, and lower than in any recent year except 1911 and 1921.

It's a Family Affair

There is a lockout on at the Cuneo printing plant. "Majah" George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union, is supplying scabs to the firm, tho members of the union of which he is chief are involved.

That is bad enough. But in order to complicate matters State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe is supplying the Cuneo plant with uniformed and plain clothes officers to prevent the locked out workers on the picket line from performing their duty. It happens that Cuneo is Crowe's brother-in-law.

The Chicago Tribune recently carried an editorial entitled "This is a tough town." We agree but the kind of toughness the Tribune objects to is not strikebreaking or the spectacle of a public officer using state funds to further the interests of his own family, publicly and brazenly.

We are not concerned with the moral phase of the matter. There is nothing moral about capitalism. Public decency cannot be expected under a system which legalizes the robbery of the many by the few; a system under which the parasites grow fat while the producers live on the borderland of want.

What we are concerned with is the fact that the workers who have the power if they only exerted it, allow the employers to install their political tools in office, so that the state machine can be used effectively against the workers.

Many workers do not believe in independent class political action. They still believe that the democrats and republicans can serve them. They still believe that there are good fellows in both parties and that the problem is to pick out the good fellows. This fond hope has proven to be an empty dream.

Incidents such as the one mentioned above should convince the workers that not only must they organize on the industrial field but they must also raise the banner of a labor party on the political field. The workers must be broken away from the capitalist political moorings. The policemen's club has more propaganda for a labor party in it than a six column theses—to the worker whose cranial encasement is tickled by its end.

Crowe using the state's attorney's police to help out his brother-in-law is a good lesson for the pressmen in the folly of voting for capitalist politicians.

It looks Bad for John

The Chinese have finally gotten the British imperialists completely isolated in the protracted struggle between the masses of the people and the capitalists over the exploitation of China.

The Japanese have settled with the Shanghai strikers and Britain feels that she has been left holding the bag, with nothing in it. That is the way the situation looks.

Britain was the head and front of the imperialist raid on China. At first Japan and the United States were playing at united front with England. The unity was more apparent than real. Japan and the U. S. had their own games to play. The U. S. did not stand to lose much thru the dumping of the extra-territorial laws and other millstones which foreign imperialism has hung around the Chinese neck. What the United States really wanted more than anything else was a market for her goods and Chinese good will for her capitalist burglars. By holding aloof from the British end of the imbroglio Wall Street expected to come out of the mess without getting badly mussed up.

Britain angled vigorously for an agreement with the United States for common action against the Chinese. But the Chinese aided by their powerful friend, Soviet Russia, was able to prevent the highwaymen from getting together.

As the situation stands now, British ships are boycotted and so are British goods. British consuls and missionaries are being given the bum's rush out of several large cities in China and everything English is looked upon with scorn thruout the celestial republic. This is fine.

At home a left wing leader—not so very left at that—John Wheatley, has called for a workers' defense army of 10,000,000 to guard the interests of labor against the coming caitalist offensive! The fascisti are organizing on one side in defense of capitalism. On the other side the workers are organizing to overthrow it.

Yes--it looks bad for John.

Sigman's Political Death Warrant

The New York garment workers, members of the I. L. G. W. U., who refused to recognize the illegal Joint Board presided over by the faker Sigman, gave the employers and the yellow socialist leaders a lesson that thye may not soon forget, when 35,000 of them marched from the shops last Thursday afternoon in a demonstration against the united front between the employers and the Sigman machine to discharge garment workers who acknowledge the leadership of the lawful officials of Locals 2, 9 and 22 united under the banner of the Joint Council of Action.

After Sigman and company summarily suspended the executives of the three locals from their positions for holding a May Day meeting and committing other similar "high crimes and midemeanors" against the gospel of yellow socialism, the employers took a hand in the game. They began to discharge those workers who refused to recognize the edicts of the autocrat Sigman.

Then the workers called a halt. It was a bold decision. But in times of crisis there is no room for shillyshallying. The Joint Action Committee called out every cloak and dressmaker in New York in protest against the collusion between Sigman and the employers. The employers were to be given a warning that they must keep their hands out of an inter-union struggle. Sigman was to be shown that he was deposed as head of the Joint Board by a mass referendum of the rank and file.

At least forty thousand workers responded to the call. This means that the demonstration was a tremendous success. Sigman admitted that 30,000 came out. Already fifteen of the forty shops that had discharged anti-Sigman employes on Sigman's orders have taken back their employes and made terms with the Joint Action Committee. This is the beginning of the end of Sigmanism in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Appeal to the Peasants of the East and the Colonies

Adopted at the Second Enlarged Executive of the Peasant International

To the Peasants of the Colonies and of the East: of Turkey, Persia, Egypt, Algeria, Palestine, India, China, Corea, Japan, the Negroes of America and Africa and all opressed by the capitalists and large landowners.

Brothers, Comrades! — In October 1923 there assembled in Moscow for the first time in world history the representatives of the peasants of 40 nationalities from all countries of the world and decided to form an International Peasant Council.

Its aim is to build a centre for the defense of the interests of the peasantry, to close the ranks of the peasantry for the struggle for freedom from the century-long slavery to the landowners, to establish a close connection between the peasants of the whole world, to unite the peasants who are fighting for their national and economic freedom with their brothers, the workers, and to determine the further methods of the struggle.

Not only the peasants of the West answered the appeal of the International Peasant Council, but also the peasants of the East. And to-day, after one and a half years, delegates have come to the conference of the International Peasant Council from Turkey, Persia, Egypt, India, China, Corea and Japan. Representatives have also come from the American Negroes.

The peasants of almost every country in the world were represented at this Congress. In these countries there are various religious beliefs. And these peasants belong to the most divergent parties. Many of them belong to no party at all.

The majority. of them are poor Nevertheless there are peasants of the middle class amongst them. In fact there are even well to-do peasants amongst them for whom the foreign yoke has become unbearable and who have stretched out their hands to their poorer brothers.

They are all here, for they are sons of the soil.

They have all been united by the recognition of the fact that in the colonies and in the East, from Turkey to Japan, from Kashgar to Java, from Algeria to the Cape of Good Hope, the peasants form 80 per cent to 90 per per cent of the population.

They have grasped the fact that the whole burden of the taxes falls upon them, the peasants, that the whole state revenue is made up at the cost of their labor, that the armies are formed from the peasantry and then flung at each other for mutual destruction in the interests of the large landowners and capitalists, and that the large landowners have seized all the best land for themselves.

And while the peasants work with sweat and blood for the benefit of the foreign exploiters, the over-fed parasites, the officials and landowners, the conditions of the peasants themselves differ in no way from those of animals.

In the best case the peasants receives enough food to prevent him from dying of starvation. In the worst case he is condemned to die of starvation. But he must give here a third, there a half, in other places two thirds of his labor to the landowner. And every time he seeks to better his lot, he is threatened with monstrous judgements.

Thousands of peasants are shot by foreign soldiers, or by their own brothers who are thrust into the imperialist armies by force.

India, Algeria, Monocco, Tunis and Corea are groaning under the yoke of foreign bayonets. In the so-called independent states like China, Persia, Egypt and Siam, the capitalists behave just as though they were at home.

In America the Negroes are deprived of almost all human rights.

Comrades, Brothers! — How long shall this state of affairs last? How long will the peasants who form two thirds of humanity, yields up their work and the work of their wives and children and their whole lives for the benefit of a small group of exploiters?

These are the questions which the peasants of the Orient and the Colonies put to themselves here. In the Peasant Council however, they determined that an end must be put to such an order of things!

But is it easy to bring this about? Is it easy, for istance, to drive the foreign exploiters out, the English from Egypt and India, the French from Morocco and Algeria, the Japanese from Corea, the Dutch from the East India? Is it easy for the Negro to become a citizen of the United States with equal rights? Is it easy for the Chinese peasants to take back the land wrested from him by the foreignors? Is it easy for the Persian and Turkish peasants to withdraw the concessions obtained from them by force or by the bribery of officials? Is it easy for the Oriental peasants to take the land which belongs to them away from their feudal masters? Or is it easy for the peasants to free himself from the taxes, from forced labor, from forced military service, from forced participation in the execution of his brothers peasants?

Brothers, Comrades!—You all know that that is a difficult matter. But the peasants of the East and of the Colonies are not fighting alone. You are not isolated. The first Workers' anr Peasants' Soviet Republic existing in the world has become a refuge for you. The class conscious workers of the whole go hand in hand with the Soviet Republic. The workers in the countries the governments of which oppress you will rise together with you.

Look to the Russian comrades who have given an example of how the peasants must free themselves from the large landowners and oppressors. Look to the example of the Transcaucasian Republics and to that of the Mohammedans of Turkestan, look at the first Workers' and Peasants' Republic, see how the freedom of all nations is assured in a great union of peoples.

Victory is only possible if there is unity amongst the workers, when the peasants in all countries and in whole world rise against their exploiters and enslavers.

And for this purpose not only a firm unity between the peasants of one land is necessary, but an alliance of the workers and peasants of all countries.

Who, however, is to devote himself to this? The International Peasant Council.

The International Peasant Council must unite the peasants of the whole world. There must be no country in the world without its representative in this Council.

If there are no peasants unions or associations in your country, then create them.

Organize defense committees for the struggle against the oppressors in the country! Link these committees up into a single peasant union in your country! Affiliate this union to the International Peasant Counsil in Moscow!

Send your delegates to us to discuss the general work together with the peasants of all other countries and to report to the International Peasant Council how you are struggling against the oppressors or how you think to struggle against them, what hinders your struggle, how can we help you to put an end to the immeasurable suffering of our peasants brothers in the Orient and the Colonies.

Long live the Unity fo the Peasants of the Orient and the Colonies!

Long live the Liberation of the Peasants of the East and the Colonies from foreign exploiters and their own landowners!

Long live the Alliance of the Workers and Peasants of the whole World!

Long live the International Peasant Council, the General Staff in the struggle for the Liberation of the Peasantry!

The Presidium of the Plenum of the International Peasant Council

RESOLUTION UPON THE REPORT AND ACTIVITY OF THE PRESIDIUM OF THE INTERNATIONAL PEASANT COUNCIL

(Proposed by comrade Grecio in the name of the French, Italian, and Chechoslovakian delegations and adopted by the Second Enlarged Executive of the Interantional Peasant Council.)

The Enlarged Executive of the International Peasant Council finds that the work carried out by the Presidium and the Secretariat in the last 18 months is fully in accord with those resolutions adopted at the first Congress. The work of penetration into the peasant masses still under the influence of the bourgeiosie was carried out by the Presidium with great success. Under its leadership, ever larger and larger masses of the peasantry swing towards the Red Peasant International and express the wish to fight hand in hand with the workers against the capitalists and the junkers for the establishment of a Workers' and Peasants' Republic.

ARMY AUTHORITIES TAKE DAILY WORKER, AND BOOKS FROM CROUCH, SOLDIERS RALLY TO COMMUNISM

By PAUL CROUCH AND WALTER TRUMBULL.

HONOLULU, (Delayed).—We are waiting as patiently as possible for the time when the court will free us so that we may continue our work for the cause. Imperialist injustice and persecution has not in the least deterred us from our plans. Instead, we have been given untold wealth in the form of material with which we hope to help smash the whole imperialist structure.

The radical cut in our sentences not only shows that imperialism feels the mass sympathy for us, but that they are afraid of that sympathy. The continuance of the demands for our freedom and the mass meetings in protest of our sentences as they now stand, is further cause of alarm by authorities.

The Honolulu papers carried the quotations below in yesterday's editions: "Colonel Frederick M. Brown, appearing for the U. S. Army, yesterday defended the three-year prison sentence imposed on Paul Crouch by an army court martial, before Federal Judge William F. Rawlins. The army lawyer is fighting the petition of Fred Patterson, attorney for Crouch, which seeks to free the soldier from the Fort Shafter guard house on grounds that his court martial was unfairly and improperly conducted."

Books Are Confiscated.

Colonel Brown is quoted as saying: "I can conceive of nothing more injurious to army discipline than such propaganda. This is revolutionary propaganda from within, where soldiers are supposed to protect the country against violence, rather than foster it; propaganda of the most dangerous sort.

"In the case of Walter M. Trumbull, an associate of Crouch sentenced to serve one year in jail, Patterson withdrew the petition for his release stating that the action was because of reasons he did not desire to make public at this date.

"Meantime the case of Paul Crouch goes on and a decision on the case is expected Monday. If the case is decided on favorably, the Trumbull case will again be taken up, but if an unfavorable decision is made the Trumbull case will be taken up in San Francisco courts."

The statements of Colonel Brown show how much Communist propaganda is feared by authorities and also shows the importance of work within the army. A large number of men in Fort Shafter are favorable to our cause.

We hope that the publication of our case has helped in establishing to a far greater extent the solidarity of the workers. Is it too much, to hope that we have caused some per cent of doubters to join the ranks? It is indeed fortunate that our case has received the attention of the capitalist press to the degree that it has. Thru this medium we have reached people that otherwise would never have known just how narrow and imperialistic the representatives of the government are.

We have received the last package of books but with their usual stupidity and arrogance the officials confiscated them. We had them for about two days before they were considered "dangerous" matter to be in a guard house cell room. "The other men might read them and turn Red," the prison officer is reported to have stated. "Might read," nothing! They would have read them and been further convinced that we were right. The books will be returned to us so that we may carry them with us to Alcatraz.

One book in particular we would like to have. "Ten days that Shook the World," by John Reed. Also any books written by Lenin.

All letters are welcome to us as it is a great help for one in prison to know that there is still a group or number of groups carrying on the work.

Withhold DAILY WORKER.

Comrade Trumbull says that tho a professional musician, he is by no means an artist. He has been able to struggle up to the position of first clarinet in the 21st Infantry band but that organization can hardly be called an example of musical perfection. However, he is perfectly willing and would be very glad to try to play in the Y. W. L. orchestra when he comes to N. Y., which of course, we both hope will be soon.

Our task of building and enlarging the party is indeed hard, slow and trying but we have the advantage of being able to look back for inspiration and guidance to many noble leaders. With this guidance and inspiration we must exercise every energy for the enlarging of the party. It is our intention to join as soon as possible and to make members of our prospects in Hawaii. Even tho in jail we have gained sympathizers for the cause. Some can be called prospects in every sense of the word.

Our work within the guardhouse is at present, practically halted. The authorities have confiscated all copies of the DAILY WORKER and Young Worker which were formerly permitted. They contained articles concerning our case and valuable material for reference dealing with problems of the party. We have not received any copies of either paper since the confiscation of those we had.

Did you read an article in the Young Worker regarding an American Union of Soldiers, Sailors, and Marines? If so, what do you think of it? Organization work in the army is very important. We believe that it is work that should be taken up by the party and the Young Workers' League.

Soldiers Are of Workers.

There are several special problems to be considered in dealing with men in the army. In the first place, the interests of the men in the army are with the revolutionary working class. They dimly perceive that they are victims of imperialism. They may not call it by this name, but they know that they are subjected continually to senseless oppression. Then again, the soldiers live together in large barracks and an idea once planted will spread rapidly.

Ignorance is the strongest weapon used as an instrument of oppression. By this one factor the men are kept in submission. A case comes to mind: A staff sergeant was arrested and confined in the guard house. He has considerable service to his credit but such is the system in the army that he did not know that he had any rights at all. He had to ask a private to find out about simple points of military law.

Authorities Fear Communism.

Race, color and religious prejudices are played up by authorities indirectly. Here is the strongest barrier for the organizer to break. Once broken, all will be clear sailing. The soldier is supposed to compensate himself for his position of servitude by reflecting that other races are his inferiors. Communism must be introduced and this idea eradicated.

Army officials showed their fear of Communistic ideas by having all books on socialism, and subjects that might cause an interest in Communism, taken from the library and reading rooms shortly after our arrest. The importance of the fight by the party against imperialist militarism cannot be overestimated.

The Workers Party should lead the Negro race in a fight for economic emancipation!

What do you think of an international language (Esperanto or Ido) as an aid to our propaganda and to break down national barriers?

In Hawaii there is an ideal field open for the propagandist. Most of the land is in large plantations, employing Filipino, Chinese and Japanese labor. Wages are exceptionally low and living expenses are quite high. Of course, these races live very cheaply because of their choice of food. Clothes cost a laborer more than any other item.

Exploited Workers in Hawaii.

Then there is the non-existence of voting privileges for these three races. The Hawaiian tho having the vote, has the same problem facing him that the American Indian has to face. He is facing extinction. Also, very few Hawaiians own any land of value.

The Filipino is, with other races in Hawaii, really a slave no matter how a person views his status. Wild and fantastic tales are told to him in order to induce him to leave his native land and come to Hawaii to work for American plantation owners. His dream bubble is short-lived tho. Grim reality soon banishes his illusions. The Manlapit case is a good example of the treatment accorded a laborer who dares think aloud.

Hawaiian War Maneuvers.

One purpose of the Hawaiian maneuvers was to impress these slaves, and the people in their home land, with America's great strength. To one who has studied military science tho, the whole thing was a gigantic farce and the laugh was on imperialist America. The underlying purpose was apparent to all thinking and informed people.

Comrades, your interest makes life more worth living, while in prison. The knowledge that we have been of value to the cause means that despite our personal fate, imperialist militarism has lost in its efforts to injure Communism by persecuting us.

We are grateful for your kind letters and the books sent to us, tho we are sorry that we cannot read the latter now. However, the day is not far distant when capitalism will no longer be able to keep us from our chosen work.

With comradely greetings, and best wishes for the success of your work for the emancipation of mankind thru the revolution.

'PROFESSED CHRISTIANS' SHOWN AS HYPOCRITES; MISSIONARIES AGENTS OF IMPERIALIST POWERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, August 3.—The Christian missionaries in China are proving true to their role of agents of imperialism. Though put to the test by the appeal of the "Christian general" Feng Yu-hsiang, addressed to all the "professed Christians" of the world, the Christian churches of the imperialist nations are silent, while their missionaries in China are openly hostile to the movement for Chinese liberation.

This is seen by their stand in the convention of 200 foreign Christian missionaries and educators at Kikungshan, in the province of Hogan, where they defied the request of the Chinese government and declared that they would stand upon the uneqaul treaties of violence forced upon China by the imperialist powers.

Christians Tell China to Go to Hell.

Both the Chinese government and the Students' Union had requested the christian missions to take a stand in favor of recognition of the sovereignity of the Chinese government by registering their schools with the Chinese government educational department, and to make the study of christian doctrines a voluntary and not a compulsory subject in such schools.

The convention of christians refused both requests and declared they would stand upon the privileges of independence from Chinese supervision granted them by the unequal treaties with the christian imperialist powers. This is seen as a scornful reply also to the appeal of General Feng Yu-hsiang, which puts the "professed christians" of the world to the test. The DAILY WORKER gives Feng's appeal in full as follows:

"TO ALL THE PROFESSED CHRISTIANS OF THE WORLD."

By Feng Yu-Hsiang.

(The Christian General of China.)

"The cruel episode which took place on May 30 at Shanghai has been repeated at Hankow and at Shameen, in Canton time and again. We Chinese have been butchered ruthlessly by British police and troops.

"To put the situation in brief, the British have flagrantly disregarded the sovereignty of China and have treated the Chinese people as tho the latter were lower than hens and dogs.

"What has happened in Shanghai had its origin in the cruel killing of a Chinese worker by the managers of certain Japanese-owned Canton mines there.

British are Assailed.

"Grieved at the unfortunate lot of their fellow citizens, the students conducted a lecturing campaign, but the British police took action without any justification and fired upon the unarmed students. As a result, the bodies of the dead and the injured lay in a pile at Hankow and on the Shameen in Canton.

"The British authorities of both places went further in their high-handed policy and gave orders to the marine forces to bring machine guns into operation, resulting in even greater casualties.

"Such dark and cruel deeds are indeed unprecedented. Alas, for a long time has Great Britain boasted of being christian. Now the British are engaged in perpetrating relentless and inhuman acts by means of their superior equipment of machine guns and cannons.

Labor has Answered—Christians are Silent.

"Not only is this a stain upon christianity, but it is also a disgrace to humanity at large. Overwhelmed with indignation and grief, the people thruout this country are unanimously protesting with all their might.

"Citizens of friendly nations have shown their sympathy with us and not a few Britishers and Japanese have in the interest of justice made declarations supporting our movement.

"The Red International of Labor Unions and labor parties of various nations are particularly enthusiastic in their offers of assistance to our people.

"We christians have always been known as a class of people who always insist on justice and righteousness, the support of which has been recognized as our unshirkable duty.

Feng Naively Trusted Missionaries.

"Unfortunately, concerning the persistent massacres in China, nothing has been heard from foreign missions up to the present. In my humble opinion, you must have entertained the sincerest sympathy for the suffering of the workers and must have regarded the recent massacre of innocent Chinese people as wholly unjustified, but, as you are under the overpowering pressure of imperialistic government, I presume you cannot see your way freely to give expression to your righteous views, for fear of incurring the displeasure of your respective governments and the hatred of the capitalistic class which may cause damage to your own position.

"Of course, due allowance must be made for your reticence in these circumstances, but, in the interest of justice and righteousness, I cannot help addressing to you a few words of friendly counsel.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

MUSSOLINI'S publicity agents were a little bit injudicious in boasting of the alleged surplus in the budget. It may not help them any in the negotiations with the United States government over the war debts. The object of the boast was to show the world that fascism was stable and that the opposition has not been able to seriously injure the Mussolini dictatorship.

IT was proven recently in articles written by bourgeois journalists that Mussolini has juggled the treasury figures to such an extent that a financial wizard could not make head nor tail out of them. He is playing a game of delay hoping that some miracle will happen to save him from the inevitable disaster.

MAYOR HYLAN of New York is a candidate for the mayoralty to succeed himself. The fight is now in the primary stage and Tammany is out for Hylan's scalp. Hylan and his Tammany opponent are birds of a feather. They only disgree over the division of the spoils of office. While Hylan claims to be a progressive, he is really a clever reactionary. His main platform is a five cent fare and abuse of the "traction interests."

HYLAN is supported by William Randolph Hearst, who has a private feud on with Al. Smith, governor of the state. Between the Tammany candidate Walker and Hylan his opponent, the workers have nothing to chose. The only candidate for mayor who will place the interests of the workers as his first and only consideration, is the standard bearer of the Workers (Communist) Party.

A NEWSPAPER correspondent by the name of Walter Duranty, sends a very interesting dispatch from Moscow. Duranty returned to the Soviet capital after a year's absence. He finds conditions have changed considerably for the better during the year. Large buildings are being constructed also several lines of auto busses and taxi cabs and many street car extensions. There are more shops than ever and the people have a generally cheerful appearance.

THE air of optimism which prevails, he attributes to the expected bumper crop. This is estimated at 200,000,000 bushels. This will permit the export of a quarter of a million bushels, while leaving the government a reserve of about half a million bushels. The reporter found the children plump and healthy and the number of beggars, which were a pest during the days of czardom, considerably decreased.

DURANTY says that there are now 1,300,000 members in the Young Communist girls' organization and that applications for another million were tunrned down owing to the difficulty of securing teachers and trainers. Young Russia is growing up and the members of the youth organizations of today will be the revolutionary leaders of tomorrow. Duranty's story should bring great joy to the hearts of all workers who see in Soviet Russia the fatherland of the oppressed of the world and the nucleus of a Soviet Union of the world.

ANOTHER dispatch states that Soviet Russia states that Soviet Russia had a total foreign trade business last year of one billion dollars as compared with half a billion last year. The trade balance favored the Soviet government by $50,000,000. This means a 100 per cent increase over the figures of the previous year and while they only come within one-half of pre-war figures, they nevertheless are significant and cannot fail to have considerable political effect abroad.

AUSTRIAN Communists are planning to stage a counter demonstration to those made by the fascisti against the delegates to the Zionist congress in Vienna. Like the American ku klux klan, the Austrian fascisti are anti-Semetic. The Socialists police of Vienna, it seems, have dealt lightly with the blackshirts, tho they have announced their intention not to be so benevolently disposed towards the Communists. This is quite likely true. The fascists and the yellow socialists do not find it hard to agree on the basis of a united front against the Communists.

BIG DEFENSE RALLY BRANDS UNION BETRAYERS IN ZEIGLER; MINERS ARE BEHIND LOCAL 992

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ZEIGLER, Ill., August 24.—Despite threats of the ku klux klan, a great mass meeting protesting against the attempt to railroad 18 Zeigler miners arrested on a charge of conspiracy to murder was held in the City Park here Sunday.

Every coal digger in town turned out to hear speakers tell the real story of the battle in the union hall on August 11 that resulted in the death of Mike Sarovich, trusted union man and that later called forth the warrants for the arrest of 18 of Zeigler's most active union men sworn to by the president, Lon Fox, and the vice-president, D. B. Cobb, of Sub-District No. 9. Fox and Cobb were in the fight on the 11th and received injuries whereupon they charged that the leaders of Local 992 at Zeigler had conspired to murder them.

Speakers Expose Treachery.

The speakers showed that Fox and Cobb were desperate over their great unpopularity and the imminence of their downfall and were trying to railroad the men who are leading the fight against them.

It was pointed out that Fox and Cobb have invariably sided with the companies in adjusting disputes and that their most flagrant betrayal was the deposal of the officers of Local 992 when the miners, of their own accord, walked out of the Bell and Zoller mine because the company would not make it possible for the check weighman to record proper weights on the scales. It was after a meeting at which the men demanded the re-instatement of their officers that the fight took place.

Defense Body Set Up.

Sunday evening a conference was held at which were represented delegations from miners' unions in Buckner, Vallier, Christopher, Frankfort, Johnson City, Orient and Zeigler. The conference set up a county defense committee to fight the frame-up trial of the 18 Zeigler miners.

Tom Jones, former board member of District 12, U. M. W. of A., was elected chairman of the committee. Henry Corbishly, president of Local 992 and one of those under arrest was chosen secretary and V. Cernich of Zeigler, treasurer.

Another Rally Sunday.

Tens of thousands of leaflets giving the facts of the situation in Zeigler will be broadcast thruout the county. The conference decided to hold another defense rally in Zeigler next Sunday. Duncan McDonald, Freeman Thompson and John Watt of Springfield have been asked to address the meeting. Defense bodies are set up in practically every mine colony in the county and the issue is being raised in all local unions.

A rumor has it that nine men including Corbishly and Frank Johnson, the check weighman who challenged the company's scales have been expelled from the mine union by the sub-district officers against whom the revolt is spreading to all locals.

Active Miners Fired.

Many men are being imported, most of these recruited from klan elements, ot work in the mine that has been shut down since the trouble over the scales two weeks ago. Active members who presented themselves at the mine were informed that they were discharged.

The miners insist that the facts bear out their contention that the company and the sub-district officials are combining in a deliberate frame-up to get all active union men out of Zeigler. They are selecting in advance those they want to get.

Situation Serious.

The preliminary hearing at which the 18 Zeigler miners will appear to answer the grave charge of conspiracy to murder Cobb will occur at Benton on Wednesday. The miners have no doubt that the desperation of the sub-district officials will force them to go thru with what is at best a very flimsy frame-up.

FRAME-UP OF 5 CLOTH STRIKERS BY BOSS FAILS

Police Take Pickets to Jail, Later Freed

Efforts of the International Tailoring Company to "frame up" members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union on charges of using violence will continue. That was the opinion expressed yesterday to the DAILY WORKER by the five strikers who were arrested while picketing the International and J. L. Taylor shops and held at the Des Plaines street police station for more than six hours while police tried to connect them with alleged acid throwing.

The five men, Abe Bloomberg, Bernhard Rayling, Sam Zimmer, John Wheeler and Max Schumacher, were walking on the picket line when police grabbed them. They were hustled into a patrol wagon and taken to the police station. There they were held without any reason for the arrest being given. After several hours they were lined up and viewed by certain persons who apparently tried to identify them. After being held from noon till after 6 p. m. they were released.

Frameup Fails.

It was only then that they were told that they had been viewed by people who claim to have seen men who threw acid in a clothing shop. The people who came to the station to view the strikers said they were not among those who are supposed to have thrown the acid.

Yesterday morning the ninth week of the strike began. The picket line was as well manned as ever and the strike meeting was attended by an unusually large number of strikers.

Speakers told the strike meeting of the hearing before Judge Lyle in police court when the 16 strikers charged with using violence were granted a change of judges. "The bomb that the bosses had prepared to blow the Amalgamated out of the city of Chicago turned out to be a boomerang," one Amalgamated official told the audience. "Instead of hurting the strike and the strikers' union it came right back and hit them in the eyes.

De Rosa on Picket Line.

"They were forced to tell the real purpose of the persecution and frame-up of the union men in open court. Their injunction didn't break the picket line or make clothes. So they tried a new dodge. The jailing of 16 of your fellow workers is just an attempt to use the police to break this strike. But it hasn't. But that won't stop the bosses from trying new dodges to cripple the morale of the strikers."

Patsy De Rosa, who was released from jail on bonds following the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus early Saturday morning, was back on the picket line yesterday.

MINNEAPOLIS FAKERS INVITE A CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEMBER TO SPEAK AT LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., August 24.—The Minneapolis and St. Paul reactionary trade union officials have invited W. E. McEwen, a member of the Duluth chamber of commerce, to deliver the principal address on Labor Sunday at the gathering held under the auspices of the central labor bodies.

McEwen, besides being a member of the chamber of commerce, is the editor of a so-called labor paper, the Duluth Labor World, which boosts the class-collaboration policy of William Green, friend of Herbert Hoover and president of the American Federation of Labor.

MINE UNION HEAD MEETS AT HOTEL AS BOSS CALLS

Strike Only One Week Away, Officials Busy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 24—John L. Lewis, president; Philip Murray, vice-president; Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer; Ellis Searles and other officials of the United Mine Workers union have been in conference in a local hotel since Saturday.

James A. Gorman who acted as secretary of the operators' and miners' negotiating committee which met in Atlantic City and failed to settle the miners' and operators' differences also arrived at the same hotel. Altho he said that he was merely stopping en route to a North Jersey resort his visit was looked on with interest.

That he may have brot word from the operators to Lewis and the other union officers was considered likely. The mildest of the theories about his appearance was that he may have come to discuss the question of having maintenance men stay at work in the event of a strike.

The mines in the hard coal district are extraordinarily active with the threatened strike only one week away.

Mine operators are filling storage bins to capacity in preparation for the walk out. This portends a long struggle is in prospect miners declare. Unless their officials back down at the last minute and accept the operators' terms, thus once more betraying the rank and file.

BAGGAGE MEN STRIKE IS ON; TRUNKS STOP

Exploited Baggage Men of N. Y. Walk Out

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Eight hundred baggage transfer men of New York have determined to let the trunks take care of themselves until their bosses back down in their attempt to impose a wage cut and until they are granted an eight-hour day. The strike is directed against the New York Transfer Company and the Westcott Express Company, who together monopolize the terminal baggage business of the metropolis.

Strike Complete.

The strike is led by Martin Lacey, president of the Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union, an organization not connected with the A. F. of L. The men in both companies are organized 100 per cent and will prevent scabbing by effective picketing.

Transfer work is the hardest kind of labor. Trunks have to be wrestled about like candy boxes at high speed. Rupture is a common ailment among the baggage men. The work day in the transfer trade has been ten hours. The men are insisting in their present demands for an eight-hour day. No class of baggagemen or chauffeurs receives more than $34 per week. The companies involved ask a wage reduction of a dollar a day.

Danger of Scabs.

The traditionally scab Yellow Scab Company will endanger the strike by its cheap cab hauling rates on trunks. The transfer companies move trunks for a dollar, while cabs will take them aboard for twenty cents. The union taxi men are expected to unite with the transfer men in their fight for a living wage and a workable day.

Bosses Cry Poverty.

The companies are complaining of losing money as usual. But the fact is that New York is the greatest passenger terminal in the world and the transfer business, as the men well know, is flourishing at all times. The Public Service Commission attempted to get the men to postpone their strike for three weeks. But a strike meeting of the union decided unanimously to stop work at midnight Sunday.

NORTHBORO, Mass. — (FP) — Northdale Woolen Mills employes have struck for wage increases. Weavers have been given 10 per cent increases and are not out.

THREATENED SPLIT IN WORKERS PARTY AVERTED AS BOTH SIDES STRESS NEED FOR UNITY

Following the adoption of the message to the Communist International, as given in yesterday's DAILY WORKER, the convention began the discussion upon seating the contested delegates. Minor and Foster spoke 15 minutes each on the question of seating two minority delegates from District 8.

The contest upon seating Comrade Fisher as fraternal delegate began by Comrade Novak speaking 15 minutes in German, with Amter following as translator, and Comrade Fisher in defense of his being seated.

Comrade Bedacht took the floor for 15 minutes opposing the motion of the majority report of the Credential Committee to seat Comrade Askell as fraternal delegate from the Tyomies Finnish daily paper. After an appeal from the chair, a vote of 37 to 23 gave Comrade Cannon the floor to defend the motion.

Cannon Attacks Opportunism.

One of the main duties, if not the chief duty, of this convention, declared Comrade Cannon, was to wage a determined and united struggle of all Communist elements against right wing deviations such as those represented by Comrade Askell, which the C. I. and the Parity Commission had declared the greatest danger to our party. In the opinion of the C. E. C. majority this task could be best carried out successfully by Comrade Askell being given full chance to defend before the party, particularly before the workers of the Finnish section, his wrong position upon the political tasks and questions of the party, in order that the convention may more effectively combat them, and therefore that Comrade Askell should be seated as a fraternal delegate as had been the representatives of other language papers of the party.

Following this, Comrade Askell, upon motion of Lovestone, was granted the floor for 15 minutes, but being absent, this speech was deferred.

A motion passed by agreement, allowing seven delegates to speak for five minutes each on both sides. Comrade Johnstone of District 8 spoke, followed by Kruse. Bell and Ballam from Boston stated their cases in District 1. Grecht and Lifschitz spoke from District 2 of New York. Comrade Karath and Comrade White spoke from District 6. BERRY BRINGS GRIST TO HIS OWN BUSINESS

Uses Union Funds for Private Ventures

This is the tenth of a series of articles exposing the record of the notorious strikebreaker "Majah" Geo. L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assitants' Union.

ARTICLE X.

The conference passed a resolution which stated that the unions affiliated with it would not turn over to the international union the funds held under the laws of the organization until the following conditions were complied with:

1. Restoration of the popular voting system.
2. Restoration to the old-age pension fund of moneys illegally diverted from it.
3. A complete report of the finances of the international union based on an audit made by a certified public accountant who has not been previously employed on the books of the union.
4. Resumption of the publication of the secretary-treasurer's reports quarterly in the American Pressman.
5. Relief of the death benefit fund from excessive overhead charges.
6. Just adjudication of all legal claims against the international union now held by local unions.

The following questions were also to be referred to the membership on a referendum vote:

(a) Shall we continue to maintain the home?

(b) Shall we continue to maintain the sanatorium?

(c) Shall we continue to maintain the technical school?

(d) Shall the technical school be removed to a centrally located city?

(e) Shall the administrative headquarters of the union be removed to a centrally located city?

The experience of the pressmen with their capitalistic international officers should be a warning signal for the membership of other unions whose officials use the funds of the organization to float business ventures. Unions cannot fight the capitalists and be interested in profit making enterprises at the same time. Labor banks and investment companies are becom-

CROOK SOUGHT WHO SWINDLED N. W. FARMERS

Finance Wizard of N. P. L. and $135,000 Missing

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 24.—The northwest is being combed for Jack Hastings, for alleged embezzlement of $135,000, together with four associates, in connection with a bank at New Rockford, N. D. Jack Hastings is well known as the financial wizard of the Nonpartisan league "wrecking crew" which organized and wrecked a long string of economic enterprises in North Dakota and some in Minnesota, costing the unsuspecting farmers millions of dollars.

Long Swindle Record.

Hastings was also the promoter of "The Listman Service" and "Federated Finance Company" of Seattle, Wash. This swindle blew up at Seattle, causing many workers to lose their all.

Jack Hastings was the confidential secretary to A. C. Townley when the Nonpartisan league was first started. He discovered George T. Webb, who is now vice president of the Brotherhood Investment company of Cleveland, Ohio. Hastings also brot out Henry A. Pallock, who is now general counsel of the Brotherhood Investment Company, and with whom he was indicted several years ago for the looting of the Scandinavian-American bank of Fargo, N. D.

Saved by Statute.

The statute of limitations stopped the prosecution of Hastings and Paddock, the latter being attorney for the defunct bank. It is thot that Hastings has left the country for Mexico.

MUSSOLINI GETS BIG GIFT FROM PAPA MORGAN FOR FASCISM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, August 24.—The house of Morgan has placed $200,000,000 at the disposal of Mussolini's bankrupt government. This flood of gold for fascism is Morgan's contribution to insure the continued existence of a government after his own heart. It will also serve to stabilize the lira which has been having a severe attack of delirium tremens. Morgan's other reason for loaning the money is his somewhat selfish desire to recuperate many prior millions borrowed by Rome.

BRITISH MINE LEADER HURLS REVOLT THREAT

Seamen's Strike Has Government Scared

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Charges of A. J. Cook, labor leader who is credited with forcing the miners' strike settlement on the government, that he had been threatened with assassination by British fascists and that the "government allowed it," were ignored by the tory government.

Cook issued another warning to the government in the speech at Mansfield Sunday in which he revealed the assassination charge.

In reference to the government inactivity towards the fascists Cook said:

"But we shall capture the army and navy by having them controlled by a labor government. I warn the government not to tempt the army and navy too far."

Faker Flees for Life.

Meanwhile the seamen's strike is causing the government grave concern. The faker Havelock Wilson left the country after he betrayed the seamen. He is on his way to the United States with the pieces of silver in his pocket.

It is reported here that Wilson fled in fear of his life as J. H. Thomas did after he sold out the miners in 1921. Wilson hopes that the present crisis will blow over.

Last Sunday Cook, miners' leader, delivered one of the most vigorous denunciations of the British ruling class that ever flowed from the lips of a labor leader in Great Britain. He denounced royalty and declared that the Communists were not enemies of the workers but their friends. This he could not say for royalty.

The army and navy personnel, said Cook, came from the ranks of labor and would ultimately fight on the side of the workers. This was looked upon by the government as an open bid for power thru physical force.

"In May, 1926," declared the head of the British miners' union, numbering 1,300,000 members, "we will face a great struggle between capital and labor. We must prepare the union machinery and the commissariat. I will raise a fund to stock the homes of the workers with food in preparation for the fight.

"With other miners I have been dragged in chains by the police. The tools of capitalism will pay for their persecutions of the working class. Those wrongs will be revenged. We will obtain control of the army and navy."

Red Scares Impotent.

The British shipowners are blaming the Communists for the seamen's strike, but since the successful struggle of the miners who accepted the Communist program of a joint struggle with the entire labor movement as the key to victory, the red scares are not effective.

British shipping is being tied up not only in British ports but thruout the empire. This has become so effective in Australia that the colonial government has ordered the deportation of the leaders responsible for staring the strike.

FRENCH-BRITISH DEBT DICKER IS NOW DEADLOCKED

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Except for the expression of the usual diplomatic optimism over the progress of conversations undertaken today between Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, and M. Caillaux, French finance minister, no light whatever was shed upon the probability of a settlement of the question of the French debt to Great Britain.

Contrary to expectations, Caillaux did not return to the treasury department during the afternoon for a second conference with Churchill.

It was believed the French finance minister was waiting for instructions from Paris regarding some proposition presented to him by Churchill.

CHALLENGE OF GENERAL STRIKE FLUNG AT GARMENT BOSSES BY JOINT ACTION COMMITTEE CALL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, August 24.—At 3 p. m. sharp, a banner was thrust from the window of a dress shop on West 21st Street and the great stoppage of the cloak and dress industry of New York began. In answer to the call issued by the Joint Committee of Action, and in spite of the threats of bosses and the terrorism of the Joint Board, thousands of workers poured thru the streets to their assigned meeting halls.

The Joint Board acknowledged to reporters that 30,000 workers stopped work, and there is no doubt that the actual figure is nearer 40,000. They filled to overflowing two auditoriums in Stuyvesant Casino, two in Webster Hall, two in Manhattan Lyceum, two in Arlington Hall, two in Hennington Hall, two in Lenox Assembly, two in Clinton Hall; also Cooper Union, Mansion Hall, Lafayette Casino and Astoria Hall, and then some 15,000 people gathered for an overflow meeting in Union Square.

Secret Opposition.

Bryant Hall had been engaged for the uptown workers, but by order of the building department it was closed at 3 p. m. as unsafe for any meeting, and these workers had to go to other halls.

The workers paraded with banners bearing cartoons of Sigman and his clique; denouncing the union machine, its gangsters, its corrupt methods, and pledging loyalty to the Joint Action Committee. The masses of workers were perfectly orderly and there was little interference from the police and no arrests. A file of workers passing the office of the Joint Board were ordered by the police to disperse, but there was no disorder.

Ready for General Strike.

At the halls the wildest enthusiasm prevailed, and all mention of a general stoppage was loudly cheered. The following resolution was adopted unanimously at all meetings:

Adopted Unanimously at All the Meetings by at Least 30,000 Workers.

"We, the Cloak and Dress Makers of New York, assembled at the call of the Joint Action Committee in twelve halls on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 20, 1925, adopt the following resolution:

"The Cloak and Dress Makers of New York have suffered and struggled many years to build our union and have won at least partial recognition of our rights as human beings. We have starved and bled on the picket line to gain better conditions for ourselves and families. For the past few years, however, the employers have thru various schemes reduced to naught all our gains.

"The large shops in our industry have practically disappeared and the trade has been transferred into the hands of small scab and corporation nests, where the work is being made while the workers of the union shops are compelled to walk the streets in search of employment for the greater part of the year. The scab shop system against which we revolted many years ago has again intrenched itself in our industry, bringing with it long periods of unemployment, starvation and misery for the workers.

No Longer Tolerated.

"The conditions to which the cloak and dress makers have been reduced have become such that they cannot be tolerated any longer. The jobbers who have become the practical employers in the industry refuse to take upon themselves any responsibility for assuring a decent livelihood to the workers at whose expense they have amassed great fortunes. The conditions of our industry have become such that it is practically impossible for a worker to earn a living.

"To remedy this deplorable situation in our industry, our union presented a number of vital demands to the employers a year and a half ago, and when the employers refused to give any consideration to our demands we decided to call a general strike to fight for these demands. The leaders of our union, without our consent, gave over these demands into the hands of the governor's commission, which, as is already known, gave us no concessions whatsoever.

"An agreement was concluded with the employers for another year under the old conditions which means that the work will continue to be made in scab shops under the most miserable conditions.

Financial Skulduggery.

"In spite of the fact that our mandate for a strike for our demands was ignored by our leaders, they called out a fake stoppage in 1924 and spent the two million dollar fund which was collected for a strike; after they had emptied our treasury in a most scandalous and criminal way, they wanted to force another $20 tax on us and a raise in the dues.

"The executve boards and managers of our three locals, 2, 9 and 22, have strenuously opposed this policy and warned the officials of the Joint Board that they could not expect that a commission would concede to us even the most important demands of the workers. We demanded that the union prepare for a general strike should the employers refuse to grant our demands.

"The three locals demanded that the agreement in the dress industry, which has until this day been a dead letter, should be enforced. The three locals opposed the increase in dues and taxes and demanded an accounting for the money squandered by Sigman and his machine. It is because we fought for these demands that the Joint Board in a most criminal and shameful manner has thrown us out of the offices and suspended us from the union.

Time to Call a Halt.

"We, the Cloak and Dress Makers, have on many occasions during the past ten weeks since our managers and executive boards were suspended, demonstrated our protest against Sigman and his clique, who are guilty of having brot our union to the present deplorable state, but Sigman has until this day ignored our demands and betrayed our interests and takes no account of our protest and our demands.

"Instead, he has made a united front with the bosses to throw workers who have been members of our union for many years out of our shops, hoping thru the aid of the employers to force the workers to recognize his misleadership.

No More Compromise.

"We again reiterate that we will not under any circumstances permit our bosses by force to dictate to us whom we are to recognize as our leaders. We shall not pay any dues or taxes to the Joint Board and will not go to their meetings. We will not recognize their business agents, their fake managers and fake executive boards, who were appointed in place of our legally elected officers. Sigman must resign, the three locals must be reinstated, and the Joint Board be reorganized on a democratic basis with proportional representation.

For General Strike.

"In the event that our employers do not cease to interfere in our internal affairs, if they do not discontinue their policy of supporting the Sigman clique and forcing the workers to go to the Joint Board meetings and pay dues, if they do not discontinue to assist Sigman in forcing himself on the workers, if they do not cease to discharge workers at the instigation of Sigman and his clique, we hereby authorize the Joint Action Committee to call a general stoppage in our industry whenever the committee shall consider such a stop necessary.

"We do not want to recognize the Sigman clique any longer, and we pledge ourselves to do everything in our power to put an end to Sigman and Sigmanism that has been a menace to our union from the very first day Sigman came to office."

Cigarmakers' Union No Different Since Sammy Died; Still Stands Pat

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 24.—The convention of the Cigarmakers' Union here voted to revise its constitution so that the International Union executive may appoint one or more of its members as arbitrators in local disputes.

An amendment authorizing strike pay for union members taking part in strike where the unorganized are in a majority was voted down after President Perkins spoke against it. The proposal came from the Tampa delegates and Perkins declared that the Tampa men had been too ready to join such unorganized strikes and that the proposed amendment would give the unorganized the power to put the union men on the street when they wished.

Advocates of the special strike pay amendment pointed out that it was difficult for union men to stay at work in such walkouts, that much ill-feeling was caused thereby and future organization work interfered with.

HOLD CHINA-SOVIET UNITED FRONT MEET IN NEW YORK AUG. 28

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—We have tried ever since 1917 to impress upon the workers, and especially the organized workers, the importance of the Russian revolution. But many were not interested with "politics" not even with revolutionary politics. And so we boiled it down to the statement that the Russian revolution is the biggest strike in the history of the world. The Russian workers and peasants are on strike against the employers and capitalists not only of Russia but of the whole world.

And now we have a strike in China. Just a strike? No, the present strike movement in China is the beginning of the revolution in the biggest country in the world.

Capitalists of the world—Hands off the strike! Workers of the world—stand by the revolution!

Hands Off China:

Stand by Soviet Russia!

All organizations that stand for the workers and against the oppressors of the world must be represented by two delegates at the China-Soviet Russia United Front Conference, which has been called for Friday, August 28, at Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Avenue, New York, by two delegates.

SYNTHOL A NEW LOONEY GAS IS GRAVE MENACE

Thousands of Workers Face Poisoning

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—With the announcement of the new motor fuel, synthol, the Workers' Health Bureau pamphlet on tetra-ethyl lead comes as a timely reminder to organized labor that it must demand protection from all poisons used in industry before workers pay the price with their lives. Tetra-ethyl lead, which killed 11 workers and poisoned more than 113 others during 17 months' manufacture of ethyl gasoline, is used in making synthol, according to newspaper reports on the subject, and the base of this new "noknock" fuel is benzol, another deadly poison.

Organized labor is urged to start local investigations to determine whether ethyl gasoline or synthol are being sold or used. Unions are encouraged by a letter from the Workers' Health Bureau accompanying the tetra-ethyl lead leaflet to report all industrial poisons so that workers can demand protection before, not after, lives are lost.

As the Workers' Health Bureau points out, there are 280,000 chauffeurs, 31,000 garage workers, 411,000 draymen and expressmen, 40,000 service station workers, besides thousands of auto machinists and workers engaged in manufacturing tetra-ethyl lead and the new motor fuels, who are exposed to the dangers of the industrial poisons in these fuels. In addition the general public may be seriously endangered because of lead dust deposits from ethyl gasoline exhaust gases.

The Workers' Health Bureau is keeping in close touch with all developments concerning tetra-ethyl lead and other industrial poisons which affect workers and informs its union members and organized labor generally regarding these health dangers.

Protest Forces the Dropping of High Esthonian Visa Fee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(FP)—Visa fees for non-immigrants have been mutually abolished by the United States and Esthonia for their respective nationals. Due to protests from returned travelers, the state department began some months ago to negotiate the dropping of visa charges which it had started during the world war. Many countries have abolished or reduced this charge, in return for like action by the Washington government.

AMERICAN NEGRO TAKES CUE FROM RISING AFRICA

Fights Imperialism Here Also

The Chicago Tribune has an editorial on the uprising of the darker races. It says the Senussi tribesmen of Africa had opened fire on the Italians who have been ruling Tripoli and Cyrenaica. It claims that Italian troops which had been sent out to stop smuggling on trade routes to Egypt were set upon and a column cut off. The uprising was said to be led by a religious chief of the Mohammadens called Sheik Ahmed.

This is only the beginning. The subject races thruout the world are gradually rising up against capitalist imperialism and the circle will not be rounded out until the American Negro takes his stand with the other exploited peoples of the world. It is claimed that South Africa is the only place that further efforts can be made to throw off the yoke of imperialism, but this is only a blind to make the American workers think that they are under a great democratic government and have no kick. The workers of America will surely take their turn and pull the imperialists' chair from under him and throw him out.

Imperialism Is Sick.

Yes, the imperialist is truly a sick man. Great Britain is full of unrest. There are thousands of workers out of work and in no spirit to support a large army in the colonies. Continental Europe is on its last leg, suffering from the depression of a four years war. The knowledge that Asia and Africa got of modern warfare in the last war will stand them in good stead.

The European naitons which are depending upon their foreign colonies for cheap raw material, as well as man power for their armies, are constantly double-crossing each other and waiting to pounce upon each other at the slightest chance. You will remember it was the Tribune that was the first to cry "red" at the American Negro Labor Congress. Now it is crying "soviet" at these natives who for years have had to keep up an aristoc[illegible] a useless leisure class, when all they are asking for is a chance to gov[illegible] themselves.

Demand Unionization of Negro.

The United States today is just as much an imperialist nation as France or England. It is constantly seeking foreign markets for its goods and new fields to invest its every-growing capital. The American Negro Labor Congress will mark the beginning of the American Negro's demands for complete unionization of labor. It will demand that Negro plumbers, electricians, locomotive firemen, etc., be organized in the American Federation of Labor, as well as the hod carriers.

The union officials realize that playing at organizing the Negro will not satisfy him this time; so, in order to help the big employers of labor keep the Negro sttrikebreaker as a whip over the white worker and keep the easy jobs with big pay, they find it necessary to cry out "RED" when the Negro demands to be organized on all fields. But with all the help union officials can give him, truly the capitalist is a sick man.

Hoisting Engineers to Be "Neutral" in War of Building Unions

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 24—The bricklayers-plasterers' jurisdictional war entered another phase late last week when the bricklayers were ordered on strike in towns where the plasterers had previously exercised exclusive jurisdiction. The strikes took place in Lynbrook, L. I.; Watertown, N. Y., and Paterson and Passaic, N. J.

The bricklayers received a setback when it became known that Arthur M. Huddell, president of the International Union of Hoisting Engineers, in a telegram from Chicago to Edward J. McGivern, president of the Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers' International Union, repudiated the action of the hoisting engineers who went on strike several days ago in sympathy with the bricklayers.

"I have instructed Local 403 of New York City to remain neutral," said Mr. Huddell. "I know nothing of any agreement except what you tell me. It has never received my approval and is done entirely on their own responsibility, and I will do anything I can do to have our local remain neutral."

"All we have asked of any trade is to remain neutral," said Mr. McGivern in commenting on the telegram.

Pneumonia Industrial Disease.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 24.—(FP)—Families of workers who die of influenza or pneumonia clearly contracted from conditions of work are entitled to state compensation under a Connecticut upreme Court ruling on the case of Dela Penn, a marble cutter employed by Jackson Stone Co. Cases will not have to be based on the place the disease or cold leading to disease were contracted, but on proving that work conditions made the employe susceptible and weakened.

Hearstism Carries Germ of Fascism, Labor's Foe, in These United States

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, William Randolph Hearst parades as "an enemy of the interests" in the municipal campaing raging in New York City, at the same time joining in the "open shop" war against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union in Chicago.

In New York, Hearst calls for the re-election of Mayor Hylan as "the people's candidate", while in Chicago he grows hysterical in his lasking of the judicial mountebank, Judge John H. Lyle, who is supported by the great bankers and industrialists in his war on the striking garment workers.

• • • •

This is in harmony with the Hearst policy of adapting his newspapers to the locality in which they are published.

In New York, Hearst has won tremendous circulations for his "Journal" and "American" among the Jewish workers, great numbers of whom are employed in the needle trades. It is to these he appeals in great part for support of Mayor Hylan, in the Hearst-Hylan war on Tammany Hall for the selection of the mayoralty candidate in the democratic primaries. The Hearst press in New York City now gushes radical phrases. The "municipal ownership" espoused by this aggregation is hailed as "a revolutionary measure" before the elections. But, even if the Hearst-Hylan ticket goes thru, the capitalist colossus will stand astride the nation's greatest city powerful as ever. Only Hearst will be the gainer; adding to his political strength, bolstering up his hope that some day he may yet land in the White House at Washington, D. C.

• • • •

In New York, democratic, but in Chicago, republican, is the Hearst program. In New York, try to fool the workers with radical phrases; in Chicago, make open war upon the workers in an effort to crush their organizations.

It is not an accident that Hearst is backing the republican-capitalist "law 'n order" judge, Lyle, who throws the support of his court to the International Tailoring Company, thru holding the victims of the bosses' frame-ups under exhorbitant bail, notably the $105,000.00 put upon the striker, Patsy DeRosa, forcing this worker to sit in jail for ten days until the fight to reduce the bail was won.

• • • •

In so-called "peace times'" the American judicial system boasts much of its claim that all are innocent until proven guilty. But these are not "peace times" in Chicago. The "open shop" war on labor, carefully planned, with its Landis award in the biulding trades and the attack on the coal miners at Herrin, in Williamson County, has opened another chapter in the present effort to crush the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union in the garment industry. In this war, as in all great industrial struggles, the capitalist courts hold the workers guilty of all crimes charged, challenging them to prove their innnocence. Listen to the judicial today to big business, Lyle as he convicts in the columns of the Hearst press without court procedure of any kind, the worker, DeRosa, as follows:

> "It is unfortunate for the people who were slugged by DeRosa, and those whose property was destroyed by the acid thrown by DeRosa, and for the 61 year old woman that he put a gun up to while his companion threw acid in her tailoring shop.
> "It is unfortunate for all of these people, but it is not my fault, and if the public is satisfied I'll have to be."

• • • •

This is nothing if not an appeal to the lynch law spirit of the mob; an attempt to rouse prejudice in the minds of the uninformed and the easily misled not only against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, but against all organized workers in the state as well as in the city.

Thus is fascism born, finding its ally among the most reactionary unions, like the United Garment Workers of America, that lends itself to the "open shop" bosses as a strike-breaking agency, and typified best in the capitalist press by the numerous and growing Hearst publications.

Let the workers recognize the enemy and fight accordingly.

POLICEMAN CRASHES INTO TAXI-CAB, BUT LAW IS NOT FOR HIM

(From the Taxi Meter, a Taxi Trade Paper.)

JUSTICE.

Time, 9:15 p. m.

Place, Park avenue and 60th street, New York City.

Policeman driving without his chauffeur's or operator's license ignores the stop light signal set against him and crashes into a taxicab operated by Meyer Silverman of 90 Grafton street, Brooklyn.

The offender, Patrolman James Donohue, was given a summons for operating a machine without a license and passing a stop signal which called for traffic to halt. At the time of the offense Donohue was in civilian clothes, but the next day appeared in his uniform before Magistrate House in the traffic court, which delayed his trial due to the fact that the magistrate was unable to recognize the policeman as the defendant, being under the impression that he was there in his official capacity.

Upon being informed that the policeman was the defendant, he then went thru the process of meting out justice, for which a judge is placed upon the bench.

Result: Suspended sentence.

Sells-Floto Circus Nonunion.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 24.—(FP)—The hiring of nonunion billposters in Denver by the Sells-Floto circus is expected to have a bad effect on the show's gate receipts thruout the southwest. Plenty of union billposters were available for the job, but the Sells-Floto general agent preferred to air his dislike of organized labor and gave the contract to a local open shop concern.

BERRY BRINGS GRIST TO HIS OWN BUSINESS

ing the order of the day. Those novel methods of fighting the employers will undoubtedly benefit the reactionary officials, but they will only prove millstones around the necks of the membership.

The Charges.

Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 specifically charged the officers of the International Union with many offenses, including having "used union funds to finance wholly or in part the following concerns in which they were personally interested:

Clinchfield Hydro-Electric company.

Clinchfield Land and Lumber company (previously the Clinchfield Land and Timber company.)

Clinchfield Mercantile company.

The Knoxville Printing Shop.

Berry's Grist Mill.

A little item of graft on the credit side of Berry's ledger is a contract with the United States government for the transportation of the mails between Rogersville and the Pressmen's Home. For this he received $550 per year. Berry has no equipment for this work but he uses the employes of the International Union to do the work. Berry puts the compensation in his own pocket. While he was roaming around Europe after the war, in return for his services to the employers, the quarterly payments received from the contract were turned into the union treasury.

Facts Brot Out.

Berry secured ten lawyers ot defend himself against the charges made by Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, but he was not successful in keeping the story from reaching the public. The following facts were brot out in court:

The Clinchfield Mercantile company with branch offices at Rogersville and Alum Well was founded with money taken out of the treasury of the International Union. George L. Berry is president of the corporation. Joseph C. Orr, secretary-treasurer of the union is also secretary-treasurer of the company.

Berry and Orr had a way of making money that would win the admiration of O. Henry, author of "The Gentle Grafters" and other short stories. The bills of the Mercantile company (a country department store) were met by the International Union and the International Union gave notes for the bills of the Clinchfield Mercantile company. The International Union then bought supplies to cover the amount of these bills and the Mercantile company naturally made a profit on the goods sold to the international.

In other words Berry and Orr for their company bought goods with the money of the union and then sold those goods to the union at a profit to themselves.

Berry said that no profit was derived from the operation of the Mercantile company. Yet the company made enuf money in 1918 to show a surplus of $18,000 and paid an income tax.

Even Berry's own auditors and his secretary-treasurer admitted that the company made profits. Who got the dough? It certainly did not go into the coffers of the International Union.

The court records showed that the stockholders and the officers of the Clinchfield Hydro-Electric company, another Berry concern, built with the funds of the international, are George L. Berry, Joseph C. Orr, Mrs. George L. Berry, Mrs. Joseph C. Orr and Mrs. Gehres (Berry's mother-in-law.)

Berry admitted having loaned this company $35,000 of the union funds, altho he testied that he did not know who the stockholders were outside of himself. As a matter of fact the enormous sum of $192,000 was sunk in this quagmire and there is a letter on record written by Berry to the Western Electric company, promising to make payments to that company for electrical equipment just as soon as the war emergency assessment began to flow in.

In a contract entered into between the Hydro-Electric company and the I. P. P. and A. U. the International Union was to have the privilege of buying the plant at the end of ten years on the payment of $75,000 ($40,000 cash and the $35,000 stock made out in Berry's name.)

Another Berry Business.

Another one of Berry's enterprises is the Clinchfield Land and Lumber company. In this also Berry and his pal Joseph C. Orr are the principal partners and stockholders. This company had no equipment to haul freight, yet Berry and Orr with the concurrence of McHugh, Brophy and Marks, contracted for the union's hauling with the Clinchfield Land and Lumber company (their own concern) at a price of 18 cents per hundred and then sublet this hauling to another contractor at a less price and made a profit for themselves.

LEWIS LEADERSHIP COST U. M. W. 119,000 MEMBERS IN 18 MONTHS; COST $599,500 TO KEEP 76 MEN

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

The latest financial reports issued by the International office of the United Mine Workers of America, prove conclusively that the statements of the Progressive Miners' Committee were absolutely correct when we stated that John L. Lewis either did not intend to organize the miners of West Virginia, or was absolutely incompetent to do so. The report just published by Kennedy, the financial secretary, is a disgrace to the miners' union, when we consider enormity of the failure in the non-union fields of Kentucky and West Virginia, at this time.

Progressive Prophecy Proven Correct.

They not only have miserably failed to make any impression in the non-union fields with their spineless organizing campaign, but many of the organized have been lost to the union as a result of cowardly and ineffective leadership.

The readers of the DAILY WORKER will remember that we pointed out some time ago when we found that Van Bittner was to handle the organizing campaign under the direction of Lewis, that it would be a failure, as Bittner was absolutely incompetent, and had been a failure in everything that he had attempted on behalf of the miners. In fact the only thing that he has been successful in has been sticking close to the miners' treasury, and draining the same.

A sample of his "usefulness" to the miners in this country was demonstrated by him in the last international convention, when he fought bitterly to permit the ku klux klan to be permitted to join the United Mine Workers of America. The miners at the convention, swept him into oblivion at the convention with his K. K. K. friends, and now we find him in West Virginia standing stripped as a complete failure again, and the miners there in a worse condition than when he went into the district.

Sum Would Pay Them All a Salary.

According to the latest report from Kennedy, we find that the International aid to District 17, for the year ending June 1, 1925, was $1,006,575.00. From the same report we find that we have only 1,400 dues paying members in that district. So these 1,400 miners—doubtlessly a fine lot of men—cost just $718 each to keep in the union one year. But they didn't get this money. The miners will pay strict attention to this part of the report, and compare it with the report given to the last International convention.

At the convention we found that we had twenty three thousand paid up members in West Virginia, and now, after an expenditure of over one million dollars of the starving miners' money, we find 1,400 organized.

A few more weeks of this kind of organizing and we will have no more men left in the union in that field. We have repeatedly pointed out that Lewis did not intend to organize them, and pointed out the tactics adopted by the Lewis gang to prove our assertions.

Lewis and his fakers went into West Virginia with a set of lawyers to argue that the mine workers had the "right" to organize, and told the mine owners that it would be more profitable to deal with the union than with the miners who were not in the union. However, the coal owners did not see it that way, and warned John L. Lewis to that effect.

So Lewis, with his lieutenant, Bittner, advised "peaceful picketing," with the result that they all got arrested; and since that time they have been arguing their case in the courts, while the few that were organized have fallen away as a protest against the traitorous tactics that are being employed to organize.

Another sample of their incompetency is seen in the Kentucky campaign of (disorganization). At the last International convention of the miners in Indianapolis, it was reported we had ten thousand paid up members, and now after eighteen months organizing in that district we have the large amount paid up in membership according to Kennedy's report (76) members.

In Kentucky according to the report we spent $559,900 in the campaign and we have succeeded in reducing our paid up membership in Kentuck from 10,000 to 76 members paid up. Kentuckians are noble fellows, and Kentucky miners are among the best men in the U. M. W., but I submit that for the 76 miners left in the union that their condition would have been rosier than it is, had Lewis merely given them the $7,888,85 which each cost. It would have built them a good house on a shady street and given each one a bigger salary than he got.

Can any sane minded member of the U. M. W. of A. doubt the inability or treason of the Lewis gang. Lewis agreed with the operators that there were two hundred thousand too many miners in the industry, so perhaps this is the method they are using to force them out.

U. M. W. of A. Lost 119,895 Members.

In the last international convention the financial secretary reported a paid up membership of 419,895, and now according to his report we have a paid up membership of 300,000. Is it any wonder the coal mine operators are holding the Jacksonville agreement in contempt.

Another article on the drop in membership will be published in a few days.

CARPENTERS OF DETROIT FLOCK TO BIG LOCALS

No Yellow Dog Pledge in No. 1191 and 2140

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 24. — The carpenters of Detroit are getting fat now-a-days over the opposition of the Hutcheson crew. The effort of the reactionaries to make every carpenter sign a yellow dog pledge to leave his brains at home when he goes to a union meeting has only led to the popularity of the "expelled" locals.

These locals have now issued a circular to all carpenters and are building up their forces so that they control the jobs, and let Botterhill control his anger. The circular says:

Carpenters of Detroit!

"Do you want union wages? Do you want steady work? Are you more interested in union organization than injunctions? If so, here are some facts.

"Local Unions 1191 and 2140 control an average of 75 per cent of the union carpenter work in this district. We must have 400 additional members to take care of our jobs, and only those in the above locals will be recognized on jobs.

No Yellow Dog Pledges to Sign.

"Members of other locals may transfer with full rights and benefits without charge. Transfer or join at once. Now for a real organization. Meetings are as follows: Local 1191 meets every Monday at 935 Alger; Local 2140 meets every Friday at 1032 First. There is an employment office at 935 Alger, phone Northway 1681."

INTERNATIONAL JEWELRY UNION DISINTEGRATES

Anarchist Greenstein Turns Reactionary

By CHAS. SCHWARTZ.
(Secretary, Boston Jewelry Workers' Protective Association.
(Formerly Local No. 3, I. J. W. U.)

The International Jewelry Workers' Union was a small but lively organization. It embraced the most class conscious and most militant section of the jewelry workers. Built up in 1916 as a result of the three months' brilliant struggle in New York, under a radical, militant leadership consisting of socialists and syndicalists, which reduced our hours from 54 to 47 per week, it rapidly spread thruout the country, bringing improved conditions to jewelry workers in the farthest sections of the North American continent.

Giving Up—Once.

The I. J. W. U. took full advantage of the post-war prosperity in our trade, and with New York in the lead again has established, without any difficulty, the 44 hour week. In the same period of time, due to the aggressiveness of the new union men, who took the slogan, "In union there is strength" seriously, we raised our wages from 300 per cent to 400 per cent.

The crisis of 1920 found the New York jewelers entrenched again in a six months' bitter struggle for the seven hour day. The New York jewelry manufacturers made up their minds to fight to the bitter end, and with the powerful ally, the crisis, defeated the workers.

From Anarchist to Reactionary.

Mr. A. Greenstein, the secretary-organizer of Local 1, New York, was an able leader, but was hated by the members for his despotism and autocratic behavior. Hence, they got rid of him . . . But thru wilful maneuvering he became the general secretary of the newly formed I. J. W. U.

Then he became respectable and from a pretended anarchist who was at the head of the 1916 May Day parade in New York carrying the red flag (coinciding with the day of our first victory over the bosses) he turned into a fervent supporter of safe and sane trade unionism.

His main task was to befuddle the minds of the rank and filers by a campaign of slander and persecution against the "reds" thru the columns of the Jewelry Workers' monthly bulletin, of which he was the sole editor and censor.

But, in his eagerness to keep the job, he violated every rule and clause of democracy in the union constitution. The last act was the calling off of the 6th general convention that was to be held in July, 1923, under the flimsy pretext that there were no funds, altho the locals made practical suggestions to meet this situation.

Membership Revolts.

The explosion occurred in July, 1925, when the locals in and around New York refused to pay any more per capita tax unless the convention was held. But Greenstein would not call a convention to sign his own defeat, so he just "whistled" and when the funds ran low he turned the "business" over to a lickspittle of his, Mr. J. Isenberg and went into real business.

This successor supported by an Executive Board of deadheads who feared the militants in the trade unions more than their own doom, have assumed the position of "'Me and Gott," meanwhile losing local after local which got tired of paying dues to an autocratic dues-collecting agency, constantly sabotaging every effort toward unity. They do not even keep their locals informed as to what happens to their funds.

May Call Conference.

The militant locals that have continually warned the general membership as to Greenstein's intention of ruining if he could not rule, are contemplating calling a conference in the near future of all seceded locals, which, it is claimed, number more than the International, in conjunction with those locals of the I. J. W. U. who see the need of unity, to work out a plan of re-establishing the once powerful International Jewelry Workers' Union.

U. S. S. R. Did Big Trade with America Thru the Amtorg Since Jan. 1

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—About $1,000,000 worth of sausage casings imported from Soviet Russia have been sold by the Amtorg Trading Corporation on the American market since the beginning of the calendar year 1925. The latest transaction involving the sum of $530,000, which was concluded last week by the Amtorg Trading Corporation with the Drodel Casings Company of Brooklyn, and a local banking concern, is considered the largest single deal in the trade. The transaction follows increased sales of other Russian products, notably bristles, licorice root, skins, hides, etc., which had been formerly purchased by Americans on the European markets from second and third hands.

ORGANIZE PULLMAN PORTERS AT A. F. OF L. MEETING IN N. Y.

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 24.—A campaign to organize the unorganized porters on the pullman service is well under way. These workers are known to be the most exploited in the railroad industry in this country.

The first organization meeting will be held this Tuesday evening, August 28, 1925, at the Elks' Auditorium, 160 West 129th street, Harlem.

The campaign drive is under the auspices of the A. F. of L.

PLAN MERGER TO LAY OFF 50,000 RAILROAD MEN

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press.)

The possibility of laying off 50,000 of the 160,000 workers employed on the railroads of Canada is a feature of the plan to merge the Canadian National with the Canadian Pacific railway. This appeals especially to the financial interests backing the attempt to eliminate a well operated nationally owned system.

Says the Wall Street Journal: "Slicing of labor costs, particularly operating labor, would be the most important item in savings resulting from merger. The Canadian National employs 100,000 and the Canadian Pacific over 60,000. The payroll of the National railways last year was $143,242,026 and the average number of employes 98,875, making the average annual labor cost per employe $1,448. Using the estimate that the two railroad systems comprising over 35,000 miles of road can be operated with about 110,000 instead of the approximately 160,000 now employed, there would be a reduction of $72,400,000 in the labor costs."

Aside from the problem presented to the operating unions by this threat of wholesale layoffs the analysis is an unwitting boost for operation of railroads in one big national system under public control. No one questions the high efficiency of the Canadian National under Thornton. There would unquestionably be a similar saving if the Canadian Pacific entered the national system.

A similar authoritative estimate of the waste of money and manpower in the operation of the huge transportation system of the United States by scores of individual private corporations might stagger the private competitive ownership advocate.

UNION MEMBERS ARE FRIENDS OF CHINESE WORKER

Take Part in United Front Meeting in N. Y.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Who doesn't remember the campaigns for the support of foreign missions abroad to teach the heathen to "love their enemies"; and for that American imperialism made up by shooting such enemies as they fancied they had at home, or across the border.

And now the New York Central Trades and Labor Council expresses its "full sympathies with the Chinese" according to a news report; and they also "request the government of the U. S. A." to do this and that; and also to "cancel the extra-territorial rights" "since the present political situation is closely connected with the beginning of unionism in China's industrial development."

All this would come with better grace if the American labor bureaucracy had not condoned so far the suppression of all colonial people, at home and abroad. On the contrary, the bureaucracy of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council, and of the American labor movement are generally doing their best to keep the Chinese, the Negroes and others that are not "white men" out of the unions in America.

Unions affiliated with the Central Trades and Labor Council and all others, union men of New York, come to our conference on July 28, at Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second avenue, and make the following demands:

Hands Off China.

No extra-territorial rights against the Chinese in China.

No extra-territorial exclusion acts against the Chinese in the American unions.

Hands Off the Chinese in China.

Hands Off the Chinese, Negroes and other suppressed races over here.

COOLIE WAGE SCALE OF TEXTILE MILLS, BOTH NORTH AND SOUTH, SHOWN BY BOSSES' OWN PAPERS

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The coolie wage rates paid in the southern cotton mills are being advertised in a report by the extension division of the University of North Carolina which has found its way into New York textile journals. The report of comparative earnings in the mills of the several states north and south shows Alabama at the foot of the wage ladder with average actual earnings of $10.62 a week and South Carolina only a little higher at $11.16.

Both north and south the part time system is general and this brings wages down still lower than they otherwise would be. The wage averages per hour and the average actual weekly earnings in the 12 leading cotton states are given as follows:

State	Average earnings per hour	Average earnings perweek
Massachusets	$.459	$18.94
New Hampshire	.458	20.39
New York	.450	17.25
Connecticut	.434	20.99
Rhode Island	.431	15.67
Maine	.379	18.53
Virginia	.364	17.00
Pennsylvania	.362	16.24
North Carolina	.311	14.68
South Carolina	.253	11.16
Georgia	.252	11.68
Alabama	.235	10.62

Even These Figures too High.

These figures are challenged by textile unionists in the case of the northern mill states. The original statistics on which the report was based were gathered in 1924 and since then the part time system and extended and the average actual earnings have fallen considerably. The report also needs farther interpreting in the northern mill items where an average weekly wage runs higher in New Hampshire and Connecticut because of the longer hours worked.

Hell in Dixie.

Alabama is credited in the report not only with the lowest hourly rate and the smallest weekly average, but with the minimum of labor legislation. So far as hours is concerned there is none. An Alabama manufacturer may legally work his men and women employes as long as he wants to or they will stand for it. North Carolina and Georgia allow the boss to keep women on the job 60 hours a week.

Nothing is said in the quoted portions of the university report on the comparative strength of the labor organizations in the northern and southern fields but it is well known that unionism is near the invisible point in the southern mills. The only union making any effort there is the United Textile Workers' Union, which is expected to ask the American Federation of Labor at the Atlantic City convention for further assistance in storming the open shop strongholds of Dixie.

TREASON AND FAILURE OF CLASS COLLABORATION PROVEN BY THE COLLAPSE OF GERMAN UNIONISM

By EDO FIMMEN
(Secretary International Transport Workers' Federation of Amsterdam)

"At the present time Gemany, with its present democratic regime, may be regarded as the stronghold of liberty, the bulwark of freedom." —P. Grassmann, Vice-President of the A. D. G. B. (German General Federation of Trade Unions), at the I. F. T. U Congress in London in November, 1920

"Germany, which was for decades pre-eminent in all social questions, is today one of the countries most backward socially, put to shame by Poland and Czecho-Slovakia."—J. Oudegeest, Secretary of the International Federation of Trade Unions, reported in Vorwaerts of June 17, 1925.

• • • •

LESS than five years have elapsed between the day when Peter Grassmann, one of the most prominent leaders of the German trade union movement, made the first of the declarations quoted above, and the day when Jan Oudegeest, the no less prominent secretary of the Amsterdam International, made the second.

It may be that when Mr. Grassmann made his declaration he was exaggerating a little, and looking too much at the results on paper of the so-called German revolution, and taking too little account of realities. Yet altho it was even then quite clear that the revolutionary movement of the end of 1918 and begining of 1919 had not brot freedom to the German working class, the power of the German trade union movement was still such that it was regarded as the most importnt stronghold of the west and middle European workers' movement.

Only half a year earlier the German trade union movement had by a spirited general strike checked the attempts of the German reactionaries to overthrow the republic, but the leaders of the movement neglected to take advantage of the result of this action, which saved Germany from a return of the monarchy, just as they had neglected to pursue the November revolution to its logical conclusion.

Nothing But Defeat.

During the five years which have since elapsed the German working class has known nothing but defeat. Step by step, both politically and economically, the reactionaries and capitalists have not only reconquered what they lost in November of 1918, but have also forced the German working class into a position worse than they were in before the war.

The time when Germany, with its so-called "democratic regime," was rightly or wrongly regarded as the "stronghold of liberty" has long since passed by, and so has the time when the German working class was regarded as the finest and strongest battalion in the international workers' army.

The German movement has become so weak that had it not been for the financial assistance given by the movements in other countries at the end of 1923, the whole organization would have gone to pieces. The fact that Mr. Oudegeest, an international trade union leader who is noted for the cautiousness with which he expresses his opinions, now comes out in the open with the statement that "Germany . . . is today one of the countries most backward socially" is a fact that speaks volumes.

Bad For All Workers.

From the international workers' point of view the fact that the German worker has become the "coolie" of Europe is a very regrettable one. The fact that in Germany the eight-hour day has been lost in the most important industries; that the German worker is slaving at wages one-half or less of what is paid for the same work in Great Britain; that his fighting power has become so weakened that his employers are virtually able to dictate their will as to slaves—these things have a very great and very unfortunate influence on the conditions and the struggle of the workers in the rest of Europe.

The weakening of the labor movement in Germany has been due to the same reasons which have operated in other countries; the controversies inside the movement over principles and tactics—whether it should be class struggle or class cooperation. Germany was the first country where class co-operation was advocated and worked on a national scale (as a matter of fact it was during the same days of November, 1918, when the workers were fighting in the streets of Berlin, that a pact was concluded between Hugo Stinnes and the German trade union leaders for co-operation for the welfare of the "Fatherland".)

Class Collaboration Proven Failure.

Germany is also the country where it has been proved in the most conclusive way that class co-operation only benefits the employers, and that treason in the class struggle causes incalculable harm to the workers.

The fight between those who advocate the class struggle and those who stand for class co-operation has been raging thruout the years which have elapsed since the end of the war, weakening the movement until it became powerless.

Union Congress August 31.

On August 31 next, the 12th German Trade Union Congress will be held in Breslau. A great many of the items which compose the lengthy agenda show that in many of the branches at least there is a realization of the causes of the weakness of the movement, and of where the blame lies.

In addition to a very important proposal put forward by representatives of a number of the most prominent German trade unions, and which would provide for complete reorganization and amalgamation into fourteen great industrial unions, there are a large number of resolutions and proposals calling for national and international unity; for readmission of all trade unionists who have been expelled for their political views; for the sending of a delegation from the German labor movement to investigate conditions in Russia; for admission of the Russian trade unions into the Amsterdam International; urging the formation of a single all-in international trade union movement; and welcoming the formation of the Anglo-Russian Committee.

Reaction Obstinate.

It is difficult to say at this moment what kind of reception these different proposals and resolutions will have when the congress meets. Altho there is no doubt that the unity movement is growing in Germany as well as in other countries, there are still many difficulties and much resistance to be overcome before those who represent the workers will admit openly that it is only thru the greatest possible unity nationally and internationally, on a revolutionary basis, that the German working class, as well as that of other countries, will be able to achieve its aims.

It is to be hoped that the delegates who come together in Breslau will understand that the eyes, not only of the German workers, but also of those in other countries, who fully realize how much depends upon the attitude of the German movement, will be upon them. May they fully realize how great will be their responsibility.

May Be Significant.

A declaration of the German trade union movement in favor of national and international unity, or a decisive step in that direction, would mean the breakdown of the forces which are keeping the workers divided internationally and would also be the beginning of the end of the capitalist regime.

The British trade union movement marching hand in hand with the Russian movement is already a great promise for the future. The German working class joining them in their efforts for international unity and international working class revolution would mean the fulfillment of that promise.

DETROIT LABOR DAY TO BE HOT STUFF PICNIC

Women's Organization Mix Delicious Eats

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 24.—The Detroit Young Workers' League in conjunction with the Federation of Working Womens' Organizations is holding its International Youth Day celebration at a picnic to be held at Campbell's Grove (at the end of the Mack carline) on Sunday, Sept. 7th, beginning at 12 noon. This celebration will be a demonstration against capitalist militarism and imperialism. Speakers for the day will be for the Young Workers' League—Barney Mass; a Hindu speaker; a Chinese speaker and a Negro speaker.

A special sport program is arranged which will be conducted by the Workers' Sport Alliance. An extra special program of games, songs, and various other interesting feats has been arranged in order to provide enjoyment for all the Young Workers present.

Besides this and perhaps more important—delicious eats will be prepared. To convince anyone of this it is only necessary to state that the Federation of Working Women's Organizations are in charge of the eats. There will be several other special and interesting events that will make this one of the longest remembered of all the summer affairs.

To make this a real international demonstration an attempt has been made to secure a real international attendance. At least a hundred Hindus, a hundred Chinese and a hundred Negroes, along with many other foreign elements; as well as many American workers are expected to turn out to this demonstration. All workers, young and old are urged to attend this demonstration against capitalist militarism and imperialism.

GEORGIAN MENSHEVIKS CONCEDE REVOLT AGAINST SOVIET ERROR, SAY GERMAN WORKERS IN RUSSIA

MOSCOW, August 7—(By Mail.)—The German delegation has arrived in Tiflis, where, after the warmest greeting, it split itself into groups and visited factories, shops, railway workshops, prisons, welfare institutions and the German colony. The delegation then visited the chairman of the People's Council of Commissars, Eliava, who informed the members of the delegation in detail of conditions at present and in the past.

The leader of the delegation, Beck, declared to Eliava: "We have been convinced that the capitalist press spreads lies about Georgia. The German colonists have declared to us that they stand on the side of he soviet power and that the mensheviki did not defend the interests of the German colonists and did nothing to lighten their situation."

Mensheviki Realize Mistake.

Hereupon a discussion took place between the members of the German delegation and a group of one-time mensheviks. The social democratic member of the delegation Melle declared:

"We want to learn the truth. The German press says that the Soviet power has physically destroyed the mensheviki in Georgia; that the conditions in the Soviet prisons is frightful and that the prisoners are horribly tortured. Today we visited the prisons, spoke with the prisoners and convinced ourselves of the contrary. All political prisoners are well fed, and housed in clean and light rooms which cannot be called cells. In Germany no such prisons exist.

"We spoke with members of the commissions representing all groups equally and suggested the sending in of a request for an amnesty. The leaders of the Georgian insurrection answered us: 'With the insurrection we committed a political crime. We are guilty and deserve our condemnation. The Soviet power alone is a power of the workers and peasants.'

"Dzamanaschvili declared in the name of the ex-mensheviks there that the policy of the mensheviks had been incorrect. After the insurrection, 90 per cent of the menshevik leaders adopted the Soviet platform. The Soviet power alone can bring about the reconstruction of Georgia.

Will Send Delegation Abroad.

"The railwayman Dimitraschvilli declared: 'We mensheviks did not understand the significance of the October revolution, we fought against the Soviet power and organized the insurrection. We have recognized our fatal mistake and we will send a delegation abroad in order to inform the emigrants and the mensheviki of the real situation and to convince them of the hopelessness of the struggle against the Soviet power.'"

In the evening a tremendous mass demonstration took place in which the German delegation took part. "A demonstration with such enthusiasm cannot be 'arranged'," declared the social democratic member of the delegation Beck. "Those who continue to lie about Georgia should get their heads punched!"

WHEATLEY ADVOCATES A CORPS OF 10,000,000 FOR WORKERS' DEFENSE

LONDON, England, Aug. 24.—The call issued by John Wheatley, minister of health in the former Ramsay MacDonald government, for the enrollment of 10,000,000 workers as a "workers' defense corps," ready to fight against attacks on the workers' standard of living, is attracting attention.

The former minister proposes the formation of a defense corps "to maintain industrial peace" and calls for men "who are prepared to suffer rather than see Great Britain made a land of coolies.

DAILY WORKER BOOSTERS TAKE HUDSON TRIP

Those Aiding Paper Get Free Tickets

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—New York is arranging an excursion to historic Stony Point on the Hudson for the DAILY WORKER Builders' Reunion on Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 7th, on an entirely original and unique plan.

A first class boat, the Miramar, has been chartered, which will make the 36-mile trip in about three and a half hours. There will be music and dancing and entertainment galore. There will be bathing, hiking thru the forest and an old-fashioned family picnic dinner. And there will be no effort to make money from those that go, and no tickets will be sold.

Tickets Are Free.

Tickets for the entire trip will be given free of charge to all those that perform a certain minimum service for the DAILY WORKER in any one of various lines. Every one that brings in six dollars' worth of subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER, the Workers Monthly, the Young Worker or the Young Comrade will receive a ticket without cost.

For every three dollars collected as contribution for the DAILY WORKER Midsummer Sustaining Fund a ticket will also be given. Those who serve the DAILY WORKER as news stand collectors, those who do their duty as branch DAILY WORKER agents, as well as those that help a certain minimum with the work in the DAILY WORKER New York office, will also receive tickets.

In this way there will be selected from the entire New York membership those that are the most active supporters of the party's official organ. At the reunion at Stony Point these will be formally organized into the New York DAILY WORKER Builders' Club, and steps will be taken to result in the establishment of the English daily in New York at the earliest practicable moment.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report, Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system."

Under its new constitution, the Centrosoyouz is to be an organizing and representative center for the whole of the consumers' co-operatives of the U. S. S. R., and a trading center and commission agent for the distribution and sale of the most important staples of internal and foreign trade. The share capital is to be made up as follows: District co-operative unions subscribe for Centrosoyouz shares 10 kopecks per member; local co-operatives with a membership above 5,000 subscribe to the Centrosoyouz directly 20 kopecks per member; and if there are no district consumers' societies the subscription is to be 50 kopecks per member. It is proposed to raise the price of a share to five roubles in 1924. The Centrosoyouz has begun to liquidate its industrial enterprises so as to concentrate on its distributive and trading business.

For the present the Centrosoyouz will maintain its industrial activities in flour mills, oil refineries, starch and molasses, confectionery and candy, low-grade tobacco, leather, footwear, and soap. Altogether it will operate 14 factories and mills, of which eleven are its own and three have been rented. The yearly production of these enterprises is worth about 31 million roubles, and they employ about 37,000 persons.

Selskosoyouz (agricultural co-operation) has similarly prospered. By the beginning of 1924 Selskosoyouz included over 22,000 agricultural co-operative societies, with a voluntary membership of at least one and a half million peasant households. By May 1st the number of societies had grown by 14 per cent., and the number of households increased to over two million.

The foreign trading of Centrosoyouz is of considerable importance, being 60 per cent. more in 1924 than in 1923. It was through it that agricultural machinery to the value of one million roubles has been purchased in America and is now arriving at Odessa, Novorosseisk, Vladivostock, and Murmansk, also 411 grain-cleaning machines of a value of $75,000 purchased in Austria. Projects of great importance to British manufactures are dependent on the political situation.

Co-operative Trading

Co-operative enterprises are 6 per cent. of the total enterprises of the country, and the character of their work and their place in the business life of the country is seen in the following analysis of their turnovers and the taxation they pay:—

CO-OPERATIVE TURNOVER (RETAIL) AND TAXATION

	Amount. Million roubles	Per cent of total trade turnover	Amount. Million roubles	Per cent of total taxation
(a) Trading . . .	207.0	10.8	1.871.2	9.4
(b) Industrial . .	29.8	5.1	318.8	4.3
(c) Other	50.1	. . . .	414.8	. .
	286.9	9.5	2.605.8	7.9

But there has been during 1924 a considerable increase, for which general statistics are hard to get. Thus the co-operative percentage of the total retail turnover in Moscow late last year had risen from one-tenth to nearly one-third. We also find that the total turnover increased in 1923-24 from 168.7 to 286.9 million roubles and the members of societies from 21,104 to 32,508, while the total trade increased from 434 million roubles in 1923 to 1,100 million roubles in 1924.

Co-operatives and Private Enterprise

In the chapters on Industry and Commerce are figures giving the proportion of State, co-operative, and private trading. This shows that the part played by the co-operatives is regularly and rapidly growing at the expense of private traders. For example, in cotton goods their percentage has grown from 17 per cent. to 56 per cent., that of private trade declining from 44 per cent. to 14 per cent. But it is to be observed that whereas private trade transactions are mostly in cash those of the co-operatives are on credit up to two months. As much as 50-60 per cent. of their purchases from the Textile Syndicate and 80-90 per cent. of those from the Leather Syndicate were on credit. This gives the co-operatives a great advantage in competition, but has got some of the local societies into difficulties, from which they are being slowly extricated, and in which they have required large support. The proportion of credit is being reduced, but the co-operatives are much hampered by want of capital and credit.

Whether Co-operation will succeed in crushing private enterprise depends on the progress it can make in giving buyers what they want, when and where they want it, and in the way they want it. In this Co-operation in Russia has as much to learn as elsewhere, as will be seen from a comparison of the efficiency of the State, co-operative, and private trader in the previous chapter (wages, paragraph 1) on Industry. But great efforts are being made and there are signs of practical progress.

The co-operatives' share of the sale of State manufacture was 30 per cent. in 1924 as against 15 per cent. in 1923. Private business still undersells the co-operatives occasionally, but, on the whole, cannot do so. In staples like bread the co-operative price is on an average one-fifth to one-quarter lower; in sugar, meal, kerosene, meat, one-sixth lower. The difference between wholesale and retail prices, which in some co-operatives was as much as 40.5 per cent., is down to an average of 30-35 per cent.

Co-operatives in the Soviet Society

In the revolutionary trinity of Soviets, Trade Unions, and Co-operatives the latter have always been the last to get a move on in any new phase, just as they are in some respects the part of the Soviet system that will probably go furthest. They are at present an indispensable link between the town and country producer, and between the producer and the consumer; that is in both cases between those regions where State Socialism is strong and those where it is still weak. But this is not the final role of the co-operatives. They are expected in time to provide a general organization and representation of the consumer that will correspond to and combine with the representative organization of the producer in the Trade Unions and of the citizen in the Soviets. The State structure that in the first chapter was described as a pyramid with internal cross-ties will then be strengthened by a tripod skeleton of representation from the bottom to the top corresponding to the three main interests in each individual. He is already represented well enough through the Soviets in his political interests—that is as soon as the monopoly of the Communist Party is modified. He is well on the way to being represented in his occupational interests through a unified Trade Union organization. There is finally a beginning of such a unified representation of him as a consumer through the Co-operatives. Though as the above shows it is as yet only a beginning.

But if progress continues on the present lines at the present pace we may live to see a threefold democracy develop in Russia, and new forms of democratic representation that will give a driving force and a direction to campaigns for constitutional reform in Parliamentary democracies.

Final Conclusion to General and Labor Reports

In view of the information contained in the preceding chapters—all of which has been obtained by themselves from sources and through channels that convince them as to its general accuracy—the Delegation has come to the following conclusions: That the U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable State: That its Government is based firstly on a system of State Socialism that has the active support of a large majority of the workers and the acceptance of an equally large majority of the peasants and, secondly, on a federal structure that gives very full cultural and very fair political toleration: That the machinery of government though fundamentally different from that of other States seems to work well, and that the government it gives is not only in every way better than anything that Russia has ever yet had, but that it has done and is doing work in which other older State systems have failed and are still failing: That these good results have reconciled all but a very small minority to renouncing rights of opposition that are essential to political liberty elsewhere. And that this causes no resistance partly because these rights have been replaced by others of greater value under the Soviet system, and partly because recent movements have been steadily towards their restoration: And finally that the whole constitutes a new departure of the greatest interest that is well worth foreign study and a new development that may be greatly benefited by foreign assistance.

PART II

Special Institutions and Industries

Delegates with particular qualifications to report on certain classes of industry were asked to draw up special reports on those undertakings visited. In view, however, of the limited space available, and in order to avoid repetition, only a representative selection of these reports have been incorporated in this section.

I

Visit to Leningrad Trade Union Center

The Delegation visited the Palace of Labor, the headquarters of the Leningrad Trade Union Movement, and inspected various departments of this central organization. The building is well appointed and in every way an elaborate example of Russian architecture and decoration, inside and out. It was formerly used as a resident college for the children of the Russian aristocracy, and passed into the hands of the Trade Union organizations during the Revolution. It is one of the principal buildings on a boulevard, formerly known as the Guards' Boulevard, now renamed the Trade Union Boulevard.

During our visit information was given us regarding industrial and economic conditions of Leningrad, and we subsequently obtained many statistical statements dealing with this information. It was stated during our visit that there were 15,000 unemployed in Leningrad, many of them very highly qualified workers, but mainly industrial. The population was stated to be approximately 1,500,000. The President of the Leningrad Trade Union Council stated that the rate of growth of the population, which fell during the Revolution, is this year six times greater than before the war.

We then went through a special department—the economic section—in which we were shown an elaborate exhibition of diagrams dealing with productive organization, the numbers of workers employed in various industries, and the necessity for increasing the rate of output. We were very much interested also in an exhibition of food diets, set out on plates ready for table service, indicating the quantity and quality of food supplied to the workers after the Revolution as compared with the standard obtaining under the old system.

We went afterwards on a visit to the burial place of the martyrs of the Revolution, and in addition to the graves of several well-known revolutionaries. We were informed that 400 victims of the Revolution were buried within the walls on this memorial ground, erected in the center of what was at one time the parade ground of the Tsar's Guard. The stories related to us regarding executions, assassinations and the bloodshed associated with the revolutionary struggles of the workers against the Tsars were both thrilling and depressing.

After visiting the burial ground we walked on through the Winter Palace, the home of the Tsars, and after passing through the gorgeously furnished rooms, containing valuable works of art, we were escorted to the great reception hall, which is now used as an exhibition of Soviet flags, statues of revolutionary leaders, and documents associated with the Revolution which led to the destruction of the old regime. We also went down into an extensive basement to view a great collection of revolutionary relics. This collection represented many years of revolutionary service, not merely on the part of the workers but on the part of politicians, statesmen, military generals, admirals of the navy, members of the aristocracy, and other prominent and well-known individuals associated with many years' revolutionary effort in Russia. We were shown a model of the prison cells formerly used for revolutionary prisoners ,the chains which were used to bind them to prison walls, and the instruments of torture used to beat the rebels of pre-revolutionary days into a state of submission.

From this exhibition we stepped into the square facing the Winter Palace, in which the slaughter of Bloody Sunday took place.

II

Visit to the Leningrad Hospital

Members of the Delegation visited this hospital, formerly built for the medical service of the population of Leningrad, now controlled by the Soviet Medical Service. The hospital is one of the largest in Russia, containing 1,800 beds, 1,300 of which were occupied at the time of our visit. The crowded state of the hospital was explained to us as being due to other hospitals, too poor to be maintained, being closed and the patients housed in the larger hospital. This hospital is exceptionally well-equipped, is supplied with its own electric power station, lighting and cooking of all kinds being done by electricity. We saw, in full working order, oil-fed boilers, 17 supplied by the famous British firm of Babcock, Wilson, and Company, of London and Glasgow, and supplied during the years 1912-13. We also saw electric motors supplied from Sweden, ice-making machines, and other machinery installed during 1924.

In going through the elaborate kitchens attached to this hospital we noticed that all the food was cooked by electricity, hot-water was heated by electricity, potatoes peeled, bread cooked, meat minced, and nearly all the food prepared and cooked, including the elaborately constructed bakery, by electric power. Electric kneading machines were also provided, and a special tank was kept supplied well stocked with live fish, so that no danger should exist of the patients being injured by consuming fish not as fresh as is necessary for invalids.

All kinds of treatment for special diseases is provided for in this hospital and every effort is made to ensure rigid cleanliness in every department. The equipment and organization of the laundry, again stocked with all kinds of machinery worked by electric power, was a very fine example of hospital organization in Russia. The baths provided for the patients, the attendants, medical staff, and nurses were also up-to-date and very satisfactory. We were taken through the operating rooms by one of the best known surgeons in Russia, a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, and a man intensely interested in the organization of the hospital and the adequate scientific treatment of the patients. The operating rooms, the dispensary, and the provisions that were made to deal with all kinds of diseases were most elaborate. We were taken into one room colored and draped in black intended to assist the operators in clearness of vision when dealing with special cases of operation. The dressing rooms and operating rooms were also well appointed, and we left this hospital convinced that whatever medical science and organization could accomplished for the hospital service of Leningrad was still maintained to the maximum by the Soviet and medical authorities of the city.

> "Secretary."

Instead of reconvening at 8 p. m. on Sunday, however, the convention, owing to protracted conferences, did not reconvene until Monday at 1 p. m. upon which the following statements were made by Comrade Ruthenberg and Comrade Cannon, representing the two groups:

Statement of Comrade Ruthenberg.

Yesterday at the completion of the report of the Credentials Committee, the minority made a statement to the effect that the solution of the organizational problem, as adopted by the convention, was of such a character that it was unacceptable to the minority and could not provide the basis for harmonious work in the future for our party. We believe that the situation in the party is that of a deep and dangerous crisis. We believe that the things that have been brot out in the credentials committee report have been of such a character, so far as we are concerned, that has taken place in relations to the convention as to create a danger of a split in the party. We however, state now that in spite of any situation in existence, in spite of what we consider provocation, that it is the attitude of our group that split of this party would be a serious matter and against the interests of the Comintern, of the party and both groups in the party and we declare positively and definitely now that we have no intention and will not split from the party.

We declare that it is our aim and view that the future of our party and of the Communist movement in the United States depends upon the creation of a situation after this convention, and during this convention, which will provide the basis for close co-operation and harmonious work between the two leading groups of our party.

We declare that it is our aim and object during the remainder of this convention to achieve that end.

That, however, there exists as an obstacle to achievement of that end the conlict over the credential report involving particularly certain district executive committees.

We ask that on the basis of this statement the negotiations be carried on bethween the groups for the purpose of liquidation of these difficulties which exist at the present time. We believe that if these difficulties are not liquidated that they will create a tendency toward continued and bitter struggle in this convention and in the membership after the convention, and that a common agreement, a settlement of these conditions on the basis of negotiations is a requisite to the achievement of the conditions that will enable us to work constructively and harmoniously in the interest of our party after this convention. In relation to the debates on the political questions which will come before the convention, we state that in so far as we have view-points, in so far as there have been differences, that we necessarily must maintain our position and discuss these questions openly in this convention. That those who defend a position, those who believe that a line they have followed is the corect Communist line stating their reasons and their grounds, because the educational effect of our party of this discussion, is necessary and will be a step toward the Bolshevization of the party. In other words, there can be no compromise on the question of issues and principles, that each group must defend its view-point in that respect, but we state that on the basis of the organization questions which still divide us and which are the obstacles toward creating the conditons we desire in this convention, it will be possible to conduct this in the spirit of discussion of principle without personalities, without embittering the situation and to attain that end we ask that this agreement, if it can be agreed upon, be achieved as quickly as possible in this convention during the present day thru the negotiations carried on. We state, in conclusion, that we have come to this policy and this viewpoint because it is our desire to build the Communist movement in the United States and that these steps are the necessary requisites to build our party into a mass Communist Party.

CANNON'S STATEMENT.

Comrades: I wish to answer in behalf of the majority that we can state the same—that the declaration of Comrade Ruthenberg of the purposes of the minority in this convention are the same as ours. We know that we have had a dangerous crisis in the convention. We know that the possibility of a split in the convention was resisted by every one loyal to the party. It is not because we are against splits in principle, because there are times and there have been times in the history of the parties when the split had to occur. But we are opposed to this kind of a split for many reasons.

Now that the possibility of the split is eliminated, the question presents it self in an entirely different manner. The question presents itself from the standpoint of how we can best facilitate the harmonious work between the two leading groups in their joint fight for Communism, and their joint fight against non-Communist tendencies in the party. From this standpoint I wish to say in behalf of the majority that we are ready and willing to negotiate with the comrades of the minority, to discuss all disputed organizational questions and to strive in every way possible with the limits of the given conditions to reach a harmonious settlement of these controversies so that we can lay the basis here for the harmonious work that is necessary after the convention.

We are prepared to meet the minority half way on everything. To discuss everything from the standpoint of the interests of the party, and I hope that the results of the negotiations will be that the convention can resolve all disputes unanimously and that this convention, which threatened to be a serious crisis will turn out to be the starting point of the greatest forward march our party has ever known.

Upon the conclusion of the above statements of the majority and minority groups, a spontaneous demonstration of joy over the accord reached took place, the delegates rising and singing the Internationale.

No LaFollette Party in Wisconsin, Says Former LaFollette Man

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 24.—Arthur Barry, Milwaukee, who has announced his candidacy for the United States senate as a "La Follette-Wheeler progressive,' cannot obtain a separate election ticket under that designation because there is no party in the state by that name, Attorney General Herman L. Ekern held in an opinion to Secretary of State Fred R. Zimmerman today.

The founding of a new party must be undertaken by the chairman and secretary of the organization in question and in the absence of action by these no party can be founded, Attorney General Ekern held.

Marines Hug Morpheus While Guarding Silent Cal at Swampscott

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Aug. 24.—Charges of being asleep while on duty and with deserting their posts were preferred today against two of the marines in the detachment guarding the summer white house here.

A third marine is already in "the brig" at Charlestown navy yard for insubordination, including the disobeying of an order not to go in bathing off Little's point, where the marines are encamped.

'B. & O. BILL' AGREES TO CUT FORCE ON B. & O.

Fakers and Employers in United Front

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Baltimore & Ohio railroad officials announce that a five-day furlough has been ordered, closing the Cumberland, Chillicothe and three other shops and affecting 7,000 men in the repair department thruout the system.

P. J. Conlon, vice president of the International Association of Machinists, explained that this move is made after full discussion and agreement with the officials of the I. A. M., as being more satisfactory than the immediate laying off of the excess force now carried on the company's rolls. He states that the company has agreed with William H. Johnston that it will give steady employment to 18,000 shopmen whose names are on the permanent list, but that furloughs or layoffs may be ordered.

UNITED STATES TO JOIN WORLD COURT—CAPPER

Says Dawes Plan Is Hope of Capitalism

BERLIN, Aug. 24.—Prediction that the United States will join the world court next December was made today by Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, who has reached the German capital in the course of his European tour.

After personal observations and conversations with leading statesmen in London, Paris and Berlin, Senator Capper is convinced that Europe recognizes the importance of making war more difficult and peace enduring on the basis of give and take.

"The United States will join the world court the coming December," said Senator Capper. "The opposition has been confined largely to the Borah-Johnson-La Follette group. The majority of the republicans and democrats favor the proposal and it will carry easily unless a filibuster is started.

"The key of the European situation, as I see it, is the Dawes plan. If it works I believe things will come out all right. If it fails, things will go to smash not only in Germany but in England and France as well."

FRENCH LIBERAL SHUTS EYES TO POLISH TERROR

Refuses to View the Prison Cruelties

PARIS, France, Aug. 24.—As is known, the French historian, Prof. Aulard, a member of the French League of the Rights of Man, refused to sign the protest declaration against the white terror in Poland, giving as a reason that he was not informed upon the situation in Poland.

The Polish section of the International Red Aid now reports that a member of the section requested Prof. Aulard during his stay in Warsaw to inspect the Polish prisons.

Aulard refused not only to see the prisons, saying that he had not time, but he also refused to accept written complaints, saying that the only question which interested him in Poland was "the question of religious freedom."

DETROIT LABOR CONDEMNS ACTS OF HUTCHESON

Delegates Score His Local Flunkey

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich.,—Following his use of cossacks against the members of Local 19 of the carpenters' union last Monday night, John Potts appealed to the Detroit Federation of Labor last Wednesday to put the seal of approval on the policy of epulsions, injunctions and the use of state cossacks of his master, Hutcheson, by unseating the delegates of Locals 1191 and 2140 to the Federation.

After one of the sharpest denunciations which has ever been launched against the actions of Internationals in Detroit, when delegate after delegate had voiced an emphatic disapproval of Hutcheson's shameful tactics and after an adverse ruling of President Martel (supported by a letter from the dead hand of Gompers) had been emphatically rebuked and voted down, the body finally voted to refer the matter to the board of directors for investigation and consideration. It was pointed out that this was a move to temporarily defeat the purpose of Potts, as it is accepted that the reactionary Green will be only too glad to assist Czar Hutcheson in his red-baiting campaign.

The Detroit Federation of Labor is on record as being opposed to the slimy methods of union-wrecking used by Potts and his associates, and whatever comfort Hutcheson and Green may glean from exclusion of theses unionists by arbitrary and mechanical action, they are welcome. None dared defend their treason on the floor, and the few who raised their hands in silent and tacit support of injunctions and state troopers in internal labor disputes branded themselves so clearly by their actions that no comment is necessary. The Federation has shown a flare of its old time spirit of militancy. Actions such as those of Potts will fan the flame.

POLISH COMMUNIST CHEERS FOR REVOLT AS SQUAD FIRES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LEMBERG, Poland, Aug. 24.—Comrade Botwin, young Communist who killed the chief agent provocateur Cechnowiski, was executed yesterday. He refused to receive a priest, stating: "Religion is for slaves. I am not a slave."

Leaving jail, he sang the "International," and all the political prisoners in the jail joined him.

Standing before the firing squad, he cried: "Down with the bourgeoisie! Long live the social revolution!" The city on that day was practically a military camp. The president of Poland, Wojciechowski, former socialist, refused a plea to spare Botwin's life.

PAVING CUTTERS OF PHILLY OUT; STRIKE SOLID

Men Walk Out Against Small Fry Contractors

By A WORKER CORRESPONDENT.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—At a well attended meeting of the Philadelphia local of the Pave Stone Cutters Union, held at Machinists hall on Thursday evening, a decision was reached to go out on strike tomorrow morning. The strike is the climax of a long series of disputes that have developed between the workers and the sub-contractors. The hiring of nonunion men by the Municipal Paving Company, the largest company in the city, led the workers to realize that this was the beginning of a movement to smash the union and cut wages.

Little Fish Steal Pay.

From the discussion which took place at the above mentioned meeting the following points were brot out. The large contractors who do the paving for the city deal the work out among a number of smaller sub-contractors, creating a bitter competition among them. These sub-contractors, in order to "make out," are compelled to employ all kinds of schemes in order to get the maximum out of the workers. Besides using intensive methods they have established the practice of getting the workers to sign their names before receiving their pay envelopes, only to find afterward that they were a few dollars short.

Cutters Well Organized.

The pave stone cutters of Philadelphia are well organized and will have little trouble in compelling the contractors to respect their power. The spirit of enthusiasm and class solidarity that prevails among the men gives the assurance that they will emerge victors in this fight for complete unionization and the abolition of these mercenaries of the big paving companies, the sub-contractors.

CUNEO COMPANY HOODWINKED BY SEYMOUR SINGER

New York Gangster Did Not Deliver Goods

The Cuneo and Sears-Roebuck interests are thoroly disgusted with the work of Seymour "Stuss" Singer, the New York gangster who is superintendent of the Cuneo plant, where hundreds of pressmen and feeders are locked out.

"Stuss" gave the Cuneo company a guarantee that they could inaugurate their speeding up open shop plan with success as he had 65 per cent of the feeders behind him and they would only have to import a few scabby pressmen. Singer said that with the aid of President Crambert of Franklin Union No. 4 he could break any resistance that might result inside of one week. The savings to the printers, he said, would be worth a little trouble to Cuneo and the Sears company.

As the situation stands now, the locked out workers are sure to win if they hold out. The union has inside information from some employes who have remained in the Cuneo plant that the shop is thoroly disorganized. Singer failed to deliver the goods and the Cuneo people have already lost more money in damaged goods than they would save on the open shop scabbing scheme of Berry and Singer in several months.

Revive Fight on Berry.

The Cuneo strike is attracting the attention of the pressmen thruout the country. From cities as far apart as St. Louis and New York calls are coming in for the DAILY WORKER issues carrying the story of the Cuneo strike and the expose of George L. Berry. New York pressmen showed so much interest that a special edition of thousands of copies is being turned out for the Gotham pressmen and feeders. This strike promises to revive the movement to oust Berry which was initiated in Chicago in 1919.

SEAMEN'S WALK-OUT SPREADING THRU ENGLAND

LONDON, England, August 24.—The seanmen's strike has created a serious situation in Australia, ten British ships being held up for lack of crews, and all harbor activity being suspended.

Strike leaders predict the walkout in England will be general by Wednesday. Conditions in most of the British Isles were favorable to the strikers today, only a few ports remaining at normal conditions.

"B. & O. Bill" Is Answered

Local 199 of the International Association of Machinists gave a fitting reply to the ukase of scabby "B. and O. Bill" Johnston that all members of the union, who were also members of the Workers (Communist) Party, the Trade Union Educational League or the Young Workers League should sever all connections with those organisations or stand expelled from the Machinists' Union after the date of October 15 next. Local 199 voted unanimously to protest against this ruling.

Johnston will soon find out what the yellow socialist Sigman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is learning, that he cannot drive the Communists out of the unions. The ranks and file who are not blinded by the prejudice know that the Communists are always on the side of the workers fighting the employers. They know that the Communists are not disrupters but that on the contrary, they are constantly instilling the idea of unity on the industrial field into the minds of the workers. It is not the Communists who will be driven out fo the Machinists' Union, but "B. and O. Bill" and his traitorous lackeys who have bartered the interests of the membership and of the workers in the metal trades industry for personal gain and political prestige.

Only a Truce

The settlement of the coal strike by a subsidy to the coal operators did not solve the class struggle in Britain or even postpone it. No sooner was the threat of a coal strike lifted than a shipping strike broke out. The reactionary officials of the seamen's unions signed an agreement with the employers accepting a wage reduction of a pound sterling for the men.

The men refused to accept this offer and a shipping tie-up now threatens England in addition to her other troubles.

Stanley Baldwin declares that all British workers must accept a cut in wages. The Morning Post, die-hard organ of toryism, calls on every loyal son and daughter of the empire to join in defense of the country. It openly appeals to force. The fig leaf of constitutionalism which has so long and so successfully covered the nakedness of British imperialism is torn away.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners, declares that the workers must not be lulled into the sleep of fancied security by their late victory. John Wheatley, calls on 10,000,000 workers to organized defense corps.

The Communist Party of Great Britain declares that there cannot be any peace until capitalism is overthrown, and the rule of labor established on the ruins of the robber system.

Unless all signs fail, Britain is nearing a serious crisis. The workers must be prepared for it.

The Bankers Get Theirs

Whether the United States government ever receives any substantial payments from Belgium out of the debt settlement is an open question. The terms appear to be generous. The following reason for this leniency is given by the Washington correspondent of the Federated Press:

> Belgian payments to the American treasury, in settlement of the $480,000,000 of war and after-war loans and accrued interest, will be only from $2,840,000 to $6,650,000 a year for the first ten years—if the payments are actually made. That generous arrangement pleases the international bankers, who hope meanwhile to collect some of the debt the Belgians owe them for private loans.
> Washington economists are skeptical of the carrying out of the rest of the program, which contemplates payments over a period of 62 years, amounting to $737,830,500 in principal and interest. They are impressed with the likelihood that further reductions in the interest rate are coming, and the possibility of cancellation of much of the principal.

The imperialists of the United States are using the debt question as a club over the heads of their bankrupt European debtors. Despite the professions of common kinship expressed towards England by the ruling class publicists in this country, England is given more severe terms than Belgium and France is only delicately prodded by a golden feather.

Ramsay MacDonald declared that the British labor party was the first party to take any real interest in the empire. MacDonald is a socialist and hates Soviet Russia. Two good reasons why he should love the empire.

The United States ranks with China, Japan and India in the hours which its textile slaves must toil each working day. The Chinese are taking steps to get out of the list. When will the American textile workers wake up?

The total number of tractors sent to Russia from the United States since August 1st, is 9,000. The American business men may not like the Bolsheviks but they have no objection to accepting their gold rubles.

Now that Belgium received favored terms on her debt to the United States, listen to the British lion roar. Those who imagine that the capitalists of the United States and those of Britian have an undying love for each other should watch the diplomatic divorce courts.

Two robbers who tried to rob a policeman were held in bonds totalling $2,200,000. If they tried to steal the Teapot Dome he would probably have given them a vote of thanks. That is, provided they were respectable politicians.

The Illinois Bankers' Association is equipping 7,000 guards to supplement the law enforcing agencies in the state. It will cost the bankers $200,000. This is a nice nucleus for a state police force! How about it Messers Walker and Olander?

While a gang of burglars were going thru a jeweler's safe and getting away with $200,000 worth of loot, states attorney Crowe's police force were guarding his brother-in-law's scab printing plant.

POSTPONE TRIAL OF LANTSUTSKY, DOCUMENTS GONE

Spies and Police Flood Court, Search Audience

WARSAW, Poland.—(By Mail.)—The second trial of the Communist member of the Polish parliament, Stanislav Lantsutsky, was opened before the Warsaw district court on August 5, but the persecution claimed that some of the documents were missing, so court was suspended.

Lantsutsky was brought before the court from the famous czaristic prison, Mokotowo, under heavy police escort. The court building was surrounded by armed police and many detectives placed among the audience. Everyone who entered the hall was searched.

New Trial Awaits Him.

The prosecutor refused to permit Lantsutsky to see his wife, nor was the Communist permitted to have the attorney who defended him in the first trial at Przemysl appear in court.

In this "trial" Polish class justice is preparing to imprison one of the most devoted and faithful fighters for the working class of Poland and the world.

Lantsutsky, together with Krolikowsky, an old revolutionary fighter, were leaders of the Communist fraction in the Sejm (parliament). Krolikowski's seat is already empty and the election of a substitute is being sabotaged by the Sejm. Lantsutsky is kept away from the Sejm by the charges placed against him by the white terrorists. After the "trial" in Warsaw, another is waiting for him in Lodz, Polish Manchester.

Lifelong Service to Workers.

Lantsutsky is at present 43 years old and has been working in the labor movement since he was a boy of 14. He placed all his strength and energy at the service of the socialist organization "Shila." At 16 he became a member of the Polish socialist party and participated in all its work. On account of his political and trade union work he was continuously persecuted by his master as an apprentice in the railway workshop in Cracow.

When 17 years old he made his first public speech at the occasion of a protest against the murder of four workers by Austrian police.

In the railwaymen's movement he was carrying on extensive activity. He was delegate in 1904 to the railwaymen's congress, in 1905 he had already a leading position in the meetings and in the strike committee. On account of his revolutionary activity he had to leave Galicia in the same year and had to go to Maerisch Ostrau where he was soon elected into the central committee of the Railwaymen's Union.

During the war he remained true to his revolutionary convictions. In 1919 he returned to Galicia where he worked in various newspapers against the war, work which was connected with great dangers on account of the severe legislation. After having led in 1919 an engineers' strike, he had to live illegally to avoid arrest.

Arrested For Revolutionary Work.

After the November revolution in 1918 and the establishment of the Polish republic, he became a member of the municipal council in Jaroslav and in 1921 he was elected a member of parliament. As M. P. he left the treacherous socialist party and joined the Communist Party of Poland. In parliament he carried on an extensive revolutionary activity and worked particularly among the railway workers and the voters of his district, as the members of parliament were the only ones who had the right of calling meetings.

On account of this revolutionary activity he was accused. The first trial against him took place on account of a speech which he had made in November 1923 in a railway workers' meeting in Przemysl immediately after the events in Cracow—the victorious revolt of the Cracow workers against police and troops which was afterwards suppressed thru the treason of the social democrats.

In this meeting he spoke about the experience of the struggle in Cracow and the spies tried to construct from his words a crime of high treason, an attempt which deplorably failed before the court. At present Comrade Lantsutsky is accused of two speeches which he had made as member of parliament in mass meetings in Warsaw and Pabianice and on account of an article in the election paper of the legal alliance of the workers in town and country.

TRIBUTE TO ONE OF OUR LOYAL SOLDIERS IN THE CLASS WAR

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

Comrade A. J. Stein passed out of this life at the Denver Jewish Consumptive Relief Hospital this month, a victim of that terrible enemy of our class, the "white plague." When I last visited him only six weeks ago, he smiled bravely and said: "Mother, my fight of 12 years against this disease is almost over, but I am leaving you to wage a harder battle against the common enemy—capitalism." I told him how we would miss his work at the sanatarium, and what an inspiration he had been to us all with his tremendous courage, and cheerful persistence against all odds, selling the party literature, getting more contributions to every urgent need of the party than all the outside healthy comrades.

Many a time during my residence in Denver I would snatch an hour out of busy days to sit by his bed to discuss our problems. Always he would take clippings from our Communist press from under his pillow and talk over every great world event affecting us. Guiding always the younger comrades flocking to the sanatarium from our large industrial centers, many of them going out again to take up the battle, Comrade Stein would see to it that every one of them should understand the class war, the cause of it, and the only ultimate positive remedy—the bringing in of the workers' and framers' government. His face was fairly illuminated with hope as I left him, assuring him that because of the Russia he loved we all felt sure of victory for our class. Even in America, and because of his faith and courage many of us would work harder than ever before. So we will, Comrade Stein. Friends, comrades and soldiers, bring our ranks closer together, not only in Denver but all along the line. His "memorial" will not be of stone, but a living flame burning in the hearts of every man and women who knew him and the torch he carried, we shall pass on.

Defies His Accusers.

In his trial as well as at the occasion of the abolition of his immunity Lantsutsky has proved a high degree of courage. Altho he knew that he would certainly fall into the hands of the spies after the abolition of his immunity, he appeared in parliament. He finished his speech in which he protested against abolition of immunity, with the following words:

"Therefore I declare with the same power and determination: Communism will defeat you (noise, the words cannot be understood). Long live Communism!"

To his judges he said: "I have never denied that I am a Communist."

After his arrest spies tried to slander him and declared that he led an extravagant life, that he had a luxurious flat—carpets, gold and silver. When the jury visited his flat they found three very small rooms, a very simple equipment—bought 13 years ago for 100 Austrian kronen, in the sleeping room two old beds with sacks of straw in them and neither carpets nor jewels.

The only "precious" thing was a couch covered with peasant linen. The revolutionary Lantsutsky has remained a devoted fighter. It must be the task of the workers of all countries to free this champion of the Polish working class from the claws of class justice.

MOSCOW, August 7—(By Mail)—On August 5 the process against the Communist Botwin commenced in Lemberg. Botwin had shot dead the police spy Chechnovsky. The accused conducted himself courageously before the field court. He declared that he had killed Chechovsky because the latter was a repulsive provocateur. The accused declared himself to be a convinced Communist.

On the 6th of August after the announcement of the death sentence, Botwin was executed by shooting.

Red Aid Protests.

According to a communication from the E. C. of the International Red Aid, the Persidium of the International legal bureau sent the following telegram of protest against the execution of Botwin to the Lemberg field court:

"The handing over of Botwin to a field court in time of peace for the killing of a police spy who cannot be considered as an official of the state, is completely illegal. It means that the Polish government has raised provocation to a legal system in the struggle against the movement of the working class and the peasantry."

WEALTHY RANCHERS IN FLIGHT AS MEXICAN FARMERS ARE AROUSED BY MURDER OF SEVEN COMRADES

MEXICO CITY, August 24.—Incensed at the slaying of seven of their membership, agrarians today were besieging the village of El Crucero where the agrarians were slain by the Lagunes brothers, wealthy ranchers, who have fled to the hills.

In retaliation the agrarians have seized all the cattle from the Lagunes ranch.

TWO COMMUNIST SOLDIERS STUDY FOR THE CAUSE

Prepare for Further Service to Workers

By PAUL CROUCH and WALTER TRUMBULL.

HONOLULU (By Mail).—We are leaving for Alcatraz, Calif., on the U. S. A. T. Cambral, sailing August 8th (Saturday). It is reported that we can write only one letter per week (tho that report may not be true), while in Alcatraz. In that case, we can write but few letters to our comrades.

We hope that they will understand our condition and will continue to write to us, as letters from Communist comrades are very encouraging. We can receive all letters. As to other literature, it is probable that we will be permitted to receive it. As for the New York Times, there will be no objection to our receiving it. Of course, we will have to read between the lines to understand the real facts.

We regret that too much of our lives have been wasted and that we did not fight always for the working class as we should have done. But we hope that in the future, we may be able to make up for the past. With that purpose in mind, we will study and prepare ourselves while in Alcatraz, for more efficient service to the proletarian cause.

Who knows? Perhaps even our friends may be surprised at our work for the cause resulting from our preparations and plans for future work against imperialism.

Dear comrades, this may be the last letter we will be permitted to write to you for some time, and, until we are released we will be able to write nothing not approved by authorities.

But as long as we live we will keep up the fight and we will always be true to the cause. Our bodies, only, can be imprisoned by the brutal agents of capitalism. Our best wishes and hopes are with you in your fight for Communism.

We will be happy as long as the comrades keep up the fight, but we are sorry we are unable to take an active part. Our devotion to the cause of the workers cannot be killed by persecution.

Please extend our thanks to the comrades for their efforts in our behalf and assure them that we will continue to stand firm for our glorious cause.

ANTHRACITE HAS 156,000 MINERS BUT FEW OWNERS

Railroads Own Most of Companies

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 24.—If John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, calls for a suspension of mining in the hard coal fields of northeastern Pennsylvania when the present wage contract expires on Aug. 31, his order will effect a host of men. State estimates for 1924 placed the number of employes at 152,503, the largest since 1915.

The union, itself, for convenience, uses an approxiate figure of 156,000 today and of these about 10,000 maintenance men probably would be left in the mines by mutual agreement with the operators. This skeleton force of pumpmen, timbermen and engineers would patrol the underground workings to prevent flooding and cave-ins. Paralysis would descend upon 828 mines operated by 135 coal companies.

Railroads Biggest Mine Owners.

The brunt of the tie-up would be borne by three of the counties and less than a dozen companies. Luzurne, Lackawanna and Schkuylkill counties produced three-quarters of the entire anthracite output in 1924, figures show, and employed four-fifths of the men. The handful of corporations, a group formerly owned in the main by railroads, produced the "company coal," comprising some 60 per cent of the entire tonnage. The remainder is mined by "independents" and some of these are fake independents.

Tonnage Produced.

In the fields as a whole the production last year was given by the state as 77,926,249 gross tons—that is, figured on the basis of at least 2,240 pounds to the ton. This figure was below that of all recent years except 1922, when the men were idle five months and eleven days.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Aug. 24.—A citizen of Davenport, who is over 90 years of age, has just recently placed an order with a sheet metal placed to build him a steel coffin large enuf to enclose the bodies of himself and his wife, with whom he has been living for 60 years, so he stated.

A hotel proprietor and his wife lavish their affections on two scrubby alley cats. Percisely at 2 o'clock, noon and 6 p. m., they call these cats to their meals, and at 10:30 or 11:00 p. m. they call them in to bed. Everyone within a block is aroused as they make the welkin ring and frequently they start out on a search, with a flashlight, calling their names. I am told that the cats have their places at table for meals and that the family will not start eating until the cats are at their places. Also my informant tells me that they have each a little bed with a silk quilt and a silk pillow. Meanwhile little children in our cities subsist upon tidbits from garbage cans and sleep in an old box on a pile of excelsior or rags.

CONVENTION OF JEWELRY UNION GHOST SEPT. 5

Fakers Blocked It Two Years

By CHARLES SCHWARTZ.

(Secretary, Boston Jewelry Workers' Protective Association, formerly Local No. 3, I. J. W. U.)

The convention of the I. J. W U. has been called to be held on Saturday, Sept 5, 1925, at 10 a. m., at Jefferson hall, Fraternity building, Chicago. After two years of delay and sabotage on the part of A. Greenstein, general secretary-treasurer of I. J. W. U., and his successor, J. Eisenberg of Chicago, the convention was scheduled to be held in July, 1923, at Toronto, Canada.

But Mr. A. Greenstein, fearing the wrath of the locals who were ready to rip the sheepskin off the wolf hidden beneath it, willed otherwise, and there was no convention!

Falsehood to Save Job.

"There are no funds," said Mr. Greenstein. "But we'll show how to raise funds," said the membership. "No; it's against the constitution," whined Greenstein. The constitution provides that a special part of the per capita be set aside for the convention fund.

The patience of the membership exhausted, the slogan went up: "Starve the faker." And starve he did. Local after local, following the lead of the district council No. 1 that embraced more than half of the membership, refused to pay per capita unless the convention was called.

A Funeral—Unless . . .

Greenstein, accomplishing his purpose of ruining what he could not rule, fled and left his crumbling throne to a loyal clown. Now, with most of the locals gone, with the most important jewelry center disorganized and demoralized, the wise men of the remnants of the International are getting together to arrange for the funeral—unless the advice of the militants is heeded.

Will the I. J. W. U. respond to the call of the jewelry workers for unity? The future will show. If not, a Jewelry Workers Union will grow up on the ruins of the defunct I. J. W. U.

Gentlemen of the I. J. W. U., awake!

FARMERS' WHEAT "PROFIT" WILL NOT PAY TAXES

By ALFRED KNUTSON.

FARGO, N. D., Aug. 24.—The state agricultural college here has determined by scientific investigation that it cost the North Dakota farmer this year $1.12 to raise a bushel of wheat. From this it is interesting to figure out what the approximate earnings of the wheat farmer are.

The average primary market price for wheat this fall is not likely to exceed $1.45 per bushel, so that the farmer in North Dakota will earn profits of 33 cents per bushel. The average yield per acre for the state will not go above 12 bushels. On a wheat crop of 100 acres, therefore, the net earnings are $396; on 200 acres $792. The average farmer in the state will scarcely earn net profits of $500 on his wheat. It should be observed that in North Dakota wheat is the principal crop, and many farmers depend entirely on this crop for their income.

According to the estimate made by the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C., the wheat crop in North Dakota for 1925 will yield 102,134,000 bushels, and at 33 cents per bushel the net earnings to the farmers of the state will be $33,704,220. This amount is not sufficient to pay the back taxes and the back interest that the farmers owe, and from this fact we may get some idea of what the farmers here are up against.

LYLE USES LYNCH LAW IN COURT

Kicks Stenographer and Lawyer Out

"Take that man to the back of the room and sit him down; Mr. Bailiff." That was the order Judge John Lyle shouted at his bailiff Friday afternoon when he was hearing the cases against Ike and Isadore Sandler, both officers of an organization of shoe shop owners and both in court on charges of attempting to intimidate other shoe shop owners into joining their organization.

"That man" happened to be Joseph Ricker, the attorney for the men who were being tried.

So the two Sandlers stood before Judge Lyle and were subject to the latest form of capitalist lynch law minus their right to be represented by counsel.

Justifies Act.

Judge Lyle justified his refusal to permit Sandler and his son to have a lawyer on the ground that his questions and the testimony of the witnesses was merely a "preliminary hearing." When he had finished the preliminary hearing and had signed warrants which charged "conspiracy to boycott" he recalled Ricker and told him that he "might" represent the Sandlers.

But it was not three minutes before Lyle gave another sample of his lynch law. He ordered the stenographer of the defendant to leave the court room. It was only thru the use of the stenographer who would take down the prejudiced remarks of the judge that Sandler hoped to get his case before a higher court and try to get "justice" there.

Violates Other Rights.

So the judge cut off that means of defense for the men on trial. After Judge Lyle had ordered the stenographer out of the room and had insisted on questioning the defendant in violation of another of his constitutional rights, he bound Sandler Sr. over to the grand jury on $50,000 bail and Sandler, Jr., over on $5,000 bail. "I'll get rid of this Sandler tribe, and I want you to understand it," he told Ricker.

Fearing that Ricker might get a writ of habeas cropus reducing the bail of the Sandlers, Lyle invoked his own brand of lynch law again and impounded the records of the cases against them. He was not content yet so he offered a few insulth to Ricker and called it a case.

Press There.

His brave words and magnificent gestures were not wasted. Behind him was arrayed many of the star reporters of the Chicago press eagerly taking down the words of wisdom that fell from his lips.

AS WE S[illegible]

By T. J. O'FLA[illegible]

AN amazing discovery [illegible] credit to Tic Toc, [illegible] French detective, was en[illegible] the columns of the Chicag[illegible] last Saturday. Under seve[illegible] olumn heads the story was told of a leep seated conspiracy, with headquarters on the South Side of Chicago, which had no other aim than to overthrow the capitalist system, to establish a Soviet Republic in the United States and to emancipate the Negroes from wage slavery as well as from the race persecution and discrimination to which they are now subjected.

THE sleuth who snuffled this piece of intelligence out of the revolution- y labyrinths was a colored fink by e name of Brusseaux, who runs a onfidence game under the comic seudonym of the Keystone Detective gency. Whether Brusseaux is trying to outdo the Keystone Comedies or not may not be learned until the great dick begins to write his autobiography or perhaps until somebody else writes his obituary. It can be said, however, that Mr. Brusseaux is one of the country's greatest snuffle hounds and can smell a Pullman blanket farther than a prohibition agent can smell a bottle of synthetic gin.

BRUSSEAUX'S finkery is somewhere on the South side of the city. When he is not holding up women of easy virtue for part of the wages of their misfortune, he is employed ransacking the kitchens of Pullman porters for forks, spoons, and other articles that employes of the Pullman company may confiscate in lieu of wages. Colored workers from the South side say even worse than that of Brusseaux. Unfortunately the postal laws prohibit a certain kind of language from going thru the mails and the record of Brusseaux can only be told by the use of the prohibited language. Our readers will have no difficulty in believing anythng about a detectve except something good.

THERE is going to be a Negro Labor Congress in Chicago next October. How this news trickled out remained a mystery for several half seconds until it suddenly dawned on the [illegible] that Negro labor organisers, the progressive kind, were spending considerable sums of money advertising the fact. In fact they have a paper known as the Negro Champion, which comes out twice a month and tells the world that the Negroes are out to organize and to fight for their rights regardless of the opposition placed in their way by the capitalists and their white and colored stoolpigeons.

TWO columns of space in Hearst's rag told of the conspiracy to radicalize the Negro workers and make them acquainted with the progress being made in the Soviet Union. A picture of a colored comrade seated among a number of red soldiers was featured as evidence that the American Negro Labor Congress is a conspiracy hatched in Moscow. It proves one thing to the Negroes, and that is, that in Soviet Russia the Negro is not looked down upon because of his color but is given a place of honor.

THE Negro workers who are engaged in the task of helping to emancipate their people from racial discrimination and wage slavery should be grateful to Hearst's filthy rag for the advertising, tho the publicity was not intended as a favor. If stoolpigeon Brusseaux got paid for his rubbish, he was putting something over on the Hearst sheet. Anybody who wants to learn all there is to be learned about the Negro Labor Congress can do so by subscribing to the Negro Champion.

THAT the position of Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union is extremely delicate is proven by a long wail which he sends forth in a recent issue of Justice, the official organ of the union. Sigman declares that he has no intention of expelling anybody because of his or her opinions but Communsts are traitors and spies and so on ad nauseum. "I am a socialist in the wider meaning of the word" declares Sigman. Just like Ramsay MacDonald, his conception of socialism is so wide that he walks right thru it into captalism.

THE reason why Sigman uses up a whloe front page of his sheet in an appeal to the members of the international not to join the Joint Council of Action is not far to seek. The great majority of the membership have repudiated him. At first he publicly ignored the opposition. Now he pays it the highest compliment by issuing a frenzied tirade against it. Sigman is a living example of what will happen to others of his tribe when the workers whom they have betrayed wake up.

TWENTY-FIVE SHOPS SETTLE WITH JOINT ACTION COMMITTEE, SIGMAN ASKS BOSSES TO FIRE MILITANTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, August 25.—Several additional dress and cloak shops discharged workers this morning as a result of last Thursday's stoppage called by the Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22, and nine more shops reinstated the workers they had locked out last Friday. Altogether, about 50 shops have been affected by the stoppage and settlements have been made by the Joint Committee of Action in half of these. There are still 25 shops on strike.

The discharges today, according to Louis Hyman, chairman of the Joint Committee of Action, were made with the direct authorization of the Joint Board. In many of the shops now on strike, the employer is perfectly willing to take back his workers but the Joint Board threatens to take away the cutters if the operators and finishers are returned to their jobs.

Sigman Would Disrupt Union.

In the case of certain contracting shops, where the whole shop refuses to answer the call of the Joint Board to attend a shop meeting, the Joint Board is reporting to the jobber that this is not a union shop any longer and if he deals with it he is violating his agreement with the union.

"Such are the tactics President Sigman uses after he has announced to the world that he will ask the employers not to penalize workers for last week's stoppage," says Louis Hyman. "The employers want the workers to work; the Joint Committee of Action wants the workers allowed to work—all workers regardless of whether they side with the Joint Committee in this fight, or not. But the Joint Board is striving to take jobs away from everyone who will not give them support and pay them dues. They will use every sort of terrorism to gain their ends. But instead of gaining what they want they only make enemies for themselves both inside the union and out.

Most of the employers are willing to live up to their agreement with the union. It is only the Joint Board officials' same old policy of looking out for themselves first and the workers last, that is creating the present difficulties in the industry.

"Most of these difficulties we expect to have straightened out very soon. As to the troubles within the union, their settlement depends entirely on when the union officials are ready to comply with our demands."

Pressers Meet.

The Group of Progressive Pressers of Local 35 have called a general membership meeting for Thursday, August 27, in Webster Hall right after work.

At the last regular membership meeting of Local 35 this progressive group rolled up a large vote against the Joint Board resolution and voiced very strongly the sympathy of a large portion of the members with the Joint Committee of Action.

Thursday's meeting will discuss plans for further co-operation with Locals, [illegible] 9 and 22 in their fight against the corrupt officials of the union

SCHEME TO GET U. S. INTO TALK ON WAR DEBTS

Finds Favor at London Anglo-French Meeting

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The question whether the United States cannot be brought into the Anglo-French war debt conversations to the end that a tri-partite agreement might be made for the liquidation of allied liabilities has entered without delay into the discussions which are being continued today between Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, and M. Caillaux, French finance minister.

The questions of how the United States may be brought into the parleys is being broached so cautiously that probably soon after this is in type, there will be the usual diplomatic denials.

Nevertheless it is understood today that M. Caillaux and Churchill entered immediately yesterday into lengthy discussion of the feasibility of asking the United States to come into the parleys.

Ask U. S. to Come In.

While no decision was reached as to whether the United States shall be invited immediately to join the parleys it was said that the French minister and the English chancellor were of one mind that American participation would expedite a settlement, first of the question of France's debt to England and secondly, a general adjustment of the whole problem of international war debts.

Conference Marking Time.

Little progress is being made in the parleys. Both parties to the conversations seem to be marking time. It seems to be marking time. It seems to be already determined that a final settlement of the French debt to England cannot be made in advance of the French settlement with the United States to be undertaken in Washington next month. The French adhesion

HAIL 35 CLOTH STRIKERS INTO POLICE COURT

Amalgamated to Show Pickets Not "Violent"

Thirty-five members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, part of the 800 striking employes of the J. L. Taylor-International Tailoring Company, will appear in the municipal court at city hall this morning to answer to charges of violating the Cuthbertson "peaceful picketing" law.

These strikers were taken off the picket line at 847 West Jackson boulevard during the last few weeks, and thrown into jail by the police on the complaint of the tailoring company.

This is the first time a case has come before the courts where an employer charges strikers with violation of the law which allows picketing. In order to prevent the strikers from warning away strikebreakers, the company has made numerous charges of "assault" and "disorderly conduct," aimed to establish that the picketing is "violent."

Attorney Ryan, for the Amalgamated, will show that the picketing is lawful and that no violence was indulged in except by the police. The case will be heard in room 1106, city hall, before a jury.

LEWIS TRYING TO STAVE OFF STRUGGLE WITH THE OPERATORS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., August 25.—With but five days remaining before the expiration of the present anthracite coal agreement, secret meetings between miners and coal operators were reported here today in an effort to stave off the expected strike on September 1.

These informal conferences have attained no more success than the official negotiatons broken off three weeks ago at Atlantic City.

The ten per cent wage increase and the "check off" continue to be the center of heated discussion, with both sides refusing to retreat an inch on their stand.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, is continuing his conference with members of the miners' representatives. He declined to divulge the nature of these meetings.

Convention Hears Report on Daily Worker

The following is a report on the DAILY WORKER made by Comrade William F. Dunne, editor, at the Workers Party convention:

The nineteen months of experience we have had with our daily organ has enabled us to collect innumerable practical instances from which to judge the way to build and stimulate our press into what Comrade Lenin said it should be, the collective organizer of the party and of the masses.

These experiences have been of many kinds and in almost every field of mass activity, ranging from our national election campaign, thru campaigns against the trade union bureaucracy, to that of spokesman of thousands of workers engaged in the struggle with the bosses, dealing with the smallest item of shop and job news and daily experiences of the working class. Now what do these experiences show?

First, that our press, particularly our daily paper, the DAILY WORKER, is very far from being a mass press. Second, that our party as a whole and a majority of the comrades, I think, do not as yet realize the important function of the Communist press and do not as yet understand the mighty weapon that the Communist press is in every field of party activity.

Now, why is our press not a mass press? Well, the answer of course is easy if one wants to be formal. We can say that it is because our party is not a mass party. But this is an evasion of the real issue and it is only by a clear and merciless criticism of our press, an appraisal of its weaknesses and shortcomings as well as substantial appreciation of its strong points and its services to the labor and revolutionary movement that we can arrive at the correct answer to this question. The party organs have not as yet accustomed themselves to using the DAILY WORKER as their principal weapon in every struggle. The party as a whole and individual comrades, have not as yet realized that it is jost as much the duty of Communists to write for their press as it is for them to read it.

There are innumerable instances of both of these weaknesses I have mentioned. Let me cite a few, and I hope that the comrades when I pick out

BERRY BOUGHT A FARM WITH UNION FUNDS

Worships "Gobbo" the God of Good Luck

This is the eleventh of a series of articles exposing the crooked career of George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union.

Article XI.

Besides being an industrial magnate "Majah" George L. Berry can also lay claim to being a farmer. Berry "borrowed" $12,000 from the International treasury. According to the auditor's report made in 1919 Berry still owed that money to the Union. Later on the indebtedness was assumed by the Clinchfield Hydro-Electric Company, another one of Berry's handy institutions, which was alleged to be owned by the international union. This was a case of "robbing Peter to pay Paul."

Berry's farm is five hundred acres in area and much of the labor done on the farm is supplied by the union and most of the supplies and materials used are purchased with union funds. Berry was in the habit of stabling his live stock in the barn and feeding it at the expense of the nIternational Union, and for this there has never been any compensation.

Capitalist Minded Leaders.

When Communists say that the labor fakers have a vested interest in the capitalist system, they are not merely using a figure of speech. There is no doubt about it. The workers would be just as well served by the leadership of Henry Ford, Charlie Schwab, Judge Gary or John D. Rockerfeller jr. as they are by William Green, John L. Lewis, James Lynch or George L. Berry. The latter are just as capitalistically minded as the former, but they are not as wealthy. They believe in perpetuating the capitalist system, because under this social order they can get along very well, without rendering any useful service to society but living at the expense of the workers.

"Majah" Berry, was also a printer. He owned the Knoxville Printing Company. It is true his "Good Man Friday" Joseph Orr was also one of the incorporators. In 1910 the printing company was owned by the International Union. The Board of Directors, for reasons which they failed to divulge to the membership decided to discontinue the business. This was a golden opportunity for Messers Berry and Orr. It is said that opportunity knocks at least once on everybody's door. Berry is not hard of hearing. Not only does he hear the knock but he supplies the knocker. Messers Berry and Orr actually comprised the so-called Board of Directors which is in session whenever Berry happens to be

RESOLUTION ON POLISH TERROR ADOPTED BY W. P.

Appeal Which Poland Cynically Denied

The following resolution on the Polish white terror was presented by B. K. Gebert, fraternal delegate from Polish section, W. P. of A., to the fourth national convention, Workers (Communist) Party, Aug. 21-25, 1925:

"Whereas, Three Polish workers, Gibner, Kniewski, and Rutkovski, have been sentenced to death for defending themselves from a murderous attack by the police; and

"Whereas, The death sentences given these brave workers mark the opening of a new offensive against the Polish working class even more brutal than that which filled the jails with workers and in which Lantsutsky, champion of the Polish workers, was saved from the gallows only by the united efforts of the labor and revolutionary movements of all countries; and

"Whereas, The Polish government, in its ceaseless warfare on Soviet Russia and the Polish workers and peasants, is acting as the tool of French and American imperialism; therefore be it

"Resolved, That this national convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America declares its revolutionary solidarity with the condemned comrades and the Polish working class, calls upon the American workers to protest against these atrocities and to unite with the workers of the world to save the lives of these victims of capitalist class justice; and be it further

"Resolved, That a telegram of protest be sent the American government, the Polish president and ambassador, and the Communist fraction in the Polish diet.

"Freedom for Gibner, Kniewski and Rutkovski!

"Freedom for the Polish workers and peasants!

"Down with the Polish terror government!

"Long live the international solidarity of the working class under the banner of the Communist International!"

COMMUNIST CONVENTION HEARS REPORT ON THE PARTY PRESS; BIG DEMONSTRATION FOR UNITY

The demonstration which marked the opening of Monday's session of the Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party over the determination of unity in the party against all possibility of a split, as told in yesterday's DAILY WORKER, was followed by the reading of communications.

A telegram was read from an assembly of Communists at a picnic in Cleveland, Ohio, urging unity of the party and asserting the purpose of those sending the message to work for unity within, to carry on objective work outside the party.

Appeals were read from Comrades Candella and Presi concerning disciplinary measures taken against them, also from the South Slavic Bureau against the seating of Comrade Fisher as fraternal delegate. All were referred to the appeals committee.

Comunications were read from the Mothers' League of Massachusetts and the United Workers' Co-Operative Association of Beacon, N. Y. A communication from Comrade Fisierman contesting the seating of Comrade Lowrie was referred to the credential committee.

Honor Polish Victims.

The convention was notified by the chair that the three comrades, Knievski, Rutkovski and Gibner, members of the Communist Party of Poland, whose death sentence by drumhead court martial the convention had protested at its first session, had been executed by the Polish white guard government.

By unanimous agreement the convention assembly arose and stood silent as a mark of grief for the death of these comrades and of honor to their memory.

Organization of Convention Rules.

The convention then began consideration of the rules and the order of the subjects upon the agenda. Comrades Lovestone, Cannon, Statchel, Bittelman, Ballam, Weinstone, Manley, Minor, Bimbo, Kruse taking the floor to propose or argue changes in the agenda or the composition of committees.

The proposals of Comrade Ballam upon the time allotted for reporters upon subjects of the agenda and to elect two secretaries, one for the minority and one for the majority, for the convention were defeated 40 to 21.

Officers and Committees.

As permanent officers of the convention the following were nominated and those receiving the higher vote elected: For chairman, Foster, 40, Gitlow, 21; for vice-chairman, Weinstone, elected without opposition; for secretary, Baker, 40 votes; Benjamin, 21; for assistant secretary, Grecht, 40 votes, Benjamin, 21.

The committee on reorganization and constitution, consisting of 13 members, was finally composed as follows: 8 majority, 5 minority as follows: Proposed by majority, Cannon, Abern, Hathaway, Bell, Burman, Lowrie, Karath and Sjoman; proposed by minority, Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Ballam, Jakira and Zeims.

The resolutions committee was elected with five from the majority and three from the minority as follows: Dunne, Johnstone, Owens, Sullivan and Levine; minority, Weinstone, Bedacht and Minor.

Askeli Speaks.

Comrade Askeli being present, he was given the floor by rule of the motion deferring his speech from the previous day. He explained briefly that he had not been "hiding" the day previous, but was working at his editorial tasks at his hotel for the Tyomies. In regard to his article, which had been subjected to the severest criticism, he alone was responsible. He contended that altho there may have been errors in the style and working of his article, the theoretical line was thoroly Communist. In answer to a question upon his position in regard to the resolution of the

CHINESE BOYCOTT OF BRITISH PORT IS CAUSING WORRY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON—Dispatches from Hong Kong state that the English population of that British controlled port are becoming very much concerned over the Chinese boycott of the concession. British business interests held a mass-meeting and demanded of their government an ultimatum to China threatening a British navel blockade of Canton unless the boycott is lifted. British business is at a standstill in Hong Kong.

TRY TO BLUFF MINERS; TALK 'SUBSTITUTES'

John Hays Hammond in Grand Stand for Bosses

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 25.—"I have no fear of an anthracite strike," said John Hays Hammond, former chairman of the United States Coal Commission. "Two years ago I told John L. Lewis, president of the United [illegible] [illegible] defy him to call [illegible] him: "Mr. Lewis, you are an intelligent man. You can call a strike, but if you win you will lose, because you will find there will be no anthracite market left."

John Hays Hammond is in New England working for the gas and coke companies, who are taking advantage of the present coal situation to propagandize for anthracite substitutes. "If Lewis calls a strike," Hammond said, "I don't think the miners would stay out; they would go into the nonunion mines to find work."

At the same time that Hammond made the above statement for public consumption, the word from Philadelphia was that the miners and operators are more estranged than ever. Last-minute efforts are being made by the business interests in the anthracite field to effect a setlement and Lewis has obliged the conciliators to the extent of going to a conference called to find means of stopping the strike. But the men in the anthracite fields are firm and have no intention of backing down. Lewis is in constant telephone communication with the coal fields and there is no indication that he will so far defy the rank and file sentiment among the miners as to accede an inch of the demands.

The capitalization of the substitute bluff by Hammond and the coke companies will have no effect on the anthracite miners, who know very well that anthracite is an industrial necessity. Nevertheless, Coolidge at Swampscott has given his support to the propaganda by stating he hoped the use of substitutes and the refusal of consumers to pay high prices would in any case make the strike of short duration. The president seems to be at the end of his rope and is looking forward to a strike resignedly.

HEAD OF NEW YORK FEDERATION OF LABOR FORCED TO ADMIT DAWES PLAN RECRUITS U. S. JOBLESS ARMY

SYRACUSE, N. Y., August 25.—The Dawes plan is responsible for the wave of unemployment in this country, James P. Holland, president of the federation, was forced to confess at the opening of the convention of the State Federation of Labor here today, in a report which also reiterated demand for passage of a child labor law.

Holland charged Germany is paying her reparations in goods which are being dumped on the American markets with large profits to international financiers and a resulting decrease activity in American manufacturing establishments.

On the child labor amendment, he said:

"Need for such a national law grows with every day that delays its enactment, and New York state should not be denied its proper place as a ratifying state by the machinations of disloyal partisans hooked up with profit-taking debauchers of child labor. Children of tender ages are being dwarfed and deformed by long work days and dangerous employment, and deprived of education in a number of backward states, where the whip of greed is the ceptre of authority."

DELEGATES IN RUSSIA TAKE PART IN RITE

Workers' Delegations Impressed by Soviets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 25.—Today the German workers' delegation visited sanatoria and workers' rest homes in the neighborhood of Baku. The delegation then visited the peoples' commissariat of Aserbaidjan and had a discussion upon the general situation. After a session of the Trade Union Council of Aserbaidjan in which the question of the trade union movement was discussed, the German delegation laid a wreath upon the grave of the 26 murdered Baku commissars.

Declare Solidarity.

The delegation addressed a declaration to the workers of Aserbaidjan, in which they stressed particularly the successes which have been achieved. "The German workers strive to reach the situation in which the Russian workers are today. The soviet government is the only possible government in the Soviet Union. You acted correctly when you drove out your own and the foreign capitalists."

Max Brose presented the greetings of the workers of Berlin-Brandenburg and declared that the workers of Germany would follow the example of the workers in the Soviet Union.

Chinese Impressed.

The delegation of the Kuomintang party which is in Moscow under the chairmanship of Tzionau, has visited factories, shops, workers' clubs, kindergartens and rest homes. The delegation was interested chiefly in production, the intensity of labor and the situation of the workers. The leader of the delegation, Tzionau, declared: "We are convincing ourselves that in the Soviet Union the whole people take a part in the government.

"We attempt in China to mobilize the whole people around the Kuomintang party in the struggle against the national oppression and against the foreign imperialists. We hope that the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union will render us assistance."

FIVE COLORED SOLDIERS KILLED AT CAMP GRANT

Negroes Suffered Agony with Fortitude

Six men were killed and twenty seriously injured in the explosion of a Howitzer gun today at Camp Grant during the practice of the Howitzer company of the eighth regiment, colored.

Captain O. A. Browning, former commander of a machine gun company overseas during the world war was one of those killed.

All of the injured were taken to the camp hospital for treatment, and then transferred to the Swedish-American hospital in Rockford.

The colored troopers, despite their terrible wounds, several of them having shoulders and legs torn, acted like stoics.

Chicago Printers Win.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Chicago eliminated St. Louis today in the Union Printers' International League baseball championship. The score was 9 to 3. Hucher, of Chicago, was the star, getting four hits out of five times up. Urie pitched well for the winners.

PUMPING AIR INTO CRUMPLED PARTY'S BLADDER

Socialists Get No Dough; No Members

(By L. P. R. Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Dr. Harry W. Laidler of New York City, secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy and the author of several books and pamphlets on industrial matters, is also said to be "one of the best informed men in the country on affairs dealing with the world of labor." This "well-known author and lecturer" spoke (under the auspices of the S. P.) on "the meaning of modern socialism" at Symphony Hall, this city, a few days ago. This "great attaraction" for those who earn their bread (without butter) by the sweat of their brow caused 90 people to come, see and—conquer, no—listen.

Debs Not the Drawing Card.

"A socialist sentiment," not Debs, was the drawing card at the Hollywood Bowl meeting on July 26th, said the chairman. And, in order to prove it, he wanted to know how many members of the S. P. were present; 17 hands went up. Two appeals were made for S. P. recruits—but nobody had enuf "socialist sentiment" to respond to the call for members.

Closed Pocket-Books.

The expenses of the meeting were $40,00, and the collection $10.80. How much sentiment there was in the collection box, besides those nickels and dimes, the writer is unable to say. But if the applause—or, rather, the lack of it—can be used as a yardstick for measurement in this connection, this small gift seems to mean so much—or, rather, little—cold cash—without any real socialist understanding, or revolutionary "sentiment," attached to it.

Russian Literature.

The only workers' government in the world, Soviet Russia, was handled with silk gloves by the speaker. Answering a question of an anarchist, Mr. Laidler thot, however, that it was "too much coercion" over there. These words caused some applause, of course, but about the only clapping of hands in evidence during this "reorganisation" of a party—which everybody refused to join.

As to the sale of literature, the DAILY WORKER held up its end—and then some.

Fire Hits Mahomet's Tomb.

JERUSALEM, Aug. 25.—The famous mosque of Medina, containing Mahomet's tomb, has been damaged by fire of Wahabi tribesmen who are besieging the holy city. Several other mosques were reported destroyed or damaged by the bombardment of the tribesmen. The guerrilla warfare of the rebel tribe is becoming dangerous to foreign concessionaires.

Hard Floor Workers Strike; Amalgamation Proposed in Angel City

L. P. RINDAL, Worker Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 25.—It is not easy to get information, but some men of Hardwood Floorworkers' Union, Local No. 2094, are on strike. Demands, $10 a day and car fare; no piece work to be allowed in any shop. The strike assessment is 50 cents a day for those who work. The following are on the unfair list: Hammond, American, John Johnson, Acme, A. B. Rice, National, Bemis & Cowen, Woodhead, and Patten & Davies.

Amalgamation.

News came that the two Building Trades Councils of Sacramento, Cal., have agreed to amalgamate. This will take effect on September 10. Organizer Dale is now in this city, and the same step may be taken here. Anyhow, "Brother" Dale is "not a press agent," he says, "I am an organizer." The general belief is that he has received orders from headquarters in Washington to make certain investigations in Los Angeles.

Raise Initiation Fee.

The District Council of Carpenters has raised its initiation fee from $10 to $25.

Local 158 has acted favorably on it already. Local 563, Glendale, seems to have an awful job making its membership attend meetings and keeping them from scabbing. But organized scabbery goes on just the same all over in this paradise of the open shop.

NO HURRY IN DEPORTATION OF JOHN C. SCHEDEL

But Eternal Vigilance Is Liberty's Price

WASHINGTON.—Assistant Secretary of Labor Husband, in charge of deportation cases, informed the Federated Press on Aug. 21 that "there will be no hurry" in deciding whether John C. Schedel, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., shall be again deported. Husband had not received from his board of review its recommendation, following the hearing of an appeal from the American Civil Liberties Union, the previous day.

Schedel, a finisher in a piano factory, was secretary of the Ft. Wayne local of the socialist party when that local voted, in the fall of 1919, to join the new Communist party. He was born in Germany, but he had an American-born wife and the children, the youngest a baby. He was taken with thousands of others in the notorious Palmer "red raids" of January, 1920, and ignorantly waived the right of legal counsel. He was deported to Germany.

Wife Went Insane.

His wife went insane as a direct result of his being torn from the family. The baby died. Their four remaining children were distributed to charitable institutions and are now in school in custody of these institutions. Schedel tried repeatedly to return, in spite of the danger of imprisonment and new deportation. When finally he did reach Ft. Wayne, last October, he was immediately arrested on two charges—illegal entry after deportation, and illegal presence in this country. The department of justice, which issued the first warrant, has now quashed it, but the department of labor has relentlessly pursued its first course—to drive Schedel again from the family. Meanwhile his wife has recovered sufficiently to get employment as a laundress, and Schedel has been on bail. His old employer asks permission to keep him at work in the factory.

When the facts were recited to the board of review by Miss Isabel Kendig, for the Civil Liberties Union, Chairman Smelser remarked belligerently that "All decent Americans want people like this man thrown out. The only trouble about such cases comes from agitators."

Assistant Secretary Husband has indicated that he will carefully review the evidence, including the penalty paid by the family for the accident that Schedel was deported, instead of being sent to prison and later pardoned.

ENGLISH LOSE MILLIONS AFTER CHINA SHIP BAN

Strikes Spread Despite Baldwin's Threats

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, August 25. — England's business interests are losing several hundred thousand pounds sterling daily because of the boycott on Japanese and British ships declared by the Canton governmnet of China, and Britain's capitalists are clamoring for the government to take decisive action.

Austen Chamberlain has hurried back to London, cutting short his vacation, but he is afraid to use force, as the inevitable result would be a new wave of revolt thruout all China, he declares.

No Policy Stated.

The London Times editorially describes conditions in Hong Kong as "only too distressing, adding that "the effrontery of the Red government of Canton is hardly to be born." The Times states, however, that the government must "act warily."

Chamberlain has not yet declared his government's policy with regard to the Chinese boycott. American vessels are not permitted to touch at Hong Kong, but must land merchandise intended for Canton at Shanghai, and transship it to Canton on Soviet Russian or Chinese boats. The Standard Oil, which uses Hong Kong as a shipping base, is especially hard hit.

Five Thousand Strike.

SHANGHAI, China, August 25. — Five thousand laborers employed at the Commercial Press, the largest publishing house in China, have gone on strike, demanding a hundred per cent increase in wages.

The Chino-Japanese conference here has resulted in the calling of a Pan-Asiatic conference in Shanghai in April to discuss common interests. Kenbichi Inouye, a Japanese, is one of the leaders in the move for the conference. Thirty delegates, representing China, Japan, the Philippines, Persia, Siam and other countries will attend.

Icor Sends $15,000 to Soviet Russia for Jewish Colonization

NEW YORK.—What is termed the first contribution from the Jewish working masses in America for the Jewish Colonization in Soviet Russia was made yesterday when the Icor (Society to Aid Jewish Colonization in Soviet Russia), with headquarters in New York City at 112 East 19th St., cabled 15 thousand dollars to the All-Russian Ozet in Moscow, a social organization in which are represented all elements of the Russian Jewery as well as the American Joint Distribution Committee.

Money From Workers.

According to information from the headquarters of the Icor, the money sent is the first result of its national campaign, which was started after the national conference, on May 1, 1925. The money was raised through contributions from various Landsmanshaften, unions, Workmen's Circle branches and other organizations, as well as thru the sale of shares of the Icor Holding Corporation, which is incorporated under the laws of New York State. The Icor has an agreement with the Ozet, according to which the latter is the representative of the Icor in its colonization work in the Union of the Socialist Soviet Republic, and in conducting the credit operations with the colonists in accordance with the instructions of hte Icor.

The Fall campaign of the Icor will start in September and will be carried thru by the local Icor committees, which are functioning in 65 cities all over the United States and Canada.

Human Muscle Gets Cheaper.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(FP)—More and better machinery, and not the tariff wall, is what keeps American business profitable as compared with foreign industry, says an expert for the National Association of Manufacturers. He has predicted that even in the American Federation of Labor forces a cut in the textile tariff, the American industry will still hold its own.

Samuel Vauclain, head of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, recently wrote this expert that the 11,000 men employed by his company perform—with the aid of machinery—as much work as would be done by sheer muscular exertion by 135,000 men. Figuring on $4 a day as the wage for his 11,000 men, Vauclain showed that the labor cost of production in this country, measured in wages for mere muscle, was less than almost anywhere else in the world.

World Labor Is Turning its Eyes, More and More, Toward the Soviet Union

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the eyes of world labor are drawn toward the Union of Soviet Republics more than ever. The powerful magnetic attraction will continue to grow as the days pass. Not entirely because of England's fear of Soviet influence in China or Egypt, of the French dread of Bolshevik propaganda in Syria or Morocco, nor because the United States government strives to make Soviet Rule the target of its endless attacks. The new attraction in the Soviet Union, that must open wide the eyes of the world labor, is the dawning era of construction, the next era in the struggle toward Communism.

The international auto reliability test tour from Leningrad to Tiflis and return may be quickly forgotten in the busy days ahead. But its significance must be apparent to all as the cars drive across the red half of the European continent, the news of their progress being cabled to all the world. In the words of the American, J. M. Nilis, driving a three-and-a-half ton auto truck, "We got more flowers enroute than if we had been a president's funeral."

The American auto truck driver spoke better than he knew. Those flowers might fittingly be considered as so many nails driven in the coffin that contains the last remnants of the capitalist social order in the Soviet Union, accompanied by the last dwindling hopes of the disappearing bourgeoisie. They are nails driven in the coffin of world capitalism as well.

• • • •

For this triumphal tour with two Soviet trucks that had started sixth and seventh from Leningrad, but arrived first and second in Moscow, opens up new vistas for the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union.

Parades, banquets, firework displays, torchlight processions and demonstrations, at which the whole population turned out as at Novgorod, all along the route, giving living testimony to the enthusiasm of Russian liberated labor that sees the day of rapid transportation and good roads just ahead, something of which it did not dare to dream under czarism.

• • • •

And out in the tens of thousands of Soviet villages the "Ilyitch Lamp" arrives to shed its glow over the hitherto dark lives of the peasants, the herald of the "electrification" of the rural districts. The peasants have named the electric light after Lenin's middle name, the electric light symbolizes the coming of labor-saving devices that will lift the heavy burden of toil from the shoulders of the peasantry, calling the machine age to their relief.

In the Soviet Union electric light, heat, power, up-to-date methods of transportation, all labor-saving devices are not new means for exploitnig the masses, as in the United States. They are not instruments in the hands of great monopolies to plunder the many and reap profits for the few.

Labor-saving devices become the "open sesame" to days of leisure and an enjoyment of life, not the cause of a growing army of unemployed, with multitudes of jobless fighting each other for jobs.

• • • •

It all depends on who owns. In the Soviet Union the workers and peasants own and control and therefore enjoy. In all capitalist lands the few bandits of big business own and control and are the masters of men, driving the masses into new wars, into periods of depression or exacting toil as the fortunes of capitalism dictates; masses always bending under the lash.

Labor thruout the capitalist world is watching labor in the Soviet Union because it, too, wants to stand erect and face the sun of the new day. That is why world labor today, more than ever, turns its eyes toward the Soviet Union.

SYRIANS, IN FIGHT FOR FREEDOM FROM FRENCH YOKE, BOMBARD CITY OF SUEIDA; INVADERS' LOSSES 2,000

LONDON, August 25.—The Druses, in rebellion against the French administration in Syria, are bombarding Sueida, manned by a French garrison and guerilla warfare continues, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Damascus.

The total French killed is estimated at 2,000, a figure many times in excess of the number admitted in French official circles.

LONG ISLAND R.R. EXPLOITS YOUTH COLLEGE LABOR

Work 7 Days a Week, Pay $3.40 a Day

By ESTER LOWELL

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, August 25. — Wher does the Long Island railroad get a the extra help to handle the hordes o summer beach commuters and where do these men, most of them boys, g in winter? Hundreds of young men some of them from schools who wa only vacation jobs and many others hoping to get a chance at a permanen railroad job thru the summer experience, are taken on by this railro operated as a part of the Pennsylvania railroad system.

"They can't get everyone to w for the road at $3.40 a day," one of ticket collectors with five years' e perience on the road remarked. He now getting about $50 a week wh the mileage rate is added to his dai rate. He works anywhere from 6 t 16 hours a day, long and short runs. For every mile over 146 put in he gets ⅝c. and he claims that he average $1 a day on mileage.

Seven Days a Week

Seven days a week is demanded by the job and a day off is given only by request. The worker starts as guard at $3.40 a day and most of the summer extra boys never get beyond this status. The end of summer sees the end of their jobs on the Long Island. Those who stay work up to trainman and then to collector and may join the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. Those who stay long enough may ultimately become conductors and join their brotherhood. The company gives a pension when the worker reaches 70 and has served his proper years, "but you ought to be dead then anyway," the collector said.

Boys working the summer trains ought to make $60 to $75, not weekly, but every two weeks; $30 to $37.50 a week! Some of the workers raised from guards to trainmen during the summer are forced back to guard status after the rush is over. If any worker misses a single train he loses 5 to 10 day's pay. There is no lounging room for the men, although they often have to wait hours between runs. If they go upstairs in the Pennsylvania station to rest in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, they are likely to miss their trains.

Owned by Pennsylvania

The Pennsylvania railroad does not formally state that it owns the Long Island, but Samuel Rea is president of both companies and they have four other directors or officers in common. The Long Island R. R. is operated as part of the Pennsylvania system and its mileage in counted with that of the larger railroad. Among the men working on the line there is less recognition of unity, according to the collector. A Pennsylvania worker will not ride a Long Island worker on his pass and vice versa. The two companies are trying to arrange for the Long Island's payment of a much increased rental for its accomodations in the Penn Station so that higher commutation fares will be warranted.

Although much of the Long Island road is electrified, the train operators and engineers are practically all organized in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The company union system used by the Pennsylvania in some of its departments has not been foisted on Long Island workers yet.

SCHEME TO GET U. S. INTO TALK ON WAR DEBTS

to this point of view is accepted without question.

It has had a tendency to throw the whole discussions here into a circle—whether France should settle with England before Caillaux approaches the United States or whether the United States should first disclose her own terms of settlement to France.

To get out of this circle, therefore, it is but natural that Churchill and Caillaux should ask each other whether a way cannot be found to widen the discussions so as to include the counsels of the United States.

At the conclusion of his conference with Churchill, Caillaux hurried away in a waiting automobile to keep his luncheon agreement at the French embassy. He said merely that he would resume his conversations with the chancellor of the British exchequer after the luncheon.

Get Houghton to Lunch.

Always there is the important part which the social amenities play in these gatherings of the political leaders of the nations. And the luncheon at the French embassy today at which the ambassador, M. De Fleuriau had as his guests not only Caillaux and Churchill, but American Ambassador Houghton as well.

One only needs to recall the importance which Houghton's mere presence at a similar official luncheon assumed a fortnight ago when the Briand-Chamberlain conversation over the German security pact were in progress, to understand the opportunity which today's gathering will afford for the sounding out of Houghton by Churchill and Caillaux.

British Are Willing.

At the foreign office it was said Britain would welcome a three power debt conference along the lines which British and French leaders are discussing here altho doubt was frankly expressed whether the United States would come into such negotiations.

Before Churchill and Caillaux resumed their conversations today Caillaux had a conference at the French embassy with Montago Norman, governor of the Bank of England. There for twenty minutes the French financial wizard and the head of Britain's great banking institution discussed the possibility of extending English credit for the stabilization of the French franc. This was in reality, the discussion in more definite terms, of a subject talked about last night when Caillaux and Norman sat side by side at dinner in the French embassy.

Caillaux Confers With McKenna

French Finance Minister Caillaux went to the financial district this afternoon where he had a conference with Reginald McKenna, former chancellor of the exchequer, and chairman of the Midland bank, the biggest banking combination in England. He also conferred again with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England and other banks, broaching to both financiers the desiarbility of a tri-partite debt conference which would include the United States.

While Downing street is in favor of such a conference, the foreign office has let it be known that Britain would desire that the initiative be taken by either Paris or Washington.

Thinks Meeting Significant.

The London Star commenting on the presence of the American ambassador at the luncheon at the French embassy along with Caillaux and Chamberlain, the British minister, said this evening: "It is impossible to avoid the significance in this association of the three greatest powers in the world gathering around the luncheon table at the height of critical international negotiations."

When the Franco-English negotiations started yesterday it was understood Churchill would ask Caillaux to pay 20,000,000 pounds a year; and Caillaux was prepared to counter with an offer of 10,000,000 pounds annually.

British For Concessions.

Today it was reported that Churchill was willing to scale down the British demands to 15,000,000 pounds, and that Cailleaux would meet this proposal with an offer of 12,000,000 pounds.

As a basis of compromise seemed possible on the total of annual payments on the French debt to Britain, a new snag was seen over the question of how much of that sum could be satisfied out of France's share of receipts from Germany under the Dawes plan.

Caillaux was said to have suggested that two-thirds of the annual payments come from the Dawes receipts, while Churchill was not willing to accept more than one-third. This situation, however, was generally expected to be solved by a "fifty-fifty" compromise.

The most knotty problem, however, is expected to develop over Caillaux's reported request for a moratorium of ten years, dating from the signing of the Anglo-American funding agreement.

certain districts will not say that I am doing this for factional reasons. I will try to be just as impartial as possible.

Holding Up Good News.

One of the most interesting proofs of the lack of understanding of the role of the Communist press and its relation to the party was disclosed in a very important struggle on the Pacific coast, a struggle important not so much because of the number of our comrades that were involved or in the numbers of non-party workers involved, but because it was an instance of the correct application of Communist tactics in the trade unions and was a continuation in the Pacific coast labor movement of the struggles that we have been waging in much larger and more important industrial centers.

I refer to the expulsion of our comrades from the Seattle Central Labor Council on the grounds that they were members of our party and to their successful fight for reinstatement. It was a week or ten days after the attack had been made on our party by the trade union bureaucracy in this important city on the Pacific coast before the DAILY WORKER received one word or one line about the struggle from the comrades involved and it was necessary for the editors of the DAILY WORKER to send a number of urgent telegrams before we could get our own comrades to tell us what was happening. We carried the news, of course, as well as we could, but we were compelled to rewrite the news of this clear-cut Communist struggle was not then the realization that these struggles are not local ones and cannot be localized but that it is just as important and sometimes more important that we carry the news of these local struggles to the hundreds of thousands of workers in other centers. And only thru the Communist press can the correct stories and interpretation of these struggles be had.

Another instance: In the city of New York—and I speak now of the present, not only of the past, and I can only hope that I am not describing the future. It is almost impossible to secure from the New York comrades stories of the struggles of the workers in New York. It appears to me that the New York party looks upon the Communist press, our official organ, at least as something having but little connection with the struggles of the workers outside of our party and particularly neglect to report to us the struggles of workers in which our comrades are not taking part. We get plenty of reports from New York of mass meetings about to be held and what the speakers said at these mass meetings, and speaking for, I think voicing the unanimous opinion of the editorial staff of the DAILY WORKER, it is impossible to tell from these stories whether the speakers spoke to themselves or to several hundred workers. In the struggle of the needle trades a short time ago, in the millinery trades I believe it was, or of the waist makers, from 20,000 to 25,000 workers being involved, it was five days before we could get any news except what we rewrote from the New York Times. The same thing has been true of dozens of other happenings, and so far as the ordinary routine daily events of the lives of the workers in the shops and factories is concerned, there is no evidence in our press that the New York comrades understand that it is out of these struggles that are welded the broad class struggle. These small struggles for jobs, conditions, wage increases, etc., these struggles develop into the armed struggle for power.

Circulation Weakness.

In Boston the party was conducting, or attempting to conduct, a campaign against wage cuts in the textile industry. It also had a shoe campaign on, a campaign in the shoe industry. Comrade Minor was sent into the textile field and he sent to the DAILY WORKER a number of very well written stories describing in detail the conditions of the workers in the industry, the assaults made upon them by the textile bosses, the attitude of the state authorities in the struggle, etc., just the kind of stories calculated to interest workers facing a slash in their wages and confronted with the need for a struggle against them. But, comrades, I am inclined to believe that the only workers in the textile industry who know that the DAILY WORKER carried these stories are those to whom Comrade Minor talked in a few mass meetings. It was impossible, even after repeated effort, to get the Boston comrades to take a number of issues of the DAILY WORKER or a special edition built around the struggles in the textile industry for distribution in their district, and so far as benefit to our party was concerned received thru the DAILY WORKER the trip of Comrade Minor and the trouble the DAILY WORKER went to to chronicle the struggles of the textile workers was absolutely wasted due to the fact, of course, that the Boston comrades did not understand the role of the party press, its relation to the party, and their relation towards it.

Now, the record everywhere is not as bad as this, however. In these same districts and in other districts there have been special distributions of the DAILY WORKER, special editions based on some issue the working class was interested in, some struggle in which they were engaged.

In Detroit, for instance, the comrades made a number of distributions, one of them reaching the total of 20,000 in the automobile industry, but these special campaigns, this concentration of effort for a few days on one particular issue, while it helped our press, while it stimulates the interest of the workers in our press and gives our comrades experience in distributing and using our press, nevertheless is not the kind of work or the method by which a real mass Communist press is built. The building of a Communist press is a year-around task, a task for every day and for every Communist, and I think one of the weaknesses of the circulation of our press is exactly that criticized in the thesis on the Bolshevization of our press, that there is too much specialization or a tendency that way, that once an agent of the DAILY WORKER is appointed in a certain city the other comrades are only too willing that he should have all the work of distributing, circulating, building the Communist press in that district.

Reasons for Small Circulation.

We should try, I think, to inculcate in our party the fixed idea that the Communist press is the care of every comrade and that no communist will go to any kind of a working class meeting unless he is supplied with copies of the official organ of the party.

But the small circulation of our press, its lack of influence in the labor movement, the general mass movement of the American working class, cannot be ascribed to mechanical weaknesses in circulation or even to the lack of understanding of the role of our press by many of the comrades. Our press itself has certain weaknesses, altho I think that in the last year some of these weaknesses have been corrected somewhat. Nevertheless, there are some of them remaining to constitute an obstacle between us and the masses. What are some of these difficulties? In the first place, I think that our press has the effect in many instances of frightening away many workers who might otherwise be interested. I think that the small numerical strength of our party, the desperate struggle it is making for a position of power in the American working class movement, has the effect of making our press too flambouyant, too hysterical, at times too insistent, too loud and screaming. I believe, secondly, that the traditions of "yellow journalism" in America have not yet been entirely overcome in our press. I think there is too much of a tendency towards sensationalism, toward the picking out of issues that cannot be described accurately as working class issues. Third, I think there is too much tendency on the part of the comrades who contribute to our press to exaggerate, to fail in accuracy in recording the struggle of the workers, and that this more than anything else tends to discredit our press, to make workers doubtful of the statements, to weaken its influence.

Workers Are Critical.

And what is the process by which this is brot about? It is idle to say that workers are not critical in their reading. It is true that they may not be very critical of the capitalist press, but as soon as a worker discovers that the Comunist press is challenging the capitalist system he begins to read it very carefully. I want to tell you as the result of concrete experiences that a lack of accuracy in news stories of the struggles of the workers, exaggeration, wild statements, do more to drive workers away from our press than any other one thing.

Suppose, for instance, that we are chronicling a strike and we say that there are twice as many workers striking as are actually involved, and suppose we say that they are asking for a dollar when they are asking for a fifty-cent increase, and suppose we say that the bosses are using gunmen when the bosses are not, for some reason or other. Suppose we build a story in which the only accurate statement is that a group of workers are on strike. It doesn't make any difference how much you pledge your loyalty to their struggle. Those workers do not give a damn for your pledges. They look for facts. If these are not correct, they will doubt everything you say, and this, comrades, is recognized by the C. I. It has pointed out this error time and time again, and I hope that those comrades who feel moved from time to time to contribute to our press will bear this in mind.

One other reason why our press is not a mass press, why its influence is small, is that it is not a workers' press in the best sense of the word. Because the workers' press not only must be read by the workers, it must be largely written by workers. By this I do not mean professional journalists. The Communist International has spoken on this question as well and in all the parties of the C. I. those responsible for the press are as rapidly as possible developing groups and chains of workers' correspondents.

At the present time we have some 75 or 85 worker correspondents located in all the principal centers of the United States, about a third of whom are non-party workers. Within the next year we should try to quadruple this number. At present 50 per cent, perhaps two-thirds, of shop and job news and struggles of the workers is sent in by the workers themselves. We must make it a 100 per cent workers' paper. It is not sufficient that these news stories and this correspondence just be written by workers. There is no particular magic in having workers write for the press unless they write things that our press wants to record. The workers in this country are very badly infected with the virus of capitalist journalism. It is extremely disappointing at times to get contributions bearing all the earmarks of being bona fide expressions from workers, to find them dealing with things and questions that a Communist press cannot possibly deal with.

And so we must organize our worker correspondents, instruct them, bring them as close to the party as possible. We have tried to do this by three methods: by personal correspondence, the selection of contributors, casual contributors, who showed promise, and also by the appointment of members of the party. Second, by getting out a pamphlet containing instructions, and a short analysis of the role of the Communist press, its relation to the party and to the struggles of the workers. Third, by personal contact, lectures, instructions, etc.

Staff Close to Party.

As to the question of departmentalization. Most of the papers of the other Communist parties have been severely criticized by the Agitprop department because of too much departmentalization, bringing with it a tendency to pull these departments away from the party and the party life, to set up artificial distinctions and divisions between departments of the press. I think it is only fair to say that our press does not suffer to any great extent from this evil. I speak now of the English language press. I think the staff of the DAILY WORKER is probably more closely connected with the party and the party departments and the party life than any other stage of Communist journalists of the Comintern with the exception of the Russian Party itself. The reasons for this of course are not voluntary ones. It just happens that way to a large extent. The staff is small, our party is small, it requires the aid of every able and willing comrade, and the Communist journalists are therefore forced to take part in the activity of the party just as the other comrades do. They find it impossible to separate themselves from the party life. And I say very emphatically, I think that our official organ cannot be criticized on this point. This close connection of our press with the party life must be continued and strengthened.

A few words now on the connection between the editorial department and the circulation of our press. I have already pointed out how the press can be used in special campaigns of the party and where failures have been made in this respect, and I have said that these special campaigns are good, but the day-to-day work is what builds our press. I am convinced that with the increase in the number and the activity of our worker correspondents, with the closer linking of our party with the lives and struggles of the masses thru the reorganization of our party on the shop nuclei basis, with the realization that stories in the Communist press are not written to satisfy the ego of the writer but to acquaint workers with what is going on and the Communist interpretation of these struggles, our press will begin to develop very rapidly into a real mass press.

Reach Foreign-Born Workers.

The foreign language press is an important part of our party activity not only because of the language groups in our party, but because it is thru these language groups that we reach the foreign language speaking workers of America. If our foreign language press was developed only for the members of the party in this country, there is not a single one of the foreign language papers that should be kept in existence 24 hours longer. We strive to make our English language organ speak for our party all thru its struggles in every one of its departments and language sections.

I know that altho the foreign language press has been drawn closer to the party the last year and a half than ever before, that it carries more purely party material than ever before, that the foreign language press still suffers from a lack of centralization. And this lack of centralization is due partly to a lack of understanding of the role of the federations and partly to very severe mechanical obstacles. What we need, I think, from the editorial end, is a party press service that takes every day the best material in the DAILY WORKER and our other English language organs, collects other material, and sends it systematically and regularly to the foreign language press. At the present time our party press service is more or less spasmodic. There is no particular system. Sometimes good articles are sent out; sometimes bad ones. Sometimes there is one reason for sending out a certain article; sometimes there is another. What we need first of all is a centralized press bureau that will make, thru the connection of the foreign language press directly with our official organ, that organ the spokesman for every section of the party. Then there must be set up as a section of the Agitpop department, an editorial board or bureau that will follow closer the political lines of the foreign language press as well as that of our official organ, correct any deviation as soon as it appears and not allow these right tendencies, these deviations from the straight line of the Comintern, to become running sores in our party.

Aid in Our Campaigns.

In conclusion, the Communist press is the medium thru which our party speaks to its own members and to the working class and without a Communist press the voice of the party cannot be heard unless it be in a very feeble way. I think that it would have been impossible for our party to have carried on successfully any one of its major campaigns: anti-imperialism, the election campaigns, anti-Abramovitch campaign, against wage cuts, etc., if the DAILY WORKER had not taken the lead in these campaigns and in the resulting struggles. And I am certain that unless our English language organ grows just as rapidly in circulation as our party grows in numerical strength and influence, the party will find in spite of all its efforts in other fields—fields of education, reorganization—it will not be able to crystallize organizationally the tremendous energy the party put into every campaign to strengthen its position in the American working class movement, to make itself the leader of the American proletariat. Without revolutionary theory a revolutionary party cannot be born—cannot maintain itself. Without a Comunist press, voicing the correct Communist theory and linking that theory up with every problem of the working class life, a Communist party can do little except to stir up the mud in the foul pool of capitalism.

Comrade! When you go back to your districts, try to keep in mind that the press comes first of all; that it not only leads but it interprets and organizes—it builds—it stimulates and inspires the whole party and the whole working class. Without a Communist press—a mass press—a mass party is impossible, and without a mass Communist Party the proletarian dictatorship is impossible. We make mistakes, but we are surely building, by following the lead of the Comintern, the press that prepares the way for working class victory.

WORKERS PARTY CONVENTION HEARS REPORTS ON THE PARTY PRESS

Superior Finnish branch, he said that the branch would speak for itself, he was not authorized and would not speak for anyone or any organization, but only for himself.

Report Upon Daily Worker.

The presentation of the subjects upon the agenda then opened by Comrade Dunne reporting for the editorial department of the DAILY WORKER. Comrade Dunne's speech is printed elsewhere in this publication. Comrade Loeb reported upon the business management of the DAILY WORKER Publishing company.

Literature sales were increasing and should increase more. A beginning has been made of an American Communist literature with the popular "Little Red Library." Plans were made for the publication of the Lenin Library, of which six volumes, about one-third of Comrade Lenin's writings we expect to publish the coming winter. The machinery for printing is ours, and we ask a capacity task be given it. Financial and techinacl problems were dealt with at length and recommendations made for practical steps to increase the circulation of all sorts of Communist literature.

Engdahl Speaks.

Comrade Engdahl, reporting upon the editorial phase of the DAILY WORKER, stressed the building and Bolshevization of the press. We emphasize the class struggle, the socialists and other so-called labor papers obscure and minimize it. We stand alone as the spokesman of the real interests of the workers. The S. P. press treated the Indianapolis convention of the U. M. W. of A. as ordinary news. The DAILY WORKER, at that time just born, had taken a commanding position in the struggle at the convention.

So also in other struggles, all of them. The Chicago pressmen, for instance, had shown now hungry the masses are for Communist publications. Foreign writers were needed, which financial shortage had so far precluded. Better structural facilities were needed to take care that the readreaders we gained in various camaigns were not lost to the DAILY WORKER after the campaign, the strike or other activity was ended. We must teach the workers themselves to write of their conditions, and the building up of a host of worker correspondents would be the building up of the DAILY WORKER. The convention then adjourned until the evening session.

Olgin Reports Language Press.

Comrade Olgin then reported upon the foreign language press as follows:.

Comrade Olgin's Report on Foreign Language Press.

It is unfortunate that the members of the Workers Party speak seventeen languages. The reorganization of the party, while bringing the comrades of the various languages into closer contact and while unifying the party as a whole, will not do away with the differences of language. The foreign language press will remain a potent means of organising the workers of the United States and building the Workers (Communist) Party. The foreign language press is a means of combatting the nationalist influences of the immigrant bourgeois groups among the workers coming from the same country. It is therefore particularly important that the party take steps towards the Bolshevization of the foreign language press.

Many of the shortcomings of the press are due to lack of intelligent Communist forces, to lack of means and to difficulties of translating material into another language. However, many defects are a common occurrence in the foreign language press. Too much stress is being laid on the problems of one particular nationality, more than is justified by the requirements of class struggle propaganda, b) not enough attention is paid to the political life of the U. S.; c) struggle against imperialism does not occupy its proper place in our paper; d) the papers often keep within the confines of one federation, not enough participating in the broad life of the party as a whole; e) the problem of reorganization of the party receive only scant attention; f) while concentrating on those sections of the labor movement where one particular language group of workers is occupied, the papers often fail sufficiently to reflect and interpret the labor movement as a whole; g) campaigns for the DAILY WORKER are not vigorously conducted; h) the papers often live on clippings, and due to dryness are little attractive to the worker who is not a party member; i) fiction is often printed indiscriminately, without a choice of material which would be closer to the proletariat and without a Marxian interpretation of literature in the articles on literature; k) workers' correspondents are only seldom organised as a group in constant contact with the editors and under party supervision.

To remedy these evils, not all of which, of course, occur in the same paper and not all at the same time, and which are due to the federation structure of our party, this being an inheritance of the S. P., more centralization is necessary in management of the foreign language press by the C. E. C.

Comrade Olgin proposes the following measures:

1. A better news service.
2. A board of controls for the foreign language press under the direct supervision of the C. E. C.

These measures, however, in the opinion of the reporter, are insufficient in that the papers do not suffer from a lack of news as much as from a lack of Bolshevist editorial policy, and in that a board of control would only be able to correct errors after they were committed.

Comrade Olgin therefore, particularly stresses:

3. An editorial board for the language press to be appointed by the C. E. C. and to work under its direct supervision.

It will be the duty of the editorial board to supply the foreign language press with a short article commenting on every important event, these articles to be in the nature of editorials and their reprinting in every foreign language paper obligatory; b) with short and concise revues of the party life, their reprinting also to be obligatory; c) with an abbreviated version of all important party and C. I. documents giving the gist of them, as the reprinting of the authentic texts is often impossible in a small daily or weekly; d) with articles of a more general nature interpreting economic, social and political life here and abroad. This material, issued by the editorial board in a readable and lucid style and reprinted by the various editors as their own material, will unify the language press, will make it difficult for the individual editor to run articles contrary to those issued by the editorial board, and printed in his paper and will relieve the editors of a part of their present work, which is often excessive.

Other measures proposed by the reporter:

4. Periodical conferences of editors.
5. Organizing workers' correspondents.
6. Exchange of news of the activities of the various language papers.
7. To make it obligatory for editors and writers of party papers to actively participate in party life.

Lifshitz Speaks.

Comrade Lifshitz added to the report upon the language press covering much the same ground as Comrade Olgin, following which the floor was opened to five-minute discussions from Comrades Bimbo, Krumbein, Boich, Johnstone, Dozenberg, Bell, Wicks, Owens, Minor, Hayes and Zam. The C. E. C. reporters then summed up. Loeb, Olgin and Dunne speaking, whereupon the resolution of the press, as adopted by the parity commission was carried without a dissenting vote.

The convention then adjourned to reconvene the following day at 11 a.m.

Tuesday's opening session began, after an inspiring appeal from Comrade Poyntz and a few communications of minor importance, with the presentation of the report on anti-imperialist work by Comrade Gomes.

Gomez gave a general outline of the growth and development of American imperialism in all sections of the world—Europe, Asia, and particularly Latin America.

Leads to War.

Imperialism leads to military competition and directly to war. Militarism results from concentration of financial and industrial power. Sketching over the points of work done, Comrade Gomez accented the need, not of simple argument to prove the existence of imperialism, but to set masses into motion against it.

The work of the party had been but a beginning, yet a good beginning. The first real connection with the peoples oppressed by United States imperialism. The fight had begun upon the corruption of labor by imperialism by the Pan-American Federation of Labor. Connection had been made with Philippine elements by Comrade Wagenknecht resulting in five delegates to the Canton conference of marine workers.

Much Work Done.

Much work had been done in Latin America, Mexico, Cuba, the demonstrations in Costa Rica, Uruguay, Cuba, Mexico and Chile. The resources and time had been little, but the field is great. We propose a congress of anti-imperialism to be held in Argentina. The New Orleans marine conference was also a step in the course of this work.

The work in carrying out a campaign to oppose American imperialism in China and the far east. Throut the country demonstrations had been held, wide distribution of leaflets had been carried on and contact of the highest degree of importance established with Chinese elements of the Kuomintang national revolutionary party.

Not Interested in War Game.

Comrade Wolfe, reporting for the minority, criticised the attitude of Comrade Gomes toward the work of the Mexican secretariat and several actions in which conflict had resulted. The headquarters of the Anti-Imperialist League should be in Latin America. Campaigns had been proposed for Latin America, such as a campaign of protest against the sending of the American fleet to the Pacific, in which Latin Americans were not interested. Criticising the composition of the majority as a backward element. It could not formulate or carry out effective campaigns in this or in other fields. The speaker proposed certain measures to correct the errors he had charged.

FRENCH POLICE AT SHANGHAI ARREST MUNITION SALESMAN

SHANGHAI, August 25.— The French police this afternoon arrested four foreigners including Charles A. Krausch, an American, and seized arms and ammunition valued at $46,000.

The arrested men were about to sell the arms and ammunition, according to the French police, to an unidentified Chinese general.

JOHNSTON IS CONDEMNED FOR OUSTER ORDER

District Eight Makes Strong Protest

District Council No. 8 (Chicago) of the International Association of Machinists, at a meeting held last Monday night protested against a decision of the grand lodge that all members of the I. A. M. who are also members of the Workers (Communist) Party, the Trades Union Educational League or the Young Workers League should sever their connections with those organizations within sixty days or suffer expulsion from the international union.

The only member of the international board who voted against the decision is Vice President Hannon, who was elected on the Anderson slate. Hannon was the only opponent of "B. & O. Bill" that the machine was not able to count out.

Denounced Decision.

Several speakers denounced the decision as another attempt on the part of Johnston to disrupt the union. The Communists were praised as good union men. One speaker said that it was not the Communists who were breaking up the union, but William H. Johnston.

The delegates to the council were decidedly in favor of living up to the laws of the union which guarantee to every member the right to hold any political belief he sees fit.

District No. 8 of the International Association of Machinists is the largest in the country. It is strongly for Anderson and against Johnston.

School Buildings Not Safe.

Three out of every four school buildings in the country fail to measure up to the minimum requirements of law for safety and sanitation, says Secy. F. G. Stecker, American Federation of Teachers.

HINDOOS PROTEST BRITISH MURDER REIGN IN CHINA

Offers Help to Chinese in Their Struggle

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 25—The following resolutions were unanimously adopted in a mass meeting held at Marysville, California, under the auspices of the Hindustan Gaddar Party, August 16, 1925.

Whereas, China is struggling to emancipate herself from the same exploiting system that has robbed India for a century and a half;

And, Whereas, the British imperialism is the leader of this exploiting system that has used Indian men and money for its own benefit to deprive one-fourth of the human race of its liberty;

And, Whereas, it is in the interest of humanity that British imperialism must be destroyed in order that the world may live in peace;

And, Whereas, joint action of all oppressed humanity is necessary to dethrone tyranny;

Therefore, be it resolved;

First—That we, the Hindustanees of California, in a mass meeting assembled, under the auspices of the Hindustan Gaddar Party, do hereby strongly protest the barbarous murdering of the Chinese workers and students at the hands of the British Indian police in China, and express our deepest sympathy for the cause of China which is the cause of us all; and we urge our fellow Indians all over the world to bring such pressure upon the British government as will compel it to withdraw its forces from China, and we ask all true Hindustanees to help the Chinese people in their present struggle.

Secondly—That the copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the press of India, China, and the United States.

GIRL STUDENTS REBEL AGAINST REACTIONARIES

Ministry of Education Branded Imperialistic

PEKING, China, Aug. 25—That the whole educational system of China is severely affected by the militancy of its students, the large majority of which have flung themselves into the struggle against foreign imperialism is exemplified in the brave resistance of the girl students of the Peking National Normal University against the imperialist leanings and harsh discipline of the school authorities and the ministry of education.

The rebel girls have held their school in a veritable state of siege since last May. The trouble began when the students attacked their American trained superintendent for her disciplinary measures and reactionary views. Six students were suspended. The girls then kicked out the principle and took over the school for themselves.

The ministry of education attempted to conciliate matters thruout July and August but the girls stood firm. The minister of education then ordered the school dissolved and threatened to cut off lights, water and food. The girls, however, with the assistance of male students from other schools held out.

Finally a police attack on the school, which resulted in the girl students being forcibly removed, broke the siege. But the fight is not over. The militant girls and the faculty have the suport of the student union and the radical teachers for a manifesto they issued announcing that they would no longer accept the direction of the ministry of education and denouncing its friendliness to the imperialist powers who are attempting to throttle China.

AMALGAMATION OF RAILROADS SWELLS BOODLE

Workers Must Retort by Union Solidarity

By LELAND OLDS,

The possibility of laying off 50,000 of the 160,000 workers employed on the railroads of Canada is a feature of the plan to merge the Canadian National with the Canadian Pacific railway. This appeals especially to the financial interests backing the attempt to eliminate a well operated nationally owned system.

Says the Wall Street Journal: "Slicing of labor costs, particularly operating labor, would be the most important item in savings resulting from merger. The Canadian National employs 100,000 and the Canadian Pacific over 60,000. Payroll of the National railways last year was $143,242,026, and the average number of employes 98,875, making the average annual labor cost per employe $1,448. Using the estimate that the two railroad systems comprising over 35,000 miles of road can be operated with about 110,000 instead of the approximately 160,000 now employed there would be a reduction of $7),400,000 in the labor costs."

Aside from the problem presented to the operating unions by this threat of wholesale layoffs the analysis is an unwitting boost for operation of railroads in one big national system under public control. No one questions the high efficiency of the Canadian National under Thornton. There would unquestionably be a similar saving if the Canadian Pacific entered the national system.

A similar authoritative estimate of the waste of money and manpower in the operation of the huge transportation system of the United States by scores of individual private corporations might stagger the private competitive ownership advocate.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system."

Visit to the Union of Administrative and Commercial Employes.

A visit to the Russian Trade Union of Employes in Soviet and administrative institutions, generally, proved to be of great interest. On inquiry it was found that the post office employes were not included in the union, having a separate organization of their own. Clerks in various industries, such as transport, engineering, etc., are also outside this union, being attached to the union of the industry itself.

The unit of the organization is the shop, office, or store committee. These committees are formed wherever 50 or more are employed in the same establishment. Where less than 50 are employed, a shop delegate is appointed. Both the shop committee and shop delegate are responsible to the branch committee for the collection of contributions, and for reporting to the branch any complaint or nonfulfilment of agreements or decrees. The shop committee may or may not be a member of the branch committee and the same is true of the shop delegate.

In small towns and villages a general committee is elected to keep in touch with the branch and is responsible for the collection and remission of contributions. Every county, or province, as it is called in Russia, has a branch. These often cover a very large area and are much larger than the counties in Britain. All contributions from these large areas are remitted to the branch, which administers and keeps the records for all the district.

As already indicated, the branch takes all the contributions for the whole of the province or district it governs, and carries out completely the work of the union, except in special cases. The central body in Moscow takes a percentage of the branch income, varying from 5 to 25 per cent. In a few cases, where the area covered by the branch is very wide and scattered, it takes the whole of the contributions to administer it, and no percentage in this case is remitted to the central body. The contributions are paid monthly, it being the custom in Russia to pay salaries monthly, though an advance on the salary can be had, and is quite generally paid half-way through the month.

The function of the union is to see that the various Labor decrees are carried out, to secure collective agreement with employers for conditions better than the decree, where same is obtainable, and generally to watch over the interests of the members in that direction. But a very large part of the activity of this union, as in most unions in Russia, is to provide rest houses for their members, hospitals, education, and quite a number of other social things not generally within the scope of Trade Unions in Britain. The fact that minimum wages, maximum hours, and a wide range of Labor legislation is operating has set the unions free to take up and carry through work other than that which is customary in countries where the Trade Unions are of a purely industrial and defensive character.

The function of the shop committee and delegates is to see that the members are paid in accordance with the decrees and general Labor legislation covering the members, to negotiate collective agreements or alterations in same. If any dispute arises which the shop committee or delegate is unable to handle it is referred to the branch, which is generally able to effect a settlement. If, however, the branch cannot obtain a settlement, it is then referred to the National Executive Committee, and if still unsettled it is finally referred to the Minister of Labor, who has power to settle the matter. It will be seen, therefore, that in the final resort a settlement is certain of being obtained.

In all unions the Communist Party exercises very great power and influence. On inquiry it was found that the members of the Communist Party in this union was only 9 per cent.

A visit was also paid to the Moscow Branch office. Here is really the same procedure as at the Central Office, except that the branch is administering for the membership, while the Central Office is dealing with the branches throughout the country. As usual, the union had a club attached to the office, but there are others also throughout the city. In addition, they have sport clubs of all kinds, dramatic societies composed of the members, study circles, the usual rest homes and sanatoriums.

This union, similar to most Trade Unions in Russia, occupied a great deal of its time and energy in education, and it is quite clear that a tremendous influence is being exerted throughout the country, the center of which is the various Trade Union organizations.

IV

Visit to Moscow Insurance Department

The District Insurance Section is constituted as follows:

Each factory elects delegates, one for each 250 employees. In factories where a lesser number is employed a maximum of three and a minimum of one would be appointed. These delegates meet annually and elect a management committee of 21 to control the section. The 21 then elect a management executive committee, which meets weekly and is designated the presidium of the section. This consists of the secretary, president, and vice-president.

The city of Moscow is divided into six districts. In addition to the executive control in each district exercised by the presidium, each district has three representatives on a control committee, which is elected by the conference, and these have the right at any time to demand a special conference. Should any dispute arise between the presidiums of the district and the control committees the Soviet has the right to intervene and give a final decision. The control committees are in general terms under the final supervision of the Soviet.

Each factory has its own Welfare Committee to safeguard the health of the workers. These meet every two months. From these welfare committees reports are given to the central committee and reports from the central committee meetings are given to the factory committee as representing directly the workers.

Benefits are paid as follows:

(1) Temporary sickness causing incapacity but with a chance of recovery. Patients are examined monthly, and as long as they are certified unfit for work they are paid the average wage of their occupation, day work or piece work.

(2) Permanent disablement. All accident cases causing disablement are put in a list which is described officially as the "invalids of labor." They are also paid full wages on the average wage received for a three months' period prior to the accident.

(3) Permanent disablement from disease. Complete disablement, 18 roubles per month; cases where patients are able to give self attention, 12 roubles; cases where the patient is able to do light work, 9 roubles per month. All industrial diseases are to be scheduled as accidents under the new decree which will shortly come into force.

The unemployed are divided into two groups. Skilled men are paid unemployment benefits as follows: single men, ten roubles per month; one dependent, 25 per cent increase; two dependents, 50 per cent increase; three dependents, 75 per cent increase; in addition to which other concessions are made to unemployed workers, no charges for light and water, tickets given for food and communal dining-rooms 50 per cent below the actual cost price of the food. House rent charges to unemployed workers are also fixed at 10 per cent of the usual rent for the same accommodation.

Maternity benefits are also provided for factory workers for maintenance eight weeks before confinement and eight weeks after. The benefit provided for office workers is six weeks before and six weeks after. The average wage is also paid during this period. The allowance is based on the average wage paid to the workers in their usual occupation. In addition to this there is a special clothing allowance, 16 roubles, to provide the child's outfit, and on return to work four roubles monthly are allowed for the feeding of the child, and the special children's allowance is continued.

The death benefit paid is 16 roubles.

In cases where hospital accommodation is required special provision is made for the workers. Eighty-five per cent of the hospital accommodation in Moscow is reserved for the workers who suffer from diseases of occupation and other disabilities, leaving 15 per cent for the use of others, in addition to which provision is made in rest houses on a scale which provides accommodation for 37,000 persons for two weeks in each year. There are also children's rest houses and welfare centers maintained for the use of workers' children, supplied with expert care and attention absolutely free.

V

Visit to Convalescent and Holiday Homes

The Delegation visited a convalescent and holiday home near Moscow. Eighty per cent of the beds used for children in this home are reserved for the children of Trade Unionists. We found expert doctors and nurses in attendance carefully attending to the cases of children suffering from various kinds of deformity, in many cases severe consumption of the bones.

The equipment of this home is very satisfactory, and the cases we inspected showed that all that could be done to bring the children back to normal health and to cure the ravages of consumption was being freely placed by the Soviet authorities at their disposal.

The children are also given special instructions for the production of their own toys, and we inspected several interesting examples of their childish attempts to make dolls, to build small wooden doll houses, to make and print their own books, and in many ways to interest themselves during their period of convalescence. We were particularly interested in a copy of the hospital newspaper, which the children themselves produced. We were informed that 25 per cent of the health funds of the State are now devoted to what is described as health defense at the welfare centers provided for children. Special diets are also arranged suitable to each case under the supervision of the doctor.

The house used for this purpose was formerly occupied by a foreign Consul with seven members of the family, including servants. Up to 100 children are now being cared for in the same house with a staff of 48, including medical attendants, cooks, and their servants. The staff are employed six hours a day. The lowest wage paid is 37 roubles a month, the medical officer being paid 172 roubles per month.

The best doctors in the country, we were informed, were placed at the disposal of these hospitals and convalescent homes for children, and specialists are called in to deal with all cases when special complications arise. The doctors are assisted by medical students drawn from the ranks of the workers and peasants, and we were informed that under the new regime 60 per cent of the medical staff is drawn from the ranks of the workers and peasants.

We made inquiries as to whether there is a shortage of medical supplies and drugs, and we were informed that in the Moscow Department there was no shortage and the same now applied to all Russia generally. The necessities for hospital purposes were now being imported from France and other countries. X-ray cabinets had also been purchased from Germany. The only drug about which there is any difficulty is quinine. This is in great demand for malaria, but there is, however, no embarrassing shortage at the present time.

We also visited a rest home for adults situated in the same grounds. The house used for this purpose was formerly tenanted by one woman and her daughter, with servants for their attendance. It is now used for housing up to 50 workers at all times for rest and holiday purposes. The discipline regarding habits of those taking holiday rest, with regard to feeding, exercise, and food, was very strict. One special regulation insists on those taking holidays retiring to bed each day from 2 to 4 after lunch.

On making general inquiries regarding the provision of such rest houses and hospitals for children, we were informed that prior to the Revolution, 85 per cent of the medical service of Russia was devoted to the service of 5 per cent of the population, the remaining 15 per cent to 95 per cent of the population. This information was given by the President of the Moscow Branch of the Medical and Sanitary Workers.

The equipment of all these establishments was most striking; in the living rooms the beautiful furniture, carpets, and pictures still remained. It was evident that the greatest care of it all was taken by the workers.

During the visit to Russia, the Delegation visited many such rest houses and sanatoria, all in perfect state of cleanliness and upkeep. At Kislovodsk, the great health resort in the Caucasus, the Delegation dined with the inmates and remained with them for the whole day.

VI

The Association of Mine Workers in Russia

The Association of Russian Mine Workers includes not only coal miners, but iron ore miners, manganese miners, and salt mines, and all other mining industries.

The hours of getters and fillers were six hours, including winding time; except by special agreement between the Miners' Association and the administration, which does not in any case exceed 15 per cent of the full total of getters and fillers employed. And then they can only work up to eight hours, including winding time; except on a Saturday, when they work six hours, including winding time.

Surface workers' hours are eight hours per day, except Saturday, which is six hours, including meal times. In other words, they have a 46-hour week, including meal times.

In abnormal working places, which include wet places and bad roofs and floors, or any other disadvantage, the men work less hours, down to three in some instances, and are paid wages not less than when working under normal conditions; in other words, it is recognized that these places mean harder work for the workman, and he is paid not less than he would earn under normal conditions.

For a decision as to what is an abnormal place, the officials at the colliery and the workmen's representatives try to settle. Failing that, it goes to the wages committee first, and failing a settlement there, it goes to a committee called the "conflict committee," and the payments are retrospective from the date when the worker alleges that his place became abnormal.

There is a minimum wage fixed by the Minister of Labor, but this is not satisfactory to the mine workers, and the custom is to fix by special agreement a higher minimum which is regulated by the cost of living.

During the existence of such an agreement for wages the workers can ask for an increase should any sudden jump take place in the cost of living. And the wage that is established for the period of agreement cannot be lowered, but it can be increased as stated above. If the administrators and the Association of Workers fail to agree, they can fix up an arbitration court of their own, but failing a settlement by this method, they can go to an arbitration court appointed by the Minister of Labor, whose decision is final.

The getter only gets the mineral and has nothing to do with the filling of same. This is done by a separate person, and the getter has no responsibility for this particular person. The percentages of getters to the total number employed are 18 per cent; 40 per cent are other underground workers, and 42 per cent are employed on the surface.

They generally work two shifts of coal getting, but about one-third of the pits only work one shift, and there is no extra pay for work in shifts on days and afternoons. But those employed on night work get an extra payment of one-seventh of a shift.

SURGEONS STORE TOOLS IN BELLY OF PROGRESSIVE

Burns Dicks Agency Trailed Radical

By FRAPIESA.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—The latest "Weekly News Letter" of the Better America Federation quotes the following paragraphs, written by Fred R. Marvin, from New York Commercial:

"The government of the United States is capitalist in character and republican in form. Its affairs are directed by representatives chosen by the people.

"Stripped of all misunderstanding, which is even too general among those who should know better, a capitalist government is that form of government which permits the individual to acquire, own, hold, transfer, enjoy, devise and bequeath property,—any old kind of property; a wheelbarrow, an automobile, a broken down horse, a cattle ranch, a sack of potatoes, a farm, a bank, a home, a manufacturing plant, or a railroad system. And a capitalist form of government, further, is that form which brings to bear all its power to protect the individual in this right. That is the kind of a government you enjoy in the United States."

The B. A. F. sheet adds:

"Every sincere and loyal American should know and remember this. And be ever ready to uphold."

Right Definition of Property.

Curiosuly enuf, Marvin, the New York Commercial and the B. A. F. do not know the difference between products of labor and property. Legally, property is paper title to something of value. It is apart from the object to which it gives ownership.

Philologically, property is theft. It is that which is made one's own. To appropriate means to steal, and was used in that sense by property class journals until Lenin triumphed in Russia. Philosophically, as proven by P. J. Proudhon, property is the theft of products of labor from the producers.

Americans know less of the language they use than any other people. Not more than one in 1,000,000 knows what such words as "radical," "conscience," etc., mean. That is why they are duped so easily. "You know what I mean," is their favorite phrase when expressing opinions.

The Word "Bolshevik."

Fred R. Marvin, New York Commercial writer, had a namesake in San Francisco, a printer, member of the Pressmen's Union. This Fred Marvin publicly avowed that he was a Bolshevist.

According to the Russian imperial dictionary the Russian word Bolshevist means one who believes in majority rule. In the time of the czars it was applied principally to Americans by Russians and usually with contempt. The government of the United States was called "Bolshevik" because it was understood to be a rule of the majority.

Of course, the United States government is not Bolshevik. It is capitalist. The United States is ruled by 20,000 bankers and their pals. As the B. A. F. plainly says, this government is of the capitalists, by the capitalists, and for the capitalists. Why mince words?

Marvin Suppressed.

But Fred Marvin, the printer, called himself a Bolshevist in the popular meaning of the word. Attention of the Burns Detective Agency was called to his obstreperous conduct. This institution did a lot of work for the B. A. F.

Detectives followed Marvin and reported his movements. When they completed their service the confidential agents of the "better" organization acted. Those agents operated thru the restaurants, hotels, etc., patronized by Marvin.

The hunted man became sick. He may have been handed a dose of ptomaine poison by a waiter or something else by a chambermaid. When he went to a hospital the confidential agents followed him and conferred with those in charge.

Marvin underwent a surgical operation. He was atrociously cut and was lucky to be able to get out of the hospital alive.

Escape and Sequel.

He went to Portland, Ore., and secured employment. But he did not recover his health. An examination revealed a growth in his bladder, the seat of his former trouble. Another surgical operation was recommended.

The surgeons were astonished to find in Marvin a rubber glove, a sponge and one or two other articles, souvenirs of the San Francisco operation. These things were most probably for the purpose of identifying the work of the San Francisco surgeons—clever chaps, indeed.

After the removal of the foreign substances so scientifically inserted into his anatomy, Marvin recovered his health. It is likely that the San Francisco surgeons are still expecting their stipends.

Words, Words, Words.

The Better America Federation, in a recent confession, said: "We do not injure lawabiding citizens." As it takes upon itself the privilege of deciding who are law-abiding, it admits that it injures those considered by it as not law-abiding.

CAL CAN'T FIND DISCRIMINATION, BUT NEGRO CAN

Republicans Lose Out, A. N. L. C. Points Way

A recent dispatch states that Senator William M. Butler, whose campaign for return to the United States senate is about to begin and who is chairman of the national republican committee, has agreed to introduce the Dyer bill, at the appeal of a delegation of the National Equal Rights League in Boston. He was not quite convinced that racial segregation is being practiced among the federal employes in Washington, but he was open to convincing. All he need do to be convinced, we should say, is keep his eyes open the next time he visits the capital.

The republican party feels itself slipping, in so far as the Negro is concerned. Therefore, Senator Butler has been picked out to patch up its political fences. It is the same old trick. Just before a political campaign, the old Wall Street parties begin a systematic campaign of rounding up the Negro voters.

By offering all kinds of inducements to the Negro voters, they have been able to fool the Negro into believing that their problems can be settled by simply going to the polls and dropping in a ballot for a party that represents mill, mine and railroad owners.

Thru the sentiment that has been aroused by the coming American Negro Labor Congress which will open in Chicago Oct. 25th, one can see that the Negro is becoming well acquainted with the false tactics of the old parties and is just about ready to break with their fake Negro leaders who from time to time have been selling them out for some petty job handed out as a reward for vote gathering.

But when the Negro workers, who are 95 per cent of the race, throw off the shackles of the old parties, as they are sure to do, and by their united force as expressed in the coming American Negro Labor Congress, tackle segregation, lynching, jimcrowism and other social evils, as well as the basic economic evil, from the ground up instead of just scratching the surface as has been done heretofore, something may be accomplished.

Klan Counsels Confused.

WASHINGTON—Replying to the announced intention of klan leaders, who are gathering for an attempt to agree on a legislative program, to promote anti-evolution and anti-immigration measures, the editorial columnist in the Washington Post reminds them that the ban on immigration is bringing the Negro race into a far better economic position toward the whites that it has ever before had.

Republican politicians, pulling klan wires in spite of the official disowning of the klan by Coolidge, admit privately that the Negro problem may yet swamp the republican party chiefs. Negroes are handling more machinery in industry, each year, and are organizing among themselves more effectively. They are getting more actual power into their hands than the politicians think is safe for the party.

OIL COMPANIES DOUBLE PROFITS IN YEAR, PRICE OF GASOLINE UP

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

Notice to flivver owners! Profits for the first six months of 1925 exceed those of the entire year 1924 in the case of 12 oil companies not of the official Standard Oil family. How did they work it? For one thing, according to the Wall Street Journal, they charged more for gas.

The profits of these 12 companies to June 30 total $63, 492,294, compared with $47,964,185 in the first half of 1924, and $62,669,841 for the full 1924 year. The gain over the first half of 1924 exceeds 30 per cent.

Millions in Profits.

The six-month profits by companies this year and in 1924 were:

Half year profits	1925	1924
Associated Oil	$ 6,380,967	$ 4,434,007
Barnsdall Corp.	1,226,095	457,380
Calif. Petroleum	3,187,235	1,758,934
Indep. Oil & Gas	2,393,955	1,089,132
Marland Oil	7,788,371	3,662,443
Midcontinent Petr.	7,111,620	4,993,124
Phillips Petroleum	10,456,494	7,621,700
Shell Union Oil	11,044,333	10,869,533
Simms Petroleum	1,807,635	1,654,866
Skelly Oil	2,328,344	1,499,945
Tide Water Oil	3,867,245	3,323,116
Union Oil of Cal	5,900,000	6,200,000

Morgan Companies.

Tide Water Oil leads in rate of return to stockholders, having presented them with an even 30 per cent on their investment in the last six months. This is an annual rate of 60 per cent. Simms Petroleum follows with 26.4 per cent for the half year. Others for which the six-month return can be reckoned are Associated Oil 11.4 per cent; Barnsdall 5.5 per cent; California Petroleum 10.9 per cent; Marland 11.2 per cent; Shell Union 11 per cent; Skelly Oil 11.3 per cent and Union Oil of California 6.2 per cent.

Marland Oil is the independent company brought under the control of J. P. Morgan by the cutthroat price war forced by Standard Oil in 1923-24. As the profits roll in Morgan exercises his option, taking over Marland stock in blocks of over 300,000 shares. The price cutting campaign brought many large independents to terms. This means that production will not be allowed to exceed the bounds necessary to maintain high prices and generous profits on heavily watered capitalization.

HINDOO POLICE QUIT BRITISH IN HONG KONG

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HONG KONG, China, Aug. 25.—About seventy men of the British Indian police force from Hong Kong have left the service of the British government in a sympathetic walk out in favor of the Chinese workers as a protest against the ruthless methods used by the English in shooting down strikers and demonstrators.

These men went to the Chinese governor of Canton and asked him to aid them in finding work, food and shelter. The governor at first thot it was wrong to aid the deserting men but was moved by the earnestness of their plea which was to kill them all if they were not to be aided as they had no place to go. The governor, realizing the risk they had undertaken to help the Chinese cause, gave them food and shelter, and found work for them.

MORMON CHURCH IS IN ALLIANCE WITH THE BOSSES

Kuomintang Members at Communist Meeting

SALT LAKE CITY —(By Mail.)—The "C. T. L. Rattlers," after having been delayed by washouts, ruts a foot deep, numerous alkali "patches," and corrugated rock sections of the celebrated Lincoln Highway, finally rumbled into the Mormon capital too late for the meeting arranged for last Wednesday night. They were therefore compelled to give up the Ogden date and hold the meeting here on Thursday night instead.

The local comrades had outdone themselves in arranging what would have been an excellent meeting in Pioneer Park, which had ben secured together with the use of the grand stand. It had been necessary to present a petition requesting its use to the city fathers. These gentlemen were very much distressed when the petition was presented. They eyed the two women comrades, who were present to see that it was acted upon, with a good deal of suspicion.

Meeting Was Good.

The meeting Thursday night was held on a few moments notice at the Labor Temple. The comrades consider the meeting especially good. It was most gratifying to find members of the Kuomintang present. These Chinese promised to work in co-operation with the Workers Party group here in the future, and were highly satisfied with the Communist effort to unite the American workers in a demand to withdraw American troops from China immediately. A resolution to this effect was adopted by the meeting unanimously.

The Mormon church has a stranglehold on this state. Its organization is self-sufficing for the needs of its members, provision being made for controlling the lives of its adherents in every possible way. The church here is in very close alliance with the biggest open shop interests of the country. While it professes neutrality in labor disputes and ostensibly allows its members full freedom to take an active part in the labor movement, facts show that whenever an industrial struggle arises, the power of the church, like the power of all other churches, is at the disposal of the ruling class.

Mormons with Big Biz.

A good illustration of this hypocrisy of the Mormon church is hown by its attitude during the Coachcleaners' strike. The strike call had gone out and the women quit work. Thereupon the bishop informed the strikers that it was their duty to remain at work in order to protect the church's interests. The church is a large stockholder in one of the railroads against which the strike was carried on.

The church has even been known to go outside of the city and recruit the "faithful" to break a strike in the city.

The "Rattlers" have been compelled to change their route somewhat, leaving out Rock Springs and Cheyenne and rattling instead directly to Denver for the mass meeting there Sunday night.

Steck Still Leads.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—With the recount in 63 Iowa counties completed, Daniel Steck, democrat, had a lead of 9,271 votes over Senator Smith W. Brookhart, in their contest for the seat now held by Brookhart, it was announced yesterday by the senate elections committee. The figures were: Steck, 251,771; Brookhart, 242,500. In the same couties there are 5,832 contested ballots upon which the committee will have to make a decision.

REUNION OUTING FOR DAILY WORKER BUILDERS SEPT. 7

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—New York is arranging an excursion to historic Stony Point on the Hudson for the DAILY WORKER Builders' Re-union on Labor Day, Monday, September 7, on an entirely original and unique plan.

A first class boat, the Miramar, has been chartered, which will make the 36-mile trip in about three and a half hours. There will be music and dancing and entertainment galore. There will be bathing, hiking thru the forest and an old fashioned family picnic dinner. And there will be no effort to make money from those who come.

No Tickets Will Be Sold.

Tickets for the entire trip will be given free of charge to all those that perform a certain minimum service for the DAILY WORKER in any one of various lines. Everyone that brings in six dollars worth of subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER, the Workers' Monthly, the Young Worker or the Young Comrade will receive a ticket without cost. For every three dollars collected as contribution for the DAILY WORKER Mid-summer sustaining fund, a ticket will also be given. Those who serve the DAILY WORKER as news stand collectors, those who do their duty as branch agents, as well as those who help a certain minimum with the work in the DAILY WORKER New York office, will also receive tickets.

In this way there will be selected from the entire New York membership those that are the most active supporters of the party's official organ. At the reunion at Stony Point these will be formally organised into the New York DAILY WORKER Builders' Club, and steps will be taken to result in the establishment of the English Daily in New York at the earliest practicable moment.

SOVIET UKRAINIAN CROP BIGGEST IN FIFTEEN YEARS, EXPORT DAIRY FOODS, EXPERIMENT ON NEW PLANTS

MOSCOW, Aug. 25.—Dr. Manuiloff, a Leningrad scientist, has completed his experiments with winter and spring seeds. The scientist has discovered a chemical test by wihch the character of the seeds can be determined whether it is winter or spring grain. The new discovered methods show within a few minutes the necessary determination.

Last year an experiment in the U.S.S.R. on the cultivation of a new plant, called Kenafa or Indian hemp, was made. The plant gives a cheaper fibre for manufacturing of sacks than Russian hemp. The textile syndicate of the Ukrainian Socialist Soviet Republic is now planning to increase the area of the Kenafa to such an amount that it will be possible to produce 2½ million poods of fibre yearly.

Estimate of Ukrainian Crops.

The general Ukrainian crop produced by the peasants is 1,006,000,000 poods. These figures do not include the crop of the co-operative farms. Last year the general crop was equal to 540 million poods. The average of the crop is 68 poods per dissiatin against 57 poods per dessiatin in prewar times. Rye—70-72 poods per dessiatin; winter wheat—57 poods; spring wheat—54 poods; barley—65 poods; oats—79 poods; proso—69 poods; buckwheat—51 poods; corn—93 poods.

Ukrainia has not had such a crop for the last 15 years. Not only the quantity of the crop is large, but the quality is also much improved.

In some parts of Berdiansk County in the province of Ekaterinoslav the crop of wheat per dessiatin is 300 poods (about 74 bushels per acre.)

Soviet Exhibit in Riga.

The U. S. S. R. is taking part in the agricultural exhibition which is now taking place at Riga (Latvia.) Much attention is being paid there to the Soviet exhibits.

Cotton Growers' Conference.

In Moscow a cotton-growers' convention has been held; according to reports this year the area seeded with cotton is 661,000 dessiatins against 461,000 in 1924. It is expected this year that the production of fibre will be 15½ million poods against 6 million poods in 1924. The program for 1925-26 is 20 million poods.

Soviet cotton in 1923 was sufficient to meet 32 per cent of the material needed by the textile industry; in 1924—50 per cent, and this year—60 per cent.

Export Dairy Products.

On the Northwestern frontiers of Russia many refrigerators have been established where butter and dairy products prepared for export will be collected.

The R. S. F. S. R. commissariat of agriculture contemplates to establish several dairy laboratories in the cities of Ishim and Novo-Nikolaevsk, in Siberia. The establishment of these laboratories is due to the increase in exports of dairy products.

U. S. S. R. will take part in in the agricultural exhibition in Persia. This exhibition will take place in September, 1925 .

Letters from Our Readers

Editor DAILY WORKER,—In a copy of your valuable paper handed me, you invite workers to write you of their jobs. Instead, will you accept this communication about the other fellow's job, and I'll see that your paper gets it to them if their own shouldn't. You certainly have the right dope for the shops. What the unions need in this sunny clime, is a few of your "nuclei," for their sunrays to evolute into something bigger. Enclosed is my communication sent to the San Jose' Union Journal:

San Jose, July 30,1925.

Editor Union Journal, San Jose, Calif.

Dear Brother.—May a friendly visitor to your beautiful city comment on the local labor situation? I have just read your righteously indignant complaint against a local firm which imports nonunion labor for building. Or is it after all so righteous? When will organized labor learn that the class struggle is not a competition in righteousness, and that each side must struggle for its own interests. It is only a question of which side struggles more intelligently. Now which side do you think is more intelligently organized—the few big explioters in a solid union, or the many little workers on their open shop and union jobs?

Your remedy is, "Don't patronize"—as if jewelry were the staff of existence for the working class! Buy your wedding rings down the street, or sulk unjeweled, and this aristocratic firm will continue to thrive. Will the open shop workers even, withdraw their patronage? On the contrary. Reward your friends is their motto. And I should council all "friends of labor" to continue to buy their diamond shirtstuds there, and so drive labor to a more efficient method of getting its rights.

Today I passed an enormous building job with "unfair labor" fattening on its disloyal wages, while union labor sulks instead of going in and organizing these worker on the job. Most of them are more than willing to be unionized if you take them in the mass. Individually they say, "I stay out of the union because the big jobs are all open shop." Are the bosses then to blame of your fair city is an open-shop town? The big jobs will be open-shop just as long as the workers are open-shop, and no longer.

Unionize the open-shop jobs and buy jewelry. Don't wait for your "friends"—or enemies—to save you. Do it yourselves!—A Ford Philosopher.

BRISTOL, R. I.—(FP)—About 1,000 employes of Cranston Worsted Mills are affected by wage cuts of 10 per cent.

To the Editor of The DAILY WORKER—There is another one of those capitalists' "grab and get rich quick schemes" whereby they fool the hard working people out of their small earnings. This time it is the "De Haven Studio" located at 530 So. Wabash Ave.

This studio sends out agents from house to house to solicit patronage from people who like their pictures taken.

These agents sell a "Photograph certificate" for one dollar down, the balance of one more dollar to be paid at time the picture is taken and "full satisfaction guaranteed."

A friend of mine, an elderly working man, went with his wife to have his picture taken, in accordance with above mentioned "certificate," which says that the regular price for one picture is $7.00, but for advertising purposes they agree to take one's picture for two dollars as good as the sample and "full satisfaction" guaranteed.

My friend was not satisfied the least bit with the proof of his photograph, would not take it for anything. They offered him to sit for another picture, for which they would charge an extra of "only" one dollar. My friend refused, insisting on the "guaranteed satisfaction" according to former agreement.

The management of this studio treated my friend as tho he came there to beg some favors instead of service for his money. They made him feel very bad and disappointed by their high-handed crooked methods, so he demanded his two dollars back so long as they do not know how to take a good picture, but they would not return the money.

It is noted that generally people go away from that studio with minus two dollars and unpleasantly disappointed.

Fellow workers, you earn your money hard, so keep it in your pocket; do not give it away to a bourgeois schemer.—William Stepanoff.

DROP FIREMEN HURT ON DUTY FROM PAYROLL

Laid Off by City in Violation of Law

By HAROLD BASSMAN,

(Federated Press.)

The Firemen's Association of Chicago, which is Local 2, International Firefighters Association, is on the warpath against city officials that are introducing an economy program at the expense of firemen disabled while on duty.

Chief fire commissioner Connery has removed from the city's payroll 27 sick and disabled members of the department altho they are entitled to full wages according to city ordinances.

Letter of Official Futile.

A letter from George L. Franck and Daniel J. Sullivan, president and secretary of the firemen's union, addressed to Connery and protesting against the unjust removals, remains officially unanswered. The ordinances violated by Connery and the pension board provide for full wages for 12 months to firemen injured or disabled while on duty.

The only 27 firemen have been affected by the economy drive, more are to follow, according to William S. Johnston, second vice-president of the local and a trustee of the firemen's pension fund.

"I am told," says Johnston, "a man on engine company 9 had broken an arm, a leg and a rib while on duty. Under the new regulation he will be taken off the payroll at the end of three months tho he may not recover before the 12 months he is allowed under the city ordinance. Yet the pension board is contemplating a reduction of leave with pay to only 15 days."

Low Wages in Chicago.

The Chicago Firemen's Association was organized in 1902. It has a membership of 1300 out of the 2400 employed in the Chicago department. Officials of the union are constantly opposed by the 13 assistant marshals, who intimidate prospective members. The deputy and assistant marshals side with the boss against the firemen. They strenuously opposed the efforts of the association at Springfield in 1917 for the 2-platoon law to give the firemen every other 24-hours off. The law, however, is now in effect in all cities in Illinois over 10,000 population.

The International Firefighters' Association has 266 locals in the United States and Canada, with a membership in 1924 of 15,000 compared to 2400 when it first affiliated with the A. F. of L. in 1918.

According to Johnston, Chicago firemen are getting lower wages than in New York, San Francisco, and Detroit. Even the privately conducted fire insurance patrols in Chicago get better pay than the men whose duty involves greater hazards. Chicago pays $2,200 a year, while New York pays $2,500.

Fakers, Here and Elsewhere

In the United States George L. Berry and his tools made an agreement with a printing company which lowers the working conditions of the employes and enables the bosses to install a speeding-up system, that will mean more profits. When the members of Berry's union refuse to work under those scab conditions, the union chief hires strikebreakers to take the place of the men who walked out. Naturally the pressmen and feeders believe that Berry is the biggest crook in the international labor movement.

There are others of the Berry type in the United States and they can be counted by thousands. But the same type exists in other countries.

In Great Britain Havelock Wilson, head of the seamens' union signed an agreement with the ship owners without the consent of the men, in which he accepted a one pound sterling decrease per week in wages, for the members of the union. The men refused to accept the cut and struck the ships. Wilson denounced the seamen and is now busily engaged thru his tools in hiring scabs to man the ships.

As usual when there are strikes the Communists are blamed for fomenting them. The Communists were blamed for the struggle of the Chinese against the foreign imperialists. They are blamed for every effort on the part of oppressed peoples and exploited workers to liberate themselves. Why is this?

In the first place the Communists under the leadership of the Communist International aim to organize the workers and oppressed peoples for the overthrow of imperialism. The capitalists know this. They also know that a majority of the workers outside of Russia are still prejudiced against the Communists and have not yet come under their ideological leadership. The capitalists never miss an occasion to instill distrust of the Communists into the minds of the workers. But they will not succeed. Just as sure as it is impossible for the capitalists to prevent strikes and eliminate the class war, the Communists will always be found on the side of the workers in their struggles for immediate gains and complete emancipation from wage slavery.

This fact will eventually break down all the fears, hatreds and prejudices that the plunderbund has succeeded in instilling into the minds of the masses against the Communists.

In their nefarious task of robbing the workers and persecuting the militant leaders of the workers the capitalists have no more useful allies than the labor fakers. The Berrys in the United States and the Wilsons in England are what an American revolutionist once aptly describes as "labor lieutenants of capitalism." They must go.

The I. T. U. Convention

James Lynch, capitalist ward-heeling politician was in complete control of the recent convention of the International Typographical Union of which he is president. Lynch is a rock ribbed reactionary, the kind that the capitalists admire.

There is a progressive wing in the I. T. U. It is organized. But it does not seem to possess much of that element known in the American language as "pep." It is not well organized and even tho the progressive elements are the overwhelming majority of the union, the reactionaries under the leadership of Lynch get away with the bacon.

In the last I. T. U. election some members of the progressive wing who claim to be ultra-radicals lined up with the faker Lynch giving as an excuse for their treachery, that the progressive candidate had not lived up to his promises, therefore he should be punished by electing Lynch. This alibi was asinine.

The wily Lynch used the vaporings of those fake radicals to win favor in the eyes of lukewarm progressives. Thanks to the treachery of those alleged revolutionists and the lack of organization among the opposition Lynch was elected. He has wasted no time since his election in strengthening his reactionary machine and the recent convention was as perfect a demonstration of class collaboration as any capitalist could wish.

The fight against Lynch must be carried out in an organized, disciplined way and the charlatans and bogus radicals of easy virtue must be kept where they belong, that is where they can do no harm to the cause or bring discredit on the movement to which they belong but shouldn't.

Morgan and Mussolini

J. P. Morgan has again come to the rescue of Benito Mussolini and the aggregation of cutthroats that pose as a civilized government in Italy.

The sum of $200,000,000 has been placed at Mussolini's disposal by the House of Morgan to bolster up the lira which is going down like a diving duck.

Once before Morgan granted a loan of $50,000,000 to the fascist government. That was about the time, the Matteotti murder exposure threatened to bring the black dictatorship tumbling about Mussolini's ears.

Morgan knows what he is doing when he supports Mussolini. Lloyd George declared recently that if capitalist democracy falls, there is no alternative to a proletarian dictatorship but a fascist dictatorship. The workers are not called upon to choose between democracy and dictatorship. What they will be called upon to decide is which dictatorship they shall have, one of their own, a workers' dictatorship or the rule of the capitalists expressed thru a fascist dictatorship with the Mussolini regime as a model.

It is not to be assumed that Morgan gave Mussolini $200,000,000 even for the purpose of propping up the blackshirt government. Bankers don't do things that way. In return for the loan the House of Morgan will mortgage some of Italy's industries. It is one more step in the process of turning Europe into a colony of Wall Street.

Big business executives refused to answer the call of prohibition director General Andrews to serve their country mopping up the liquor flood. They should worry. They don't have to join the prihibition staff to get a drink.

The French and Spanish troops are preparing a trap for Abd-El-Krim. It would be just like the French and Spaniards to fall into it.

ENGLISH PRISONS ARE TORTURE CHAMBERS FOR WORKERS, BUT RICH GET SERVANTS, BOOKS, CLOTHES

LONDON, England, August 25.—The English prison system can be summarized in two words: "refined cruelty." The scientific torture of the English prisons, is the cultured expression of the open, repulsive brutality which one finds in the prisons of other capitalist countries.

Before we proceed to describe the prison regime in detail, it must be pointed out that in English law there is absolutely no recognition of "political offenses," and consequently, no "political prisoners." Every worker arrested for trade union strike picketing, every revolutionary imprisoned for a "seditious" speech, every Irish fighter for the indepence of his country, is a criminal, and the prison treatment he has served out to him is exactly the same as that given to thieves or to violators of children.

Must Not Talk.

English prisons are divided into two classes. Prisons and penal settlements. The former for those sentenced to two years or less, and the latter for those sentenced to over two years.

Now let us take a look at the inside of one of the prisons. We find that the first evidence the prisoner gets of the scientific torture to which he must submit is: He must spend his first two weeks without pillow or mattress. His bed is just a bare board. Next, he finds his clothes are replaced by an ugly, pocketless, prison uniform; uncomfortable, unsightly and degrading.

His individuality is completely sunk in the general degradation of the prison. Then he discovers that there is a "rule of silence." Never once during his imprisonment is he allowed to speak to anyone in prison, except to answer a warder's questions. Not only must he loose his voice, but for the first month he is locked in his cell in solitary confinement and not allowed to work in the sight of his fellow prisoners.

No Books on Economics.

Particularly for class war prisoners, with their usually active life in the working class movement, this solitary confinement and rule of silence is a worse torture than any physical torture ever invented by "Holy Church" in the middle ages. No book but the bible for the first month. After that he has a book a week, carefully selected, always of the most insipid petit bourgeois romance type, serious books are difficult to find in any English prison and political or economic works are never to be found.

After the second month he is allowed to receive, and to send out one letter a month. He is also allowed one visit a month, lasting for twenty minutes, but even here he is tortured for, all he can see of his wife or friend is thru a heavily wired grill, about one foot square, in a dark room! On the slightest provocation he is hauled before the prison governor, (almost always a retired army officer), and given a few days in a "punishment cell." He must not attempt to lessen his weariness by pacing his cell, whistling or singing to himself. In fact, he becomes just an animal in a cage without any human rights, and with a warden's eye constantly peering thru a hole in the door to add to his mental torments.

Not Enough Food.

Perhaps one could better describe the prisoners as an animal on an operation table, for English prisons are clean and well regulated. So well calculated is the whole regime that even the caloric value of the food is estimated to a fine degree, and the prisoner given just sufficient to keep healthy but hungry.

The above is the regime for the working class prisoner. But for those few of the bourgeoisie whose crimes cannot be hidden, there is what is known as a "first division" sentence. "First division" prisoners can have letters and visits daily, buy newspapers, have their own food, clothes, furniture, and even a servant to clean the cell.

Such is class justice. A bourgeois rascal who some time ago embezzled £20,000 of public money got a few months in the "first division" as a reward, whereas, at the same time, a half starved, unemployed worker, who stole twenty-four cents worth of fruit from a shop, got six months of the torture described above.

Everywhere the prisons are merely instruments for the crushing of workers who dare to infringe on the "sacred rights of property"; an instrument of the class war at present at the hands of the bourgeoisie. Vengeance is no part of the revolutionary program, but . . . . .

MINERS' UNION OFFICIAL STOLE FROM STRIKERS

Feeney of Coke Region Built Big Mansion

By A COALDIGGER.
(Worker Correspondent.)

RROWNSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 25. — After the greates strike in the history of the coal mining industry of the country, in the year 1922, the Illinois coal miners pledged to assess themselves to support the vamilies of the rank and file miners of the coke region of Pennsylvania.

William Feeney, as international organizer of the United Mine Workers of America, for over a year was receiving this large sum. 'The money was to buy bread for the poor families of the striking miners until they obtained a decent standard of living.

The strike was called off in the month of February, 1923. Half of the miners went back to producing coal, and the rest stayed on strike. William Feeney, as "wildcat" organizer, ran thru the coke region telling the miners if they didn't go back to work he would denounce them as Bolsheviks and put them all in the penitentiary.

As a matter of fact, while the rank and file miners of Illinois and other states were being assessed, they were supporting William Feeney. Feeney built a magnificent brick house in Brownsville, Pa., instead of supporting the families of the striking miners of the coke region.

The whole working class must unite against the imperialists and their supporters, the fakers in the unions.

Charge New Tong War.

After a truce of several weeks, guns flared in Chicago's Chinatown again early today and one Chinese fell dead, the first victim, police believe, in a new outbreak of the war between the on Leong and the Hig Sing tongs.

Lee Hoe, 30, address unknown, was shot and killed at the foot of a stairway leading to the Mong Sang Share Association headquarters, a Chinese employment and social club.

Blast Home in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—An explosion of dynamite early today shattered the home of William E. Downs, brother of Charles E. Downs, deposed city council man, brought under fire a week ago on charges of bribery. One corner of the Downs home was torn to bits and the rest of the house badly damaged by the blast.

Workers' Movies Makes Big Hit at Mass Meeting

An innovation in Communist agitational methods was presented in a small mining town in Illinois recently where not a single worker thus far holds party membership. An active labor militant, seeing the effect of long continued unemployment on his fellow workers, conceived the idea that there should be a meeting in St. David, Ill. The best available place was the rough looking corrugated-iron movie house where once a week such workers and their children as could raise the price would come to "let the rest of the world go by". A few words with the owner, an old Irish-American who himself bears the scars of years of work in the labor movement, and it was fixed up free of charge. Advertising was simple, two hundred mimeographed notices in English and Croatian, and their distribution and tacking up around the district.

But this was no ordinary meeting. A three reel motion picture showed the labor struggle in various countries and epochs, and when the struggle was shown right in Chicago and in the not very distant mine town of Herrin, the workers understood perfectly what the fight was all about. William F. Kruse spoke in English on unemployment and imperialism, and on the need for organization. Matt Goreta delivered much the same message in South Slavic and it is expected that an international branch or shop-nucleus of the Workers Party will soon be formed. Expenses were covered by a collection of $21.26. On account of hard time admission was free, a treat that the children and their mothers as well as the miners were quick to appreciate. The kids cheered the strikers and everybody raised the roof for Alex Howatt when he was shown on the screen. After the speeches two further reels were shown, one on the "Life of Lenin" and the other showing the life and work of the Russian asbestos miners. Some of the younger miners remarked —"Gee, they have better halls than we have, and they seem to have a damn sight more to say about things." Other meetings and pictures are to be shown

TRUNKS CAN WAIT UNTIL BAGGAGE BOSSES GIVE IN

Employers Decided to Make Wage Slash

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 25—No trunks must be moved till the workers win is the motto of the 700 baggage transfer men of New York City who struck today against a wage cut and for the eight hour day. The strike is being conducted by the Teamsters, Chauffeurs' and Helpers' Union and is directed aganst the Westcott Express Co. and the New York Transfer Co., whch together monopolizes the business of moving passengers' baggage from the railroad and ship terminals.

The strike follows the companies' attempt to cut wages a dollar a day and continue the ten hour day system. Wages were only $24 for the chauffeurs, $28 for the helpers, and $30 for clerks under the old agreement which expired Monday night, Aug. 24 and the transfermen say they cannot work for less money nor will they continue the inhuman ten hour day. The men are organized 100 per cent.

Very Hard Labor.

Transfer work is the hardest kind of labor. Heavy trunks have to be carried up several flights of stairs and the men have to be out in the worst kind of weather. Rupture is a common ailment.

Attempts to get strikebreakers will be opposed by picketing. If the Yellow Taxi Corporation tries to break into more of the baggage business, the union men in the taxi industry will handle the situation.

The Yellow Scab company already operate their own cabs from the Grand Central railroad station and the Pennsylvania station and advertise the moving of trunks for twenty cents whereas the transfer companies' rate is a dollar. The strike of the transfer men brings out the need for solidarity and unity between all the transport workers of New York City.

The Teamsters and Chauffeurs and Helpers Union is not an A. F. of L. union and has no connection with the International Brotherhood of Teamstears, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union. Martin Lacey is the president.

Would Salvage Lusitania.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—An American, B. F. Leavitt, of Brooklyn, wants to salvage the Lusitania, the British liner sunk by a German submarine in the early days of the world war.

In an advertisement in today's issue of the Times Leavitt appealed for financial backing for his program.

BERRY BOUGHT A FARM WITH UNION FUNDS

Worships "Gobbo" the God of Good Luck

with a telephone in proximity.

The "Majah" Stepped In.

When the board of directors decided to quit the printing business, the "Majah" did not like to see so much good material going to waste, so he grabbed the equipment, which consisted in part of a power cutter, a job press, two motors, several cases of type, several type stands, a power punch and other miscellaneous articles of printing shop equipment and furniture.

Berry and Orr did not start out immediately in the printing business under their own names. They used several names and finally the company went into the hands of a receiver in 1919.

While Berry and Orr were connected with these printing houses they did printing for the international union at a profit to themselves. They bought supplies for their private printery on the credit of the international union and even used the money of the international union to pay the bills of their printing shop. Berry's paper, the Rogersville Review, was also printed in this shop, and it paid no bills either to the printing company or the international union. Bucket shop operators and professional confidence men should envy the "majah" his financial acumen.

Berry's Grist Mill.

The "majah" also owns a grist mill near the Pressmen's Home, and he installed therein a ten-horse-power electric generator. This was paid for out of the union funds and this money was never refunded.

Is it any wonder that "Majah" Berry should be so certain that he is a favored child of good fortune that he should have on his desk the image of Gobbo, the "smiling god of good fortune." We have Berry's own word for it.

In the issue of the American Pressman for March, 1924, Berry devoted a page to an editorial tribute to Woodrow Wilson, who had just died. Wilson was one of the greatest political mountebanks that this country, prolific in mountebanks, ever produced. Wilson was a hypocritical fraud who served the capitalist class well under the camouflage of progressive phrases. He used purchasable people like Berry, Gompers, and other labor fakers as tools to fool the workers. It was under Wilson's reign that some of the most notorious persecutions against the American workers in the history of the working class were carried out. Wilson purchased Berry with a military title that he did nothing to earn, and a free trip to Europe.

The Image of Gobbo.

After extolling Wilson to the skies Berry gets the following gem off his chest. "Upon my desk there sits the image of Gobbo, the smiling god of good fortune, the divinity of optimism, whose motto is 'Be cheerful and you will be rich in everything,' given to me by one whom I loved and with whom I was honored to be associated as labor adviser in Paris following the world's greatest and most horrible war."

Pressmen wonder what did Wilson want Berry for unless he had a big strikebreaking job on his hands. Billy McHugh and S. (Marbletop) Marks wandered over Europe in 1923. Besides the fun they had, it is reported that Billy got a sore eye from looking too closey at a bottle of third grade moonshine. The bottle was in some unfriendly hand when McHugh had his eye in it.

Eyed Bottle Too Sharply.

Of course the pressmen would not hold being hit with a bottle against McHugh, or even his trip to Europe, provided he ran into the oncoming hootch container while battling for the rights of the workers. The pressmen are opposed to Berry, McHugh and the rest of the brood because they are hampering the union instead of trying to help the membership in their daily struggles with the employers.

The smiling god Gobbo is getting too much credit for Berry's wealth and affluence. He should thank the pressmen and feeders in the international for allowing him to get away with it. Berry can afford to be "cheerful" because he is rich in worldly goods. Gobbo did not give the "majah" the money with which to start several industrial enterprises, buy a farm and grist mill. He took that money out of the coffers of the international union.

SOVIET TRADE UNIONISTS IN CHINA

Pressmen's Head Is Exposed As Burglar

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

JUDGING by the action taken on "B and O Bill" Johnston's expulsion order against the Communists, by District Eight of the International Association of Machinists, the ex-Salvation Army drummer will not have an easy task driving out of the union all those who oppose his class collaboration policies. "B and O Bill"—so baptized because of his deal with the Baltimore and Ohio railroad—was promptly told by the district council that the Communists were good unionists and a valuable asset to the trade union movement, and were entitled morally and legally to be members of the organization.

IT was not Communist propaganda alone that convinced the machinists of this fact. It was more than any other factor, the activity and the conduct of our comrades in the machinists' union. The Communists, or at least those who take their party membership seriously, were on the job helping to build up the organization wherever they could and on the firing line in every struggle with the boss. Deeds speak louder than words.

• • •

THE reactionaries have promised themselves to get rid of the Communists. Only recently the officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor attacked the DAILY WORKER because it shows up their treachery to the workers. They excommunicated the daily with bell, book and candle light, but strange to say, our paper is today more popular than ever among the workers. Whenever the workers are in a fight with the enemy, they find the DAILY WORKER is their champion and spokesman.

WHEN the DAILY WORKER made its first appearance less than two years ago, a sympathizer took a copy to the president of Chicago Printing Pressmen No. 3 and asked him what he thot about it. The union president said, that it was a lot of bunk. But today, the Communist daily is read by hundreds of pressmen in every city in the United States and in no local union is it more popular than in No. 3. Why? Simply because it was the only paper that defended the pressmen in their fight with the employers and with that notorious labor seller, George L. Berry.

IN a recent issue, one of our readers counted seventeen stories, dealing with strikes and trade union problems. On the basis of this analysis of the contents of the paper he secured three subscriptions. He was able to prove to those he solicited that the DAILY WORKER was concerned with the interests of the workers. He showed that the stories not only gave the news but gave it partially. It was biased in favor of the workers. We know this is not fair. But we are not in the publishing business to prove that we are nice fellows.

WHEREVER the workers move in the direction of independent class political action, by organizing a labor party or trying to do so, the DAILY WORKER is on the job, urging them on, and pointing out tha tthis is only

MOSCOW, Aug. 26.—In connection with the prosecution of the 500 Bessarabian peasants which will take place on Sept. 3rd on account of the alleged participation of the accused in the South Bessarabian insurrection, the Siguranza (secret police) has redoubled its terror. BERRY FOUND GUILTY ROBBING UNION TREASURY

Ordered to Pay Back Money to International

This is the twelfth of a series of articles exposing the criminal career of George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmens' and Assistants' Union.

ARTICLE XII.

In the previous article we gave a summary of the relations of George L. Berry with several business enterprises which he organized with the use of the funds of the International Union. Not only did he loot the treasury but when the Chicago pressmen got his trail he began a series of persecutions against them, using more of the union funds to crucify those who wanted to see the business of the organization conducted honestly and in the interests of the rank and file.

It is not often that capitalist courts render decisions that are favorable to the rank and file of the workers. But sometimes when a dirty job is pulled off too crudely the courts are obliged to save their faces by a gesture of fair play.

This was the case in the decision handed down by federal Judge A. M. J. Cochrane, on July 19, 1921, in the case of Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 against George L. Berry and his associates on the board of directors of the International Union.

The Chicago Pressmen charged Berry and his burglars with having looted the treasury of the International Union of $165,000 and this charge was fully sustained in court. Here is the most important part of the judge's decision:

"That the individual defendants, George L. Berry, Joseph C. Orr, John M. Brophy, S. B. Marks, and William McHugh, be and they are hereby ordered and directed to pay to the saffi International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America, the sum of One Hundred Sixty-five Thousand Dollars ($165,000), and the said International Printing Pressmen and Assitants' Union do have and recover from the said George L. Berry, Joseph C. Orr, John M. Brophy, S. B. Marks, and William H. McHugh, jointly and seevrally, the said sum of One Hundred Sixty-five Thousand Dollars ($165,000), together with all taxed costs of this case, and that execution issue therefor that all charges for at-

FARGO DEPORTS WOBS; ARREST MANY MEMBERS

Frightened Business Drives Out Harvesters

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FARGO, N. D., Aug. 26.—Because the Fargo Chamber of Commerce is becoming very much concerned about the concentration of hundreds of members of the I. W. W. in this city, following arrests of many of their members, a "citizens committee" was organized to assist the authorities in deporting them.

118 members were rounded up by the sheriff of Cass county, aided by businessmen armed with clubs. Divided into two groups they were conducted over two bridges leading across the Red River into Moorhead, Minn. There they were turned loose and the so-called prisoners took advantage of their liberty to aim several damaging rocks at their erstwhile captors.

Now that the authorities have gotten the wobblies out of Fargo the problem for them to solve is how to keep them out. There isn't a freight train that pulls into town which hasn't its contingent of recruits.

The present influx fo rebels is due to the arrest a couple of weeks ago of 28 members of the I. W. W. who were on were on their way to the harvest. The men were charged with riding on trains without a permit and for trespassing on rail road property.

PARITY RESOLUTION ON IMPERIALISM IS ADOPTED UNANIMOUSLY BY WORKERS PARTY CONVENTION

● Following the main reporters upon anti-imperialist work at Tuesday's afternoon session of the Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, as outlined in yesterday's DAILY WORKER, the convention gave the floor to various delegates for debate. Comrades Johnstone, Statchel, Schachtman, Weinstone, Wagenknecht, Wicks, Minor and Browder all speaking five minutes. After this, Comrade Gomez summed up the discussion.

Motion was made by Comrade Bittelman as to the proposals of Comrade Wolfe, that one be referred to the incoming C. E. C. and the others tabled as having already been provided for by the resolution of the Parity Commission. This done, the Parity Commission resolution was carried without a dissenting vote.

Marx-Engels Institute.

By consent, Comrade Trachtenberg was given the floor. He explained the character and work of the Marx-Engels Institute, referring to the priceless old manuscripts of Marx and Engels and other early revolutionary leaders still buried in American libraries. The connection of the First International with the early revolutionary movement of America had occasioned great numbers of the most interesting letters, articles and documents to be held here.

The duty of the party should be to aid in every way to uncover these treasures. The speaker had discovered in the New York library and photographed for the Marx-Engels Institute original writings, which proved that the letters of Marx had been expurgated by the social-democratic reformists.

It had been proven that even the sole English translation of "Das Capital," the Kerr edition, contains great numbers of serious errors and omissions which becloud the clear line of Marxism. The speaker appealed to the party to aid in the work of the Marx-Engels Institute, and by unanimous consent a motion was passed to that effect.

Report on Soviet Russia.

The next subject on the convention agenda was the Parity Commission resolution upon Soviet Russia, upon which Comrade Harrison George spoke as reporter for the C. E. C. He traced the general historical outline of the Soviet Union, accenting that the period of extreme suffering and sacrifice on the part of the workers and peasants of the U. S. S. R. is ended and a marvelous progress begun.

The time of desperate defensive measures has, in a way, passed, and the economic and political position of the Soviet Union is so far developed as a favorable path, that its very existence under the present conditions of life in the Soviet Union constitutes a real offensive against world capitalist imperialism.

Two Kinds of Stabilization.

While there has been a spotted and temporary stabilization of capitalism, of a sort which—as in France and England—could lead only to more severe crises, there had been also, as remarked upon by Comrade Zinoviev, a stabilization of the Soviet power—and that this stabilization was historically progressive, while the so-called stabilization of capitalist nations were merely interruptions in capitalist imperialism's historical decline.

Our party has taken, is taking and will continue to take advantage of the position of the Workers' and Peasants' Republic in its relation to the capitalist powers and also to the world proletariat. In the period of famine and suffering, the party had built a great united front movement, the Friends of Soviet Russia, which had effectively offset the aims of the American capitalist government to use the Hoover relief agencies as a means of discrediting the Soviet power in the eyes of American workers.

This was the duty of our party as a section of the Communist International, as of all its sections, and in the future it would be the duty of the party to use the favorable position of the Soviet Union to instill a comprehension of the significance and lesson to the world proletariat of the Russian revolution into the minds of American workers.

An Objective Argument.

The position of the Soviet Union is increasingly useful in combating illusions and theoretical misconceptions remaining in the minds of the workers from the pre-Leninist era of the social democracy. Directed by the Communist Party of Russia, at whose head stood our great leader, Comrade Lenin, the workers and peasants of Russia have proven incontestably every basic theory of Leninism, every tactic of the Communist International, every principle as taught by the Bolsheviks—and proven them up to the hilt.

In America this had aided our party to contest for leadership of the revolutionary movement against the socialist party and the Industrial Workers of the World. The socialist party is disintegrating and its character had become a stench in the nostrils of the workers, while the healthy and revolutionary proletarian elements of the I. W. W. have been won over to friendship, contact with and even membership in the Communist movement and the anarcho-syndicalist control over the I. W. W. is falling to pieces and upon the defensive.

The party has in the past year or more taken every advantage to work for the recognition of Soviet Russia by the American capitalist government. The policy of the united front

WIFE OF EX-RUSSIAN ENVOY LEAVES HANDSOME FORTUNE

WASHINGTON, August 26.—Madame Mary E. Bakhmeteff, wife of the former Kerensky ambassador to the United States, left a fortune valued at a million and a quarter when she died last June in Paris. It will be recalled that George Bakhmeteff continued to represent the Kerensky government at Washington long after the November revolution in Russia when his government was overthrown by the Soviets.

He continued to occupy the embassy building and was favored by millions of dollars in subsidies from the American government, the accounting for which will constitute a life-long embarassment. His wife was an American woman and it is wondered if her fortune contained any of the unaccountable funds.

LEPSE, OF METAL WORKERS, IN SPECIAL INTERVIEW AT PEKING, VOICES LABOR SOLIDARITY PLEA

(By Rosta News Agency)

PEKING, China, August 26.—"Our delegation has come here at the invitation of the All-Chinese Federation of Trade Unions," I. I. Lepse, chairman of the delegation of Soviet Trade Unions, told your representative in a special interview here today.

The delegation consist of Lepse (chairman), of Moscow, president of the central committee of the Metal Workers' Union (the biggest Soviet trade union) and member of the presidium of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions; Briskin, of Habarovsk, president of the Far-Eastern Bureau of Trade Unions and member of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions; Smourgi of Moscow, also a member of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions.

The delegation is accompanied by V. Wacksoff, of Moscow, a member of the Central Committee of the Metal Workers' Union, who is travelling also in the capacity of special correspondent of the Trud (Labor), a Moscow daily paper, the organ of the Central Council of Trade Unions of the Union of Socialist Soviet Rpeublics.

Russians Watch Struggle in China.

"The object of our visit," Lepse stated, "is to get more closely acquainted with the position of the working class in China and the labor organizations in this country.

"Over six and a half million organized workers of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics are following with the utmost attention and anxiety the struggle waged by the Chinese people. Five years only have elapsed since the world imperialism made abortive attempts at making a colony of Russia, which had just freed herself of the yoke of czarism. This is why we take close to heart the cause of the Chinese laborers and all the Chinese people.

"Visits of labor delegations from one country to another, with a view to gaining better and closer mutual acquaintance and establishing reciprocal ties have of late been a fairly frequent occurrence. It may suffice to recall last year's visit to the Union of Soviet Republics of the British Trade Union delegation, the visit of British working women's delegates, who recently came to the Soviet Union; then the Franco-Belgian, German, Swedish, Canadian and a number of other labor delegations, which are actually either in the Soviet Union or on the point of arriving in our country.

"Great is the interest of the workers of the world towards the Union of Soviet Republics; but no smaller is the interest which the workers of the Soviet Union and all other countries in regard to the situation of their comrades in China. The Chinese people as a whole, and the young Chinese proletariat are going thru a very responsible moment of their historical development, and this adds still more vigor to the keen interest and the great and deep-felt sympathies with the cause of the Chinese workers which prompted the action of our organizations in sending their delegation here, to China.

For World Trade Union Unity.

"'Having reached the capital of China after a long journey, we wish our first word to be a message of the warmest greetings which we have brought to the Chinese workers and all the Chinese people from the workers of the Union of Soviet Republics and the organized workers of other countries who are in one Trades Union Internationale with us—the Moscow International of Labor Unions.

"We also may express our firm belief," the Soviet labor delegate concluded his interview, "that we shall be given ample possibility to get acquainted with the situation of the Chinese workers and their own organizations. This will help still further to strengthen our mutual bonds and promote the union of the workers of the world in one united and powerful International of Labor Unions."

150 Miners on Picket Line at Banning Mine

(By Worker Correspondent.)

MONESSEN, Pa., Aug. 26.—One hundred and fifty union miners are picketing the Banning mine No. 2 of the Pittsburgh Coal Co. back of Fayette City, near here.

The mine has opened up to operate on the 1917 scale, being the first mine to try and operate in this district.

The company has made a frantic effort to get scabs to work in the mines, importing them from everywhere. However, not more than 30 scabs are working, and they are producing very little coal.

Fascists Attack Zionist Congress.

VIENNA, Aug. 26.—Rioters who have kept Vienna on edge since the start of the Zionist congress here included fascists in their demonstrations last night, and as a result three men were under arrest today.

Tokio Also Accepts.

TOKIO, Aug. 26.—The cabinet today accepted China's invitation to attend the customs conference at Peking, beginning Oct. 26, and expressed willingness to enlarge the discussions of the conference to include eventual customs autonomy for China.

MINERS FORCED BACK TO WORK BY UNITED FRONT OF BOSSES AND FAKERS BUT FIGHT IS NOT OVER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ZEIGLER, Ill., August 26.—Recruited from the klan elements of Franklin and Williamson county, hundreds of men, many of them not having swung a pick for years, were found by the Bell and Zoller Mine Co. to enter the pit at their No. 1 mine in Zeigler. Under these circumstances, the members of Local 992 who have kept the mine shut down for two weeks without an iota of outside support and bearing attacks not only from the ku klux klan and the operators but also from their own sub-district officials, were forced back to work.

This battle, which was recorded day by day in the DAILY WORKER, against the heaviest of odds—a united front of the operators and the sub-district officialdom, both encouraged by had been applied continuously to rouse all sections of the American working class to this end.

Work for Recognition.

Not only had the necessity for recognition and trade relations been used as an economic argument to relieve unemployment, but the political basis of the demand for recognition, that the class interests of American workers and farmers demanded that they stand by the workers and peasants of Russia had been carried into every union and every farmers' organization possible in which the party could penetrate.

In so far as the party, weak and young as it is, could do so, it has effectively met the blockade of lies and counter-revolutionary propaganda of the Second International and the capitalist agencies. In the campaign against Abramovich, it had succeeded in defeating completely the aims of the Barmat counter-revolutionary Second International. Every meeting, with few exceptions, of Abramovich, had been turned into mass demonstrations for recognition of Soviet Russia and for the first time the difference between the Second International and the Communist International made clear to large sections of the American workers.

In the campaign for a labor party, the presidential campaign of our own party, in the November celebrations and the Lenin memorial meetings, and other occasions, great masses have been taught the significance to the American and world proletariat of the Russian revolution and the Soviet power.

New Dangers.

But tho the Soviet Union is a strong fortress, yet it is still subject to attack. Tho the capitalist enemy has been driven back he is not exterminated. The speaker dwelt upon the indications of a new attempt by the imperialist powers to attack Soviet Russia, of the policies used by it to divide the antagonists and defeat the designs, and pledged the party, as a section of the Communist International, to carry on the work in the future as in the past.

The movement for trade union unity, its profound meaning, its present successes in Europe, especially in Britain, in creating a left bloc in the Amsterdam International, gave us a line to follow.

The party must make every use of the British Report on Soviet Russia, the visit of Purcell, in building a united front with all progressive elements in the labor movement to aid Purcell in fighting off the opposition of reactionary A. F. of L. leadership and getting the unions to work for the recognition of Soviet Russia. With a party reorganised, Bolshevized and united, the speaker believed our party would acquit itself well in the future.

Discussion From Floor.

Following the above report, speeches from the floor were heard from Comrades Amter, Olgin, Minor, Askenudze, Abern, Statchel and Krumbein. Minority criticism being directed in two lines, upon the insufficiency of the work done and upon Comrade Olgin's writings before he joined the party.

A resolution offered by Comrade Amter instructing the new C. E. C. to work for a united front movement for the recognition of Soviet Russia, was defeated by roll call vote upon the argument by Comrade Bittelman, who raised a point of order against it as being fully provided for in the resolution of the Parity Commission. Vote 39 to 20.

For a Delegation of Labor.

A motion by Comrade Olgin was carried providing for the gathering of a labor delegation to Soviet Russia, after which the Parity Commission resolution on Soviet Russia was carried unanimously. The convention then adjourned until the evening session.

When the convention was called to order Tuesday evening, the following statement was read:

Statement to the Fourth Convention W. P. of A.

Comrades:—In the issue of the DAILY WORKER of August 26, 1925, under a report of the convention now in session, beginning on Page One and continuing on Page Three, at the foot of Column Six on Page Three is the statement as follows:

"Tuesday's opening session began, after an inspiring appeal from Comrade Poyntz and a few communications of minor importance, with the presentation of the report on anti-imperialist work by Comrade Gomez."

As the reporter for the DAILY WORKER, I wish to state most emphatically that the word "inspiring" was neither in my mind nor in my article which I sent to the DAILY WORKER office this afternoon by messenger. So far as I know the messneger was incorruptible, and the insertion of the word "inspiring" must be accounted for by someone who handled the article after it left my hands.

Incidentally, the article was also passed upon by Comrade Browder, who was likewise averse that the word "inspiring" was not in it when it was dispatched to the DAILY WORKER office.

I might mention that I and Comrade Poyntz are total strangers and that I have never been inspired by either herself or her written appeal which was read in this convention, fraternally, Harrison George.

The floor was then given to Comrade Cannon in a report upon the meeting of the plenum of the executive committee of the Communist International. The following is but an inadequate summary of Comrade Cannon's address, which took up one hour and 45 minutes and which will be published later in the DAILY WORKER:

The plenum of the E. C. C. I. dealt with the tempo of revolutionary development and the line of march of international revloution. A degree of temporary stabilization had changed the "geography of revolution" and produced a right wing adaptation to this temporary stabilization in all the parties of the Comintern.

Of most profound significance as a modifying element of the so-called "stabilization" was the rise of national revolutionary movements of oppressed races and nations of the colonial sections of world imperialism. The right wing had ignored or misconceived the importance of this factor.

The right wing of the C. I. had conceived that the social democracy had been defeated by fascism and concluded that Communists should therefore make coalition with the social democracy. But the C. I. pointed out that social democracy had surrendered to fascism and had not fought it.

The second counter-balance to the partial stabilization overlooked by the right wing was the improvement of the situation internally and externally of the Soviet Union.

In Germany the right wing claimed it had a patent on united front tactics. The right wing had attached itself to Trotskyism in all countries. It had brought demands before the C. I. for reinstatement of numerous right wingers expelled, but the C. I. rejected those who refused to acknowledge their error, especially the error in Saxony.

The events in the party of Czecho-Slovakia illuminates the whole problem of fighting the right wing. The details of the struggle by a left wing central committee and how the Smeral group had given objective support to the right wing by fighting the central committee upon a basis of criticism of the methods it used against the right wing.

Comrade Cannon dwelt at length upon the reorganization of all parties of the Comintern upon a basis of shop nuclei. The agrarian question and the correct and the incorrect Communist tactics in agrarian work was given in detail. The necessity of measures, and the example of the error of the German party in the elections in which monarchism was a danger, was given as a lesson to all party members to take to heart. Political progress is a zigzag.

In the labor party work the experience of the party should allow conclusions to be drawn as to its character role and the attitude of our party toward it. The labor party is the key to the labor movement. But the policy must be correct.

The labor party must be a mass party. All previous attempts to crystallize organization had been premature. Not abstract agitation for a labor party, but connection with the daily struggles of the workers.

The party must make a real fight for a Labor Party and it must insist that it be a real mass party and not prematurely formed. A real acceptance of the C. I. decision and all its implications would be the base of proper policy.

The conceptions of the majority as to the character of the labor party had not differed from those of the minority until the July 3rd convention. This had begun the conflict, and the speaker dealt in detail upon the cause of the discussion over the August thesis and all the events since that time.

The minority had also based two much dependence upon the farmer elements of the movement for a labor party which left the movement after St. Paul. In this and in the August thesis, where the theory of left wing labor parties, multiple labor parties and the transformation of a labor party into a mass Communist Party had proven the complete misconception of the labor party by the minority—which the minority has not and still refuses to recognize and repudiate.

The decision of the C. I. corrected both sides, it approved of neither thesis. It was a new program and the error of the majority had been admitted and corrected, the errors of the minority had not been admitted and if they had the chance they would give the party another federated farmer-labor party. Upon the basis of work done and upon the basis of a real acceptance of the C. I. decision the majority of the C. E. C. deserves and has received the endorsement of the party membership as shown in this convention.

Lovestone Reports for Minority.

Comrade Lovestone, reporting for the minority on the meeting of the Plenum of the E. C. of the C. I., covered in the same general way the world situation as outlined by Comrade Cannon, drawing the same general conclusions as to the necessity of the party following the Bolshevik line of the Comintern as clarified by the Plenum of the E. C. of the C. I.

Differences of the minority with the majority arise, the speaker claimed, over mistakes by the majority which he claimed to be so theoretically confused that from the objective situation of a slackening of the international revolutionary situation, it becomes sectarian on the one hand and tainted with right wing deviations on the other.

This was the key to understanding various activities of the majority in which the speaker claimed the party had been diverted from the correct Communist line. Particularly was this the case in the matter of work for a labor party, with which Comrade Lovestone dealt in detail.

The party must be taught, Comrade Lovestone declared, what a labor party is, what is its role and what is the role of our party in relation to the labor party. This, the fight upon Lore, Loreites and Loreism—not merely ideological struggle but also drastic organizational measures—and a stopping of the campaign of extermination against those who fought for a labor party—these three policies must be the basis of party policy and the basis for the process of unification of the two groups, minority and majority.

Comrades Abern, Ballam, Foster, Ruthenberg, Bittelman, Weinstone, Manley, Gitlow, Browder, Engdahl, Schachtman and Bedacht spoke upon the above report, both minority and majority presented resolutions upon the subject and Comrade Cannon summed up the discussion in a 30 minute speech. Adjournment was then taken until Wednesday noon.

Miners Forced Back to Work

the klan elements—was bravely conducted by the fighting coal miners of Zeigler and their being forced back to work can in no way be considered a defeat for them. They knew they would have to go back sooner or later. They knew they could not hold out against the overwhelming lineup against them. They did what they wanted to do. They kept the mine shut down long enuf to turn the eyes of the country on Zeigler; long enuf to draw the attention of unsuspecting miners elsewhere to the betrayal of the subdistrict officials—attention that otherwise would not have been won and that would again permit the sub-district machine to cover up another sample of a long record of treachery.

Active Men Fired.

The members of Local 992 were not fooled either when more than seventy-five of their active members were told they were not wanted as they were about to enter the pit. The reasons were various. "You called so and so a scab," or "You were on the picket line," etc. This was expected. Hadn't Frank Farrington, the district president, already announced that the "[illegible]" in Zeigler would find themselves out of a job? This was all part of the double-edged attack being waged against them.

Frameup Looked For.

The fight is not over. A single local never did win a strike unsupported, true, but the winning of the strike against the company was only a part of the struggle. The real struggle is the fight against the Farrington machine, and that is by no means over.

Eighteen members of Local 992 were arrested and now await trial on the very serious charge of "conspiracy to murder." This charge was brot by D. B. Cobb, their own sub-district vice-president. Every miner in Zeigler knows the charge is absolutely groundless. Every man knows enuf of the desperate tactics of the subdistrict 9 machine, satellites of Farrington, to expect a frameup. Zeigler is a thorn in the side of the whole machine. The resources of the district are being gathered to annihilate this center of progressivism.

Rank and File Revolt.

But the bureaucrats have taken on too big a job this time. They have sided with the operators time and again, they have stolen elections and been guilty of many misdeeds and gotten away with it. But this is the first time they have framed up serious criminal charges against members of their own union. Already from all parts of the county are coming demands for the dropping of this persecution. The cry is being raised for a special sub-district convention. On this point the officials have not only Zeigler to fight—they will have to fight every honest rank and file worker in the sub-district.

Defense Committees.

Local 992 is going to elect another set of progressive local officials. Altho there was absolutely no justification for the sub-district officials to remove the ones they had and put in a slate of appointed klansmen, the men of 992 are going to put miners in office they can trust to wage the fight against Sub-district President Fox and Vice-President Cobb.

Defense committees have been set up in practically every local union in the county. One mass meeting of protest has been held and others will follow. A large defense fund will be raised to stop the dastardly frameup of union miners.

Fighting Tradition.

Zeigler is far from licked. The history and traditions of Zeigler are those of a battling working class community that knows no defeat. It is one of the oldest mines in southern Illinois. The shaft was sunk in 1905. The millionaire, Joe Leiter, who still owns it, set out to destroy the union. He barricaded and electricwired the mine and set up batteries of cannon and searchlights. He brot in an army of gunmen to defend it. He sent for scabs.

The union miners fought Leiter and his gunmen. Two miners were assassinated, their picket line was broken again and again. The battle raged for 18 months. But they stood firm. Leiter had to give in.

Since that time, 22 years ago, the miners of Zeigler have upheld the traditions of the battle against Joe Leiter. Now they have not only Leiter to fight but their own officials as well.

Fight Only Begun.

They won that battle of twenty years ago thru solidarity and unswerving devotion to unionism. They will win their present fight. But this time it will be a victory not for Zeigler alone. The struggle will not be completely won until the rank and file has rid itself of the damaging and treacherous misleadership of just such men as Fox and Cobb. Zeigler has started the movement that will perform the necessary task of cleaning house in the United Mine Workers of America.

THREE-PLY DEBT PARLEY SOUGHT BY THE BRITISH

Chamberlain Confers with U. S. Ambassador

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Great Britain today made inquiries concerning the willingness of the United States to enter into a three-cornered debt parley with England and France, according to reliable information.

Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, conferred for twenty-five minutes with Allanson B. Houghton, American ambassador to Great Britain, and it is understood that Chamberlain sought to learn from the ambassador the views of the United States regarding a tripartite debt conference.

Houghton Without Instructions.

Ambassador Houghton, it is reported, informed Chamberlain that he was without instructions upon the matter, whereupon Chamberlain requested that he make informal inquiries, in order that definite steps may be taken towards the suggested conference if the United States is willing to proceed.

Chamberlain also took occasion to consult with Ambassador Houghton relative to the proposed European security pact, and the attitude of the United States toward it.

Official circles here are not in the least optimistic that the United States will enter into any three-cornered debt conference, but it has been suggested that perhaps the United States would not object to Great Britain having an unofficial observer in Washington during the Franco-American debt settlement negotiations.

British Hopes Strengthened.

British hopes for the cooperation of the United States were strengthened this afternoon when it was learned that American Ambassador Houghton had conferred during the morning with Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister. Immediately after the conference Chamberlain sent a message to M. Caillaux asking for a conference during the afternoon.

No authoritative statement was forthcoming on the subject of discussion between Ambassador Houghton and Chamberlain, but the British press was inclined to interpret this meeting as indicative of possible co-operation by the United States in untangling the deadlocked situation.

The foreign office made a brief announcement this afternoon that Ambassador Houghton and Foreign Minister Chamberlain had been in discussion for twenty-vve minutes this morning, but refused to disclose the nature of the conversations.

Caillaux Visits Financiers.

M. Caillaux spent the morning consulting with the French financial experts and this afternoon again went to the financial district where he consulted with leading British financiers relative to a possible French loan being floated in London.

Cold Reception at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Renewed of suggestions abroad, in connection with the Anglo-French debt negotiations, that the United States go into an international conference for the readjustment of interallied debts, was received coldly today in official circles here.

The policy of the government in dealing with the foreign debtors has been to consider each debt individual and separately, always opposing any proposal for submitting the debt problem to a general conference. This policy was based on the belief that nothing could be gained by any other method and that a great deal might be lost in view of the fact that the United States is the biggest creditor and has the most to lose under any system of simultaneous adjustment of war obligations.

Demand Separate Settlements.

In the past the suggestions for international conferences always were connected with proposals for solution of the reparations problem and would have opened the door, according to the view of the administration, both under Harding and Coolidge, for cancellation of a substantial part of the twelve billion dollars owed by European nations. That feeling, it developed in official quarters today, still exists with the result that the American debt funding commission is expected to give little if any consideration to the suggestion of a tri-partite conference between the United States, Great Britain and France for the settlement of their war debts.

"The United States loaned the money separately and now we want and are going to have separate settlements," a member of the debt commission told International News Service. "Any conference, such as is now proposed, for instance, is out of the question."

Anglo-French Agreement Reported.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—It was reported in diplomatic circles this afternoon that an agrement on the terms of the French debt settlement had been reached by Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, and M. Caillaux, French minister of finance, subject to confirmation by the British and French governments, according to the Evening Standard.

Pressmen! Not Only Now, But Always, Rally to the Aid of the Daily Worker

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the dead hand of Victor F. Lawson continues to direct the Chicago Daily News. The will of the capitalist-publisher is made public and it develops that Lawson planned to make this powerful Chicago daily a "perpetual institution," continuing to dictate public opinion and piling up profits to be distributed as directed by this voice from the grave.

• • • •

In the trustification of industry, control has passed out of the hands of individual management. This control has been taken over by great inanimate corporations, in which the leading officials are usually parasite pensioneers, while the real work of the management is carried on by salaried "white collar" slaves, not many leaps ahead of the cruelly exploited wage worker. Thus individual management in the great industries has gradually disappeared, allowing even Judge E. H. Gary, head of the steel trust, to spend as much time as he desires experimenting in diets, and hypocritically advising the workers what, and how, and when to eat.

• • • •

But it has always been claimed that the capitalist daily newspaper must have its "personal touch." It is charged that the Chicago Daily News had its "genius" in "Vic" Lawson. But Lawson is dead and the Daily News is going on just the same, because the printers, stereotypers and pressmen are still at work in the mechanical departments, the army of "white collar" slaves still comes down daily to the business offices, while in the editorial departments, the brass checkers all know what is expected of them by their capitalist masters, dead and alive, and they obediently write and edit accordingly.

• • • •

The Daily News has been institutionalized just as much as the traction trust, the gas trust, the phone trust, the electric trust, or any other public utility. It does not need the personal management of any individual.

Joseph Pulitzer started the New York World and the St. Louis Post Dispatch. But he has long passed on and the properties are now in the hands of his parasite and aristocratic sons, who thrive on the rich dividends that come to them automatically.

The name of James Gordon Bennett was associated with the New York Herald and Telegram, which he placed in the hands of a corporation at his death. But the properties finally fell into the hands of the steel magnate, Frank A. Munsey. So with a multitude of other capitalist daily newspapers, that become the direct organs of special interests, instead of being the mouthpieces of individuals holding them as private property. Thus the real function of the capitalist press is unmasked. It stands forth as one of the most active protectors of property interests under the profit regime. It will continue to perform this function until capitalism falls.

There are no capitalist dailies in the Soviet Union today because all power there is in the hands of the workers and peasants, and the last remnants of the propertied interests are being wiped out.

• • • •

Thousands of extra copies of this issue of the DAILY WORKER will be distributed among the pressmen in New York City, who are solid in their support of the Chicago pressmen fighting not only their boss, the Cuneo Printing Co., but also the strike-breaking head of their own organization, President George L. Berry. While they are employed and warring for better conditions in the printing industry, the pressmen and all other printing trades workers must realize that it is one of their greatest tasks to build up their own press,—to give their support to the strengthening of the DAILY WORKER.

The pressmen are interested in the DAILY WORKER now because it is fighting for them in their immediate struggles. The pressmen, like all workers, however, must at all times remain loyal to the DAILY WORKER, building its power, because ist main ask is to end he robber system of private profits that crushes all labor. The DAILY WORKER points the way to developing the present struggle into the final battle for the emancipation of all the workers. Pressmen! Rally to its standards!

One Thousand Fight Fire.

MARTINEZ, Calif., Aug. 26.—Fire which threatened to destroy the $5,000,000 plant of the Associated Oil Company, one of the biggest refineries in the United States, and the entire town of Avon, was under control today after a four-hour fight in which apparatus from half a dozen towns aided more than 1,000 fire fighters.

MAKE DARING DASH FOR LIBERTY FROM MILITARY PRISON

HONOLULU, Aug. 26.—Followin a gun fight police today captured five military prisoners from Fort Shafter who late yesterday staged a sensational escape.

The prisoners beat down their guards, beat down their guns and fled to the country in a stolen automobile, where they were caught today by pursuing officers. The two Communist soldiers, Crouch and Trumbull, were only recently removed from the same guardhouse.

Bandits Invade Heyworth, Ill.

Nine men early today held up the entire town of Heyworth, Ill., cut all its telephone wires, looted the state bank there of $2,000 and escaped.

After cutting off communication the bandits dashed down the main street in an automobile. They drew guns and staged several minor holdups, then descended on the bank, bound and gagged two watchmen, went thru the place and left with currency totaling at least $2,000 and some checks.

RADEK SEES U. S. WAR ON BRITAIN FOR SEA RULE

Also Fight for Job as World's Banker

Editor's Note—The following news article was cabled to the United States yesterday by the Moscow correspondent of the International News Service.

MOSCOW, Aug. 26.—England fighting America for the supremacy of the seas, for oil, for markets, for the right to be the world's banker—this is the picture in the foreground of Bolshevism's vision of the future.

Today Karl Radek adds his voice to the ominous prophecy of Leon Trotsky that the next world struggle will be between the two giants of the English speaking race.

Money Interest Supreme.

Neither he nor Trotsky allow other factors than those of economics to weigh in the balances. Strictly Marxian and rigidly materialistic, they argue that the money interest in the long run will outweigh the ties of blood, of language and of common traditions.

Writing in Pravda, the official organ of the Communist Party, Radek declares: "The world's history does not know a case in which two mighty industrial powers, possessing the great fleets, have not struggled against each other for the supremacy of the world. That is why the Anglo-American conflicts must lead to war."

Seek to Co-operate Now.

He admits that the time is not yet ripe for the fulfillment of his forecast. England and America now try conscientiously to cooperate, he says, but the relentless force of economics pushes them steadily apart.

Radek's views may be taken as typical of Bolshevik thot about America.

"England," he cites, "has issued an embargo on the export of capital, whereas the United States during the last six months has exported not less than $1,070,000,000.

Australia Borrows in New York.

"Australia," he continues, "could not receive a loan in London, but had to borrow $75,000,000 in New York. London could lend Australia only $25,000,000.

"The British pound depends entirely on the support of the Federal Reserve bank," he declares, adding that "Great Britain tries nevertheless to keep her military forces on a level independent of the grace of America. The British admiralty demands $250,000,000 for the increase of Britain's fleet."

On the European continent, believes Radek, France and Germany will be the doubtful factors when it comes to a contest between America and England. "France," he says, "will be the chief European trump which the United States may play against England."

As to Germany, Radek advances the hope that she may eventually be won for Russia, and intimacy with the Soviets would keep her from fighting on the side of England.

England Lost the War.

"The struggle for gaining Germany will continue between us and England, and the worse grows the position of England, the more chances there will be for us to win."

For mankind in general Radek sees a stormy future. And for England in particular he forecasts hurricanes.

"Lady Macbeth has lost her sleep, and will never sleep any more," he exclaims. "England is that great power about which we can say, 'This one lost the war.'"

Four Killed When Auto Driver Tries to Beat Electric Car

FREEPORT, Ill., Aug. 26.—Four persons were killed, or so injured that they died within a short time, when the driver of an automobile, it was said, tried to beat a Rockford and Interurban electric car to a crossing just east of this city, late last night.

The dead are: Leo [illegible], 20; Miss Katherine Oehl, 19; Miss Florence Klass, 19; Peter Daskalakis, [illegible].

Critically injured (may die): Steve Strgios, 24, mangled head and body; Andrew Kloch, 30, skull fractured and internal injuries.

The accident occurred when the auto was making its way from a side road to Grant highway from a roadhouse picnic ground. The automobile was hit fairly in the middle and twisted into a mass of wreckage, the victims of the crash being mangled in the ruin.

Daskalakis was found fatally injured in a corn field two hours after the crash when his moans attracted persons at the scene of the accident. He died ten minutes after he was taken to the hospital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—With only three weeks remaining before the time set by the bureau of the budget for the completion of final estimates of federal expenditures for the fiscal year 1926-27, the perennial controversy between the budget director and the government departments over how much money the latter are going to get is on in full blast.

N. Y. PRESSMEN ARE STIRRED BY BERRY SCABBERY

Against Rotten Methods Used in Chicago

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—An undercurrent of protest that promises to break out into a veritable torrent of destruction of the entire Berry machine is kept down with difficulty among the pressmen in this city.

Everywhere the members of the pressmen's union bite their lips in an endeavor to hold back their expressions of disgust and anger at the tactics used in the Chicago strike at the Cuneo plant.

"Why don't you speak out and let the world know that you stand for solidarity and decent tactics in the Chicago struggle?" asked the DAILY WORKER reporter.

Fear Reign of Terror.

"Hell! Don't you know what happened to 225 of our members about ten months ago when we demanded our rights in the Hearst plants? Old man Berry just threw us out of the union without reason or ceremony. The first man that would open his mouth today about the Chicago treason would lose his head long before sunrise tomorrow morning."

This is the universal sentiment among the pressmen thruout the entire city of Greater New York. Talk to any pressman you meet and it is the same story. They are sick of Berry and Berryism. He is looked upon as the most unscrupulous tyrant that has infested a working class organization.

"But are you going to stand for all this impudence and czarism?" asked the reporter.

"Stand for it?" came the abrupt reply. "Just wait a bit. There is a convention coming and I guess we will have something to say then. But now? Don't open your head about it."

"Are you fellows afraid of your president? Can't you say what you please to him and about him?"

Only Loves the Dues.

"You don't know 'Major' George W. Berry. He has no more use for the rank and file than the tiger has use for a mouse. Only as we pay dues does he care for us. We give him a big percentage from New York of the half million dollars collected every year in dues from the pressmen in America, and he uses it to hire strikebreakers and slavish henchmen to beat us down when we protest, and keep his machine powerful and well greased."

"Do you feel that the sentiment you express is quite general thruout the membership in New York?"

"I can safely say that over 95 per cent feel as I do," was the reply. "We are pretty sick of our tyrant. He has to his credit the most complete series of intrigues and betrayals that I know of in the labor movement in this country. He is more shrewd than Lewis of the miners and more unscrupulous than the old Russian czar."

Follow the DAILY WORKER.

"Have you read the articles that have appeared in the DAILY WORKER during the last few weeks about Berry, and what would you say as to their correctness?"

"Many of us have followed with keen interest every line written about Berry in the DAILY WORKER and every word of what has been printed is true. But you have much more to learn about our little tyrant. As soon as we have finished our plans and secured ourselves against his attacks I will let you know a lot that I cannot give now. You can say that the pressmen in New York are heart and soul with the strikers in Chicago and with the DAILY WORKER to throw the traitors out of our leadership."

The Criminal in Office

By N. D. MILLIKEN, Editor Industrialist.

NEW YORK.—Everywhere the labor movement has been sorely afflicted with traitorous and self-seeking leaders, but the known criminal in office is peculiar to America.

Berry is probably the lowest of this type. And he has not degenerated. He comes by it naturally. He is said to be a product of San Francisco's barbary coast. Certain it is that he was a strikebreaker when he was given a card in the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union. He was taken from a struck shop in St. Louis in 1902.

So he brought to his office as head of the union the attributes of the stoolpigeon and scab herder. And by the use of the tactics of the thug he has reduced what is left of the organization to an incredible degree of subserviency.

His elimination, of course, is the most vital problem facing the pressmen, and it is a problem of magnitude. It is likewise of the first importance to the organized movement in the printing industry as a whole.

Berry is necessarily opposed to a united front in the industry thru amalgamation, but it may seem strange that he was able to dominate abortive conferences of international officials held to discuss the proposition a couple of years ago. In fact the man in the shop wonders how officials of the other printing trade unions can have any truck with Berry and his ilk.

Floods Ravage in Central Japan; Tokio One-Third Submerged

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Central Japan is again being ravaged by big floods due to the heavy rainfall, excessive in the orient this year, even for the rainy season now at its height.

One-third of Tokio is submerged with some loss of life, and property losses which will run into millions of yen. The rivers and canals which cut up the city proved wholly inadequate to carry off the heavy floods of water.

Thousands of the population have had to seek places of safety on higher ground on the outskirts of the city.

BERRY FOUND GUILTY ROBBING UNION TREASURY

tendnace and transcript of testimony furnished by A. C. Dore, heretofore appointed by the court as official stenographer, and all charges for attendance and the transcript furnished by Clarence Walker, be taxed as costs in this case, and that said International Union, have and is hereby decreed to have a lien on all property, real, personal and mixed, of Clinchfield Hydro-Electric Power company, a Tennessee corporation, for the amount hereinabove fixed and for said costs of suit, as security for the payment of said judgment. . .

"That the capital stock of the Clinchfield Hydro-Electric Power company is the property of and owned by George L. Berry, Myra May Orr, and Elizabeth M. Gehres, and is not the property of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America."

Berry Opposed to Radicalism.

The decision was one hundred per cent against Berry. The judge's decision was delivered orally and in concluding he made the following interesting remarks: "He fights like hell and has fought like hell in this case to keep the truth from being known. He has that quality. On the other side I am struck with the idea that he is opposed to radicalism, believes in standing by contracts and would have peace in the industrial world."

The court commented very frankly on Berry's conduct, and intimated his amazement that the union members would tolerate such a man in the presidency. It was acknowledged, however that only drastic efforts would enable the membership to pry Berry loose from the international coffers and from the various institutions that he had established thru the use of union funds.

"Majah" Takes Offensive.

After Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 decided to institute legal proceedings against Berry, the "majah" took the offensive. In June, 1919, he hired Julius Rosenheim, at a salary of $65.00 per week to act as local representatives in Chicago and give his time and service exclusively to the International Union as organizer.

Rosenheim set out to hire assistant organizers at the rate of $100.00 per week. One of those organizers was not connected with the I. P. P. and A. U. either nationally or locally. Thieves sometimes fall out and later on Rosenheim brot suit against Berry for some of his wages and expenses.

At the first regular meeting of Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, held in 1920, Berry's tools in Chicago notified the "majah" and suggested that he come to Chicago to stage a rival meeting.

Wanted to Injure Foes.

The pressmen were to hear the truth about the fight against Berry and the latter wanted to prevent this at all coss. Berry came to Chicago and stayed several days before going to Seattle. He had his headquarters in Room 1710 of the Morrison Hotel and on Sunday, December 28, 1919, he is reported to have told his conferes that he decided to eliminate Local 3 from union affairs in Chicago, several members of No. 3 whose names he mentioned and that he wanted those men injured or incapacitated so that they could take no more part in the litigation.

Those present refused to promise Berry that they would inflict physical injury on the officers and active members of No. 3, but they did promise him in return for some compensation, to secure a certain number of men, who were neither pressmen nor union men in general to attend the forthcoming meeting of the Chicago Printing Pressmen No. 3 and take it out of the hands of the legitimate officers.

The plan was to remove the officers from power and pass a resolution calling off the litigation against Berry. Each man was to be given a fake membership card and five dollars for the night's work.

Fake Cards Printed.

The faked membership cards were printed at the Pressmen's Home, in Tennessee and the stock out of which the cards were made was brot to the Home by Rosenheim. The printing of the fake cards was done on New Year's eve, 1919. The job was so well done that when they were presented at the door of the Chcago Pressmen's meeting the door keeprs did not detect the difference. A Knoxville, Tennessee, label was used on the cards and mutilated.

Rosenheim, after he fell out with Berry, admitted that the label was done by another one of Berry's tools. It was done however in the presence of Joseph C. Orr, secretary-treasurer of the International Union. Even the name of John J. Kapp, secretary-treasurer of No. 3 was signed to the cards.

An employe of the Chicago office of the International Union took names from the Service Record of the I. P. P. and A. U. and wrote them on the fake cards. Three hundred cards were used in the conspiracy. Of the three hundred thugs who were hired to break up the meeting only 100 arrived at their destination. Some of them quarrelled on their way to the hall, and lost interest in the meeting, while others were so boisterous at the door of the meeting place that they were refused admission.

The Plot Failed.

Eight hundred bonafide members were present and everything went along according to the plans of the local leaders and Berry's thugs were not able to create any disturbance.

After the decision of Judge Cochrane was recorded the union decided to make peace with Berry on condition that he bring his scabbery to an end. But no sooner had this agreement been entered into than the "majah" laid his plans to take the charter away from No. 3 and kick it out of the International Union. The outlines of this plot have already been told and it is not necessary to go into detail.

Suffice it to say, that the Cuneo walkout here in Chicago is part of that plan. What Berry is doing is cooperating with the employers in enforcing open shop conditions on the pressmen. When they refuse to stand for this he excommunicates them and sends scabs to take their places. Hitherto he tried to use the feeders' organization against the pressmen but the recent step taken towards amalgamation by the two unions has helped to drive a nail in Berry's political coffin.

The next concluding article will give a summary of the case against Berry and a few suggestions as to how the pressmen should go about the job of getting rid of this "old man of the sea."

Truck Loaded with Ashes Strikes Car; 20 Persons Hurt

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Twenty persons were injured today when a Third avenue street car was struck by a four-ton steel truck of the street cleaning department. The truck, loaded with ashes, knocked the car off the tracks.

Witnesses said the truck was moving rapidly when it hit the car. It struck the trolley just back of the front platform.

Passengers were thrown from their seats. Women screamed. Calls were sent in for police and reserves were rushed quickly to the scene.

The accident happened near a public market and large crowds surrounded the smashed car.

CUNEO WALKOUT STILL ON; BERRY SUPPLIES SCABS

Faker Suspected Taking Money from Rivals

How long the Cuneo Printing Company will be able to stand the losses sustained since it saw its pressmen and feeders walking out when an open shop system was installed, is a question that is causing serious concern to the management.

The Cuneo plant is practically owned by the great Sears, Roebuck mail order house, of which the father of "Dickie" Loeb, one of the notorious murderers of the Franks boy, was connected in the capacity of vice-president. Cuneo is a brother-in-law of State's Attorney Crowe and it was whispered about town that this relationship did not work to the disadvantage of the Sears, Roebuck magnate when his son was in the toils of the law.

Getting it Both Ways.

The chief competitor of the Sears, Roebuck company is Montgomery Ward. There is an ugly rumor afloat that Berry is manipulating affairs in the Sears, Roebuck concern, so that industrial troubles will render it incapable of competing with the rival concern. Already, the Sears, Roebuck catalogues scheduled to be out for September, are partially ruined. Thousands of dollars worth of plates are getting wrecked every day and all the employes in the plant, from copy holders to messengers are in sympathy with the locked out pressmen and feeders. The scabs that Berry is sending in must be excluded from the list of sympathizers.

Fooling Everybody.

Some pressmen suspect that Berry and his pals are getting money from the Cuneo bosses and also from Montgomery Ward and Company. The former is suspected of paying for the introduction of the decrease in men on the machines while the Ward concern is believed to be paying for the inconvenience caused to its rival concern. The members of the union are suffering. It should be noted that we are only giving the impressions of members of No. 3 who know Berry.

New York pressmen are following the Cuneo walkout very close and hope victory will be achieved by the pressmen.

CAMPAIGN OF RED BAITING IN PAINTERS' UNION

Radical Delegate to Convention Withdrawn

By TOM FLEMING.
(Worker Correspondent.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Aug. 26.—When asked at a special meeting of the Painters Local 1158 to withdraw progressive resolutions which had been previously passed unanimously by the local, Fred Harris, duly elected delegate from this local to the national convention of painters to be held in Montreal, flatly refused, which resulted in motions being carried to rescind their former unanimous action on the resolutions and withdrawal of Brother Harris as a delegate to the national convention of painters.

The meeting was "packed" with the most conservative elements, which no doubt can be explained by the fact that Joe Clark, fourth vice president of the brotherhood, had called at Local 1158 a week previously and had threatened the local that Brother Harris would not be seated at the convention, as the G. E. B. was of the opinion that resolutions he had introduced and passed at his local had emanated from the Communists, and that the G. E. B. had decided that no Communists or sympathizers would be seated at the national convention of the brotherhood to be held in Montreal in September. When the meeting was about to adjourn, Roy Proffer, president of the local, tendered his resignation as a protest against the frameup that had been perpetrated against Brother Harris.

MINERS DEMAND, 'TAKE TROOPS OUT OF CHINA!'

Miners' Local Union Passes Resolution

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Aug. 26.—At the last meeting of Local Union 4650 of the United Mine Workers of America at Belleville a resolution was adopted calling upon the United States government to immediately withdraw its troops from Chinese soil. The resolution was signed by a special committee composed of August Gordon, Harry Shilling and Arthur Neuf. The resolution reads:

"Whereas, the Chinese workers are being shot and murdered by troops of the United States and England, because of a strike in China; and

"Whereas, the continuance of the war upon the Chinese workers will bring about another world war in which the United States will be involved with the object in view of exploiting the Chinese workers; therefor be it

"Resolved, that we demand of our government the immediate withdrawal of all United States troops from China, leaving China alone to setttle her own affairs, as the workers of the United States would resent the landing of Chinese troops in the United States to be used as strikebreakers; and be it further

"Resolved, that Local Union No. 4650, U. M. W. of A., extend their sympathy to the Chinese workers in their struggle against the imperialist powers of the world; and be it further

"Resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Illinois Miner, the DAILY WORKER, ane the U. M. W. of A. Journal.

CREAMERY GIRLS DISPLACED BY NEW MACHINES

Armour Squeezes More Profit from Butter

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT.

DULUTH, Minn., Aug. 26.—About fifteen girls that wrapped butter in the Duluth Creamery and Produce plant here were laid off last Monday. Their places are being taken by new machines that eliminate the hand work. The plant is owned by Armour & Co. About ten of the girls are being retained until the machines are broken in and a few learn to operate them.

These workers received about $12 per week. They were in a large room with a cement floor and it was usually damp. The buttter was conveyed by a canvas table running on live rollers. Altho they speeded up, it didn't satisfy the greed for more profits.

The butter industry in Minnesota is largely in the hand of the cooperatives. But due to modern machinery and the financial advantage of the large creameries co-ops are having a hard struggle to hold their own.

The creamery workers had better turn their attention to the cause of their short seasons and low wages instead of striving to be more efficient slaves with the idea of becoming favored ones in advance of modern machinery.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system."

• • • •

During one month a worker can draw 75 per cent of his wages, and then the final payment of the other part due is made on the 10th of the following month.

Getters and fillers are expected to work 18 days in each calendar month, and other underground workers 22 days, and surface workers 24 days. If a worker loses one day's work or up to three days' work, in the first instance he is paid the exact wages that he would have earned if he had worked 18 days, but if he becomes an habitual absentee, he is dealt with by the Conflict Committee in the second instance, and probably dismissed on the third occasion, as there is no fining allowed. But if he can show a justifiable reason why he had to play, no deduction or dismissal is made.

All necessary tools and explosives are found free of cost to the worker.

No checkweighmen are required on the surface as the men are guaranteed a minimum wage with extra pay if they fill more trams than what is agreed upon shall form the ordinary day's work. If a workman fail to produce the number of trams for the ordinary day's wage and it is alleged that he has not done his best under the conditions prevailing, it is dealt with by the workers' committee and the officials. And if a case is proved by the officials, they have power to reduce his wages down to two-thirds of the amount of the ordinary day's wage. But we were informed there have only been about five cases of this character dealt with in the last five years.

The workers are provided with boots and special suits to work in by the administrators free of charge.

For accidents or industrial diseases the workman is paid for the first three months his full minimum wage as referred to in the above paragraph, and then at the end of three months he is dealt with by a special committee under the Minister of Labor, on which the mine workers are fully represented. If it is proved that he is still unable to follow his employment, then he gets as pension the ordinary minimum wage prevailing in the mining industry.

When it is decided by the Medical Board that a workman is fit to return to work, he must be found work at that colliery where his accident or industrial disease happened at his usual rate of wages.

There are no old age pensions, but when the worker cannot follow his employment, and it is decided by the Medical Board that such is the case, the workman is granted the ordinary minimum wage that is provided by the Minister of Labor.

Each surface worker is allowed two full weeks' holiday per year with full pay; whereas each underground worker is allowed one month's holiday with full pay.

The first class of inspectors are called safety inspectors, and must be qualified mining engineers, but are elected by consent of the Mine Workers' Association.

The next inspector is a practical miner who is elected by the district union for one year and paid by the Government to see that the miners are working under proper conditions and that the amenities of housing and special clothes and boots for wet work, etc., are carried out.

A deputy has to be a good qualified miner. He is appointed by the administrators of the mines with the consent of the Association of Workers, and he makes a report to the mining engineer at the colliery or collieries.

There is no maximum distance with regard to setting timber in the General Mines Regulation Act.

The workmen are not allowed to work in exceeding 3 per cent of gas, but if a workman finds that there is over 3 per cent and leaves his work he reports to the official in charge and is paid his full day's wages for same, whatever time it may be when he leaves his work.

With regard to timbering, he is also paid a day's wage for leaving his work when he is short of timber and reports to the official in charge, which, we are informed, has been a splendid safeguard in preventing accidents and loss of life.

No one is allowed to go underground until arriving at the age of 18 years, when he must be paid not less than the district minimum wage received by the adult workers.

No person is allowed to work on the surface at the mines under 18 years of age.

Girls and women are employed on the surface in a few cases, and are paid the same rates of wages as the males.

An amount equal to 1 per cent of the total wages paid each year is made by the Trust and handed over to the workmen's union for club purposes. This has proved a great advantage to the workers in the various collieries, villages, and towns.

The output of coal for 1924 is estimated at 14½ million tons, and that for 1925 is expected to reach 16 million tons.

There are employed in coal mines 140,000 employes. In all the other mines which have been named above 350,000 are employed.

The production of coal is as follows:

Sixty per cent. of anthracite and 40 per cent. of bituminous coal.

The policy is to have short agreements, six months, in no case more than twelve months.

There are 17 classes of labor for wages purposes, each class being in all cases granted a minimum fixed between the administration and the Mine Workers' Association.

There are very few coal-cutting machines in operation.

Only a few conveyors are at work in the mines.

The depth of the mines vary from 200 ft. down to 2,800 ft., which is the deepest mine they have yet worked.

The thickness of the coal varies in Russian collieries from 21 in. to 60 in. Most of the seams are of the thicker character.

The workers pay voluntarily to collectors 2 per cent of their actual wages earned to the association as contributions, and the annual income of the association is, in contributions and other miscellaneous incomes, £405,000 sterling per year. In their industrial bank, the money deposited for an 18 months' period is at the rate of 9 per cent, and then can be withdrawn on 14 days' notice at the same rate of interest. For a current account they receive 7 per cent. Out of the contributions received by the association, they pay from 10 to 20 per cent to the Central Committee of the All-Russian Miners' Union, which provides for education, rest homes, scholarships to university, and also accumulates a fund to assist districts for grants in aid of unemployment and strikes, if any, also grants to other international miners' organizations, retaining 80 per cent for strikes, benevolent purposes, administration, unemployment, etc.

The mine workers are supplied with coal free to their homes, amounting from seven to eight tons per year.

There are no pithead baths, but there are Russian steam baths in the various housing centers for the use of the mine workers and their families. But the housing is generally bad. This is recognized and there has been a good start made since the Soviet Government came into power to provide better accommodation.

No direct payment is made, but in every new agreement, such as we have described above, arrangements are made for extra pay for longer distances of traveling.

The rippers and dinters and tunnelers or drifters are paid so much per day, based on a certain length of work, and if they exceed that amount they are paid extra per foot or per inch, whatever is the custom of measurement.

All dirt and ripping stone is sent to the surface from the ripping lips in the various roadways—in other words, none is sent into coal face workings to be emptied.

The mine workers are housed in close proximity to the colliery. Hence there is no need to travel with 'buses or trains to their work.

The workers at the mines and other industries generally do their trading with the co-operative societies, showing that the Trade Unions realize that co-operation and industrial activity are a necessary alliance for the benefit of those participating therein. They have, however, complete liberty to buy where and from whom they please.

The pit committees are composed of workmen at the mines, both underground and on the surface, along with the management, and its powers are to consult with the management on general working conditions and safety. The pit committee is at liberty to make suggestions and discuss the same as to methods of working and safety, and failing satisfaction from the management can further appeal to the Central Committee. They are also consulted as to the appointment and management and dismissal of management, and while they have not the final selection or final voice in dismissal their requests are taken due notice of, and in many instances are accepted as to working matters, and so forth.

The mines are marked out in areas, and a Trust is appointed by the Government and the Central Miners' Union to work these areas. Some general lines of policy are marked out, but the workings of the same are left to the local Committee of Management and Mineworkers to work out to the best advantage. The pit committee is also taken into consideration when any new methods are being adopted for working collieries or for safety appliances and safety generally.

There are a few small mine owners yet. But very few, who own very small pits or outcrops.

The contract of service is 14 days.

A worker who is dismissed for doing anything wrong can get work at any other colliery. There is no black list, and no victimization exists.

As to industrial diseases, there are very few cases of miners' nystagmus, and there are very few cases of beat hand. But when the workman cannot follow his usual work from any of the above causes, he is paid his full wages for the first three months and dealt with afterwards as an ordinary compensation worker. But in any case, where the man cannot work on account of beat hand, they find him some other work not affecting his complaint.

Visits to Coal Mines

One of the Delegation visited the Gorlovka Coal Mine, which works five seams, raising the coal at an angle of 55 degrees. He reports as follows:

It was difficult work but very interesting, and a new experience to me with all my long mining experience.

Thickness of this seam is about 4 ft. 6 in., including in sections of it two layers of dirt, one 3 in. thick and the other 1 in. thick, in one section no dirt parting and in the other sections divided by one layer of dirt 2 in. thick.

The depth of the shaft that I went down was 600 yards and the shaft pillar 600 yards in length. Number of men underground, 900. Number on surface, 800. Out of that number there were 260 coal hewers. The output from October 1st, 1923, to September 30th, 1924, was 250,000 tons. The colliery consumption of coal was 10 per cent of the total output. The mine has been producing coal 35 years, and the chief engineer has been there since 1910. The cost of production of coal into wagon at surface is about 18s. per ton. This coal is used for smelting purposes.

I went down three of these slanting workings along the face 280 yards depth. The hewer gets his coal, which slides down the working face in directed channels to a chute. The tram stands under this chute, and the coal falls into this tram. Thus neither the hewer nor anyone else uses a shovel for filling coal into them. There is no need for shovels in this mine except for cleaning up on haulage roads, etc.

Winding ropes run on an average of one year, but no rope is allowed to run for more than two years. They used to get their winding ropes from England, but now they get them from Sweden, not through choice but because there are no proper trading facilities with England.

I learned that they are pumping from this mine 4,000,000 gallons of water per day. Their electric machinery was running, at full peak load, 1,100 kilowatts. They were already getting foundations in to increase the electric works to 3,000 kilowatts. The winding engines have been in for over 30 years, and are very much out-of-date. There were three lots of cages running in this shaft of a very primitive character. When exchanging trams they had to pull the full one out before they could put in the empty one. Of the cages, two had four decks and the other six decks.

All hewers in this mine are provided with working clothes and boots. In other words, they change their working suit that they come to the colliery in for one provided at the colliery, because the method of working destroys their clothing in a very short time.

On inquiring into the wages of coal hewers I found that they earn here from 50 to 60 roubles per month, because the management and workers' committee class these working places as abnormal. I then visited the engine house to inquire as to working hours of engine winder and his wages. I found that he is on a six hour day, including meal time, and has 45 roubles per month. The electricians work similar hours and have a similar wage.

The workers on the surface and underground have their houses or tenements close to the collieries and live rent free. They have from 7 to 8 tons of coal per year allowed free.

The hewer's maximum working time is 18 days per calendar month. The other underground workers in most mines work 22 days per month, and the surface workers 24 days per month.

I have already named in a previous report that when a mine worker has to leave his work for any cause of danger, which includes gas, shortage of timber, etc., he suffers no loss of wages for so coming out.

And I was glad to find the mining industry worked on the policy of organization by industry, which means the underground and surface workers, including those of by-product plants and all classes of mining, being in the Mine Workers' Association. And every person working in or about mine industries is a member of that particular organization.

The Russian policy in all kinds of work is organization by industry. This principle, if brought about in our own country, in my opinion would place the workers in a considerably better position to resist the capitalist pressure that is put upon us from time to time.

Whilst I could not say that I was satisfied with the general conditions and work in the mines, still they have achieved under State ownership reforms for which we have been agitating for years in Great Britain and have not yet achieved.

The Bryansk Coal Mine, which has a depth of 265 yards, was also visited. The shaft pillar is 700 yards thick. Number of persons employed underground, 1,500. On surface, 800. Output per day, 1,000 tons. Number of ponies and horses underground, 50.

The coal is called "Diamond," and is used for smelting. The mine was twelve years old. The seams 3 ft. 6 in. There were three Sullivan (American) coal cutting machines at work.

The coal miners were paid in 1913 for twelve hours' work, 2 roubles per day. In 1924, for working six hours, which includes winding time, they earn 2½ roubles.

The cost of living here is at the present time nearly 70 per cent higher than in 1913, but the miner gets benefits now which he had to pay for before.

The cost per ton for production is 22s. into the wagon.

The method of dealing with wages and disputes is dealt with locally by two Commissions. One is the Conflict Committee, upon which are two workmen and two of the management staff. If this Committee fails to settle, then they call in an independent person from some other trade to decide between them. Then there is the Pit Committee, which varies from three to seven, according to the number employed. One of these is employed full time in inquiring into questions affecting the workers and their amenities of life. He is paid his wages by the employers, which means, in 95 per cent of the mines, by the State. As has already been stated, there are a few little mines belonging to private enterprise.

QUESTIONS SHOT AT AMERICANS BY RUSSIAN WORKERS

Children Too Are Eager to Hear About Us

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 26—Russian workers and peasants are keenly interested in the life of the workers in other countries, especially America. The appearance of a visitor from a foreign land on a boat, in a railway car, at a factory or in the village is welcomed as an opportunity to learn about conditions elsewhere.

Below are given a few of the questions asked in the course of a trip down the Volga from Nizni Novgorod to Stalingrad and from Rostov-on-Don thru the Ukraine back to Moscow.

From Workers.

What is the attitude of American workers toward Soviet Russia?

Is the Communist Party of America legal? How does it work?

How many political prisoners are there in the U. S. A.?

How many members in the International Red Aid and how is it organized?

Are workers permitted to hold trade union and propaganda meetings in the factories?

Is the radical labor press legal or not?

What are the hours and wages of American workers?

Is the American labor movement affiliated to any international labor movement?

What is the development politically of American women?

What is her economic condition?

How many women political prisoners?

Do American workers have from two weeks to a month's vacation with pay as we do in Soviet Russia?

What about the Ford system of production?

Are conditions as bad in the U. S. A. as outlined in Upton Sinclair's books?

What is the attitude of workers toward Russian white guard elements in the U. S. A.?

How much unemployment in the U. S. A.?

From Peasants.

What is the condition of the American farmer?

Does he have to pay for land?

How much taxes does he have to pay?

Do all American farmers have tractors and machinery?

When he makes no crop does he still have to pay taxes?

How much does a Fordson tractor cost in the U. S. A.?

Is it true that Americans are so honest that storekeepers go away leaving their premises open and any one can go in and help himself and leave the money on the counter?

From Pioneers. (8 to 14 yrs.)

Are there Young Communist and Pioneer organizations in the U. S. A.?

Are Young Communists allowed to belong to trade unions?

Have they a newspaper in the U. S. A.?

Are there children's homes and foundlings' homes in the U. S. A.?

Why don't the boys and grils have their camps together there, as we do here?

Can Young Communists and Pioneers go to the U. S. A. to tell them there of the benefits we enjoy in Soviet Russia?

Will the questions asked by us and the workers be published in papers in the U. S. A.?

Why don't you stay in Soviet Russia?

Communist March Protesting Int. Socialist Meet.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—Workers and peasants of Chartriex under the leadership of Communists held a protest demonstration against the international socialist congress sitting at Marseilles. After the meeting, several Communist deputies led a parade thru the streets. The police attempted to interfere and a fight followed which resulted in four policemen being taken to the hospital.

Weather Hits Italian Aviator.

MANILA, P. I., Aug. 26.—Squally weather forced down Signor Pinedo, Italian aviator flying from Rome to Tokyo after he had taken off at Antimonan for Manila. He was forced down at Santa Cruz Laguna. United States army airmen are standing by to assist the Italian aviator should he require aid.

REJECTED TOOL OF OIL TRUST IS COOLIDGE EXPERT

Strawn to Swing Club on Chinese People

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Seemingly unconcerned as to what bloody events may follow the order by the Canton government that British ships shall not enter river ports in South China, Secretary Kellogg has given final instructions, in an office conference to be opened Oct. 26 in Peking. Strawn was rejected by the senate last year when named by President Coolidge as special prosecutor in the Fall-Sinclair-Doheny oil fraud cases. He was found to be connected with oil companies and oil banks in Chicago.

Strawn will speak for the department, as will Ambassador MacMurray, but he will speak also for American bankers who want to get back the money they have loaned to China. The Continental & Commercial National Bank of Chicago, for instance, holds $7,500,000 of this defaulted debt of the Peking government. The Pacific Development Co. has another $7,500,000, and the American Material Creditors Committee $15,000,000. Each wants to collect its debt first, when the Chinese customs rates are increased revenue is created thereby.

British Contractors Bid.

But the British creditors oppose this; their loans were secured by liens on the existing customs revenue and the salt tax. They insist that China should use the new revenue, when it comes in, to finance new construction projects. British contractors will bid on these jobs. The Chinese agree that the American debts should not be paid hastily, but they do not agree that the new money should necessarily go to constructive work, either.

One feature of Chinese developments has evidently worried the state department. That is the coincidence that the Japanese have settled their quarrel with the Chinese strikers in Shanghai at the moment when a British admiral is being sent to Canton to force the Canton government to admit British ships to its ports. Japan has increased the chance of a serious conflict between the British and Chinese.

TEXTILE MILLS ARE SLAVE PENS FOR THE WORKERS

Speeding, Bad Working Conditions, Small Pay

By ALBERT WEISBORD.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Aug. 26.—Conditions in the textile mills of Rhode Island certainly cry aloud for improvement. Take the case of the Aresco Company's silk mill in Pawtucket where I worked. Sanitation, while better than some other places, is still a joke. No towels, paper or otherwise, are provided for workers for washing up. It should be kept in mind that sometimes weavers have to twist broken threads onto the warp, and to do this they have to wet their fingers with their tongues and put them on dirty slabs of hard glue which they carry around with them. As the yarn is dyed it is therefore important for weavers to wash their hands frequently. But what with the great speeding up in the mills and the lack of adequate washing facilities, this is seldom done.

No drinking cups are provided and most workers are forced to drink from the same dirty glass that lies around the water tank. The boss was even mean enuf to charge each worker ten cents for ice for ice water and he picked on the better skilled workers, the loom fixers, to get it for him, thus also helping to cause friction among the different grades of workers and further to divide them.

No Toilet Paper.

You have got to give the boss credit for that; he knows how to divide the workers, all right. I suppose the next thing the boss will do will be to charge workers for toilet paper. But as I have never seen any real toilet paper around this may never come about.

For nine and a half hours a day, forty-eight hours a week and more, girls and women must stand on their feet as quillers and so on for $16 a week. This is not as bad as in the Lonsdale Cotton Mill, where a friend of mine is getting $10 a week as a battery filler for four days' work. As she is a married woman and has two children to support, you may draw your own conclusions. Weaving, which pays a little more, takes a long time to learn, anywhere from two months up. One weaver, a learner who began three months ago and who was just fired by the boss because he took a day's vacation, was making just about $10 a week, no more. And believe me, he worked hard. There is no price list and the boss takes advantage of this by cutting down the ignorant. The night help getting 3¼ cents per thousand picks do not know the day help is getting 3½ for the same work in certain cases.

No Pay for Overtime.

Business is good in the silk mills here and the mills run night and day. Here is another difficulty in the path of anyone who wants to organize the workers. The day and night workers never see each other and of course are unsympathetic to each other. It is a fine sight for civilized eyes to see the young girls and married women in the Aresco working till 5 o'clock in the morning.

Altho weavers are supposed to work piece work, yet the boss compels them to work a half hour a week extra to clean their looms without extra pay and in order to be sure they do that he locks the door. If there should be any fire in the mill loss of life would surely result with all doors locked. Workers of Aresco, you are not dogs. Form your mill committee and demand:

Seven Demands.

1. All doors be unlocked and workers may leave any time they please.
2. Standard pay for time used in cleaning looms.
3. Proper sanitary facilities, sanitary cups and towels.
4. Abolition of payment for ice for ice water.
5. Price list to be posted in prominent places in the mill.
6. Recognition of mill committee as representative of the workers.
7. Double time for all overtime.

This is a small beginning that you can make. Organize and fight!

FAKERS CHANGE PLANS AFTER THE WORKER EXPOSE

Reverse Decision to Meet Once a Month

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 26.—At the last meeting of the Minneapolis Central Labor Union the previous action to meet bi-monthly, was rescinded. The fighters of the reds and of windmills were inspired to this action as a result of the DAILY WORKER exposures of their aims, objects and purposes.

The C. L. U. is apparently going to move to much cheaper quarters. that is to say, back to Richmond Halls. I am reliably informed that the C. L. U. is $500 in debt for rent, which they cannot pay. Hence the plans for cheap quarters.

Pie Cards Their Aim.

Nevertheless, the organizer of the C. L. U. reports "the outlook bright for organized labor." This by way of contradiction to his former songs, as published in the DAILY WORKER.

There is no question that the world is before them. However, the pie card is their ideal.

The notorious Sinton of the Cooks' Union, who is well known for what he is in the labor movement, attacked the Communists thusly:

"Ruthenberg, Foster and the DAILY WORKER have destroyed our organization and the Bakers' organization in Chicago. If the reporter for the DAILY WORKER is here I wish he would report that statement."

Needless to state, every honest worker knows that an attack from the malodorous Sinton, is a recommendation to the working class. What he is trying to do, is to cover his own treason to the culinary workers whom he has sold out to the bosses on more than one occasion until now the culinary workers are completely without organization.

Handful Remains.

What remains is a handful of cooks who are tolerated by the bosses, as a special reward to Sinton for smashing the other sections of the trade. Nor is there any "dual" union that he can point to. This collaboration with the Citizens' Alliance is thoroly discredited not only with every culinary worker but also with all other workers.

Now that Albert Bastis is in no position to deliver in the city council, with regard to licenses it is doubtful whether the bosses will continue to compensate the repugnant Sinton, with whom Bastis always worked in the closest harmony.

Vesuvius Not Dangerous.

NAPLES, Aug. 26.—Renewed eruptions of Vesuvius are neither dangerous nor of any importance. Professor Maleandra, director of the Vesuvius observatory, stated today.

Vesuvius continues to roar without interruption and belching flames and smoke present an imposing spectacle for tourists who are thronging to watch the activities of the famous volcano.

FARMERS IN OWENS VALLEY, CALIF., TAKE DOWN THEIR TRUSTY RIFLES IN QUARREL OVER WATER RIGHTS

By L. P. RINDAL.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., August 26.—The aqueduct has been the cause of much criticism, fights, land-grabbing, graft, dynamitting and even insurrections. Yes, insurrection is "a rising against civil and political authority; the open and active opposition of a number of persons to the execution of law in a city or state," says Webster. And this is just what the farmers in the Owens valley did last year, and the trouble is not by any means over yet. Big gangs of exploited and otherwise wronged tillers of the soil went on the war-path with the sole purpose of destroying the aqueduct. Dynamite had been used, according to the authorities, and great damage was done. The aqueduct has prvoen to be ruinous, not only to a few farmers, but to a whole district. And Los Angeles officials, politicians and other get-rich-quick gamblers are responsible, not the project itself.

Eldorado for General Otis.

Los Angeles had plenty of water at the time the bond issue of tens of thousands of dollars was voted. And the water supply from the ground would have been sufficient, yet without going up into the mountains, hundreds of miles away, after it. But General Otis, the owner of the Los Angeles Times, double-crosser in the Philippines and all-around labor baiter, had a little kingdom of dry land in the San Fernando valley. So an artificial water shortage was created; the people thought that they would have to die of thirst. The bonds were voted; the aqueduct built; the dry land irrigated, and Otis (now dead) collected his millions, because the land had been bought for a song. Officials, and other insiders, grabbed everything in sight farther up the line and grew fat, too, doing it.

Labor Conditions Very Bad.

William Mulholland was the chief engineer of the aqueduct at $15,000 a year, and he is still on the job. The laborers' wage was very low, the grub rotten beyond description and accidents numerous. But space does not allow to picture all the misery. It was exploitation to the bone.

"Freeze" Out the Farmers.

Then officials of Los Angeles began to pauperize or "freeze" out the farmers. The water was taken away from them, little by little, and turned into the aqueduct, a slow, but sure starvation process. The landholders are willing to sell their land, and the city is equally anxious to buy. But the water board wants to deal with the farmers individually, not collectively, just like industrial lords in relation to labor. The idea of this is, of course, to keep the price down to almost nothing. Therefore, said insurrection as mentioned above. The hungry Owens valley farmers are very militant and ready to do almost anything.

Governor Refuses to Act.

The executive of the state of California (the "hanging governor"), who is always ready to crush labor, has refused the request of Los Angeles officials to send soldiers against the rebellious element in Owens valley. Why? First, because Friend Richardson needs some friends besides himself, that is votes. Second, because he has been feeling out Mayor Cryer concerning the governorship, next time. But the "Labor Mayor" of this city is not friendly enough to give an open answer. So, "no soldiers, use your courts," says the governor.

Aqueduct Out of Order Again.

But this time god—not the farmers is to blame. Five steam shovels and 850 men are rushing repairs, working 24-hour shifts, thru both day and night. The city is now using water from Fairmont and Hollywood reservoirs.

25 ITALIANS TAKEN COMING FROM WORK FOR BEING ALIENS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUFFALO, N. Y., August 26.—Twenty-five Italian workers were seized today by the border patrol as they left the gypsum mine of the Universal Gypsum company at Akron, N. Y. This was the first move of an extensive campaign to clear this district of foreign workers who came to this country thru Canada.

All of those arrested had passports from Italy to Canada.

GOTHAM WINDOW CLEANERS URGED TO FIGHT BOSSES

Employers Raising Fund to Fight Union

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 26.—The employers are raising a fund to wage war on the Window Cleaners Union according to a statement issued by the officials of that organization:

"It has come to our attention that the employers are raising a very large fund for the purpose of challenging the union. They are tired of union conditions, of higher wages, and that they are being compelled to treat their workers as human beings. They know that in the absence of the union they could drive fine bargains with their workers individually. The only thing that stands between the boss and absolute mastery over his workers is the union, and so you must understand that the only purpose for which they are gathering large sums of money is to prepare for a fight against fair wages and better working conditions.

"What are you going to do about it?

"The employers are now completely organized in one association. You have benefited by our victories over the bosses' associations in the past. But we warn you that the solidarity now employed by the bosses must be met by a greater solidarity of the workers.

"Do not take your improved working conditions and higher wages for granted. It took us many years to accomplish that result, and a failure on your part to join us in the drive against the bosses' attempts may result in losses to you for which you will feel very sorry when perhaps it will be too late.

"This is an appeal to your manhood; that you must stand up erect and be counted as one who is seeking not only rights, but to assume duties as well. We warn you that too many workers in the trade have enjoyed rights without doing ther duties. The higher wages you get and the better hours you enjoy are the result of our work. We are still willing to continue to carry the burden but as the bosses have gotten together we call upon you to add your strength to our strength and thereby overcome the increased power of the bosses. They have all secretly or openly joined the association. Now it is up to you to join the union.

"We have a great deal more to tell you that we cannot put in writing at this time, but if you will call at the office of the union at 217 East 6th St., New York City, at any time before 5 p. m., we will tell you all that is going on.

"Come one, come all!

"Fraternally yours,
"WINDOW CLEANERS PROTECTIVE UNION, Local 8, Dmytro Prysiazniuk, President."

PUT MILITARY SATRAPS INTO CANADA SCHOOLS

Cadet Movement a Cloak for Training

CANADA, Aug. 26.— The military authorities of Canada have invaded the schools of the various provinces thru the cadet movement. Under the guise of "physical training" a species of military training is being imposed upon the boys of the Dominion.

Education in Canada was, by the Brtish North America Act, placed wholly within the jurisdiction of the provincial authorities. The Minister of Militia Mr. MacDonald, on June 24, 1925, told the Canadian parliament that his department "Took no initiative" in instituting cadet corps in the schools and entered no school until the application had been "endorsed by the Supt. of Education" in each province. A letter from Capt. J. Willis Chandler to school principals in Manitoba, bearing date March 27, 1925, urging the formation of cadet corps in the schools gives categorical denial to the claim that the department takes no initiative, and the statement of Mr. Cannon, Minister of Education for Manitoba, that neither he nor his department has given any authorization to the cadet system in Manitoba, seems to dispose of the whole case of the Minister of Militia.

School Heads Not Consulted.

The department of education in Manitoba knows nothing about the number of cadet corps in its schools, etc., and on April 7, 1925, the minister wrote to Capt. Chandler of the militia department asking for the necessary information. On May 18, Capt. Chandler replied that he was instructed by the district officer commanding to state that this information could not be given. This means that the military authorities have invaded the schools without the sanction of the Department of Education, and in defiance of the B. N. A. Act, and that it refuses to give information as to its activities to the educational authorities. Challenged by J. S. Woodsworth, M. P. on the floor of parliament June 24, 1925, the Minister of Militia said that headquarters would give this information.

In the year 1915-16 the militia department spent $84,972.05 on cadet training. For the year 1925 the sum voted is $400,000, and for the year 1924-25 the sum spent was $367,829.24. The number of cadets in training in 1914 was 61,911, and this year it has increased to 125,522. In 1914, the number of cadet corps was 432, and March 1925, 856.

Flimsy Alibi.

The Minister of Militia denied that the cadet system was militaristic. He said, " . . . physical training is the basis of the whole system of cadet training and the military exercises are only an incident." He was immediately asked why he did not include girl training if it were physical training; why the military department paid for it; and why the federal authorities invaded the educational realm since the B. N. A. Act specifically placed this under the jurisdiction of the provinces. Satisfactory answers were not forthcoming. The Minister of Militia stated that his department had authority from the ministers of education in the various provinces and he would bring these down the following day. It is significant that he did do this, and in Manitoba the Minister of Education says that he has given no such sanction.

Miss Agnes McPhail, Canada's only woman member of parliament, dealt effectively with the "physical training" claim. She showed by authoritative quotations that military training was not efficient physical training and that the great military nations of Europe gave gymnastic training to their recruits for the very reason that the military exercises failed to give the necessary physical training.

Soviet Recognition

One of the favorite arguments of the American caitalists opposed to recognition of the Soviet Union, is that no country that has up until now established formal diplomatic relations with the workers' republic, has benefited from that relationship.

But Motosada Zumoto, noted Japanese journalist and Japanese commissioner to Siberia during the world war, thinks otherwise. In a statement to a newspaperman he said: "Japan has profited immensely from recognition of Soviet Russia. There was urgent economic necessity for Russian recognition. Japan secured fishing rights on the Russian coast worth 150,000,000 yen anually. She obtained pulp, furs and other goods requisite for continuance of Japanese industry. With Russia the gain was chiefly political, but with us it was economic.

"Reports that Japan regretted the recognition policy because of alleged subsequent invasion of Communist agitation are without foundation. . . . Japan awaits with interest the report of the investigators dispatched to Russia by Mr. Hoover. We believe they will find it economically desirable for the United States to recognize Russia."

The press agents of the capitalists whose interests are not vitally affected by non-recognition of Soviet Russia and the yellow socialsits and labor fakers will not find it easy to answer this calm and convincing statement of the Japanese publicist.

The Russian market is looked upon with greedy eye by the manufacturers of the world and the raw resources of the Soviet Union are equally coveted. Only recently France consummated a gigantic business deal with Moscow. Those are the things that make the die hard anti-Soviet ranters in the United States sit up and take notice.

Communist propaganda in capitalist countries does not depend in the least on whether a particular country recognizes the Soviet Union or not. The capitalists don't recognize the Soviet Union because they have any desire to help the workers' republic along its thorny path. Neither does the Soviet Union seek trade and diplomatic relations with capitalist powers for any other reason than material ones. The Soviet Union would rather deal with workers' republics than with capitalist republics. The latter would rather deal with the czar than with the executive committees of the U. S. S. R.

Facts are stubborn things. We believe that the United States will be obliged to recognize Russia. The task of turning the United States into a Soviet Republic belongs to the American working class. They will perform that duty, whether the United States recognizes Soviet Russia or not.

A Socialist Liar

Joseph Sharts, the editor of Miami Valley Socialist, is reckoned to be about as decent as anybody can be and still remain a member in good standing of the socialist party. But it seems that when it comes to treating Communism or dealing with Communists, a socialist is as incapable of telling the truth as a pole cat is of emitting an agreeable odor.

Writing of a recent election campaign in Toledo, Ohio, the editor of the above named sheet stated that the Communists failed to get into the race for mayor of the city. This is his comment: "They (the Communists) were never anything but a back door annex to the capitalist machine. Having failed to keep the socialists off the final ballot, they will now throw their strength to one of the republicans."

When Sharts, wrote these words he knew he was lying. There is not one single instance in the history of the Communist movement in this or any other country, where a section of the Communist International, or any section of a national Communist Party, affiliated with the C. I. ever supported a capitalist party on the political field or an employer on the industrial field. Shart's knows this, but his chagrin against the Communists is so great that he throws all discretion to the winds and exposes himself as a common and clumsy liar. Traitors to the working class find short shrift in the Communist movement.

The socialists are mad because the Communists refuse to let them bury the class struggle. The socialists want to be respectable. They want to appear in the eyes fo the capitalists as "safe, sane and conservative" people who would not cause the ruling class any discomfort, but are willing to wait patiently until capitalism passes out of its own accord, peacefully, which it would not do, of course.

The socialists of all countries have made a united front with the capitalists. The Fifth Congress of the Communist International declared that the socialists did not constitute the right wing of the working class movement, but the left wing of the bourgeoisie. This is as true of the American wing of international socialism as it is of the more important parties in Europe.

Soviet Russia is the only power that has any real influence in China today, declares a student of international affairs. He is obliged to admit that in this case honesty was the best policy, and the honesty was on the side of the Soviet government.

The French government has turned the old czarist fleet, which was held up in a French port, over to the Soviet government. England will not welcome this news.

The Syrian revolt against French rule is not serious says Premier Painleve, but the Syrians are quite conceited about their success so far.

Mrs. J. P. Morgan died and even the stock tickers did not stop, not to mention the wheels of industry.

Another shakeup is promised for the Chicago police department. Chief Collins has ordered a large consignment of flivvers.

S. LANTSUTSKY SENDS LETTER FROM HIS JAIL

Tells Communists to Aid Flood Victims

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 26— Comrade Lantsutsky's latest letter to the Communist fraction in the Polish Seim, written from jail, is as follows: "Dear Comrades. The country is undergoing awful hardships as the result of the unceasing rains. The fields and hundreds of villages are drenched with rain. The fields have destroyed many factories, mills, looms and workshops. The ranks of the unemployed have been swollen by hundreds and thousands of unfortunate beggared victims.

"The dire conditions of the peasants and workers are day by day becoming worse and worse. Thousands of peasants' homesteads have been destroyed during the last few days and its families deprived of all shelter. Dire necessity and famine are already sharpening their teeth and stretching out their claws for new victims.

"This tragic picture can not but move the onlooker. Rack your brains for new methods to aid the victims of the existing system. The propertied classes, lavishing millions on engines of destruction, have never worried their heads to safeguard the country against the elementary misfortunes, as a result of which the present flood has caused so much harm. When the country is overflooded, when famine and poverty are most mercilessly knocking at the door of the working masses—the organized labor must first of all demand that the government show most urgent aid to those suffering from the flood.

"I know that the betrayers of the labor movement, the Polish socialist party, will most hypocritically declare, that forsooth, the condition of these victims is not all the same for them. But what they will say, and how will they recant to the independent campaign raised by us? I deem it most necessary that our fraction in the Seim begin a campaign and likewise apply to the Communist Party of Poland and to the Comintern to aid the victims of the flood.

With Communist Greetings, Lantsutsky.

UNITED FRONT CONFERENCE IN N. Y. ON FRIDAY

Extra-Territoriality; What Does It Mean

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—It's an old game.

In the parks the workers must "keep off the grass."

In the country the people can barely step off the road without finding a sign "Private! No trespassing!"

The various unions send out frantic calls: "Strike On! Keep out of this city."

The workers of Europe, and still more those of Asia, find they are not wanted in America.

And now the workers of China find that they have less rights in their own country than the rankest "foreigner" backed by a couple of ancient treaties and modern machine guns.

Extra-territoriality. It's an old game.

The regular American name for it is "Keep off the earth."

Show Your Solidarity.

But we say "Keep your hands off China" you Eastern capitalists and their lackeys.

A chain is as strong as its weakest link. At present the workers' rights are endangered in China more than anywhere else.

Workers of New York—Protest against the scabbing of America on the workers' strike in China. Come to the United Conference called by the Workers Party with the slogans "Hands Off China—Stand by Soviet Russia," which will be held this coming Friday, August 28, 8 p. m., at Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Avenue, N. Y.

Steck Increases Lead.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—Daniel F. Steck, democrat, today increased his lead over Senator Smith W. Brookhart in the contested Iowa senatorial election.

With the recount complete in 67 counties, Steck's lead was 11,548. The figures were: Steck, 275,518; Brookhart, 263,970.

A total of 6,929 ballots has been challenged, of which 5,119 votes were cast for Brookhart and 1,810 for Steck.

Airplanes in Bandit Hunt.

COLBY, Kans., Aug. 26.—Two airplanes, one from Colby, and the other from Platt City, Nebr., are scouring western Kansas today for two cowboy-dressed bandits who late yesterday shot and killed a policeman at Platte City and later, in escaping, shot to death Dan Pratt, sheriff, at Colby.

AS WE SEE IT

a step in the right direction; that only a mass Communist Party can lead the working class in the final battle for the abolition of the rule of capitalism. These are the facts, that block the conspiracy of the capitalists and the labor fakers to put the Communists out of business.

ONE of our readers from Denver, Colorado, wired in, asking us to comment on an article written by Ramsay MacDonald for the Nation. It is entitled "British Constitutionalism and the Coal Settlement." MacDonald, who is one of the leaders of international socialism, deplores the surrender of the tory government to the threat of a general strike. "There is a gripping doubt at our hearts about the price in cash and psychology, which we shall have to pay" says MacDonald. What MacDonald is worried about is not that the bloated coal owners are compensated at the expense of industry as a whole, but because the government surrendered to the threat of a general strike.

TO quote MacDonald further: "The prospect was undoubtedly appalling, and the sections which believe that governments only yield to force and that direct action against society—that is the revolutionary method—offers great prospects for improvement in working class conditions naturally feel that they have accomplished a great triumph. They are now able to say that a threat of direct action wrung ten million pounds from the taxpayers. They overlook the fact that as striking as trade union unity was the unity of public opinion."

THE last sentence is sheer nonsense. Public opinion so-called was divided between sympathy for the miners and opposition. The class conscious section of the working class and its press were for the miners. All the capitalists and their press were against them. The few who favored a compromise did so on grounds of expediency. The "public opinion" that MacDonald talks about is not worth a tinker's damn to the workers. If the miners depended on it instead of on their own power combined with the millions of other workers, they would be down in the mines now chewing the cud of defeat, as they did when they were betrayed by false leaders in 1921.

WHAT Mr. James Ramsay MacDonald, the pet of the tory biscuit manufacturer, Alexander Grant, is actually doing is bidding against Stanley Baldwin for the job of running the empire. MacDonald says in effect that if he were in Baldwin's place he would not surrender in the face of a threat of direct action. Baldwin, he says, "handed over the honors of war to those who may be inclinded to toy with revolution." In his article in the Nation this slimy traitor does not let slip the opportunity to take a slam at the British Trade Union Delegation's report on Soviet Russia. He sneers at the "fairy tales about the idyllic conditions of Russia and the rouged and powdered reports of untrained and credulous investigators."

WHAT a nauseating hypocrite! Fortunately, MacDonald is digging his own political grave and before long even the British ruling class will have no more use for him, because the capitalists only use labor leaders while they have a following. Even at the labor party conference MacDonald was defeated in the vote on the "Zinoviev letter" for which MacDonald was more responsible than any other person in Great Britain. The workers will deal with MacDonald.

"Dress Well" Campaign Forerunner to Wage Cuts

Clothes do not make the man, saith the bard, but the clothing dealer knows that if you buy more and better than you need it will make him rich.

"Our Dress Well and Succeed campaign has created a nation-wide consciousness of dress that is not only reflected in increased sales," declares Pres. R. E. Bigelow to the 12th annual convention of Retail Clothiers & Furnishers in Chicago, "but has made men of affairs everywhere suggest to their confreres and employes that a certain amount of thought given to their outward appearance would not be without increased efficiency."

Next time the boss posts a factory order that all overalls must be cleaned and pressed once a week and that no business suit should be worn more than four months it will be further proof that the retail clothiers' Dress Well & Succeed campaign has made another convert among the employers.

Tho officials of the national association deny it, a campaign seems to be getting under way in close co-operation with the clothing manufacturers for wage cuts in the men's garment industry.

Predicts Forest Fires.

SAULTE STE. MARIE, Mich., Aug. 26.—Unless rain drenches the Upper Peninsula and the northern extremities of the lower state, the most destructive forest fires in years are expected to make headway today, Mark Craw, district state conservation officer at Traverse City, predicted.

CHENG, CHINESE SEAMEN'S HEAD, CALLS FOR AID

Seamen's Headquarters in Shanghai Raided

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI—(By Mail)—A letter addressed to the DAILY WORKER by the general secretary of the Chinese Seamen's Union, Bruce Chen, appeals for help from the American working class in the hard, uphill fight being waged against the foreign imperialists by the Chinese workers and students. The letter announces that the reactionary, foreign-controlled municipal council of Shanghai closed the doors of the Chinese Seamen's Union headquarters in Tien Dong road and arrested the leaders of the union after administering severe beatings.

The Chinese seamen have been on strike since two months ago when they tied up Chinese ports in protest against the fatal shooting of Chinese workers and students taking part in a peaceful demonstration for the striking textile workers of Shanghai.

Foreign Conspiracy.

Chen reports that Shanghai continues under the strictest military dictatorship with foreign troops constantly on duty. "At the present time," Cheng writes, "Great Britain is conspiring hand in hand with the Americans and Japanese in an intrigue to force the most powerful Chinese military general, Chang Tso Ling—an ex-Manchurian bandit—to overthrow the present national government, which is sympathetic to our present struggle against foreign imperialism."

"Already this puppet general has tried to force us back to work at the point of his soldiers' bayonets. We rely upon the intervention of the workers of the world to bring this plot of foreign capitalists to failure."

Casualties.

Enclosed with the communication were some two dozen photographs of dead and wounded Chinese workers and students who were shot during the Nankin road massacre on May 30th. In this attack, led by British troops, 41 Chinese were killed and 120 wounded. In a similar shooting on June 11th in Hankow, 15 were killed and 60 wounded. In Shameen, Canton, machine gun and three-inch rifle fire from gunboats moored in the Pearl river killed 80 and wounded 400.

Fire Starts in Garage; Destroys Toilers' Homes

MONTREAL, Can., Aug. 26.—A fire started in a garage on Ontario street near the corner of Saint Denis street threw the crowded East end of the city into a panic today. Men, women and children fled from their homes in their night clothes at the approach of the onrushing flames which destroyed blocks of houses.

Firemen came rushing to the scene from all sections of Montreal but the water pressure in this proletarian section of the city is very poor and this coupled with the high wind seriously hampered their work.

Omaha Boosts Labor Defense.

OMAHA, Neb.—Workmen's Circle branch 626, Ladies' Radical Club and Interpartisian Club held a joint picnic at Elmwood Park, Omaha, on Sunday, August, 23, at which a raffle was held for the benfit of International Labor Defense and the ICOR. The picnic was pronounced a great success, over $80.00 being raised to be divided equally between the two organizations. Harry Chudacoff, 2860 Cuming street, won the box of silverware. The arrangements committee in charge of the picnic wish to thank all those who helped make the affair a success.

SOVIET UKRAINE OPENS LANGUAGE COURTS TO MEET NEEDS OF PEOPLE

KHARKOV, Ukraine, Aug. 26.—The Ukraine Central Executive Committee of Soviets has resolved to open thirty-two special Russian local district courts, six Polish, thirty Jewish, four Bulgarian and four Greek. In these courts the entire proceedings would be conducted in the respective national tongues, meeting the needs of the population of the national minorities.

LEFT WING GEORGIAN MENSHEVIK LEADERS NOW SUPPORT SOVIET

MOSCOW, Aug. 26—Borisov and Nevogrudsk, members of the menshevik party since 1905 have published a decleration in which the left wing of the Georgian mensheviki recognizes the socialist character of the Russian revolution, and in which the menshevik standpoint of the reconstruction of capitalism is abandoned and the one-time party comrades are appealed to to leave the Second International as the latter has no place for revolutionary Marxists.

The old menshevik Karabi publishes a letter in which he declares that the sentence in the prosecution against the Georgian insurgents is justified, but nevertheless welcomes the clemency shown and expresses the hope that the action of the members of the committee will be followed also by others who will then give up the useless fight against the Soviet power.

POLISH TERROR AROUSES TOILERS OF SOVIET UNION

Large Protest Meetings Held Thruout U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW, Aug. 26—The execution of Botwin, the new attack against Lantsutsky, the mass arrests and the new wave of white terror in Poland have called forth the greatest indignation in the Soviet Union. Everywhere from Leningrad to Tiflis, from the Ukraine to Siberia, mass and shop meetings have been held and sharp protests adopted against the unexpected system of provocation and the white terror. The mass meeting called by the Red Aid in Moscow was particularly stormy, Dombal analyzed the situation in Poland and pointed out that the external and internal political situation was so desperate and coupled with the fall of the Zloty and the approaching economic crisis that the large landowners and capitalists had no other method but to hold down the revolutionary uprising by terror and provocation. Revolutionary workers who had fled from Poland described the horrors of the Polish prisons, the tortures and murders, a weapon of the Polish bourgeoisie in its struggle against the revolutionary workers and peasants. The resolution of the mass meeting demanded the release of Gibner, Knievski and Rutkovski, and greeted Comrade Lantsutsky. A telegram of protest was sent to the Polish minister of justice.

Novelty Workers to Hold Organization Mass Meetings in N. Y.

(From a Worker Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—An organization drive is among the unorganized novelty workers in New York City, according to a statement just issued to DAILY WORKER correspondent, by the executive board of the International Jewelry Workers' Union, Local 17.

Mass meetings, to organize the jewelry and novelty workers are being called for the following days. Tuesday, Sept. 1; Tuesday, Sept. 8; Tuesday, Sept. 15, and Tuesday, Sept. 22. All meetings will take place at Royal Hall, 85 East 4th street, and will start at 8 p. m. sharp.

Conditions, in the novelty trade are unbearable. Workers are known to be on the job forty-eight and fifty hours a week, and it is not an uncommon practice for the workers to take work home.

Most of the men in the trade are working piece work. Wages are very low and it is said by some of the workers that the pay they now receive is half the 1920 scale. All jewelry workers are urged to come to the mass meetings.

Payroll Bandits Get $11,000.

CLINTON, Ind., Aug. 26.—In a brief running gun battle, five bandits held up a bank messenger and three armed guards on a road near here today and escaped in an automobile with an $11,000 payroll belonging to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad.

AN INDEPENDENT SYRIA IS AIM OF GENERAL REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT GROWING TO SERIOUS PROPORTIONS

LONDON, August 26.—The revolt of the Druses tribes against the French administration in Syria has assumed very serious proportions according to a Central News dispatch from Vienna today.

The Druses leader, Sultan Atrach Pasha, has declared he will reject any offer of mere autonomy and will fight to the bitter end for complete Syrian independence.

Interviewed at his headquarters in Medjel, Atrach Pasha said, "The rebellion is no longer merely local but it is the beginning of a general revolution in Syria. We shall not be satisfied with autonomy for the Druses tribes. We demand an independent Syria. If France makes further attacks rebellion will blaze out [illegible] of Syria. It is better to die free than to live in bondage."

POLISH TERROR STATE MURDERS 4TH COMMUNIST

Botvin Charged with Killing Provocateur

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, August 26—Comrade Botvin a young shoemaker has been shot. The courtmartial in Lvov hurried at top speed to execute the sentence which was dictated by the "highest considerations." Within three hours after the verdict was brot in, and in dead opposition to law, Mylord the democratic president waived the petition for pardon, presented by the council for defense.

Comrade Botvin's bullet caught the bourgeois landowning band on the raw spot. "The tragic death of our best worker"—thus spoke the Republic on the murder of the provocator, Czekhnovski.

Manufactured Many Plots.

Without a doubt Czekhnovski was their best employe—even as Green and tens of other of the foulest figureheads of the czarist secret service were the best friends of the czarist regime. Czekhnovsky and the role played by him in the many trials, wherein he betrayed so many proletraians to hard labor and death—he and his role are still to be remembered.

Czekhnovski's swift career began with the Baginski and Vetcherkevitch trial, under the direction of his "teacher," Piontkevitch, the chief of the secret service. No methods were too dirty, no forgeries too foul, to be used as weapons for Czekhnovsky. It was he who suddenly "exposed" the most unbelievable "Bolshevik" plans, "plots," "committees" and nuclei.

You see, he did not visit Lvov in vain. "On the eve of his departure from Warsaw," writes the Republic, "Czekhnovski conferred with Piontkevitch." And further on, the Republic hints — "The Communists killed Czekhnovski, fearing that he would expose them during the Lvov trial for the attempt to assassinate the president."

And it follows, Czekhnoviski's "superiors" were thinking of a "plan for a wonderful provocation" to prove the complicity of the Communist Party in the attempt on the president's life.

Foulest of Spies.

Czekhnovsky is unworthy neither as unit nor as a personality. In the person of this foulest of provocators we see a whole system. Czekhnovsky, Troyanovsky, Luschak (see the Engel case) there are notable representatives—the signs of dissensions and symptoms of the degeneration to which the gendarme system of the Polish landowners and bourgeois is slowly but surely sliding.

The secret of this mad haste, raised against young, bold Comrade Botvin, lies in this very close connection between the Czekhnovski's and the system which begat them.

Socialist Defend Spy.

The whole of the trial took place in an atmosphere of unheard of provocation. All the newspapers, not excluding the Polish socialist party—Worker, raised their voices in a common howl against the murder fo their "most faithful servant." A most touching union in defense of a provocator against a worker-Communist. This never occurred during the whole existence of the czarist regime.

Botvin has been shot. The Polish bourgeoise, with this bloody death sentence, signs its accordance and full solidarity with the system of provocation. The Polish bourgeoisie has taken this system under its material wing—safeguarding and legalizing it.

Next on the cause list we have the case of three other comrades heart and soul attached to the cause of the workers and peasants: Gibner, Knievski and Rutkovski. Their trial was postponed only owing to the "Accused's state of health." Badly wounded, they underwent such a fierce beating, even as Comrade Botwin received after his arrest. But the three comrades, wounded as they were, have also been murdered by the Polish white terror state.

Polish Workers Aroused.

The Polish proletariat most worthily defended itself against the bourgeoisie and their bodyguards—from the Polish socialist party. The self-defense of the working class against the provocators has met with the sympathy of the masses. After the death of Czekhnovski 30 red flags suddenly appeared on telegraph poles and different houses, and many slogans were written on the walls—"Death to the traitors"—"Praise to the heroes."

The Warsaw Echo after the arrest of these three comrades did not confess in pain: "It is most necessary that the attitude of Iron street and district (the "East End" of Warsaw) be most decisively stigmatized. These districts constantly interfere by all the means in their power, against the police in the execution of their duties thereby aiding the criminals in their escape."

Not only "Iron street and district," but the whole of the Polish proletariat declares its most energetic protest against the foul methods of the Polish secret service.

AN HRACITE COAL STRIKE NEARS

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

FEDERAL JUDGE JAMES E. WILKERSON entered an order for the receives of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad not to pay the $800,000 interest due on the $20,000,000 promisory note of the railroad, held by the United States director of railroads. The order was issued on the ground that the note is secured by $32,000,000 refunding bonds and mortgages over railroad property that has depreciated more than 50 per cent since they were issued, so that there is now no tangible assets behind the note.

WILKERSON is the gentleman who issued the famous injunction in the shopmen's strike of 1922, on application of the then attorney general, Harry M. Daugherty. He is a good friend of the railroads. This is a very cute way to get $20,000,000. What is the use of having judges unless they do the work? If a judge proved as lenient in the case of a striking workes held for violation of some statute, he would be considered a public menace by the capitalist press.

THERE is a cartoon in yesterday's Daily News, of Chicago, which represents Soviet Russia endeavoring to find favor in the eyes of the rest of the world. The cartoonist was so bankrupt in originality that he had to fall back on the old reliable whiskers to bring home his point. The idea for the picture had its origin in a recent dispatch from the Associated Press representative in Moscow, to the effect that the Communist Party of Russia, which is the ruling party, passed a resolution that will give more favored living conditions to the so-called white collar workers.

THE capitalist tripe hounds saw in this another step towards peace with capitalism on the part of the Soviet government. As if there was any incompatibility between white collars and clear brains or Bolshevism! It merely indicates the increasing stability of the Soviet regime and the fact that the "white collar" elements or the industrial and commercial experts who did not coddle to the new order, have finally accepted the Soviet rule as a thing of power and permanency.

"I'M trying to look respectable now—see my collar is white." These are the words the artist puts into the mouth of the alleged Bolshevik. And the "rest of the world" is made to reply, "not very well—your whiskers are in the way." Perhaps most of the readers of the Daily News will see no connection between this cartoon and the interview with a Japanese newspaperman that appeared on the previous day. The Japanese statesman said that his country benefited very much from its treaty with Russia and because of its recognition of the Soviet power. This was dangerous stuff and must be counteracted.

WHAT a false impression this cartoon conveys? One would imagine that Soviet Russia is not recognized by a single country in the world. As a matter of fact all the great powers except the United States and most of the small powers have recognized Russia. The liberal supply of hirsute adornment which the cartoonist attaches to his mythical Russian is supposed to represent Bolshevism, and this is the obstacle to respectability! What is making So-

MINE WALKOUT IS SURE; PEACE EFFORTS FAIL

Committee Prepares for Anthracite Tie-up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 27.—The sub-scale committee of the anthracite miners went into session here today to make the final arrangements for a suspension of work in the hard coal fields. All hope of averting the issuance of the strike call for a walkout on Sept. 1st has been given up.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, delivered his last ultimatum today. He said: "Unless the anthracite operators withdraw their statement that they will yield to nothing and reject everything that disturbs one factor of mine costs, a strike is inevitable."

No Wage Increase.

The operators agree to reopen negotiations on the condition that "it is distinctly understood that we have not agreed to abandon our opposition to the check-off and wage increases, both of which we believe to be unsound and unwarranted."

Last minute efforts of a "no-strike" committee representing the business men of the hard coal belt have ended in dismal failure. Secret conferences at the Sterling and Bellevue-Stratford hotels between the citizens' committee, headed by John H. Uhl, and the belligerents netted nothing but statements by both the miners and the operators reiterating their former positions.

Strike Order Tomorrew.

The citizens' committee had held a conference with Lewis at Hazelton yesterday and became panicky when Lewis left for Philadelphia and announced that he was preparing the strike order. They followed him to the Quaker city and again attempted to "bring the miners to reason," but with obviously small success. However, Lewis announced that there was still time for the strike call and that it would not be issued today.

It is assumed that the order for the tieup is prepared and the meeting today of the sub-scale committee makes it almost certain that the call will go out tomorrow.

Washington Busy.

The administration at Washington, according to recent word, is convinced that a suspension on Sept. 1st is unavoidable and is laying plans to meet the situation. Talk about the government being powerless to interfere with the conflict when it breaks is shown to be nothing more than talk by news of the activity of the interstate commerce commission.

The I. C. C. is checking up on all surpluses and is making arrangements to give clear right of way to all substitutes for anthracite and bituminous fuel in case of a stoppage.

No Scabs.

One thing in favor of the anthracite diggers is the small chance of their being replaced by scabs. There is a Pennsylvania law which provides that all workers in anthracite must have at least two years' experience. But even if the law were not enforced, the fact remains that anthracite cannot be successfully mined without experienced hard coal diggers and the Pennsylvania anthracite fields are the only ones in this country.

Following a propaganda campaign in New England led by John Hays Hammond, former head of the United States coal commission, for the use of substitutes for anthracite in breaking the coming strike, a new story is being circulated in an attempt to frighten the miners and re-assure users of anthracite. This last campaign of publicity comes from a spokesman of the Pittsburgh Coal company, the largest bituminous operators in the country.

"Smokeless Pool"

It runs like this: "In the event of a strike in the hard coal fields of Pennsylvania, an ample supply of 'smokeless' bituminous fuel is on hand to allay the suffering public for some time." On top of this there is the

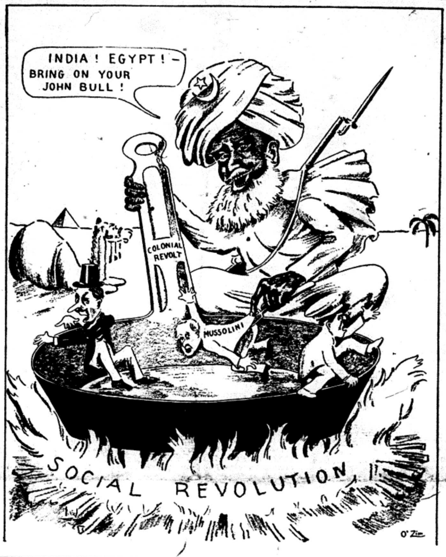
STRIKE ORDER DUE ANY TIME; FIXING UP MAINTENANCE CREWS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—The strike order for the anthracite tie-up probably will be issued within the next few hours, it was definitely learned this afternoon. The union sub-scale committee was only awaiting the decision of the conciliation board in regard to "maintenance crews" before broadcasting the order to suspend work.

INTO THE FRYING PAN



'SECURITY' PACT WOULD ISOLATE SOVIET UNION

Moscow Papers Expose Plot of Entente

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Aug. 27.—That all the campaign in favor of the so-called guarantee pact is a link in the chain of measures which the entente powers, with Great Britain as their ringleader, are trying to carry thru in their frantic efforts to isolate the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and by splitting the Union and Germany to create a single united front against the former and start against it a fresh system of blockade—is the view held by most of the leading Soviet papers.

The Izvestia remarks that it is from this angle that must be viewed the queer idea emanating from and endorsed by certain English politicians that Germany must be allowed to arm.

After a searching analysis of the actual world situation, the leading Moscow organ comes to the infallible conclusion that this desire and attempts of the British government to tear off Germany and move her against the Soviet Union constitute one of the main factors of today's international policy. This, writes the author, gives the clue to many an otherwise complex and intricate phase of the actual diplomatic relations.

The appeal carries the promise that if the workers will accept the reduction the directors will give themselves a reduction too!

PACT AGAINST SOVIET BOOSTED BY SOCIALISTS

Communists Expose "Security" Note

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, Aug. 27.—While the Communists are denouncing the "security pact" negotiations as a bloc of the European countries against Soviet Russia, the socialists have placed their approval on the proposed anti-Soviet alliance.

"The conclusion of an anti-Soviet war pact is imminent," says the Rote Fahne, commenting on the French note to Germany leading up to direct negotiations. "The Hindenburg government bows low to the western imperialists and complies with warlike measures against the Soviets."

The socialist paper Vorwaerts, in championing the anti-Soviet combine of England, Germany, America and France, says: "The French note shows decisive progress." In addition, the socialist organ urges the Hindenburg government to enter the league of nations, which has as its main task the subjection of the colonial peoples and the weaker nations, and the anti-Soviet campaign.

ARTICLE 13.

The capitalist class in all countries have cleverly created a division in the ranks of the workers by setting up a favored group that is catered to more or less at the expense of the great majority of the wage slaves. This policy has been carried out by the British government and other colonial empires among the subject peoples. In India, Egypt and South Africa, the first tactical move of the British to break the solidarity of the people whose land and wealth they coveted was to shower favors upon the ruling classes and make their new found loyalty just as profitable for them as their old independence.

"Divide and conquer" has been the motto of the oppressor and exploiter from time immemorial. This policy is followed by the capitalists among the workers.

Organizing the Skilled.

The American Federation of Labor, under the leadership of Sam Gompers and the grand dukes that he trained, was never very much concerned with organizing the unskilled workers. It confined its organizing activity mainly to the skilled or semi-skilled and only bothered with the unskilled when a spontaneous revolt brought them to the point of organization and the per capita looked good to the greedy sharks that dominate the councils of the A. F. of L.

Besides this division among the workers, the employers have another weapon. That is, the caste of labor leaders, that has recently become com-

WORKERS PARTY CONVENTION IN SESSION APPROVES REPORT OF CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The report of Comrade Alexander Bittelman for the Central Executive Committee upon the past activities of the Workers (Communist) Party, occupied the foreground in Wednesday's opening session of the party's Fourth Convention. A stenographic report of this speech will be published in the DAILY WORKER.

A digest of Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg's speech will be published later.

The following is a very inadequate summary of Bittelman's report owing to stenographic difficulties:

During the 20 months of the present C. E. C. there have been no severe disturbances and no big mass struggles. This background must be kept in mind. The mood of the masses was depressed. Third, the sweep up and then the decline of the LaFollette movement had seriously hampered our party. Added to this was the continual internal fight that lasted nearly 20 months.

The speaker divided the period as Chinese Send Greetings.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 27.—To the Workers Party National Convention:

We appreciate most sincerely your righteous purpose. We believe your aim is for humanity. The Chinese may forgive, but they can never forget those brutalities and exploitations which caused by the capitalists and imperialists.

Our workmen wanted fair treatment. Our nation wanted cancellation of those unfair treaties which jeopardize her growth.

Realizing that our common great enemy, imperialism, will not grant such demands unless—thru your cooperation—we can together defeat imperialist designs.

Therefore, we earnestly appeal before you to solve these problems in the light of the awakened moral conscience of the world. Hoping the convention will lighten the burden of the toiling masses, allow us to congrathlate your achievements and success.

SIGMAN LIES, GANGS FAIL TO BREAK STRIKE

Militants Not Fazed by Joint Board Terror

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—An organized campaign of terror has been launched by the Joint Board against those members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union who are picketing shops where workers were discharged after the general stoppage called by the Joint Committee of Action last Thursday.

Women gangsters appeared this morning in front of several striking shops, and large strong-arm squads were seen wherever there were pickets. One of the women gangsters attacked Marie Kuthy in front of the Roth Costumes, Inc., at 550 Seventh avenue, and when Anna Flint, another of the discharged workers from the same firm, ran to her rescue both girls were arrested and the attacker was allowed to escape. Lena Weber was also arrested. All three girls were charged with disorderly conduct and their cases were postponed until Friday.

Arrest and Discharge Six.

In front of the Seisser Dress Co. at 13-15 East 22nd street, Helen Horn, the discharged chairman of the shop, together with Jennie Locker, Frances Cohen, Gussie Abrams, Max Berger and Sarah Bernstein, were arrested while peacefully picketing. They were charged with disorderly conduct, but their case was dismissed.

At 32 West 18th street, where the Principal Cloak and Suit House was being picketed, Harry Rose was so badly beaten by gangsters that it was necessary to call an ambulance, and after being given first aid treatment he was taken to a private physician. There was no policeman visible at the time of the assault and no arrest was made.

This is the way in which the Joint Board "protects" the workers according to its boast in the press. These methods have not succeeded in settling the difficulties in any of the 36 shops called on strike by the Joint Committee of Action.

A report also reached the Joint Committee of Action today of an attack made last night upon H. Rabinowitz of 607 East 15th street, a member of Local 2. Rabinowitz, who is

WORKER IS INSPIRED BY MILITANTS' PROTEST STRIKE AND DEMONSTRATION IN N. Y. AGAINST THE SIGMAN MACHINE

By GERTRUDE PINCUS, Worker Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—August 20 will be marked down in golden letters in the history of the labor movement. Thousands of cloak and dressmakers went down in a strike to protest against the oppression of the Sigman machine.

Processions of workers, thousands of them, were marching thru the New York streets, their faces radiant with determination. The procession of workers arched down to the Joint Board office, with various protest inscriptions held aloft. Sigman and his gang were watching the procession thru the windows.

"Boo! Boo! Boo!" rang out the voices of labor. This was the greeting the Sigman gang received.

Protest meetings were held in sixteen halls. An indescribable spirit prevailed there among the workers. They embraced each other.

"Comrades, this is our victory." was heard in every part of the hall.

The tremendous, overwhelming protest meeting with thousands of workers assembled on Union Square was the most picturesque sight.

The workers marched past the Daily Freiheit building with cheers and waving of red handkerchiefs like so many bright stars. This was the way they greeted their own daily organ that has been with them thruout the struggle.

Yes, the future is with the toiling masses! If forty thousand workers in one industry can raise their voices against the old and decayed leadership, what about the others?

PRESSMEN MUST HAVE PROGRAM TO FIGHT BERRY

National Campaign Is Necessary for Victory

pletely solidified. Years ago many labor leaders in America at least gave lip service to the emancipation of the workers. They talked of socialism. Some of them, like the old lady who had committed an indiscretion in her youth only liked to be talking about it tho they no longer had their heart and soul in their words.

The Favored Few.

Gradually, as American imperialism grew stronger and reached out to grind double profits out of the labor of the unorganized colonial peoples, the labor fakers become more firmly bound up with the capitalist machine, until today they are capitalism's strongest bulwark against the rising tide fo the rebellion among the workers.

The labor leaders rarely talk of strikes any more. They have substituted class collaboration for the class struggle. Instead of strengthening the unions to meet the attacks of the employers, and to fight for a higher standard of living and better working conditinos, the labor skates have taken to banking, insurance and other forms of capitalist effort. Instead of leading the workers to their freedom by a fight against capitalism, the reactionary leaders are turning the unions into tools of capitalism. They are co-operating with the bosses in exploiting their slaves and with the government persecuting the most progressive wing of the working class movement.

They have degenerated into professional strikebreakers and hardly a week passes that one or more labor leader is not engaged in the nefarious task of scabbing. What Berry is doing to the locked-out workers of the Cuneo Printing company, Tom Rickert is doing to the striking employes of the International Tailoring company. That this kind of a thing is in complete accord with the official policy of the American Federation of Labor, is shown by the fact that William Green, president fo the A. F. of L. endorsed the scabbery fo Rickert and that Sam Gompers at the Portland convention gave "Majah" Berry a special greeting after his return from breaking a strike in New York City. The reactionary labor leaders are "labor lieutenants" of capitalism. They are worth every nickel they get from the employers.

Methods More Crude.

George L. Berry is only one of the traitors. Perhaps the way he does business is more crude than the method employed by the others of the same type. But looking over the arena, we see John L. Lewis, who drove men like Alexander Howat, Duncan MacDonald, Jim McLachlan, Freeman Thompson and John Watt out of the union because they fought for the rank and file. We see William Hutcheson of the carpenters, scabby "B. and O. Bill" Johnston of the machinists, Sigman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, James Lynch of the Typographical Union and hundreds of others, breaking strikes, expelling progressives, lifting charters and even going to the extent of having the militant trade unionists slugged.

Fakers Resemble Each Other.

It is quite evident that the struggle in the various' unions against the crooked leaders cannot succeed unless it is solidified and connected up into a united struggle against the entire reactionary officialdom of the American Federation of Labor. This struggle must not be waged on the basis of personalities, but on the basis of principle. Whether George L. Berry is worse than James Lynch or John L. Lewis is not so very important. All those labor skates base their actions on the theory that the interests of the capitalists and the workers are identical. Some of them don't boldly loot the union treasury in order to get theirs. They get it just the same. They all help the employers to rob the workers.

Ninety-five per cent of the membership of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union are opposed to Berry. Perhaps in no other union in the country is the opposition stronger. Yet so far they have been helpless. Why is this the case? To say that Berry with five or ten per cent of the membership behind him can rig things so that he can resist the will of such a great majority is not a satisfactory answer to the question.

In my opinion lack of organization and program is the correct answer to this riddle. Berry has a machine. It is crooked but it is efficient. It knows what it is after.

Progressives Must Build Machine

On the other hand there is no organization among Berry's opponents. Sporadic efforts are occasionally made, in New York today, in Chicago tomorrow. The conference held in Chicago in 1919 was a promising step and if carried out with determination would have meant the end of Berryism.

The pressmen and the feeders must get together into one union in every city. By doing this they will prevent Berry from playing off one union against the other. A start was made in Chicago a few weeks ago.

The pressmen must organize a progressive group inside the existing locals of the I. P. P. and A. U. in every city in the United States. Berry has his machine in each local already.

This progressive group must have a program of action. One of the most important planks in that program must be amalgamation. All the unions in the printing trades should be amalgamated. Until this is done the strike effectiveness of the printing trades unions will be almost nil. We have seen the pressmen working in the plant of the Post-Intelligencer in Seattle while the typos were on strike. In other cases the pressmen are on strike while the typos rattle away at the keys. This is not trade unionism; it is official trade union scabbery. It must be done away with.

The Key to the Solution.

The key to the solution of the trade union question, the fight against the reactionary leadership and the bosses can be found in the program of the Trade Union Educational League. This program can be secured by writing to the office of that organization at 1113 West Washington street, Chicago. This program will show that the trade unionists must not only fight Berryism and all that it stands for on the industrial field but that they must also fight it on the political field by raising the slogan of a labor party against the capitalist trading of the reactionary leaders.

Industrial unionism thru amalgamation and a labor party, unity of the workers industrially and a party that will break them away politically from the capitalist parties—these are the slogans with which the militant trade unionists can meet and defeat their enemies, whether they be open foes as the capitalists are or false friends masquerading under the name of trade union leaders.

(END.)

More about the International Printing Pressmen's Union will appear in the DAILY WORKER. The fight against Berry is now starting in real earnest and important developments are expected shortly.

Churchmen, Educators and Business to Confer on How to Fleece China

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Churchmen and educators have declared a united front with businessmen for an unofficial conference on Chinese affairs called for Sept. 17 to 20 at John Hopkins University, Baltimore. Heading the list of participators is Owen D. Young, head of the General Electric Co. There are also names of representatives who can be traced to American silk and tobacco interests.

Needless to say they will not consider matters concerning the interests of workers. They will concern themselves with foriegn customs control in China, safeguarding loans and investments, etc.

Soviet-Near Oriental Trade.

MOSCOW, Aug. 27.—A director of one of the leading trading companies in Palestine is reported to have arrived at Leningrad to purchase timber, iron, glass, nails and other materials for Palestine, Syria and Egypt. Several deals have been made, and big cargoes of timber are to be shortly shipped from Leningrad to Egypt and Jaffa.

In reference to the development of Soviet-Near Oriental trade, another report states that the first consignments of Donetz coal, purchased in fairly big amounts by Greek shipping companies, have reached Greece, where Soviet coal was not known before, and that as these goods have proved to be a superior quality new orders are expected from Greek quarters concerned.

CONVENTION APPROVES OF C. E. C. REPORT

Listens to Extensive Reports and Debates

a whole into four distinct periods. The first was from January to May in 1924, when the party was preparing for the June 17th convention. In that period the main purpose was to bring about the formation of a farmer-labor party—or if not—to get united labor fight in the presidential election. In spite of a big convention we did not succeed.

It is important to know why the failure occurred. When the present C. E. C. came into power we found a critical situation on account of the split at the July 3rd convention, the growing LaFollette movement. The C. E. C. realized the party was isolated, especially in the industrial centers and the chief field for formation of a farmer-labor party was in the agrarian Northwest. It was not the present C. E. C. who switched the basis of the farmer-labor movement to the Northwest—this was already done.

There were two factors: there had been no great mass movement in the industrial cnters, but what there was, was largely in agrarian districts, also, the policy of the previous C. E. C., which had pursued the policy of orientation toward the Northwest.

The policy of the united front had been continued. There were differences in the C. E. C. over preparation for the St. Paul convention.

One group wanted no more repetition of the July 3rd mistake, no premature split off of the left wing and there was disagreement on dates for the St. Paul convention. Our farmer allies of the Northwest wanted postponement. We tried to agree. Another difference in the C. E. C. was the question whether we should fight for the immediate formation of a labor party regardless of whether the organization had mass support or was merely our own party and a few sympathetic organizations.

The actual organization of the united front was defeated. Why? Because the economic and political forces which brought about the rise of the LaFollette movement, and the political backwardness of the American masses and the treachery of the union bureaucracy. were stronger than the forces of our party. Another factor was the C. I. decision against the third party alliance upon which from January until th edecision our party had based its policies. Political life had not stopped. We had to function. The C. E. C. was nearly unanimous on this policy which was our base up to May.

Upon the decision, the party had to reorientate itself over night under fire and at the time the A. F. of L. opened fire on St. Paul and on our party. After June 17, the C. E. C. was convinced it would not succeed, the agrarian elements were predominant and with the exception of our own delegates all were for LaFollette.

The speaker then traced objective and subjective conditions thru the Workers Party participation in the presidential campaign under its own banner—during which campaign there was such unanimity in the C. E. C. as never before or since—and after a detailed analysis of the succeeding period, Comrade Bittelman reiterated that upon the background of objective conditions the party had come thru many crises as well as could be expected and had made great accomplishments in the political situation.

Among other accomplishments had been the united front in many fields, the Lanzutski-Polish work, the Abramovitch campaign, unemployment, trade union unity, anti-child labor, Crouch and Trumbull, fight on wage cuts, for Soviet Russia, hands off China, all anti-imperialist work, anti-religious work, anti-socialist party work, extensive trade union work in all fields, membership campaigns, agrarian work, women's work, work among Negroes, labor defense, building up of the press and literature distribution, aid to the Young Workers' League and an intensive fight on the right wing.

The floor was thrown open for discussion and Comrades Dunne, Kruse, Johnstone, Bimba, Foster, Lovestone, Krumbein, Lifshitz Bell, Ballam, Manley Gitlow, Browder, and Bedacht developed the views of both groups. Then Bittelman took the floor to sum up.

There had been no political debate, Bittelman declared. He was sorry, particularly that in the name of Marxism, non-Marxian precepts had been brought forth. It was ridiculous, Ruthenberg had said, to say that objective conditions had made it hard for a revolutionary party to stand its forces while I had been easy for the LaFollette movement to do so. Yet the C. I. had said that in a period of revolutionary stagnation the reformist illusions found particularly favorable soil, the Communist movement found particular difficulty and, in addition, the latter was endangered by a penetration of the Communist movement by these reformist illusions of the petty bourgeoisie.

The C. I. had definitely stated that the American bourgeoisie had liquidation particularly some of its crises, and that this together with the defeats suffered by the workers on the economic field was favorable to the development of reformist illusion Conversely, it was unfavorable to a revolutionary party.

The minority comrades had criticized his statement that among the varying opposition movements to capitalist imperialism, only the Workers (Communist) Party could "create" an opposite movement which would be effective in overthrowing capitalism. His critics had taken exception to the word "create." They said: "Isn't the Workers Party itself a product of objective conditions? Then how can it create movements by itself?" This is not dialectics, but metaphysics, Bittelman declared. On the scale of the world struggle it needs a Communist International to weld together and push forward the opposition to capitalist imperialism which is required to overthrow it. So on the national scale, the varying movements of opposition to big capital cannot overthrwo its rule without the intervention of the Communist Party.

It may be a slight error of terms applied to say "create" but between Ruthenberg's mistake and Bittelman's mistake, he believes he would rather be guilty of Bittelman's mistake. This was the basis for the minority's minimizing of the Communist Party, their view that the Workers Party cannot d oanything, that it is only a "red flag" and counts for nothing in the political struggle.

As to the right wing, it existed in not only the Finnish, but in the Jewish federation and in all other sections of the party. And since the C. I. decision for a fight against it, the majority had sharpened and intensified this fight while the minority had softened it. That was why, he contended, that the minority lost New York, where the majority did not expect to win against both the Lore group and the minority, but had done so because the membership saw the difference in attitude of the minority and majority group towards Loreism and had come over to the majority on that basis.

Comrade Lovestone, said Bittelman, had said the majority were the right wing because they were aganist "wild maneuvers," while the right wing was against "maneuvers" on principle. Yet Comrade Lenin had said precisely that it was the "wild maneuvers" of ultra left Communists which played into the hands of the right wing opposition to all maneuvers. Such "wild maneuvers" was observable in the minority's actions in the Philippine question and in the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

True, Bittelman said, there had been no revolution last year. But even the C. E. C. could not be blamed for that. The question was: Did we, in the circumstances prevailing, accomplish the best we could for the party? As to fighting the right wing, Ballam had said that it was immaterial whether or not they had called the Finnish groups in New Work white guards, yet experience shows that it was not the right way to defeat right wing leaders by calling th eworkers supporting them white guards. The majority meant to carry on the fight on the right wing, it would like to carry on this fight along with the minority comrades, but if they would not cooperate, then the majority would carry it on without this co-operation.

This ended the debate and resolutions came before the convention for a vote.

The majority resolution upon the Plenum of the E. C. of the C. I. was passed by 40 to 20 votes. The Parity Commission resolution of the Political Situation and the Immediate Tasks of the Party passed unanimously. The resolution on the past activities of the party presented by the majority, passed by a vote of 40 to 21.

Comrade Abern then moved the following resolution:

"In view of the fact that the theories about the labor party which were expounded in the thesis of August, 1923, have been widely spread thruout the party, and have never been officially and specifically repudiated by our party, this convention declares that the theories of the August thesis, the theory of competing labor parties, the theory of a Communist labor party, the splitting off of the left wing and the transformation of the labor party in a mass Communist Party, all of these theories are declared to be contrary to the decision of the Comintern."

Comrae Ruthenberg introduced the following amendment to Abern's resolution:

'In view of the fact that the Third National Convention of the party adopted unanimously a resolution 'That the November thesis adopted by that convention superseded all previous theses on the Labor Party question'—the question of the August thesis is no longer an issue in our party."

The above amendment was lost by a vote of 21 to 40 and the Abern resolution carried by a vote of 40 to 21. This closed the session.

At the Wednesday evening session greetings were read from Chinese and Japanese organizations, which are given elsewhere, along with an additional appeal from Comrade Presi and a protest from the Lithuanian branch of Kenosha, Wis., at the factional situation in the party. Also was read a message from the English and German branches of Detroit for unity and struggle against right wing Loreism.

Comrade Vjorik, who accompanied the Swedish workers' delegation to Soviet Russia, gave a brief speech of greeting from the workers he had met there, and told of the great impression Soviet Russia had made on the social-democratic workers who visited it.

Comrade Earl R. Browder then reported upon the resolution adopted by the C. E. C. and approved by the Parity Commission upon the Labor Party. There should be little disagreement, he said, owing to the unanimous nature of the approval of this resolution.

There must be real agitation for a Labor Party, particularly in local unions and central bodies. A drive must be made for real mass support. Experience shows need of more careful work. The slogan for a Labor Party must be made concrete to the workers in each particular organization, especially when they are engaged in struggles. In each union comrades must adapt the application of the slogan to the particular situation. In general it must be connected with issues the workers comprehend as immediate and vital.

These are needful preliminaries to organizational steps. The obstacles were the La Follette illusion, the "non-partisan" attitude of the labor unions and the agitation for a third bourgeois party.

It is needful to carry out organizational steps at the earliest moment real mass support is certain, local or state organizations preceding national organization. Development is not even and equal.

Our forces must penetrate the organizations which express the political aspirations of the workers as well as the economic organizations representative of working masses. We must deal with existing organizations. The matter of Minnesota was dealt with. We must guard against infiltration of petty bourgeois ideas into our own ranks, especially we must be on guard when organizational steps are taken.

We must put the Workers Party and its role to the fore, the party must advance to the degree that the Labor Party movement advances. We must draw revolutionary implications from our demands, must strike a revolutionary note. Last year there were objective reasons for mistakes. Now it will be easier to build more securely. The party must tackle this job seriously, vigorously and effectively for a Labor Party movement which will be the basis for building up our own Communist Party in this country.

Comrade Ruthenberg, following, accented the importance of the party securing a fundamental understanding that the Labor Party policy must be the chief policy of the party—and why.

It was not sufficient to agree to a Labor Party policy. It is a weakness of the party that we did not understand as completely as we ought why there must be a Labor Party. The masses of America were not yet class conscious as in Europe, where mass parties of labor were formed long ago. In this country we must have a bridge across the gulf. It was necessary to understand why the Labor Party is the form.

The unions have their separate struggles, a labor party gives them a class unity. First, a labor party gathers together and unifies the masses, second, it turns these masses against the capitalist state power. It is necessary in the press, in classes and thruout the party that the membership be educated upon the labor party policy so the party can be mobilized to a man in the fight for a labor party.

Immediate demands had always been the basis of the labor party policy. The party must organize committees in unions, in central bodies, in the C. P. P. A. and in other organizations to work for organizations of the labor party. Agitation must be carried on in city elections. The success of such agitation is exampled by the experience of Comrade Wilkins in Lima, Ohio.

A labor party is to function not only for election campaigns, but also outside in all the political struggles. Where possible we shall run Communists on a full Communist program as labor party candidates. Repeating the necessity of educating the party membership upon the labor party policy, Comrade Ruthenberg ended his presentation of the subject.

Several comrades spoke briefly upon the reports. Browder summed up the discussion, briefly disagreeing with the illustration of Lima, Ohio, as a proof of correct policy, because the branch of our own party had declined as the labor party movement had increased. After his summary the resolution of the parity commission was carried unanimously.

Labor in Wisconsin Must Organize Its Independent Class Political Power

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, a senatorial campaign rages in Wisconsin, and it is to be expected that LaFollette, Jr., a candidate, will try to exploit the "war record" of the late Senator LaFollette, Sr., in his hunt for votes. There are large numbers of Germans in Wisconsin and they cannot forget that the last war was waged by the United States against Germany. Farmers are naturally pacifists, and Wisconsin has a large agrarian population. The anti-war issue is therefore popular in the badger state.

This is clearly shown in the current issue of "The Wisconsin Farmer" which editorializes under the heading of "A Reign of Law, Not a Chaos of War." But the program of this publication toward war is one of pure pacifism, endorsing at the same time the recently announced programs of both the British and the American councils for the prevention of war, the one issued under the heading of "America First!" and the other broadcasted under the title of "Britain First!" It reaches the general conclusion that:

> "The ultimate eradication of war will be by education. Anything which tends towards that end is to be commended."

• • • •

But the education carried on by the pacifists against war only blinds the workers and poor farmers to the real nature of their struggle. It demoralizes their fight. LaFollette was against war. But in the days of the greatest slaughter, he had no program to end it. His only program was offered in an effort to show the United States government how best to carry on the business of murder.

LaFollette offered taxation measures to raise funds to carry on the bloody job; he had his ideas on how to raise the morale of the soldiers who were being led to the killing pens, and it was his state legislature that ousted one of its members for making an anti-war speech, unable to trim his sails sufficiently to meet the demands of the LaFollette brand of patriotism.

• • • •

This senatorial campaign in Wisconsin offers another opportunity to make clear to the workers and farmers of that state the real nature of the social system that oppresses them. Under the half century regime of LaFolletteism in Wisconsin their condition has not improved. LaFollette did not make open war against capitalism, the taskmaster, in an effort to end it. Neither do the Wisconsin "socialists," who issue their inane pleas for "honesty" and "decency" in politics.

Only the Communists, in Wisconsin as everywhere else, raise the standards for the overthrow of the bandit system that plunders city and land workers alike.

Events are forcing Wisconsin's workers to find their way out of the wilderness of "progressive" politics into the clear light of the class struggle, that will guide them in their efforts to build their independent class power.

• • • •

It is another farm editor, Henry A. Wallace, of Des Moines, Ia., son of the late secretary of agriculture in Coolidge's cabinet, who says that the family tragedies caused by the farm bankruptcies are infinitely greater than the grief caused by the actual deaths which took place during the world war. But it is not enough to know and to say that workers suffer from capitalist wars; that labor is the victim of capitalist exploitation. The worst capitalist reactionary can say that. Means must be found to end wars and exploitation. Oppressed labor will find the only path of its escape laid down in the Communist program that educates and organizes workers for the victory over capitalism. Against Coolidgeism, against LaFolletteism, the workers and farmers must rally to the standards of Communism in Wisconsin.

SIGMAN'S LIES BARED BY LEFT WING COMMITTE

Militants of the Needl Trades Repel Force

chairman of the L. & W. Cloak C of 28-30 East 10th street, refused to call a shop meeting ordered by the Joint Board. After several business agents sent by the Joint Board had failed to force Rabinowitz to call the meeting, he was attacked by gangsters on his way home from work and was badly beaten. His assailants also escaped without arrest.

Harry Farber was also beaten up at 32 West 18th street, where Rose was beaten up.

The Joint Committee of Action issued an emphatic denial of the joint board's statement that the workers discharged as a result of last Thursday's stoppage had come to the board for help, saying that they had been misled in this fight.

All the shops where workers have been locked out have been handled by the Joint Committee of Action. More than half of them have been settled and the workers have all been taken back. In the other shops strikes have been called and these places are now being picketed by committees from the Joint Committee.

Joint Board Terrorism.

The joint board, instead of trying to settle any shop difficulties as they pretend, is actually attempting to stir up more trouble for the workers by threatening jobbers who will not agree to boycott certain contracting shops. Every sort of terrorism is being used by the union officials to force the members to recognize their authority, and especially to pay them dues.

In addition to these tactics of force, the joint board is endeavoring to stir up race antagonism by filling the shops on strike with workers from the Italian locals. These Italian members are not so well acquainted with the issues in the fight as are the Jewish workerz, and they are allowing themselves to be used as scabs because they have been misled by the joint board officers.

The Joint Committee of Action is planning a special campaign of information among the Italian workers, feeling certain that if they fully understand the situation they will not join wtih the corrupt officials in opposing the rank and file of the members in their fight for a democratic union.

Sigman Gang Takes Jobs.

Two examples of the joint board's persecution of workers were cited today by Louis Hyman, chairman of the Joint Committee of Action.

At the Principal Cloak Co., 32 West 18th street, five operators were discharged last Friday as a result of Thursday's stoppage. The Joint Committee of Action settled the matter with the employer and the workers were reinstated and went back to work yesterday.

Yesterday 5 business agents from the joint board, together with a strong arm detachment, visited the shop and threatened a strike if the 5 operators were not sent down at once. Against his will, the employer was forced to let the operators go, and the Joint Committee of Action has now declared a strike in the shop.

Another Strike.

At the Magedoff Co, at 122 West 27th street, an operator and a presser were discharged as a result of the stoppage and while the boss was willing to take back the operator, Breslau insisted that he be allowed to fill the presser's place with someone else. The operator refused to go back without the presser, and the joint board refused to let the presser return, so this shop has also been declared on strike.

Militants Officially Expelled.

Official notification was received today by C. S. Zimmerman, Rose Wortis, B. Miller and Pauline Morgenstern of Local 22 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union that at a meeting of the New York joint board, held last Friday, August 21, they were expelled from the executive committee of Local 22 and barred from holding office or taking part in union activities for 3 years.

This expulsion follows the suspension of these members several weeks ago after they had been omitted, evidently thru oversight, from the general suspension and trial of all executive committee members of Locals 2, 9 and 22 which took place in June.

These newly expelled officers are all members of the Joint Committee of Action and have been taking a prominent part during the past two months in the fight of Locals 2, 9 and 22 against the officials of the union.

Pressers Meet Today.

The Joint Committee of Action is responsible for the calling of a meeting of Progressive Pressers, members of Local 35, which will be held at Webster Hall on Thursday, August 27, right after work.

Plans will be outlined for close cooperation between pressers and the operators, finishers and dressmakers in any difficulties arising in cloak and dress shops.

The call for the meeting has been issued to all members of Local 35.

RAID ON PICKET LINE FAILS, PAT DE ROSA FREED

Grady Again Arrests Strikers in Frame-up

Another raid on the Amalgamated Clothing Workers picket line, in front of the struck shops of the J. L. Taylor-International Tailoring Company, conducted by the slugging cop, Mike Grady, failed when Judge Lyle was forced to release Patsy De Rosa, 21-year-old picket. De Rosa was released without booking after spending the night at the Maxwell street station. The detective bureau tried to frame up De Rosa for acid throwing, but no one could be found who would identify the young striker as "criminal."

Two other strikers were arrested including one woman, Lucille Orlando. Both were released on bail.

Strikers Secure Continuance.

John A. Ryan, one of the Amalgamated attorneys, secured a continuance for the thirty-five strikers who appeared to answer to charges of "violent" picketing. The strikers were charged with violating the Cuthbertson "peaceful picketing" law, the complaints charging "assault" and "disorderly conduct." The cases will come up in the municipal court at city hall on Sept. 8.

Sidney Rissman, assistant manager of the Chicago joint board of the Amalgamated, will appear in the Waukegan court Sept. 2nd to answer to charges of "conspiracy." Rissman was arrested upon orders of the chamber of commerce, which is attempting to connect the union with acid throwing in small tailoring shops.

Grady-Lyle Plot With Boss.

The arrest of De Rosa is one more attempt of the Grady-Lyle combination to break the ranks of the striking garment workers. The International is trying to force the Amalgamated to put up large sums of money in bonds, and Grady shows a significant willingness to take any action ordered by the clothing manufacturers.

Judge Lyle, on his part, takes every opportunity to show his loyalty to the bosses, and it was only when the Amalgamated lawyers threatened to secure a second writ of habeas corpus that the Maxwell police released De Rosa. A few days ago Lyle held De Rosa on $105,000 bail on charges of "assault."

Amalgamated Calls Off Strike.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 27.—(FP)—With the close of the busy season the Amalgamated Clothing Workers have called off their strike against the open shop Curlee Clothing Co. of St. Louis. The strike began June 1 for a 25 per cent wage increase, 44-hour week, improved conditions, recognition of the union and general wiping out of the degraded circumstances in which workers are held by the Curlee concern. One hundred individuals had previously been dismissed for belonging to the union. The union's action is only an armistice. The strike ruined the Curlee busy season in spite of utmost efforts of police sluggers to break up the picket line. Nearly 1,000 workers remained out to the end.

GENERAL HSU EXPRESSES HOPE FOR GREATER UNITY BETWEEN THE SOVIET UNION AND CHINA

(By Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—Before crossing the frontier at his leaving the Union of Soviet Republics, General Hsu Shu-cheng addressed a telegram to Georg Chicherin, people's commissary of foreign affairs, thanking for the hearty reception General Hsu and his mission in the U. S. S. R. and expressing his warmest wish that the good relations between the two countries become still closer.

In reply, Chicherin wired that he was happy to welcome, in the person of General Hsu Shu-cheng, a representative of a great friendly people, and expressed his conviction that the latter's visit to the U. S. S. R. would effectually contribute to the further strengthening of sincere friendship between the two peoples.

In another telegram, addressed to the war and navy people's commissary Frunze, General Hsu Shu-cheng conveyed thanks for the military honor rendered to him and expressed his best wishes for the further progress of the Red Army. To this telegram Mr. Frunze sent the following message to the head of the Chinese mission also by wire:

"The Red Army was happy to welcome in your person the representative of a great friendly people, which is so gallantly struggling for its national unity and rights. In this heroic effort the Chinese people has the greatest sympathies of the peoples of the Soviet Union.

"Please accept my best wishes and convey to the friendly people and army of China the brotherly greetings of the Red Army."

Carlson Will Speak at Muskegon Picnic Sunday

MUSKEGON, Mich., Aug. 27.—The Workers Party of Muskegon will hold a picnic at McGraft park Sunday, Aug. 30th. Oliver Carlson, now of New York, formerly of Muskegon, will speak. Having recently returned from Europe, where he visited Germany, England, Sweden, Norway, spending most of his time in Soviet Russia, he will have an interesting story to relate to the Muskegon workers. Edward Kosten, a well known labor man of Grand Rapids, will also speak.

The day will open with games, entertainments, jollification. Dinner will be served at noon. A large crowd is expected to turn out as McGraft is an ideal place for recreation.

In case of rain the festivities will be held at the Norden Brothers hall on Palmer road.

Scandinavian Artists in Russia.

MOSCOW, July 27. — (Delayed.)—Leningrad reports that a group of eminent Scandinavian art museum workers, all of them members of the recent Scandinavian museum congress, have arrived there on a study trip. Among the arrivals are Professor Wettergroen, director of the Swedish National Museum; Professor Schlehmann, director of the Danish Museum and a number of other personalities well-known in the world of North European arts.

BUILDERS AT WORK

VICTOR F. LAWSON, owner of the Chicago Daily News, happened to die the other day. His passing out caused the capitalist press to spill over with eulogy and lamentation. An unexpected comet in its flight could have caused no more commotion. But after the flood subsided, even the Daily News itself admitted that Lawson's demise didn't make a dent in the "brass check."

"The Illinois Merchants Trust company is made executor and trustee of the estate, with full power of management of all properties, both real and personal," it states. "Thus did Mr. Lawson, with the advice of his lawyers, guard against the vicissitudes of human existence and establish stable control of the Daily News and his other properties under expert financial supervision."

And John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Merchants Trust Co., is quoted as saying that "The late chief of the organization is dead, but the organization that worked under his guidance remains intact and will go on functioning in full strength."

Newspaper men may come and go, but the kept press is still "kept."

Who keeps the DAILY WORKER? This is a different question, and it has been answered hundreds of times. It is the readers, the workers, the most enlightened, who keep the DAILY WORKER. The DAILY WORKER is run for its readers and the readers run the DAILY WORKER.

Readers are purchased by the capitalist press. It has been estimated that, on the average, every $6.00 subscription costs the kept newspaper as much as $8.00 to obtain (by means of contests, premiums, collecting agents, etc.) Advertisers pay for the subscribers as well as for the news and they pay so much that a newspaper man like Lawson is able to leave almost $5,000,000 to line up the churches and schools along with the press on the front trenches of capitalist defense.

DAILY WORKER readers need not be bribed into subscribing, but they must be reminded constantly of the fact that they are its only possible source of financial support. If subscriptions do not come in, bills cannot be paid, paper cannot be bought; the machinery stops; the Illinois Merchants Trust is interested in its destruction, not in its continuation.

The DAILY WORKER is the clock of the world's labor movement; it tells the time for all workers; the seconds, minutes, hours and epochs, everything that effects the lives of workers, finds itself reflected in its face. And its owners, the militant laborers of America, say to those workers who have not yet become regular readers of the paper: Send in your subscription today to help us wind up the DAILY WORKER clock. Help us keep it going!

STATE COSSACKS PROTECT FAKERS FROM MEMBERS

Detroit Carpenters in Revolt Against "Hutch"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 27.—Hutcheson's prize dumbbells, Potts and Botterill, have proven themselves incapable of shame or reason, for despite the fact that the whole labor movement of Detroit is revolted by their use of state cossacks against the membership of the Brotherhood of Carpenters they continue their stupid policy of attempted coercion. Tonight six plainclothes troopers and eight uniformed men imported from Flat Rock, Mich., were present to carry out Potts' autocratic order that none but those who have signed their rights away by accepting Hutcheson's yellow dog pledge may enter the union meeting hall.

Old Timers Arrived.

After many had been turned away, two members of thirty years' standing, Oliver and Jim Mullins, arrived and pushed Hutcheson's bloodhounds aside and entered the hall. Potts followed them in and informed them that no dues would be accepted from them until they signed the yellow dog pledge.

When he came out, Oliver Mullins remarked that "they didn't have the moral courage to put us out." He then proceeded to air his opinion of union officials who stoop to such dirty tactics. Potts and Botterill stood with downcast eyes and a "whipped cur" attitude and answered not a word. Even the police smiled contemptuously and edged away from the two renegades they had been detailed to serve.

Honest Unionists Disgusted.

After the meeting, the police invited the excluded members into the hall and literature was passed out condemning the attempted expulsions and the use of police powers. All present except the yellow job holders were thoroly disgusted and many voiced the intention of going over to the "expelled" locals to get back into the company of union men.

The process of disintegration which is inevitable under these conditions is proceeding apace. Already 200 have transferred to Locals 1191 and 2140 and hundreds more have stated that they have paid their last dues until every parasite connected with this scandal is removed from official position in the district.

Suicide Saves State Money and Prosecutor Thinks it "Very Nice"

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—District Attorney Asa Keyes, in command of the prosecution against Dr. Thomas W. Young, who today committed suicide in his cell at the county jail, when told of the sudden end of the case, declared:

"It can be reckoned as, first of all, a great saving of money and trouble for the state of California. Dr. Young was as fully aware as we that he would end on the gallows. Our case was too strong, too complete."

Shoe Workers Strike Against Cut.

WEBSTER, Mass., Aug. 27.—(FP)—The 500 workers of the A. J. Bates shoe factory are on strike against 10 per cent wage cuts. Piece workers are affected by the reduction, the second in two months. Pay was lowered 5 per cent previously. About 100 day workers did not walk out.

Work More—Less Pay.

WOONSOCKET, R. I.—Some 2,000 workers employed at the Alice mill in Woonsocket and the Millville, Mass., plant of Woonsocket Rubber Co., are notified that the 5-day work week is in force and wage reductions with it. Mills have been operating three and four days a week.

Jaffa Exhibition Postponed.

MOSCOW, Aug. 27.—The Jaffa exhibition having been postponed until the beginning of October, the Ukrainian economic organizations, which will be fairly well represented, have decided to increase the number of exhibits and generally to reinforce their participation in the mentioned exhibition.

MOTHER BLOOR NOW ON ROAD TO THE EAST

Carries Daily Worker from Coast to Coast

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

In summing up the results of the western part of my "hitch-hiking" campaign for the DAILY WORKER, the outstanding facts are these, that our daily is absolutely INDISPENSABLE for every party worker.

It would seem unnecessary to state such a patent fact, but in many towns—where branches were unusually inactive—it became necessary, first, to institute a subscription campaign among party members; second, to impress upon the organization that the DAILY WORKER agent must be the most responsible member.

So far, with a few notable exceptions, we find the DAILY WORKER handled in a careless, indifferent manner by the literature agents and comrades.

Co-ordination.

We should somehow make the membership visualize the vital necessity of mobilizing every comrade, every week to secure new readers, and new correspondents to develop intelligent co-ordination between the activities of the workers and their press.

In the intensive industrial districts like Akron, Youngstown, Cleveland, and the mining districts we found the workers especially eager for our paper. The bundles sent me in every town for free distribution helped a lot in securing the large number of subscriptions secured thruout my trip.

I have held over 50 meetings, organized a League in Toledo, sold many copies of the Workers Monthly and the Little Red Library.

Asks Support in East.

As I am about to take to the open road again for the eastern part of my trip, I hope all the comrades along the line will make the most of the opportunity for rousing good meetings and renewed educational activities.

Subjects of my lectures will be: "The World Labor Movement," "Hands Off China—Stand by Soviet Russia," and "Proletarian Education."

In membership meetings my subject will be "Shop Nuclei, Discipline," and first, last and all the time, our best party builder, the DAILY WORKER.

The route will be:

Buffalo, Aug. 29-30.
Rochester, Aug 31.
Syracuse, Sept 1.
Utica, Sept 2.
Albany, Sept. 4.
Troy, Sept. 5.
Schenectady, Sept. 6-7.
New York City, Sept. 9-10.
Newark, N. J., Sept. 11.
New York City, Sept. 12.
Boston, Mass. (Special Labor Defense), Sept. 13.
Boston, Mass., Sept. 14.
Providence, R. I., Sept. 15.
Hartford Conn., Sept. 16.
New Haven, Conn., Sept. 17.
Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 18.
New York City, Sept. 20.
Philadelphia, Sept. 22-24.
Wilmington-Arden, Sept. 26-27.
Baltimore, Sept. 29.
Washington, Sept. 30.

In October I hope to spend the entire time with the miners of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois.

So far I have covered 4,516 miles, literally by the way of the highways, and have demonstrated that good results can be achieved without cost to the party, with no expense account for the DAILY WORKER. All I'll ask is your loyal co-operation.

Predicts Collapse of Rail Company Unions; 6 Out of 63 Now Alive

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(FP)—Vice President Conlon of the International Association of Machinists has received notice that a call to all railroad company unions to meet in the parlor of the Laclede hotel in St. Louis on Sept. 1 has been sent out by R. R. Hunter, secretary to the company union on the Great Northern. Information coming to machinists' headquarters is that not more than six or eight of the 63 company unions established by the railroad managers in the past few years are now alive. Those still active are maintained by the Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and similar large systems as a weapon against trade unionism.

The purpose of the proposed conference of company union delegates at St. Louis appears to be discussion of the way in which they can best aid the management of the railroads in fighting the Howell-Barkley rail labor bill before congress, and how best they may assist the rest of the legislative program of their employers.

A hint has been given, however that some of the delegates will raise the issue of the refusal of the companies to permit a transfer of cards from one company union to another thereby enabling the nonunion worker to safely quit his job and seek work on another nonunion road.

IMPERIALIST POWERS ATTACK SOVIET UNION IN EFFORT TO DODGE DIFFICULTIES FOLLOWING WAR

MOSCOW, (By Mail.)—Replying to the question, put to him by representatives of the Moscow press, as to why there actually is a noticeable recrudescence of a calumniatory campaign and general attempts against the Union of Soviet Republics, Rakovsky, Soviet plenipotentiary representative in London, expressed his opinion that such a campaign was but a diversion made to alleviate the difficulties and complications facing the big colonial powers as a result of the imperialist war.

Indeed, this war had demanded the development of all the centrifugal forces of the world, and as the maximum amount of human and material resources was wanted for waging it, the belligerent states made lavish promises wherever they could. Then, after their own countries had been drained of the said resources, they had to rely on their overseas and other dominions, finally knocking for succor at the doors of the Asiatic states, thus, it should be mentioned, in particular, that China was, during the war, an ally of the entente.

After the close of the war, all these newly-acquired allies presented the bills which the western powers had signed; and while the colonies set to work to gain more independence, the states of Asia put their ever-increasing energies into their demands of abrogation of unequal treaties.

Quite naturally, Rakovsky goes on to say, the imperialists wish to shift the responsibility and make us responsible for the inevitable crisis which not only arose out of the war, but was at the same time the logical result of all the capitalistic development of Asia, the progress there of commerce and industry, the creation of a national home bourgeoisie as well as a big layer of intellectuals and an ever growing class of proletariat.

This part of his interview Rakovsky concluded by drawing attention to the fact that the struggle in Asia is being conducted not for Communism, but for national state independence. It is really ridiculous, he remarked, to observe how naively the imperialists imagine or profess to believe that if it were not for our existence in this world, they would be able to turn back the wheels of history.

additional reserve of large quantities of coal, also "smokeless," from the non-union fields of Kentucky and West Virginia.

Must Organize Kentucky.

While all this propaganda about substitutes and smokeless bituminous constitutes a campaign of bluff in an attempt to scare the rank and file of the anthracite miners, whose unanimous demands are responsible for the stiff resistance being displayed by the mine union officials, there is nevertheless some danger from this source. This is especially true of the scab fields. The bituminous miners of the central competitive field have had a taste of what scab field competition means.

It is the opinion among the miners in the hard coal region that these scab fields will have to be unionized at all costs.

Open Baltic Sea Freight Line.

MOSCOW, Aug. 27—The Northern Board of the State Commercial Fleet is starting a new Baltic sea freight and passenger shipping line, the ports of call being Stockholm, Copenhagen, Stettin and back to Leningrad. The duration of the entire trip is to be fourteen days.

The press notes the above facts with considerable satisfaction, as up till now the trans-Baltic sea communications were mostly in foreign hands.

"HIS Imperial Majesty Grand Duke Cyril Vladmirovitch, Czar of all the Russias." This is what Grand Duke Cyril calls himself. He lives in a small palace in Coburg, Germany, has plenty to eat and drink and expects some day to get back on the throne of the Romanoffs, that is, unless some other equally ambitious political dead beat, throws a bomb into him. It is interesting to know that Cyril has the same opinion of the British Trade Union delegation's report on Soviet Russia that is entertained by Ramsay MacDonald and by socialists in general.

IN reference to the report, the duke declared in an interview to a newspaperman who was out for a lark and thought of no better way to get a kick out of his spare time than to interview the grand duke, that the report was "laughable, grotesque. Everything it contains is one-sided gives the impression that it is meant for home consumption in England." Exactly what Ramsay MacDonald says.

WHILE the reporter was speaking to the "czar," another royal bum appeared in the person of former Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria. Ferdinand was asked how Communism was progressing in Bulgaria. He said it was a foreign importation, of Russian origin, etc. Our readers can supply the rest of Ferdinand's speech. It was just like what President William Green of the American Federation of Labor would make to a representative of the Ladies' Home Journal.

FRENCH-BRITISH BREAK IN DEBT NEGOTIATIONS

France Cannot Meet Churchill's Demands

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Great Britain's final proposal has been made to France for the settlement of her debt, Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, announced tonight.

Britain asks that France pay 12½ pounds sterling annually for sixty-two years upon her debt to Great Britain.

Churchill stated that Great Britain insisted that the payment of the debt must be the sole responsibility of France.

Proposals made by M. Caillaux that France transfer to Great Britain France's share of the receipts under the Dawes plan were rejected, Churchill said.

M. Caillaux has received these final proposals from Great Britain, but has reserved his decision, Churchill stated. It is understood that Caillanx informed Churchill that he could make no reply to the proposals until he submitted them to his government for consideration.

"The position is further complicated by the intended negotiations for the settlement of the French debt to the United States," Churchill said.

"Great Britain must receive proportionate paripassu payments to any France makes to the United States," the chancellor added.

M. Caillaux's best offer was the repayment of ten million pounds annually upon the sole responsibility of France, Churchill revealed. It is understood that Churchill's first proposal was that France should pay between fifteen and twenty million pounds yearly. Great Britain's request would mean that France would pay Great Britain annually a sum of approximately $60,000,000, which, spread over a period of sixty-two years, would about equal the British debt payments to the United States.

The Anglo-French debt negotiations are not broken off, Churchill said. "The negotiations will continue," he said.

RENEGADE I.W.W. OFFICIAL TEARS DOWN ILD POSTER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 27.—Newfeldt, the assistant organizer of the local International Workers of the World, refused to allow the hanging of the International Labor Defense poster on the walls of the I. W. W. hall. This poster carried an appeal for class solidarity on behalf of the class war prisoners, regardless of affiliation.

The International Labor Defense is a united front organization of all labor, to fight for the liberation of workers imprisoned for their loyalty to the working class. No class conscious worker can refuse unity for this high and noble purpose.

Nevertheless the local I. W. W. has degenerated to such a low level of class consciousness that it put itself in the position of sabotaging the release of its own, as well as other, class war prisoners. This is a great disgrace. We recognize no political differences with regard to class war prisoners; they are all ours.

This black spot upon the local I. W. W. must not remain. It is up to the rank and file members to save the revolutionary honor of the I. W. W. Let it be understood once and for all time, that sabotage of class war prisoners, is the blackest kind of treason to the whole working class.

Workers Arrested as Aliens.

OAKFIELD, N. Y., August 27—Twenty-two workers in United States Gypsum Co. mines are under arrest with others charged with being smuggled aliens. Most of the workers are Italians and Poles and are said by immigration inspectors to have entered the United States illegally from Canada.

ARRESTS TWO AS MASS., TEXTILE STRIKE SPREADS

PITTSFIELD, August 27— Two pickets were arrested at the S. N. & C. Russell Mfg. Co mill when employers attempted to open for work. Both strikers were charged with disturbing the peace. Thomas J. Regan, United Textile Workers' Union organizer, is in Pittsfield from headquarters in Lowell to aid organization of strikers.

Workers walked out of five mills which declared 10 per cent wage cuts. Employers met and decided to hold out against the workers. Massachusetts is sending a member of the state board of arbitration to Pittsfield, tho neither party in the strike has requested internvention. The factories are completely tied up.

Enlarge Soviet Export and Import Trade Via Vienna, Austria

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—The Soviet papers note with satisfaction the fact that the negotiations between the Soviet Trade Mission at Vienna and the Austrian circles concerned on the question of enlarging the Soviet export and import trade via Vienna (which would tend to make the Austrian capital an important point of Soviet foreign trade), are favorably progressing.

The papers also point out that it is being generally recognized in Vienna itself that the materialization of such a project would benefit Austria, too, being in the interest of the development and consolidation of Austrian national economy.

USE U. S. NAME TO BREAK RIFFS TROOPS MORALE

But Moroccans Take Important Post

PARIS, France, Aug. 27.—The Riffian soldiers have broken thru the Spanish lines between Tangier and Tetuan and captured the vital linking road on which El Fondak, the Spanish-French army camp, is one of the principal outposts, it is learned here.

The French are broadcasting propaganda that the American aviators are now at the front. The French are informing the Moroccans that this is only the advance-guard of a large American army, in the hope of breaking the morale of the natives.

Protest Spanish Dictatorship.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(FP)—"Spain's present government is based upon the most flagrant negation of the people's rights," declares the Catalonian Cultural Committee's overseas lettter from Madrid. "In September, 1923, a group of insurgent generals seized by force the government of Spain and formed a military dictatorship, after suppressing the constitutional guarantees, violating the most elementary rights of man and destroying every vestige of personal freedom. The right of criticism is nonexistent. The last general elections were held in the spring of 1923. Parliament has been suppressed." Dictator Primo de Rivera's Riffian campaign in Morocco is attacked and it is stated that 21,000 men were killed, wounded and imprisoned in the western zone.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing. rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding tbe trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system."

Visit to the Liebknecht Salt Mipe at Bakhmut

The depth of the mine is 560 yards; the number employed on the surface and underground is 130 on day-shift and 100 on night-shift. They have a six hour day underground, including winding time, and 46 hours per week, including meal times, on the surface.

The salt in this mine is 160 ft. thick. The output is 16,700 tons per month. The Delegation was informed that another bore-hold has been put down with the intention of sinking a further salt mine and when they had bored 290 ft. in salt, their drill broke and the bore-hold was carried no further, as there was no large demand for salt at that particular time, they having many other salt deposits of different types in various parts of Russia.

They have a wonderful method of mining this salt. They use a machine of Italian invention with a bore of 2 ft. 6 in. in diameter and 4 ft. 6 in. in length, weighing about 15 cwt. Each set of men, consisting of three, can cut on an average ten of these 4 ft. 6 in. blocks (2 ft. 6 in. in diameter) per shift.

Most of this large bed of salt is got without explosives of any character, except in getting the top bed, where they had arranged a round of shots to be fired when we were there, 50 in number, and a tremendous amount of salt was blown down through this process.

This mine is ventilated by natural ventilation and is very cool. The workers work under favorable conditions. The mine has been operated for the last 45 years.

The Delegation found that the workmen are graded by a Committee of workmen at the mine. They have eight grades. Commencing at Grade 4, youths of 18 and over, 18 to 20 roubles per month. In English money this represents from 40s. to 45s. This is a guaranteed wage for 18 days per calendar month.

Grade 10 consists of miners or drillers at a guaranteed wage of 39 roubles per month, which means in English money 87s. But they have also a system in all grades whereby they can improve wages by increased productivity. We found that some of these miners or drillers earn up to 80 roubles per month, which means £8 17s. 6d.

Grade 11 is the foreman or "deputy" in mining parlance in Great Britain. One deputy looks after ten men. He has about 50 roubles per month (£5 12s.).

In the stables were found ten horses well cared for and in good condition. After being down the mine three hours, the Delegation came to the surface and visited the winding-engine house to look at the machinery, which was very antiquated.

The wages received by the engine-winder and the hours he worked were found to be 39 roubles per month, which means in English money 87s., the hours being six per day, including meal times.

The Delegation was satisfied that this mine could be wonderfully developed and the output raised by at least 75 per cent, but owing to lack of capital they have to carry on as best they can; and repeat here what has been said in regard to coal mines, in the lack of machinery or with regard to the antiquated plant, a wonderful avenue of trade for unemployed engineers in Great Britain could be found in the Don district alone.

But with all the difficulties the Russians have to encounter, every one from the highest official to the youngest worker seemed to be doing his best, the motto being: We work in this mine for the benefit of the community and ourselves, and not for that of private enterprise.

In conclusion, the Delegation was satisfied that this was the finest salt mine that had been seen in Russia or elsewhere.

Visit to Electric Power Station

Under State ownership, electric power for the whole of the Moscow Province has now been centralized in six stations.

The Mogess Station, No. 1, which supplies electric power for the city and many of the local factories, also for lighting streets and houses, was visited by the Delegation. This station was considered before the Revolution to be one of the most up-to-date generating stations in Europe. There is very little difference in the general appearance of the power house and boiler houses as compared with pre-war days. A new turbine has been erected within the last six months, and a Babcock and Wilcox oil-fueled tubular boiler is in the process of erection. The English erector stated that this is the largest type which has yet been manufactured by this firm.

The output figures, taken as a whole, which include power for the use of tramways and other purposes, show an increase of 30 per cent for 1924 over similar figures for the previous year, and the requirements for industrial purposes have already increased above the pre-war level.

The average price charged for power has now fallen to 9.75 kopecks per unit, as compared with 9.41 kopecks in 1913. The existing tariff is as follows:

	Kopecks per kilo.
LIGHTING.
House lighting	15
Theatre and places of amusement	25
Shops and private enterprises	75
POWER.
Tramways	3.8
Large factories	from 4 to 5
Small factories	from 6 to 7

The stores appeared to be well-stocked with supplies, most of which have been recently imported from Germany. The stock of 30,000 new meters was specially noticeable. These are of German manufacture and all bear description plates in the Russian language.

The Delegation was informed that, although the staff of workers has greatly increased with the increase of power output, the higher administration has remained at the same level, but the total amount paid for administration had decreased by nationalization.

There has been no stoppage in this power station, which has worked continuously all through the Revolution.

What is known as the higher administration is chosen by the factory Trade Union subject to the approval of the Central Committee. The usual books are kept showing profit and loss, a special department deals entirely with statistics, while the buying and stores departments function as usual, but all purchases are made through the State purchasing organizations.

It is, however, in the organization of the workers that conditions are entirely changed.

A special office with a staff consisting of the president, vice-president, bookkeeper and two clerks is allotted to the factory branch committee of their Trade Union, known as FabZavKom. As explained elsewhere, the members of this committee are elected from all the workers in the building who belong to the same union irrespective of their actual trade or profession. This organization deals entirely with the administration of the workers. It engages and dismisses workers, arbitrates in disputes, and is responsible for their housing and general welfare. The members of this commission may be of any political opinion.

In conjunction with this committee, however, works a special commission formed of the Communist workers in the factory. This commission, which is really a Communist committee, is known as the "yacheika" (cell) or nucleus. The yacheika is an entirely separate organization with a special staff and offices. Its function is to see that FabZavKom takes no action that is contrary to the tenets of Bolshevism as laid down in the laws and regulations of the State. Any workers having grievances against FabZavKom may apply to this body, which can arbitrate, or, at its own discretion, report to higher authorities.

Housing has been effected by handing over to the workers large blocks of buildings in the surrounding streets which were formerly residential flats of the well-to-do class. Each worker is allowed 20 square archines (one archine, 29 in.) of floor space. A special house committee is elected by the residents in each block. This committee formulates regulations, which are submitted to FabZavKom, and is responsible for the allotment of quarters, repairs, redecorations of the buildings, cleanliness, sanitation, and supervises the supply of water, lighting, and central heating in such buildings where this exists. Any members of this committee may visit the quarters of any resident. In case of infringement of regulations, which the committee is unable to deal with, it refers the matter to FabZavKom. Each tenant pays rent to the treasury of the committee. This rent is on a sliding scale according to the wage received by the tenant, the minimum rent being ten kopecks per month per square sarjen. The committee is responsible for funds collected and expenditure on upkeep.

The Delegation visited some quarters chosen at random by its members and scrupulous cleanliness was remarked in most of them. In many a considerable attempt at comfort and artistic decoration was noticed. Clean curtains hung from the windows and pictures decorated the walls. Most of the larger families occupied two rooms, with a kitchen partitioned off. The lavatories were visited and found to be clean and in sanitary condition.

The Delegation then visited the children's creche. This consisted of five large rooms, which constituted two play rooms, a dining room, a kitchen and a rest room. Mothers who are at work leave their children in this institution for the whole day. On arrival, each child is supplied with clean overalls and his towel hangs on a special peg marked with his name. Organized games and kindergarten instruction are given to the children. They receive their meals, and the younger children are made to rest between sheets in little beds for a specified period each day. All the children appeared to be extremely happy and well-cared for; an exhibition of the older children's drawings and little works of art showed that very considerable interest is taken in training and amusing them. The institution is visited by the medical staff twice a week, when every child is examined.

A well-equipped technical school has been inaugurated in which lectures are given to the workers on the theoretical side of their profession. A library of standard works is available for readers. One very noticeable feature was a display of sheets and tables giving all available particulars in detail dealing with profit and loss, scale of wages, comparative tables of production, estimates and diagrams for new schemes and improvements, and all the statistics regarding the financial and administrative organization of this station.

This data lays before the worker in simple form the whole of the inner machinery of all departments of the concern for which he is working.

A large private house formerly belonging to a wealthy Moscow merchant has been handed over to the workers as a Social Club. This consists of a meeting hall, library, reading rooms, and full club accommodation. No alcoholic liquor is allowed on the premises, and it was noticeable that in certain rooms you were requested not to smoke or talk. The club was well furnished and extremely clean.

The whole system of administration of this power station and the condition and pay of the workers may be taken as typifying the ultimate aim of all nationalized industrial undertakings in Russia. In this particular instance, it has certainly reached a higher level than is found in many other factories.

Several factors have undoubtedly contributed towards this result. In the first place, it must be remembered that no stoppage has taken place at this station during the whole period of the Revolution, and work has been continually carried on, although often under very tragic circumstances. In the second place, all grades of workers in electrical works were formerly of a much higher type, both mentally and socially, than those found in many other industrial undertakings. The nature of their work required greater skill and order. Electrical power stations were a later development in Russia, and more care was therefore shown in their upkeep and general appearance. The buildings and the general accommodation were more up-to-date; consequently, the general conditions of the worker were nearer to those we are accustomed to find in Europe.

It is therefore evident that in these undertakings the first signs of revival under the new system will be most apparent.

X

Visit to the Goojin Iron and Steel Works

This factory consists of smelting works, iron foundry, production of wire nails, nuts, bolts, pins, and iron and steel rods, and was built 25 years ago. Over 4,000 hands are employed. Here the general conditions both in plant and machinery, organization, and the situation of the worker were certainly far below the standard in Europe. A different type of worker is employed to those in electrical stations. A great deal of the machinery is out-of-date, and much of it running under conditions of disrepair which are apparent even to the casual observer. In 1923, the factory, although it supplied one of the country's important needs, worked at a loss. During the past ten monthts, however, considerable improvement has been made, and a profit balance for that period is already shown.

The organization of the Clubs, Creches, and Technical Schools has been carried out on the same lines as at the electrical stations. The accommodation, however, is not so good, although cleanliness and order in the Clubs, Creches, and Technical Schools was quite up to standard.

A neighboring nunnery has been requisitioned for housing some of the workers. The accommodation appeared to be adequate, but order, cleanliness, pride of possession was comparatively lacking as compared with the workers at the electrical station. This is undoubtedly accounted for by the originally lower standard of education among the class from which these men are drawn. It was, however, evident that serious attempts are being made to raise the domestic standard of these people.

XI

Visit to the Volhof River Electricity Scheme, Volhofstroy

The members of the British Delegation to Russia visited this Electrical Power Station which is being constructed for the purpose of utilizing the tidal power of the Volhof River in order to generate electricity intended in the first instance to supply electric power in connection with the domestic, industrial, and transport needs of Leningrad, with the possibility that power would also be transmitted for use in the agricultural and rural areas between Volhofstroy and the city. The enormous power station being constructed was an indication of the determination of the Russian Government to utilize all the powers and agencies at their disposal to meet Russian requirements.

The scheme was first discussed in 1902. The plans were prepared in 1911, but the work did not start until 1919 as part of the Lenin scheme for the electrification of Russia. We were informed by the chief engineer in charge of the job that the principal obstacle to its development had been the opposition and destructive tactics of the Steam Power interests in Leningrad and other centers. It was Lenin, we were informed, who in 1917 insisted that the scheme should be proceeded with. The official date fixed for commencement being July, 1918, was delayed for various reasons connected with Civil War and internal trouble. It is anticipated that the scheme will be completed in 1925, and by that time electric power will be delivered to Leningrad at a very low price.

The scheme is estimated to cost approximately 70,000,000 roubles, in our money about £8,000,000 sterling. This cost will include the erection of the power station and the cost of the plant for distribution. The number of men employed in connection with this huge undertaking at the time we visited the plant was about 11,000.

During our visit of inspection we saw these men employed in the various sections of the work utilizing electric cars, making concrete and building electric conveyors; it was estimated that about 4,000,000 cubic feet of timber was being used in connection with the building.

In going through the encampment erected for the purpose of housing the workers, we were interested to note the efforts that were being made to make life bearable for those employed by the provision of concert rooms, cinemas and theatre performances at which prominent artists from Leningrad were employed from time to time assisted by amateur talent trained from amongst the workers.

DETROIT BAKERY BOSSES ATTEMPT TO KILL PICKET

Badly Hurt, But Goes Back on Strike Duty

(By Worker Correspondent.)

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 27.—Joseph Blaszczyk, Anthony Jankowski, and Henry Erenfeit, co-partners in the Holbrook Bakery, against which the Polish local of the Cake, Confectionery and Bakery Workers' International Union is carrying on a strike, made an armed attack on Comrade Wisniewski, business agent of the Polish Local.

The attack was carefully planned, the thug-bosses and their man having waited for Wisniewski from 7 to 10 a. m. on Frederick avenue, between Jos. Campau and Mitchell, not far from his home. When they caught sight of him coming in a Ford sedan, they ran their car alongside of his from the opposite direction, forcing him to the curb, and then breaking the glass in his car, began beating him; Blaszczyk using a knife, Jankowski a hammer, Erenfeit a wrench, and Sztynelski a club.

Attempt to Murder Him.

The gang slit Wisniewski's cheek with a knife and beat him on the back, arms and forehead, chipping out a piece of the skull. Blaszczyk urged the other thugs on, saying, "Kill him! Kill him! He will then bother us no longer."

The passersby, who finally rescued Wisniewski from the thugs were so incensed at the outrage, that they probably would have metted out justice on the spot to the thugs if the police hadn't arrived and rescued them.

The police arrested three of the thugs, while the fourth one, Erenfeit, got away and was arrested the next day. All of them were later released under bond.

Returns to Strike Duty.

Wisniewski was taken to a doctor, who had to take seven stitches to sew up the wound in his cheek. After treatment Wisniewski was taken home.

The cause of the attack was the effectiveness with which the struggle was carried on by the workers against the Holbrook Bakery by the workers under the leadership of Comrade Wisniewski. The bosses, finding themselves powerless against the determined stand of the workers, wanted to at any cost rid themselves of the leader of the struggle.

To their disappointment, however, Comrade Wisniewski, tho bandaged up like a soldier wounded in the war, got up the next day and went about his work in leading the struggle.

The outrage against their leader has so incensed the union bakers that they are determined to fight until the owners of the Holbrook Bakery grants all of their former demands, but also settle with Wisniewski for the harm done him.

DELEGATION OF GERMAN WORKERS PRAISES SOVIET

Good Condition of the Workers Suprising

MOSCOW, (By Mail.)— Individual groups of the German delegation to Soviet Russia are continuing their study journies. At present one group is in the Urals, a second in Georgia, a third in the Crimea, a fourth in Cherson and a fifth in the Donetz Basin.

The members of the Donetz group, Schlesinger and Menichardt declared that the situation of the mining workers had made an extremely deep impression upon them, for nowhere else in the world had miners such rights and privileges. The living conditions of the miners are advancing rapidly in comparison with the pre-war level.

In this connection the sanatoria and workers' rest homes were exemplary. The sanatoria and welfare institutions in the Crimea where thousands of workers and peasants are recovering their health and strength made a particularly deep impression upon the delegates there.

The workers' health insurance, the factories and the trade unions have all their own sanatoria where the sick and over-worked employes recover at the cost of the trade unions, workers' health insurance, etc. The delegates thought such a thing on such a large scale was unthinkable in any capitalist country and could not possibly be carried out.

The delegation in the Urals was particularly surprised by the comparative speed with which economic reconstruction is taking place, despite the destruction brought about by the civil wars, despite the situation of the factories from a technical view point.

The German colonists on the Volga are making great preparations for the reception of the delegation.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it. Send for a catalogue of all Communist literature.

STUDENT OF YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE SCHOOL AT WAINA, WIS. TELLS HOW COMMUNIST YOUTHS KEEP DISCIPLINE

By ONE OF THE STUDENTS.

The capitalist press bore scare headlines about our school announcing to the world that another nest of reds had been found. At the school this attack was expected for we had the honor to be interviewed by "our friend," De Guire. "Our friend's" report has aroused the curiosity of many as to how these reds lived at that "secluded camp."

For the benefit of those whose interest has been aroused I will attempt to give a description of how we deported ourselves at Waina. The pleasure, the joy and the growth in body and mind by the students cannot be conveyed, however, they must be experienced.

Our school had fifty-seven students, two instructors, a cook and a lady helper. One can imagine the problem our director had. Fifty-seven active, young people on his hands to educate, feed, discipline, and provide lodging for for five weeks and then return them to their homes healthy and satisfied and ready to do Communist work. It is to the credit of Comrade Hayes that this he accomplished. The method used to accomplish this task is very interesting.

The responsibility of administration was given to the student body.
